The Red Mill

The campus music clubs will have to attain a high standard if they wish to keep their laurels, for the University College Music Club, although in its infancy, is no backward child. With typical ambition the club is presenting as its second annual production Victor Herbert's light operetta, The Red Mill.

The plot is comprised of a fantastic series of complications on whose thread is strung a number of relatively irrelevant songs. Yet it contains so much entertaining nonsense that its inconsistencies are not disturbing. The story concerns what happens when two American tourists, Con Kidder and Kid Connor, stranded in a little Dutch town, try to escape paying their board at the Red Mill inn and find themselves in the midst of a plot to rescue the Burgomaster's daughter from marrying the Governor and to restore her to the sailor, Kal Van Damm, whom she loves.

The presence of the red mill plays an important role. According to its legend a cruel king locked his daughter inside the mill to prevent her escape from a distasteful marriage arranged for her. When the king unlocked the door on the day of the wedding, the princess had vanished and no one ever saw her again. Of course, the burgomaster imprisoned his daughter in the mill and, of course, she vanishes, but her disappearance is due to a contrivance of the two Americans.

If the repartee in the dialogue of The Red Mill was rather obvious banter, many a guffaw was raised by the antics of the Americans. The impersonation of Sherlock Holmes and his faithful Watson, which culminated in a song and dance routine of "In Old New York," was one of the more successful sequences. Ted Follows as Con Kidders and his urbane side-kick, Eric House, exemplified typical Bob Hope humour, both in expression and exaggerated gesture.

The comic duet, "You Never Can Tell About A Woman," sung by the burgomaster (Don Corbett) and Wilhelm, the keeper of the Red Mill (John Howe), provoked a well-earned burst of applause. Top singing honours go to Margot MacKinnon as Bertha, the burgomaster's sister, and John Beckett, the governor. Dorothy Thornton's interpretation of the imperious Countess de la Fere was a comic highlight. The complete cast and especially the choruses deserve an orchid for their spontaneity and integration.

Emmanuel Musicale

Sunday night in the College Lecture Hall, Emmanuel College Choir under the direction of Dr. Kenneth Cowsland, M.C., combined with senior students of the college to present the Christmas Story in narrative and in song.

Too often the Christian world celebrates the Advent in notes of exaltation and of praise with carols in the major mode, and forgets that within the peal of bells a tragic note is struck. In their performance of The Song of the Crib, "O Little One, Sweet," the Welsh Poverty Carol, and Watt's Cradle Hymn, choir and conductor echoed that tragic undertone in reverent, restrained renderings in the minor mode. Only in the 16th century In Excelsis Gloria and in Falau Tiding did the choir break forth in joyful song. Ever present in the carolling were skilful interweaving of harmony and a pervading warmth, although in the first group voices were not entirely subject to the warp and woof of the carols as a harmonic whole.

Highlight of the service came in the Quartet where 3rd year students Florence Wilkinson, Nettie Wilson, Robert Thompson and Douglas Sloan in carefully woven tones and a spirit of quiet reverence sang with climactic effect Tschaikovsky's Crown of Roses and "Thou didst leave Thy kingly crown."

Instrumental in the achievement of the choir and quartet was the direction of the conductor, the strong, sensitive stroke of his baton.

The prophecies of Isaiah commenced the narrative; followed by readings from the New Testament. From the standard of the readings one cannot expect to wave a magic

They Drive By Night Castle On The Hudson

In 1940 Warner Bros. had a monopoly on screen tough guys. Three of the famous roster are back at the new Astor, and it's a pleasure to see them in unembarrassed action again.

"They Drive by Night" has Humphrey Bogart, who CAN act, and George Raft, who doesn't have to anyway, as good guys for a change. They are the hard-slugging Fabrini Bros. trying to avoid the loan company long enough to scrape up payment on their truck and start their own business. Both are lucky to live till the fade-out. Bogey loses an arm in a spectacular crash when he falls asleep at the wheel. Raft faces a murder-complicity charge until Ida Lupino goes mad in a court scene you should see. Standing by and hoping for the best are Ann Sheridan, Gale Page and Roscoe Karns, while Alan Hale and John Litel become corpses bearing on the drama. Director Raoul (High Sierra) Walsh has given this one some fine road scenes and made eerie use of a set of garage doors which open by electric eye.

John Garfield swaggers through "Castle on the Hudson," the better half of a good bill, as an unlucky buddie with a hidden sense of honour and an incurable case on Ann Sheridan, who is now called upon to ACT and comes through with flying colours. Story is based on a book by Warden Lawes of Sing Sing, illustrates his problems and methods. Refusing to wear a uniform, Garfield is marched ridiculously through the snowy prison-yard to the ice-house in over-sized long underwear. Refusing to work, he's kept in solitary till it's a pleasure to crush rocks. Crucial situation arises when Pat O'Brien, as kindly Warden "Long" releases him on his honour, to go to badly injured Miss Sheridan.

Anatole (Snake Pit) Litvak is a mean hand with a megaphone and there are scenes here you won't soon forget. Actor Burgess Meredith, in an abortive escape attempt, climbs desperately to the top tier of the cell-block before falling to his death; Garfield in a fit of petulant rage tears the prison clothes store apart, throwing shoes at every cop in sight, later takes a beating in one of the best-shot fights we've ever seen.

wand and produce inspiring, eloquent readers of Scripture in three years of college life. The powerful, swiftly moving narrative of Isaiah was in general sacrificed for technical precision of enunciation and consequently fell below the inspirational level of reading, below which the narrative of Scripture ought not to fall. In the readings that ensued our attention was too often drawn from the message of the narrative to the method of delivery. This observation leads one to conclude that to fire the imagination, to provoke and to inspire with the greatest story ever told greater value in terms of time and emphasis in college life ought to be given the role of the spoken word.

Magdalene Singers

In the Sunday evening closing concert of the fall term, Dr. Healey Willan conducted the St. Mary Magdalene Singers in a program of Christmas and liturgical music.

The unaccompanied group opened their program with a beautifully restrained performance of the Bach Chorale: Deck Thyself, My Soul With Gladness, followed by the more assertive, Lo, In the Time Appointed by Dr. Willan. Dr. Willan is a choral director who has learned the art of allowing his choir to sing without minute performance directions, although the quality of the singing was such as to suggest intensive rehearsal.

Tschaikowsky's How Blest Are They, with its aria-like development and muted ending received an expressively tender, though at one point rather off-pitch, rendition.

The Cantate Domino of Hassler was well sung and was followed immediately by Thomis Tallis' Glorie Patri, an excellently constructed choral work with fine alto passages. Dr. Willan's Short Mass No. 10 is another example of the composer's preoccupation with soprano effects. Since church music is generally contrapuntal, one would wish that in the performance of these works Dr. Willan would devote more attention to the other than soprano sections of the choir. Even though the tenor section is not too strong, still the remaining sections, and the altos in particular could be used to better advantage.

The half chanted Rachmaninoff Ave Maria preceded In Dulci Jubilo in a fine arrangement by Pearsall, while both the Byrd Lullaby and the Gems of Day showed the choir's ability in lyrical works.

The Twelve Days of Christmas was presented in Dr. Willan's skilful arrangement which offsets the formidable breathing disadvantage. It was so enthusiastically received that the choir was obliged to repeat it and eventually sang three more carols. The evening closed with the audience joining in the choruses of Noel.

Architects' Berets

Editor, The Varsity:

First year Architecture emphatically and categorically denies all the slanderous propaganda published in the Artsmen's Gazette, Friday, Nov. 25th.

Contrary to the opinion expressed by the alert Varsity reporter (probably a beer-maddened, frustrated engineer turned Artsman), there is absolutely no connection between Garnet and Grey of Architecture, the Maroon and Grey of McMaster, and the Red and Yellow of Uncle Joe.

We are not wearing the berets for the same reason that the engineers are wearing green ties. We are wearing them because finally this year we are a school of our own. Thus, we refuse to be mistaken for either Artsmen or Engineers. We also wear them because we are artists and want to look like artists.

As for confusing the loyal Blue and White students, they are already so confused that our handsome berets could hardly confuse them any more.

The initiators of the Beret,
Mike Luberec,
Jerry Cox,
Kurt Tutter.

Colored Ski Slides Bring Snow Scenes To Club Meeting

Three inches of wet snow Saturday night ruined the good conditions that had prevailed at Collingwood and skiers were subjected to a rather damp Sunday. However the tow in the Apple Bowl and the one up to the top of the Granny were in operation all day.

For anybody who has not yet been skiing this year, there will be a chance to get a glimpse of some snow at the Ski Club meeting in the Medical Building at 5:00 tomorrow.

At this first get-together of club members, Jim Wait will show his famous colored pictures that have been taken in many ski centres. Some were taken last March when the French Team were in action at Mt. Tremblant, while others show spring skiing at Mt. Washington, New Hampshire and Stowe, Vermont.

Recreational skiing at Collingwood, St. Sauveur and racing at North Bay will be shown as well.

The program committee, chaired by Jean McEachern, UC, is definitely going ahead with its plans for interesting activities, both on the campus and at the club's ski grounds. On Sunday, January 8, a sort of skiing paper-chase will take place in the afternoon, while the next Sunday there are hopes of instruction from various well-qualified Varsitytes for skiers at the beginners stage right up to the advanced situation.

At another open meeting next term Conn Sparrow, president of women's skiing, will discuss and demonstrate the right and wrong skiing apparel, while somebody from the little red skule house will display all the new angles of ski equipment.

Hockey Blues Drag Tongues Chasing Wally

The Blues were flying high in their practice last night, which Wally Halder termed the best workout so far. Wally really drove them hard, putting them through a half-hour scrimmage, passing and shooting drills, and sprints between defencemen and puck-carriers. The coach set the pace himself, and had some of the slower boys dragging their tongues on the ice trying to keep up with him.

Wilf Digby, who didn't make the trip to Montreal due to business commitments, is back and taking the starting line right wing position of Ernie Frey, whose broken leg will keep him out of action for most of the season. Wilf showed a lot of speed and drive, and what's more, he could put the puck in the net. Rich Howson, apparently recovered from the broken hand he got as a souvenir of the football season, was also back and skating well at left wing.

If the food they get after the practices doesn't keep them in shape, nothing will. Steaks, ice cream, three kinds of vegetables . . . mmm!

Montreal Carabins, who face the team here Friday night, beat McGill by only 5-2 Saturday. Varsity trounced the Redmen 5-1 the week before, though shut out by Carabins the following night. Wally Halder figures the chances to be pretty good if the shooting is on. Practices are scheduled for every day this week. A full house — of Varsity supporters, that is — wouldn't hurt the Blues' chances at all.

Boxla Protest Unanimously Upheld

The lacrosse season is not over yet. At the intramural meeting last night the protest registered by the UC team was unanimously upheld. The Dafoe Cup finals will continue tomorrow at one and if a third game is necessary it will be played Friday.

Meds have one victory under their belts beating the UC'ers 10-4 last Wednesday, hence if they take the game to-morrow it will give them the Dafoe Cup for the second consecutive year. Last year it was the same two teams who battled in a thrilling series that went the full three games before the winner was declared.

Meds won the protested game on Friday by a 10-8 count. The protest arose from a penalty given to UC star Frank Chambers, late in the game. Chambers was the ball carrier on the disputed play. His helmet was knocked off and play was stopped. Chambers, after play was supposedly stopped, was given a penalty for slashing. He hotly protested the ruling to the referee and was given a misconduct.

UC won the protest under section 17 of the CLA rules which says that a substitute player may be used when a misconduct penalty is incurred. UC were not allowed the substitute and Meds went on to win the game. At the time of the penalty UC were getting hot and had tied the game up at 8-8. Wednesday's game should be a real thriller.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Advice to the love-lorn and money-worn:——take your girl-friend on an extended tour of Varsity athletic endeavours this week-end.

Friday night hustle her down to Varsity Arena for the Hockey Blues-Montreal Carabins game, and give her a peek at a Varsity team out to even up for the loss they had imposed upon them last week. It'll be a great scrappy battle, so don't forget to tell her to look out for flying bodies, as the Arena management is not responsible for injuries from thudding Carabins.

Total cost for the evening—four car tickets and half a buck, (we are assuming you follow our advice of a month ago and eat at her place).

Then, on Saturday night treat her to the first appearance of the celebrated Athletic Nights; and what a show they have slated! For a measly dollar you and your girl can see one of the most varied, most colossal, stupendous, magnificant, and entertaining short shows of the century.

Start off at seven bells by taking in the Albion College-Big Blues basketball game and watch one of the leading American college teams do battle with one of Canada's finest. After the seniors get through mauling each other, the Varsity Seconds take over for another game with Broadview "Y". Not interested in basketball? Run up to the small gym and take in the intramural boxing finals, or pop into the wrestling room for the grunt-and-groan finals. For the more squeamish, the pool will be the site of an intercollegiate water-polo final, and if football is your dish, excellent color movies of the Grey Cup game will be shown. If all this hasn't tired both you and the gal, you can drag her around the floor at the dance; music courtesy of Mac MacCutcheon and his Electric Gramophonists.

Where else can you get two nights' entertainment for a total expenditure of $1.50 and a few car tickets? Don't forget—this Saturday, and get the tickets from your faculties or at the door.

The mighty have fallen! McGill University has at long last lost a water-polo game in their own pool. The last time this happened was exactly 13 years ago. Their pool is so narrow that the visiting teams are sort of cramped, but Varsity came through and beat their trunks off with a 6-2 decision. The Herschenhorn Cup is given for the intercollegiate water-polo championship (only Varsity and McGill enter teams) and it is run off in a home-and-home series with total goals to count, so Varsity will be carrying a four-goal lead when they go at it again on A-Night this Saturday. Get your A-Night tickets early.

Novice Pugs In Tournament This Week

Well, another December has rolled around bringing with it the thrills, and chills of another Junior Boxing Tournament. Fans of the box-fight business will well remember these Interfaculty Boxing Tournaments, which are run off in three days of preliminaries and climaxed by the finals, held on an Athletic Night.

This year, as previously, the three days of preliminaries will be held in the Boxing Room between 4:30 p.m. and 6:00 p.m., from Wednesday to Friday. The finals will be held on Saturday at 8:00 p.m. in the Upper Gym.

The weight classes are as follows: 125 lbs., 133 lbs., 140 lbs., 147 lbs., 155 lbs., 165 lbs., 175 lbs., and heavyweight, with an allowance of two pounds in each class.

Hand-bandages, and mouth-pieces will be supplied for the bouts. The rest of the equipment (except the boxing gloves) must be supplied by the participant.

Points toward the T. A. Reed Trophy, emblematic of Interfaculty sports supremacy, are awarded. Furthermore, a winner in the Junior Tournament will be awarded the "second colour" of his faculty later in the year.

Now, a few encouraging words for any young aspirants, who are a little hesitant about entering. This is strictly a novice tournament. Anybody who has previously won their weight-class in an Interfaculty Tournament, or has fought on an Intercollegiate team, cannot enter; nor can anyone, who has participated in a public boxing show elsewhere. The bouts will consist of three two-minute rounds with a minute recess; while in training, the rounds are two and one-half minutes with one-half a minute rest. Furthermore, no bout will be allowed to continue in which a boxer is hurt, or overmatched. Finally, the main purpose of the tournament is experience, both in boxing and participating in official bouts; so, throw away those books, and give it a try.

VARSITY SPORTS

Sports Editorial

The Athletic Directorate are considering at the present time a new seating arrangement for next season's football games. In a news story in yesterday's paper the plan was outlined with its advantages and disadvantages. Instead of the first come first serve system that has been in vogue for the past seasons, the directorate are proposing a plan whereby all seats in the students section will be reserved.

They feel that this system would eliminate the weekly line-ups to get in and the concomitant bodily discomfort caused by the stronger members of the herd pressing onward to enter.

In the last game of the past season with McGill an entrance on Devonshire was opened for the students together with more organized supervision at the regular gate. The result was satisfactory. People who were at the Devonshire gate by 1 p.m. got in quickly and painlessly and had fair seats. Therefore a proper method of supervised queuing plus additional gates would seem to be sufficient answer for the line-up crush problem.

If reserved seats were used, students would be doomed to sitting in the same seats every week, with the same old faces around about. The Directorate seem to think that this would be an advantage. Instead of crowds of friends going to the games en masse and having gay times with much camaraderie, fans will be thrown together helter-skelter. The exuberant Skule faction would be broken up, Buttery Boys and Victor would commingle, the raucous St. Mike's crowd would lose its cohesion, and all in all the spirit at the games would fall to a very low ebb.

If a man wants to take a girl to the game it must always be the same girl—simply because she owns the seat next to him for the season. The complications are obvious.

The plan if adopted would make sure that late comers got seats. Late comers get seats under the present system provided they have friends who are willing to get to the game a bit early. And what normal red-blooded young football fan isn't willing to line-up early?

Senior students would be given the best seats if the reserved seats system is adopted, as the plan now stands. Why? What's fair for one should be fair for all.

The Athletic Directorate are just studying the situation and some action will be taken at the SAC meeting Wednesday. We hope that instead of having reserved seats they continue the present system with some improvements, such as more entrances and carefully regimented queues.

Practices ! ! !

Just another reminder about basketball—first practices for the intercollegiate team will be today and Thursday from 5.30 to 7.00 at OCE. Coach Mickey Barnett says anyone is welcome to try out for the Varsity team, which will be the defending champion at the meet on March 4th at McGill.

Hockey is getting underway this week. Practice notices will be posted in the individual colleges, along with lists to be signed by all those wanting to play.

Donna Haley, Hockey Club President, expects to see a lot of enthusiasm this year, and hopes to see a more professional game played. Slashing, tripping, and body-checking aren't part of the game, so let's show all those boys who come out to laugh, that girls really can play hockey.

Practices for Intramural volleyball aspirants started yesterday in the LM gym, but don't despair if you missed them. There'll be more.

Institutional Management practices today at 5.30. Nurses at 6.30 and Vic at 7.30. On Wednesday Physio take the early hour, OT 6.30 and UC 7.30.

Thelma Henderson says there is no danger of the volleyball games running close to the exams this year as they did last, so the coaches will be expecting a big crowd at the try-outs.

The intercollegiate volleyball loop will be enlarged this year. In addition to Varsity, Western, McMaster, Mac Hall, and possibly Queen's and McGill are all entering teams.

The tournament this year will be a day long round robin at McMaster with meals served on the campus for all those participating. Sounds like a lot of fun for all the girls on the team, and remember it could be you—if you get out to the intramural practices

More Attend Church Now Says Taylor

"In this country there is no evidence of a decline in church attendance," University College Principal W. R. Taylor said in an interview Tuesday. Dr. Taylor was commenting on a recent statement of Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University who asserted that only one-third of university students attend church regularly.

Increased Membership

"On the whole church membership is increasing and though there is a falling off in the attendance at evening services, there is an increased attendance at the morning services. This is the reversal of conditions a generation ago," maintained Dr. Taylor. He noticed an increased enrollment in courses dealing with the problems and the basis of religious faith. In general, Dr. Taylor agreed with Principal Wallace's contention that in spite of the decline in church attendance, there has not been a decline in religious faith among young people.

Dr. Taylor stated that he has noticed little agnosticism or atheism on the campus. Since over 55% of the students live in the city, there are no statistics available on their church attendance.

Resurgent Interest

Principal Wallace's view that young people can't live without a religious faith was denied by Donald Evans, IV UC, president of the SCM. He felt that perhaps students do not get along satisfactorily without a religious faith, but they do seem to get along. "On the whole the number of believers in the church is declining, but at the U. of T. there has been a resurgence of interest in the last few years," he said. "Most students who are interested enough to belong to the SCM are interested enough to attend church, although there are many who attend SCM meetings just to look in on the workings of Christianity. It is usually only in their senior years that students get sorted out enough to delve deeply into religion."

Evans explained that the greatest difficulty is in getting students to differentiate between Christianity and the conventions of our society.

Long Supports Wallace

"One could draw attention to the fact that a discussion of religion will always attract a large number of students to prove that they take a keen interest in the subject," stated Prof. Marcus Long, University College philosophy professor. In general Prof. Long's experience with students would support Principal Wallace's position, he said, and yet there is also an interest

Specialize More Enlarge Interests Newman Club Told

Over-specialization of education causes a lack of application of science to the betterment of mankind, said Father Nash, S. J., Ph.D., in his address to the Newman Club last Sunday. As a remedy Fr. Nash suggested there should be "hundreds of discussion groups" to acquaint students with the viewpoints of members of other faculties. "Limit your field and enlarge your interests" was his advice.

Under the present system of university education, courses are fragmentary and lack unification, he said. A premium is placed on memory rather than assimilation and synthesis. "The best student, in the true sense of the word, is usually not the one who gets the highest marks, although this should not serve as a consolation to you," said Fr. Nash.

Father Nash outlined two principles that should govern a university student. First: the demands that society makes on us as student, and second: the search for truth, since that is the job of a university as a permanent institution. Both these facts are more important than our own personal betterment, said Father Nash.

Long's Debate Statement Rouses Varied Comment

Hart House Debates Honorary Visitor Dr. Marcus D. Long's statement yesterday concerning the resolution "That Bottle-Fed Babies Seldom Grow Up" has aroused varied comment from sources on and off the campus.

University College Dean of Women Miss M. B. Ferguson said that she thought Dr. Long would make a good Dean of Women, but couldn't think of any advantages of that position which might attract him.

Dean Ferguson said she could make no comment on the debate resolution. "You will have to ask those who know," she said. The department of Psychology was contacted, but made no official statement.

The Engineering Society's Director of Cultural Activities Paul Laprairie, when asked about Dr. Long's statement that he would have a strong delegation from 4th year Skule to beat the tar out of anyone who fails to vote freely in favour of the motion" said, "This is obviously another trick on the part of the rest of the campus to discredit us on the campus. I myself will be speaking in favour of the resolution, and if fourth year Skule is to be on anyone's side, they will be on mine."

Businessman Says "Yes"

Mr. Rose, Sales Manager of the Consolidated Bottle Company Ltd., denied that bottle-fed babies seldom grow up, and said that he had four grown sons to prove it.

Mr. Rose said that it actually depends on what was in the bottle which determined whether the baby actually grew up or not.

"A good formula will often give more satisfactory results than natural feeding," he said. "A new type of disposable plastic-film bottle will soon be on the Canadian market," he said. "It will be unbreakable."

When reached last night, Hart House Debates Committee Chairman Professor G. Bagnani said, "I think I should maintain that complete impartiality which characterizes the committee chairman."

Postponed Flight Will Go Sunday Says Flying Club

The Ajax Flying Club breakfast flight, scheduled to be held last Sunday was washed out because of bod weather, will be held this Sunday, club officials said last night.

The flight will leave the Island Airport for Hamilton at 8:30 a.m. Sunday morning. Last Sunday nine aircraft were available, and it is expected that more will be on hand this Sunday if more people are interested in making the trip.

The trip will cost about four dollars per person. Further information will be posted on the University College bulletin board, in the U.C. rotunda, club officials said.

Eddis UC SAC Rep, Gals Second Ballot Gets Doubled Vote

Joan Eddis, III UC, was elected to the Students' Administrative Council as Women's Representative from University College yesterday. Miss Eddis was elected SAC Rep last Tuesday, but that election was nullified because the graduating class was not allowed to vote, through a misinterpretation of the Women's Undergraduate Association constitution.

Great Number Vote

Yesterday, the number of votes cast totalled 266, while only 144 voted last Tuesday.

Jane Hill, present SAC Rep, said that she had "never heard of a case of this kind happening before." She was impressed with the "keen campaign put on by both girls," she said. Joan Eddis was opposed by Zaira Murray for the position.

Miss Eddis said she intends to try for a seat on the publications committee and on the Women's Athletic Association as the SAC rep. At present, she is the Women's Editor of The Varsity, in which capacity she has a seat on the SAC but is unable to vote, or propose or second motions. "There have been many times that I have wanted to propose motions when I have been at the Council meetings," she said. "I decided the only thing for me to do was to get elected to the Council if I could."

". . closeness spurred campaigns . ."

The greater number of voters in yesterday's election has been attributed not only to the fact that the graduating class was allowed to vote, but in great measure to the more spirited campaign put on by both candidates this time. The election of a week ago had been characterized by WUA President Jane Rats as "a rather quiet campaign." She did not attribute this to the fact that there were only two candidates for the office since this is not unusual, she said.

"The closeness of the vote in last week's election spurred both Miss Murray and myself to greater efforts in our campaigns," Miss Eddis said last night. She attributed her victory solely to the campaigning efforts of her friends and herself.

Juniors Can Run For SAC VCU Decides

The constitution of the Victoria College Union was amended at a meeting last Monday night to allow students in their third or fourth year to be elected as representatives to the Students' Administrative Council.

The amendment was approved on the grounds that it would increase a member's efficiency on the council if he were elected two years in succession. This possibility, that a member if elected in his third year, would probably also be elected in his fourth year was opposed on the grounds that such a situation would eliminate opportunity for other candidates.

A motion was also passed to award rings to the VCU executive and to have up to fifteen rings for "honor awards". Two members of the Ring Awards Investigation Committee reported that pins would carry the same amount of sentiment as rings and cost only half as much.

VCU President Stan Kurisko reported that Dean Bennett, Prof. Woodside, and Mr. Little had given their approval to "Scarlet and Gold", the Vic show, and that the show would be an annual one from now on.

Talk On Greene By English Prof. Illustrates Novels

Graham Greene, though not great, is one of the most interesting of contemporary novelists, said Professor D. Grant of the English Department of University College yesterday.

In his address to the Modern Letters Club, Professor Grant pointed out some of the strengths and weaknesses of Greene's work. The stress on Roman Catholicism which is a dominant factor in his novels was both a strength and a weakness, said Dr. Grant. Although it gives him the strength of a powerful philosophy of life, it also, in

Hepner's Hot-Shots

And No Ophicleide

By Keith Girard

Last Sunday night as a full moon frosted the dome on Convocation Hall, the University Symphony Orchestra prepared for its forthcoming concert on December 11, under the baton of Lee Hepner.

The orchestra has been rehearsing a really ambitious programme for this Sunday's concert, consisting of Cesar Franck's D-minor Symphony, Three Excerpts from the Damnation of Faust by Berlioz, and the Polovetsian Dances from Prince Igor by Borodin. The orchestra will be joined in the later work by the All-Varsity Chorus which has also been hard at work this term. Last Sunday night the orchestra and chorus rehearsed together for the first time and I don't believe either group ever sang or played better. The bad boys of the brass section behaved themselves very well for once, obviously trying to impress the beauties in the front line of the chorus.

Although the orchestra dates from 1934 when it was founded by John Weinzweig, the well-known Toronto composer, the All-Varsity Chorus is a fairly new venture, having been in existence only two years.

Ambitious from the beginning, it has already produced two major Requiems which threatened to become habit-forming. However, this year's major work will be the no less ambitious but certainly less morbid oratorio The Creation by Haydn. This will be presented at one of the forthcoming concerts of which conductor Hepner plans to present three.

This year should be a good one for both organizations. Interest was never so high, due partly to the ambitious and varied schedule and partly to those unexpected happenings which make membership in any organization interesting.

For instance, a few weeks back, a rehearsal announcement appeared in The Varsity calling for the girls in the chorus to wear dancing shoes and shorts. This left the poor kids wondering what they would be expected to do next for the concert until they learned that it was the result of a mix-up with the All-Varsity Revue Chorus.

Welcome additions to the orchestra this year are two bassoons, an English horn, and a bass clarinet. (What! no ophicleide?) Furthermore, two celebrated artists have been especially invited for the concert to play the triangle and tambourine. While we are considering individual members it would be unfair to overlook the assistant conductor.

Valuable Roll-Caller

Elmer Iseler, assistant conductor has done valuable work in rehearsing individual sections and in calling the roll after intermission with virogous enthusiasm.

For the best in choral and instrumental music on the campus, Convocation Hall is the spot Sunday at 8:20. (We repeat, FREE.)

Engineer's Society Meet To Hear Pollution Talk By Prof. E. Allcut

Labs and lectures will be cancelled at 4 p.m. today to enable all engineering students to attend a General Meeting of the Engineering Society at 4 p.m. in Convocation Hall which will be addressed by Professor E. A. Allcut, head of the Mechanical Engineering Department. Prof. Allcut's topic will be "Atmospheric Pollution and its Consequences".

Prof. Allcut became interested in the problem of atmospheric pollution in 1947 when his paper "The Smoke Problem" won him the Gzowski medal of the Engineering Institute of Canada. He has since become chairman of an all-Canadian committee to establish a model scheme to control atmospheric pollution.

A native of Birmingham, England, Prof. Allcut graduated from the University of Birmingham in 1908. He came to Canada in 1921 as associate professor of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Toronto and in 1931 he became professor of Mechanical Engineering and head of the department.

The ISS

Last week's USC meeting showed the unfortunate ignorance of Western students concerning ISS. When not being treated with indifference, ISS is commonly looked at with scepticism, suspicion, or even hostility.

For this, students are not so much to blame as Western's ISS organization itself, which exhibits the most lamentable inability to publicize ISS activities. Accordingly, for most students ISS still remains a nebulous outfit run by foolish committees, who use Canadian student money for dark purposes involving Communists, foreigners, and other peculiar people in places somewhere over on the other side of the world.

Opinions like this are nonsense. ISS is not composed of fools, Communists, or knaves. What it does is simple and praiseworthy, and should be known.

ISS works with Canadian immigration authorities to bring D.P. students to Canadian universities. These D.P.'s are neither Communists nor Nazis. They are people like ourselves, who have suffered and been persecuted because they are democratic. They want freedom, not tyranny, and they need held. ISS helps them

Last year ISS sent medical supplies to students in Italy, Germany, Greece, and India. It contributes to sanitoria where students, most of them ex-members of European resistance movements, recover their health. It maintains the annual Canadian ISS Summer Seminar, where students from Western European countries meet with Canadians to study, learn, and contribute to democratic understanding. It runs the ISS Scholarship and Exchange Service, which compiles and makes available complete information concerning foreign scholarships and exchanges available to Canadian students.

ISS is supported by distinguished and respected men, who do not lend their names to unworthy organizations. The honorary president of the Canadian ISS is Viscount Alexander of Tunis; vice-presidents include President Sidney Smith of University of Toronto and His Eminence James Cardinal McGuigan. This summer's Breda Seminar was strongly supported by the Canadian ambassador at The Hague. Provincial governments throughout the country recognize the value of the annual seminar by contributing to its support. Saturday Night, one of Canada's most respected publications, not only published a long article on the Breda Seminar in a recent issue, but in June commented editorially on the unusually great value of this aspect of ISS work. In Holland, the appreciation Europeans feel for the Canadian ISS work in this connection was stressed repeatedly, not only by students, but by Dutch and Western European government officials.

The world today is bigger than any individual campus. Understanding among democratic students is too important to be destroyed by indifference. Communist organizations and youth groups work overtime for their beliefs; it is essential that people like ourselves do the same thing for ours. Now, more than ever, the horizons of Canadian students cannot stop at Western, or at Toronto; they must extend to universities in Cologne and Munster and Bologna.

What Western students must do is maintain support for ISS, not slacken it. ISS committee members, on their part, should do all in their power to give students more information about ISS accomplishments, more news concerning ISS plans, and more detailed statements about the use being made of ISS funds.

Monty Woolley

George Kaufman's and Mos Hart's brilliant, brittle take-off on the late Alexander Woollcott, The Man Who Came To Dinner, provoked its Monday opening-night audience at the Royal Alexandra to spasms of laughter the like of which we have not seen for a long time. Small wonder it was, with urbane, snow-haired Monty Woolley, complete with his traditional Van Dyke in the title role.

As Sheridan Whiteside, a tempestuous, egotistical Misanthrope in modern guise, Monty Woolley dominated the action from the delivery of "I may vomit," his first line. His split-second timing and adroit delivery of the play's pungent lines accomplished an almost raucous rapport, and raised the play from the plane of satirical burlesque to a sprightly, virile comedy of the first rank.

Even veteran actor Woolley, however, in all his urbanity and regal bearing had to give stage to the sparkling caricatures of the superbly capable supporting cast.

Max Gordon's slick production reminds us of the Vic Man Who Came To Dinner two years ago. Except for the title and characters you wouldn't have thought they were one and the same play. After the profusion of spice and rolling profanity of Monday night, we wonder the censor does not wield the knife once again. But then, which version is true to life?

his last novel, makes him propagandize, which is one of the unforgivable sins of a novelist.

Other features pointed out were Greene's ability to create a sordid atmosphere, his vivid portrayal of criminal types, and his fast-moving prose. Dr. Grant felt however that Greene failed to give a sufficiently wide view of certain aspects of society and that his powers of characteization were limited.

English Students Receive Benefits On Health Scheme

London, England, Dec. 5—(Exchange)—Students in England, Wales and Northern Ireland will soon be eligible for accident and sickness insurance, under a new Scheme benefits of two and a (English counterpart of NFCUS).

At present the National Insurance Scheme, which protects working people in England, does not extend to students, as they are regarded as "non-employed". Under the NUS Scheme benefits of two and a half pounds sterling per week may be paid students for a premium of three pounds sterling per year.

The latest issue of "Student Chronicle," NUS paper, points out that students can enter the National Insurance Scheme voluntarily as "Non-employed Contributors," but they would be eligible for only "Widow's Benefits, Maternity Grant and Attendance, Guardian's Allowance, Retirement Pension and Death Grant," while being excluded from Sickness or Accident Benefit.

Tribute to the Baha'i World Faith

"Palestine may indeed be now regarded as the land not of three but of four faiths, because the Baha'i creed, which has its center of faith and pilgrimage in Acre and Haifa, is attaining to the character of a world-religion. So far as its influence goes in the land, it is a factor making for international and interreligious understanding."

Corner Boys Outclass Bees By 4-1 Margin

Batteglio Stars In Goal As Junior Pucksters Lose In Clean, Rugged Game

By DAVE BUTTERS

Corner Boys' Grill defeated Varsity Bees 4-1 in a Junior "B" hockey tilt at Varsity Arena last night. It was a clean, hard-fought game in which Corner Boys had it all under control in spite of repeated Varsity attacks. Tom Batteglio, Corner Boys' goalie, received excellent support from his defence and was robbed of a shut-out at 17:19 of the third period.

Corner Boys opened the scoring, shortly after the one minute mark of the first period when Craig bulged the twine on a pass from Ptsanick. The game then settled down to a hard-checking, fast-skating contest in which both goalies were called upon to make sensational saves. Both teams tried hard but there was no scoring for the next 32 minutes of play. Corner Boys tried desperately to keep Varsity from scoring and Varsity tried equally hard to score.

Shortly after the eleven minute mark of the third period, the roof fell in on the Bees when Corner Boys scored twice in nineteen seconds. Craig, standing on the blue line, received a pass from Scott and scored on a long hard shot. 20 seconds later, Don McIntosh recovered a rebound from Milne's pads and beat Johnny with a flip shot into the lower right hand corner. Four minutes later Corner Boys scored again — Posivy from Scott. At 17.19 Varsity scored its lone goal to rob Batteglio of his shut-out. Woodrup scored on a pass from Fullerton.

Outstanding for the winners was Tom Batteglio in the nets. Jim Craig, Fraser Scott, and Nick Romagnola were the best of the Corner Boys' attackers. The outstanding player of the Varsity team was Art Holmes, ably assisted by his wingmates Dave Kent and Bill Yeo. The best of the Bees defence were the Prendergast cousins — D'Arcy and Paul.

Line-ups:

Varsity: Goal, Milne; defence, D'Arcy Prendergast, P. Prendergast; centre, Holmes; wings, Kent, Yeo; alternates, Shields, Fullerton, Sinclair, Moore, Brown, Wardrup, Nichols, Andrews.

Corner Boys: Goal, Batteglio; defence, Posivy, Zubatiuk; centre, Scott; wings, Ptsanick, Craig; alternates, Gray, Gillandin, Romagnola, McBride, Braix, Forbes, Pesfound, McIntosh.

Summary:—

First Period

1. Corner Boys—Craig (Ptsanick) 1.05

Penalties—Nichols, Zubatiuk, McIntosh.

Second Period

Scoring — None.

Penalties—Romagnola, Moore.

Third Period

2. Corner Boys—Craig (Scott) 11.18
3. Corner Boys—McIntosh 11.37
4. Corner Boys—Posivy (Scott) 15.15
5. Varsity—Woodrup (Fullerton) 17.19

Penalties—Moore.

Meds, UC Meet In Rematch Boxla Tilt

Varsity's two top lacrosse outfits, Meds and UC firsts will renew their two-year rivalry this afternoon at one o'clock in the main gym of Hart House. Today's game will be a replay of the game which took place last Friday and was nullified as a result of faulty application of the rules. Meds have the edge as a result of their 10-4 victory of last Monday and need only another victory to cinch the Dr. Dafoe Cup, emblematic of the interfaculty championship. UC was on even terms at the time of the protested incident in the last fracas and bid fair to even the series.

Initial "A" Nite Features Varied Sporting Shows

Saturday night, December 10, University College will be host at the first Athletic Night of the year in Hart House. Right now men, is the time to get your date for one of the best evenings of entertainment that the campus provides.

Saturday night's program is certainly a full one. The schedule gets under way at 7 o'clock when the Intermediate basketball Blues tangle with Broadview Y in the lower gym. After this game, the Senior Blues come up against the Albion College squad from Albion, Michigan, rated as one of the best college teams in the Eastern United States.

Activities in the pool will consist of a Freshman Swim Meet commencing at 7:30 p.m. in addition to the feature attraction which is a water polo game between the McGill and Varsity Intercollegiate teams. Varsity is at present leading 6-2 in the two games, total point series.

The square dancing in the upper gym has been cancelled for this Athletic Night in order to give the Junior boxers who will be strutting their stuff a real chance to prove their worth. Junior wrestling will take place in the wrestling room. When athletic activities draw to a close, Fred Evis will set up his P.A. system in the main gym.

Sportswoman

Hockey and volleyball practices continue on, as well as the intercollegiate basketball practice tomorrow at 5:30 in the O.C.E. gym.

Ski Meeting

Another reminder is the colored pictures of skiing that can be seen this afternoon in the Medical building at 5 o'clock, room 138. This is the first meeting this year and the executive hope to have a large turnout.

Basketball

St. Mike's A's, Intramural Basketball Queens, retained their unbeaten record yesterday, when they drubbed their little sisters at St. Joseph's College School, outscoring them 22-6.

The game was fast, well-played and definitely not as one-sided as the score indicates. Betty Fitzgerald and Shiela Hogan sparked the champs while Ruthanne Tobin and Marg Douglas stood out for the School.

Trinity "A" And Victoria Garner Hockey Triumphs Second Win For Vic Men

The Trinity A's started their hockey season this year off with a bang and an 8-3 victory over Pre Meds at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon. Trinity showed surprisingly good passing for the early stage of the season and had plenty of speed as well. Crerar was the top producer for the black and red aggregation with two and Leishman, Hall, Meredith, Howard, Stewart and Crerar all netted one to complete the Trinity total.

Ernie Howard started the parade just thirty seconds after the face off, only to have to leave a few minutes later with a badly cut lip. The Buttery Boys' other goal was tallied by Stuart.

Pre-meds, who suffered their second loss in this match, lacked checking ability, as Trinity had complete control of the area in front of Meds' goal a lot of the time. Their shooting was pretty wild in spite of their eight markers to show for it; if anything within six feet of the goal counted as a shot on, they would have had about fifty shots on goal.

The doctors showed a lot more fight in the second period than in the first. Their checking picked up a bit, as did their shooting. Charlie MacDougall got two very nice goals on breakaways, and Reg Perkin got the other.

Senior Vic's hockey representatives went all out to grab a close 5-4 decision over Senior UC in yesterday's other hockey fixture. Don Crawford and Stu Howard were tops for the winners with two markers apiece. Jack Birkenshaw added the other Vic score and shared the assist column, L. Summers, each gathering one.

For the red and white skaters it was an evenly spread total with McCutcheon, Edwards, Turner and Stuckey splitting the honors. Edwards and Jewsom added assists. The UC squad was behind 3-2 at the end of the first stanza and matched Vic's two scores in the last frame in a very tight contest.

Line-ups

Trinity — Goal, Brownell. Defence, Wells, Howard. Centre, Meredith. Wings, Pringle, Stuart. Alternates, Crerar, Wright, Whitehead.

Pre-Meds — Goal, Longo. Defence, Jones; Burrows. Centre, Perkins. Wings, Shaw, Bocknick. Alternates, Keenlyside, Ainslie, MacDougall, Ehrlich, Kilty, Morse, Clarke.

The Varsity Under Attack At SAC Meet

The editorial policy of The Varsity came up for extended discussion at last night's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council.

A motion was passed to:

(a) Improve the quality of editorials appearing in The Varsity; encourge more editorials from the members of The Varsity staff, rather than resorting to reprinting editorials from other University papers;

(b) That qualified persons should be assigned to Art, Music and Drama reviews and features; qualified persons to mean persons reasonably familiar with the event to be reviewed and having the ability to review the event; and (c) That this motion should not be construed as an attempt to restrain expression.

Speaks On Reprints

SAC Finance Commissioner Earl Orser pointed out that 16 out of the last 23 editorials appearing in The Varsity had been written by members of The Varsity staff; that the remaining seven had been reprinted from other campus newspapers.

SAC President Bob Hetherington asked how many Varsity editorials had been printed in other University papers. He was told that about twenty had been printed in papers from Nova Scotia to British Columbia.

Student Union Committee Chairman Ian MacLennan said he thought these editorials from other papers had been good. The basis of judgement should be whether these editorials were of interest to the students, not who wrote them, he said.

Criticize Publicity

The Varsity's policy with regard to publicity pictures from campus organizations came under fire from Finance Commissioner Orser. He held that a matter of principle was at stake in The Varsity's policy of allowing organizations who wanted pictures in the paper to pay for the expense of having cuts made of the pictures themselves. He said this practice would lead to discrimination against smaller organizations with lower budgets.

Varsity Editor Stan Fillmore pointed out that The Varsity's present budget for cuts would allow only one new cut to be run per issue if The Varsity was to pay for them all out of its own budget. "It is our policy," Fillmore said, "to help these organizations financially, in the matter of cuts, as far as it is possible for us to do."

A motion was passed to continue the present policy with regard to these cuts.

New Design By Canadians Displayed In Photo Show

Ten years ago a group of architects with a modern approach to design started to build Canada's West Coast. This week a show of photographs is being held in the school of Architecture's Fifth Year Draughting Room behind Convocation Hall of the results of their efforts, which have proven the inevitability of an Architecture that is expressive of our 20t hcentury way of life.

These pictures show that radiant heat, walls of glass, ribbon windows, split levels and all the many ideas for contemporary living we hear about have become a reality in the houses, schools and other buildings in British Columbia.

Houses predominate in the exhibition. One of the most interesting is planned on three levels, has one complete wall of glass and is built on an unusual site. The house is surrounded by towering Douglas firs while a mountain stream flows past the lower living room. Another built on the side of a mountain may be the answer to the low cost housing problem, as it applies to the milder climates. It is built entirely of B.C. cedar, has three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a balcony off the living-dining areas. It cost approximately $7,500 and was completed in eight weeks.

The thoroughly up-to-date approach of the British Columbia Department of Education is expressed in a new, inexpensive, expandable, one-story school which has covered play areas to combat the rain problem. These schools have been a boon to the poorer school districts. Of particular interest is the new Vancouver Vocational and Technical school, one of the most modern training schools on the continent, a gleaming structure in reinforced concrete and glass which according to officials of the Vancouver School Board gives the most desirable space for the least cost.

The photographs of the new War Memorial Gymnasium at the University of British Columbia, which is under construction, points the way to a more progressive attitude in public buildings.

Architecture students say that architecture has at least reached a turning point in Canada and hope that the rest of the country may be freed from the bonds of traditionalism and Old World mustiness. In all the exhibition has proved stimulating to most people who have seen it.

Establish Committee On Text-Book Costs At S. A. C. Meeting

The question of text-book prices was discussed again at last night's SAC meeting. A motion was passed to establish a committee to be composed of N.F.C.U.S. Chairman Tom Symons, Debates Commissioner Dave Quigley, Varsity Editor Stan Fillmore and SAC President Bob Hetherington to investigate means to deal further with the present situation and to bring to the Council recommendations for action to be taken.

Hetherington suggested a National agency be formed to purchase text books in wholesale lots and to distribute them to member universities. Other universities across Canada are aware of our stand against the Macmillan Company and are sympathetic to it, he said. "Our stand on this question should be clarified and publicized," he said. Quigley suggested that the representatives form the other faculties and colleges should attempt to influence their fellow-students to put pressure on the Macmillan Company and the Oxford University Press, who also refuse to sell to the Press because of the discount the Press allows, by means of a boycott against these publishers' books. Hetherington wondered if such a move would be possible since so many of the required texts are published by Macmillans.

A motion was defeated to send a NFCUS representative to the National Union of Students conference in London to be held on Dec. 20-22. NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons said a letter requesting $80.00 from Toronto as their share in the expense of sending such a delegate was received too late to raise such a sum. He suggested that Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, past president of NFCUS and SAC should be contacted to represent NFCUS at this conference. Symons called Gwynne-Timothy the best equipped man available for the job; that he had presided over a national NFCUS meeting only 3½ months ago and could be relied on to represent the views of Canada's students; and that he was already in England. In defeating this motion, Toronto NFCUS agreed with the stand taken by national NFCUS not to send a student from Canada.

The Council was also informed that a committee consisting of the Comptroller, a member of the Board of Governors, Prof. E. R. Arther, the Warden of Hart House and the President had been formed to meet with the council to discuss the question of the Student Memorial Union.

Free Schooling For B Standing Wanted by P.C.'s

The following proposed amendment will be introduced to the U.T.D.U. Mock Parliament in Vic Alumni Hall tonight, a spokesman of the MacDonald Cartier Club executive (the Progressive Conservative group on the campus) said late last night:

"Be it resolved that:

(1) Equal opportunities for students in all provinces to be facilitated by (a) Dominion-provincial agreement to ensure that all provinces have equal facilities according to their population, the Dominion government to assist provincial governments wherever necessary; (b) Those with A standing of at least 70 per cent should be given free tuition each year they attain that standing; (c) The system of bursaries to be augmented, particularly for those living outside the immediate university area.

"2. (a) The power of boards of governors be limited to financial matters; (b) Caputs or similar organizations to have direct channels of appeal to provincial courts. To this end, bills of rights protecting academic freedom should be passed by all the provinces. The bills should include stringent measures against violation of academic freedom, directly and indirectly, this to include financial pressure.

"3. This House commends the present curricula in Canadian universities and feels that the effort of the LPP would be more constructive if turned toward obtaining similar curricula in Communist-dominated countries."

The LPP's bill is to be struck out by the P.C. amendment. "We can't agree with it," the spokesman said.

Atwood Fools Forestry Disregards Insect Life Tells of Woodland Fun

Dr. C. E. Atwood of the Faculty of Zoology surprised his audience of Forestry students in the Main Debates Room of Hart House last night by giving only casual mention to his pet subject, Forest Entomology.

Illustrating his talk with some 150 Kodachrome slides of his own taking, Dr. Atwood pointed out the immense entertainment value afforded by a wide interest in the myriad forms of plants and animals to be found in the forests. A keen fisherman and amateur photographer, Dr. Atwood has developed an excellent collection of Kodachrome transparencies of plants, fish, insects, and many items of general scenic interest.

U.N., Washington Trips To Be Discussed Today

A report and an analysis of the trip to the United Nations and the Washington Conference will be given at a meeting of the International Relations Club, to be held today in Wymilwood at 4 o'clock. The report will be given by six students who took part in the events.

The Washington Conference was a meeting held to discuss U.S. foreign policy regarding different world regions.

Debaters' Impressions

Work Hard But Rest Easy

After debating the subject at five American Universities we are of the opinion that the last thing the people of that country want is to have their basic non-agricultural industries nationalized — or anything else. We almost thought they did when we won at Rochester. Thinking back over it now, perhaps the first American speaker should not have said that the reason for the lower power rates in Ontario was because we had such a low standard of living. It turned out that one of the judges had attended school in Toronto.

At Princeton we discovered that not only did we have to show that the industries should be nationalized but also to present a plan of so doing it. By four the next morning, the Fram-Sopha plan had emerged. It was never disputed; we think that since we did not understand it fully, it absolutely confused the opposition.

See Study Paradise

What a library at Princeton! It seems to say: "I know that studying is hard work, so I'm going to make the poor student as comfortable as possible." It is complete with chesterfields and easy chairs throughout. Near the stacks there are reading lounges and smaller rooms where one can lock oneself in, to prevent disturbance.

Then over to NYU — the university without a campus. It's just a bunch of office buildings downtown. They took us to dinner at the Brass Rail. We're convinced that the guy that sets the prices there is taking an extension course in the mathematics of the solar system. After dinner a basketball double-header at the Garden.

Basketball Competes

At Fordham there was a basketball game too. Don't know how many saw it but only ten came to see us. They held a cosy little social after the debate. Always a pleasure to lose to these people. I think they are training prospective army officers there for duty in the polar regions. The room we slept in was, if you will pardon the expression, chilly. To top it off, the window-cleaner arrived at 9 a.m. and throwing open both windows, proceeded to execute his commission.

Hail Columbia! Jim Cairns 4T9 showed us around the campus. Their entertainment manager was a sterling fellow. After the debate he took us down to the Union—the Lion's Den. Some pretty sleek looking lionesses there too. Something new here. They sell beer therein and have dancing every night. We decided to make a thorough investigation of this unique place. The host was not quite sure what time it closed, and as we felt that this was a very important piece of information to carry back home, we decided to stay and find out.

We asked a lot of questions on the trip and got some interesting answers. We discovered that there is a general feeling of revulsion to mitigate academic freedom. A faculty member at Rochester said that he wished the House Un-American Affairs Committee had insisted the Universities provide a list of books used, because he thought that would have been the end of said Committee. At Princeton, they were especially proud that President Dodds had replied to the request by saying that in order for the committee to ascertain the books they should all enroll at Princeton.

Have Small Classes

We do not think that students have as diversified an extra-curricular life as their Canadian counterparts. Partly no doubt, because the minimum amount of work required is about the maximum done here. The accumulation of a mass of facts seems to be stressed. The tendenoy seems to be very small classes and a great deal of personal contact between faculty and students.

In answer to our inquiries about the place of student government in university life, we conclude that it occupies a very small place. Nor is the student newspaper looked upon as an organ of student opinion, but rather as an advertiser of current activities.

But in general the American student seems to be thinking, and thinking particularly about his country's role in world affairs.

Our "Students' Artsman's Council"

A letter is carried in The Varsity today which we have printed, not because we feel that it adds anything constructive to the life we lead at university, but to point out to students at the University of Toronto an example of a too-common type to attitude and thinking which we can only trace to a narrow immature outlook.

A comment such as "Students' Artsman's Council" shows a deplorable lack of information if only about the physical make-up of the SAC. And the fact that three young men, two of whom have been here two years, are not aware that they pay three dollars and not six dollars a year for SAC activities indicates that they have not taken the trouble to check their facts.

Their criticisms are interesting. They include: The Varsity, the Employment Service, The Carabin Weekend, The International Student Service and the proposed Students' Memorial Union. In every case the criticism is not based on facts, although our correspondents have enough information to talk about these things.

The letter needs only to be read to show how absurd it is. But these points should be particularly noticed:

The Varsity:—

—We allow ourselves a two per cent average for errors in the spelling of names, misjudgment of fast action, and human weakness, in our sports columns. Not bad for men who also have full courses to take care of.

—Editorial issues are chosen on the basis of interest, what we feel should be examined, and pertinence, all to be constructively dealt with.

—Arts events are not over-covered. Arts students have more time to organize and participate in extra-cirrcular activities than many other faculties and schools and therefore are more often reported. But the other faculties and schools are not ignored. In yesterday's paper (a small issue) there were stories on U.C., Vic, Skule, The Flying Club (which includes people from all faculties). The Hart House Debates (for all men in the University), the Newman Club, church attendance and a talk on an English novelist, Graham Greene.

—We invite your criticism—your intelligent, constructive criticism, and your assistance.

The Employment Service:—

—It has done, is doing, and will do a good job. Many thousands of students have taken advantage of its services since it was begun. Students who use it are neither "inept or lethargic", as any practical engineer would admit.

The Carabin Weekend:—

—Run to increase understanding between the two great peoples who make up Canada, the Carabin Weekend is neither planned, nor turns out to be, a holiday. It is fun, instructive and builds better citizens. People who partake in it must pay considerable more than the subsidy to go.

The I. S. S.:—

—We have discussed the ISS quite often in these columns. As far as the Displaced Persons scheme is concerned, the ISS remains the only organization which has attempted to bring to Canada men and women in distress in Europe who represent minds, and not brawn, in order that they may study, get another crack at a decent life, and eventually become citizens of this country. We suggest that Messrs. Holding, Bryson and Smith take a few hours out to meet and talk to some of these D.P. students, and learn what really fine people they are. ISS, incidentally is not an SAC function, but has received financial support from Council.

The Student Memorial Union:—

—Still in its initial planning stages, the Students' Memorial Union is designed to cater to the tastes of all university students, regardless of their interest, course, color, race or creed. It will cost a great deal of money, which students for many years to come will contribute. In the new year we will have more to say about the Union, and for those who cannot wait, many of the details are contained in last year's Varsity, files of which may be examined at any time in our office.

In addition to these functions, the SAC publishes Torontonensis and The Students' Handbook, administers a loan fund, organizes and runs activities carried on by the Blue and White Society (pep rallies, the Homecoming weekend, All-Varsity dances), produces the All-Varsity Revue, maintains the University of Toronto Symphony, the All-Varsity Chorus (who will give a joint concert Sunday night), the University of Toronto Band, organizes trips for skiing and to away football games, and generally looks after student affairs on a university level.

The list of SAC activities is an impressive one. The representation on the Council includes men and women from every section of the university.

If Messrs. Holding, Bryson and Smith still feel, "after much consideration that (they) receive almost nothing in return from 'a Students' Artsmen's Council'", then we suggest they and any others that feel as they do transfer to the Commerce and Finance course where they will see they get the best three dollars value on the campus.

worth mentioning, 'September for Mr. Christopher', by J. C. Dickinson. The effect of the story depends on the creation of a certain mood—nebulous, I should say (pace, Mr. Green). This mood is evoked and sustained, but one gets the impression, somehow or other, that it was not all intentional. Perhaps Mr. Dickinson's long, rambling sentences unwittingly carried out his intention for him.

And the poetry? The less said, the better.

Pension Plan Steel Strike's Vital Issue

The real issue in the recent steel strikes in the United States was the responsibility of management for the depreciation of the human machine, as of other machines, stated Charles H. Millard, Canadian National Director of the United Steel Workers of America yesterday, addressing a formal discussion group of the School of Graduate Studies.

The realization of the people of the United States of the importance of this issue was shown in their willingness to sacrifice great financial benefits by striking, the speaker said. Now Canadians also are realizing that pensions are essential from the economic, social, and political point of view.

Socially, there is a great deal of latent fear in the industrial worker of the twilight years, of what the future will bring. He realizes the problems that face him after his earnings stop.

From an economic point of view, it is necessary to maintain the purchasing power of the aged, to keep up to national economy.

Politically, nothing in the United States in the last twenty-five years has so frustrated the attempts of the Communists to gain the support of the U. S. workers as the steel settlements, the speaker stated.

Mr. Millard strongly advocated the adoption in Canada of pension plans similar to those in the U.S., together with the abolition of the means test, and the reduction of the age level for pension from seventy to sixty-five years.

Keep Spain Out Of Atlantic Pact —U.C. Parliament

By a vote of 11 to 4 the University College Parliament decided that Franco Spain should not be admitted to the North Atlantic Pact, in a session yesterday in the Junior Common Room.

In the course of the debate, Elmer Sopha, IV UC, claimed that we should not be so horrified at the thought of Franco's totalitarianism (about which much of the debate centred), since Canada herself is slowly becoming a dictatorship.

Referring to an article about General Franco which was introduced by one of the government speakers, Sopha qualified his remark by saying that like the General, Mr. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce, was a "lovable, lovable man" but that he was also capable of usurping more than his fair share of power.

The debate was opened by Jack Geller, II UC, who explained that the government would prove that it is not "in the best interests" of the Western leaders to admit Franco to their councils or to arm him. Franco had been an anti-Communist but so had been Hitler. Before the last war, the democracies had armed Germany against Russia, but when Hitler had become strong enough, he had turned against the hand that fed him. Geller concluded by claiming that the same thing may happen with Franco.

Chuck Cohen, III UC, the first speaker for the Opposition, said that Franco was not so much of a dictator as he would seem. Indeed, he was being forced to get popular support of his government to boost production.

If Franco joined the Pact, it was likely that he could be persuaded to give his people more freedom.

Spain Poor Market

Another point in opposition to the resolution was that because of her frequent droughts, Spain would be a good market for Canadian wheat.

Cohen also claimed that Spain is a necessity for European defence; a Russian blitzkrieg could sweep through Germany and France, and there was no real natural line of defence until the Pyrenees.

Elliott Pepper, IV UC, speaking for the government, pointed out that after just finishing a war against fascism, we should not admit another fascist dictator to our circles.

That Lucky Old Sun

Hecklers Have Field Day In Public Speaking Class

Could you give an impromptu speech on a door knob — for one and a half minutes? The students in Institutional Management do just that and at the drop of a hat, or facsimile.

These public speaking classes have been running every Saturday for two hours these past six weeks.

Mr. John Henry Pepper, a veteran of Navy Public Relations for three and a half years, took over the class two years ago when it was felt that a public speaking course was necessary to round out the training of the I.M. graduates.

"The best way to learn to speak in public is through practise, in short, learning by doing," said Mr. Pepper.

Course Succeeds

The course has been a success from the beginning. Take the case of the ex-mounted policeman. Before he took the class he was noted for his quietness. No doubt a result of his training.

Anyway, you never saw such a change in a man. At the closing night exercises, he came second in the public speaking!

Last Saturday, in keeping with Mr. Pepper's plan to prepare the students for any type of talk, political speeches were delivered with the class heckling, pounding the desks, and generally making things difficult for the "politician".

Another time, recordings were made then played back. Many weird and amazed exclamations could be heard around the room. Scarcely anyone recognized his own voice.

During the lectures a recording was made of speeches prepared and impromptu, then played back. The best speeches were those given on the spur of the moment.

"Today it is an asset for a man to be able to express himself in public," said Mr. Cork, supervisor.

Colleges Produce 'Intellectual' Babies Declares Dr. Long

The motion, "Resolved that bottle-fed babies seldom grow up" was passed by the one-sided vote of 87-11 at last night's Hart House debate. Honorary speaker Dr. Marcus Long of the Philosophy Department supported the motion expressing the case against the prevalent method of university education.

Intellectual Babies

The classroom system practised in the university is "bottle-feeding" and will produce "intellectual babies" Dr. Long charged. Quoting from his own teaching experience, the speaker said he had thought the picture of students sitting in his classes with "mouths puckered up" showed what he took to be the proper expression of awe. Later he had come to realize what the mouths were puckering up for, and now he takes the precaution of warming himself on a hot radiator before his classes and measures the temperature, etc., to ensure that the "pablum" will be in the right condition.

Attacking the system of lectures in classrooms, Dr. Long suggested it was the ideal form of education for a totalitarian government. Attempts toward original inquiry and critical discussion were stifled, he said, with the set up of a professor dealing out "dull facts gleaned from dull books in a dull monotone" to a class "either asleep or suffering from insomnia".

Platonic Example

Plato's idea of Symposium in which Socrates and his friends gathered with a tankard of wine to investigate the mysteries of the universe was cited by Dr. Long. The philosopher E. M. Whitehead claimed that he had learned much more from his evenings and weekends spent with Bertrand Russell, Eddington and Webb, and others, than he did in the classrooms, Dr. Long said.

This inter-change of ideas on an informal basis is the only way students can get away from the current process of producing a "society of conformers" who "rush for shelter from the impact of new ideas," Dr. Long declared.

Commenting on the current university graduates, Dr. Long declared that individualism is rare among them; instead they are turned out as "walking encyclopaedias rather than wise men trained in wisdom."

McGill Advanced

Student clubs in Europe "where lively discussion of any topic can be had at any hour of the day or night" were contemporary examples quoted by Dr. Long. As far as he knew, he said, McGill University is

Health Impaired In Urban Areas By Air Pollution

"Every citizen has the right to have the air come to him reasonably unpolluted," declared Professor Allcut yesterday. Professor Allcut, head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, was speaking to an open meeting of the Engineering Society in Convocation Hall.

Enlarging on his theme, "Atmospheric Pollution and Its Consequences," he stated the pollution had always been with us, and was likely to become "increasingly with us" In the past, he said, sporadic attempts had been made by governments to abate the nuisance and damage caused by smoke pollution. In the thirteenth century, the use of Newcastle coal was prohibited in England, and at about the same time in Germany, metal plants were forbidden to use coal as a fuel.

In general, he declared, the control of smoke from industry and the home was left to the discretion of the individual. This method was found to be far from satisfactory. Hence government stepped in more strongly.

Twenty dollars a head per annum was the estimate of pollution damage in the Toronto area, Prof. Allcut stated. He pointed out that although it is expensive for a government to enforce control of the products of combustion, that it is even more expensive not to do so. Although air is far more vital to human life and health than either food or water, while the purity of water and food were matters of rigid government control, as yet little action had been taken in the Toronto area to ensure that air should be as clean as possible.

Citing the case of Donora, Pa., a mining and smelting town, he declared that every day 21.7 tons of solids and 321 tons of gases were discharged into the air every day. Of the gaseous pollution, 27 tons were carbon monoxide, a highly poisonous gas, and one quarter ton

Brothers Travel

Become Monte Cristo's Cellmates

By ROCKY MARTINO

Have you ever thought of packing up and leaving for a tour of some part of the world? Warren and Doug Wilkins did more than just think about it; they went to Europe and Africa.

They left last May and after a brief bit of 'ship-hunting' in Montreal, they crossed the Atlantic on the Norwegian freighter "Rutentjell" as ordinary seamen. Leaving the ship at Antwerp they hitched a ride to Paris and spent a day at the capital of world fashion.

Kept out of Monte Carlo

Fashions didn't appeal as much as thoughts of an evening at the Casino of Monte Carlo so they immediately set out for the Riviera. They left Paris and started thumbing. The first car to pull up was a God-send. The driver, Eric Haakiman, was an Englishman and he was going to the Riviera himself.

But th trip was an anti-climax for the two globetrotters. When the got to Monte Carlo they couldn't get in. Everybody must wear evening dress; Doug was wearing khaki shorts and Warren an old pair of trousers.

"We couldn't get into the Casino so we decided to find some place to sleep," Warren said recently in an interview. "The hotels were very expensive so we went to the police-station and spent the next two hours trying to convince the local gendarmes that we weren't fooling when we said we wanted to spend the night in jail. We were all set to sock one of them when they laughingly agreed to put us up for the night." Warren leaned back in his chair and seemed to dream for a moment of a night in a French jail.

Sleep In The Chateau d'IF

Apparently the jail habit took a firm hold on the boys. They hitched to Marseilles and spent three days in jail there. In fact, they even slept in the prison cells at the Chateau D'If, the prison where the Count of Monte Cristo was kept.

"We tried to get into Monte Cristo's cell to spend the night out that wasn't allowed," Warren said. "That didn't bother us much. When the ferry went back to Marseilles we weren't aboard.

"When it got dark we sneaked into the prison and tried to make for the inner block where Monte Cristo's cell was. We got into the outer block but before we could go further, a dog rushed us. We ran into one of the cells and slammed the door just in time. Well, that dog barked for 1½ hours without stopping. What a night!"

"The next morning we sheepishly presented ourselves at the dock. The people just laughed and asked how we'd liked the cells. We laughed too."

Police Were Everywhere

"We left for Spain after that," Warren continued. After waiting for 4½ hours at the border to have our camera equipment checked, we started off on a tour of the country.

"The police were everywhere, checking us about once a day. We spoke a little Spanish so we didn't have much trouble. Living itself was very cheap. We could have bought a 26 oz. bottle of Madeira wine for 6 cents."

Leaving Spain at Gibraltar, they had one of their typical escapades —this time with a smuggled camera —but nothing happened. They crossed to Tangiers and travelled through Spanish Morocco.

Legionaires Don't Drink

At Algiers they met units of the Foreign Legion—official language French—70% of the personnel German. The surprising thing about the modern legion is that most of the Legionaires don't smoke or drink. This seems to bother some of the 'blood-and-thunder' senior officers who don't see how men can be such fine soldiers and still be teetotalers.

By this time it was getting late in the summer. They left Africa and made their way up Italy, hitching, hiking, and taking the occasional street car ride.

Enter Italy Broke

Have you ever entered a country on a Saturday afternoon with no money and not knowing the language? That's how Warren and Doug entered Italy. Luckily for them they found someone who changed a bit of money for them.

From there the route home was through Switzerland, France and Britain. Then they worked their way across the ocean.

They landed in Montreal and hitched a ride to Toronto, getting here on Sept. 27. They had been away four months, and spent $160.

On their trip through Europe and Africa, they took 1950 feet of colour film and 250 slides. If you'd like to see these, you have your chance this evening when Warren and Doug will speak at the Exploration Society meeting in Hart House. See you there.

Fortune My Foe

Fortune, My Foe (Clarke, Irwin and Company, $1.50) shows that Robertson Davies now handles the craftsmanship of play-writing with ease, thus enabling himself to give his ideas full expression through the medium of the stage without being hampered by matters of technique.

As early as possible the characters are established for what they are and remain as consistent as real live humans throughout, but not more-so. The plot is simple and straightforward, obviously intended to be a vehicle for the theme and nothing more. The dialogue is lucid, sometimes deadly serious, and is loaded with satire.

The story is mainly concerned with Nicholas Hayward, a young Canadian professor who says he wants the recognition and money the United States offers its gifted youth; Idris Rowlands, an older, more cynical professor who, though not successful in Canada, is still idealistic enough not to want to "sell out" to the States; and Vanessa Medway, a fickle but honest and intelligent girl for whom Nicholas yearns and unadmittedly wants the American lucre. There is a sub-plot concerning Frank Szabo, a Czech puppet-master and true artist who is in Canada without permission from Ottawa, and Ursula Simonds, Mrs. E. C. Philpott and Orville Tapscott. Miss Simonds is a pseudo-intellectual who wants to profane Szabo's art by utilizing his puppets for Communist propaganda; Mrs. Philpott and Tapscott want to use the puppets to uplift society through a recreational program.

Fortune My Foe is a good play, but it is not soul-shaking. The problem of southward migration of Canadian talent has been recognized before. Mr. Davies points out many of the reasons for it, but offers no solution. Nicholas Hayward stays in Canada either because human nature is unpredictable, or, if Vanessa Medway is supposed to symbolize the glitter and glory of sophisticated American society, because the States didn't want him. Neither of these solutions is much of a guide to a young Canadian who finds himself in Hayward's position. Further, the case the author has chosen does not apply specifically to the Canadian problem. Young American professors also have to decide whether they will write a trashy book and achieve recognition or whether they will remain true to their ideals and stay poor.

Philosophically speaking it is difficult to say whether Mr. Davies is successful with his sub-plot. Are the claims of the individual, in this case Szabo the artist, to be placed above those of society? If society is represented by the Ursula Simonses at one extreme and the Philpotts and the Tapscotts at the other, the moral victory that the author awards Szabo is the result of a valid judgment. In any case the victory of the individual over organized society is likely to be applauded by a majority of North Americans today. But if a play is to live it must be timeless. Whether generations, who will presumably be members of a world society, will agree with such a decision is something that Mr. Davies does not seem to have considered.

Acta Victoriana

The current Acta is not a bad job, really, considering the difficulties of an editor among the Victoria Towerists. In spite of the agitation in the college last year—an agitation which, if successful, would have made Acta not much better than a comic book—the editor (Harry Green) has managed to keep the frivolous in its place—somewhere in the back pages among the ads. But one might well wonder why a piece of creative writing was made the last item in the magazine.

There is a fine article on Canadian radio by James D. Service, in which the pros and cons of the CBC policy are discussed. The question of whether people should get what they think they want or what is good for them is handled briefly by the author, and he comes out on the side of the latter view. It is too bad a few more statistics about how many people prefer advertising on the air were not included. A recent poll suggests that two-thirds of the listeners think advertising detracts from the interest of the radio.

There is one major short story

Subsidization

Editor, The Varsity:

We hereby protest the high-handed manner in which you, as the Students' Artsmen's Council's mouthpiece try to throw still more of our money away for edification of the sluggish Arts Types. Each of us loses annually six dollars to the S.A.C. After much consideration we conclude that we receive almost nothing in return.

A few of the most obviously useless expenditures we list below:

(1) The maintenance of The Varsity. So far this year you have just about hit 100 per cent for inaccurate sports coverage, warmed over editorial issues, over coverage of arts college events and the self-righteous indignation that anyone should dare to criticise your policies.

(2) Maintenance of an employment service for those too inept or lethargic to get a job themselves.

(3) Subsidization of the Carabin weekend. When we allow ourselves the luxury of a holiday we foot our own bills, and expect others to do likewise.

(4) Support of I.S.S., or the importation of additional arts types to provide a cosmopolitan flavor for those already steeping their minds in borrowed thought.

The crowning touch, however, is your endorsement of a plan, so far half baked at best, to construct a Students' Union to act as an office building for various arty organizations, and as a hub of student activity of an as yet undisclosed nature. THIS IS TO BE DONE AT THE EXPENSE OF THE WHOLE STUDENT BODY. Here you would have us invest large sums of money in a puppet government that has no real power to use it anyway. We say six dollars a year down the drain is bad enough.

Open Sunday

Editor, The Varsity:

After waiting in vain for others more capable than myself to express themselves on a matter of pressing public interest, I trust that I may be excused if I set down a few words on the Open Sunday question.

The average person in Toronto who has no exceedingly strong religious convictions is being asked in a powerful propaganda campaign, which invades even the sanctity of his home in the person of an army of presumptuous doorbell ringers to accommodate his behavior on his sole day of freedom from his occupation to the narrow prejudices of a small group.

If we are all to think ourselves into a state of brainless stupor, a weekly hibernation, to avoid offending the tender sentiments of the few who regard this self-immolation as a divine command, then why do we not also pay the same respect to the days of rest appointed to the Hebrews, Moslems, Hindus, Baha'is, Buddhists and so on, and sit in our homes the entire week while the dust of the ages settles over us an inch thick?

It is time for us to break the tyranny of a bigoted Puritanism, which became obsolete in the more civilized areas of the globe a good quarter-century ago. "Toronto the Good" has become a term of disapprobation throughout the rest of the Dominion, which has, unaccountably, escaped the Hell-fire despite Sunday movies and the consumption of intoxicating beverages. "Montreal the Bad" is a much more human and friendly town and those unfortunate enough to be exiled by circumstances to Toronto have cause to spend their Sundays in weeping and wailing.

I call upon all students to support the Open Sunday movement, by vote and by word of mouth. Even if you yourself would not take part in these activities on Sunday, remember that there are others who would appreciate the right to follow the dictates of their own consciences.

A city whose holy Sunday silence exists only through the oligarchical legal enforcement reeks to Heaven with its hypocrisy even as did sinful Babylon.

was sulphur dioxide, which is extremely corrosive, as well as poisonous.

Prolonged exposure to these elements resulted in a sickness rate of 40%, and 18 deaths in four days.

Although he did not consider the air of Toronto to be so badly polluted, he warned the prolonged exposure to the atmosphere of the city could lead to poor general health.

The Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company Limited, in Trail, B. C., was involved in an international law suit in 1938, because smelter fumes were being blown across the border into the States, causing extensive damage. The Company was compelled to build a $13,000,000 recovery plant. The recovered combustion products were used in the making of fertilizer, among other things.

Discussing remedies for pollution, he pointed out that although the City of Toronto had the power to enforce anti-smoke laws, they were unable to exercise any control over railways, steamships, residences or metallurgical plants, because the provincial government, under a municipal smoke-abatement act, had withheld from the municipalities the power to interfere with these concerns.

Smokeless fuels might provide the answer, he felt, but they were not available in sufficient quantities in Toronto. Mechanical, electronic and sonic precipitators have been used and are being used, but the cost of installation is rather high.

Regarding legal enforcement, he felt that regulation should be reasonable and should be enforced quickly and impartially. He recalled that in the fourteenth century, several people were executed for flouting the existing regulations controlling pollution.

Will Be Enough Jobs For Engineering Grads States Labor Minister

Montreal, Dec. 6 —(CUP)— The 1950 engineering graduating class will be the largest in the history of Canada, Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor has announced. Previous estimates had shown that an estimated 2,000 engineers could be absorbed by Canadian employers in each of the five years from 1947 to 1951. However there has been a considerable backlog from the last three years, with the result that no difficulty is anticipated in placing all this year's graduates.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

The Illegitimate Child

When Robert Gill produced William Shakespear's Romeo and Juliet in Hart House Theatre two years ago, he was probably unaware of the striking analogy of the conflict between Capulet and Montague with the great gulf extant between theatre in Hart House and drama in the Faculty of Arts.

By a lecture-listener study of drama as curricula of an official university course, the undergraduate attains credit towards an ultimate degree in the Faculty of Arts. But by active partaicipation in a Hart House Theatre production, spending some 80 hours in valuable rehearsal time, he receives no credit whatever for his work. Theory apparently ranks higher than practice, bookshelf drama higher than living theatre, the printed line higher than the spoken word. Too obvious is this inference from the subordinate, unofficial, extra-curricular status of Hart House Theatre and its director, at the present time.

Of the sisters Art, Music and Drama the University sustains a Faculty of Music, and in the Faculty of Arts a comprehensive course in Art and Archaeology, both of which require, and give credit for, active, practical, productive work. But Drama, strangely enough, is left out in the cold.

Yet in the Greek, drama means action, . . . embodies the illusion of real life. The printed text of a play may quicken deep responses in the reader's mind, but performance alone can lift spectator and participant into the play itself. Drama and Theatre, now diametrically opposed on the campus, competing for students' loyalty and time (consciously or no), ought to be partners to a common end. Where they are two, they should be one; for drama was born in performance, and only in performance can it truthfully live. A marriage must occur if we are to beget a true dramatic art. Until such union, Hart House Theatre remains an illegitimate child.

Surely there is no question of the significance and importance of theatrical endeavour in many walks of life. To see our foibles, weaknesses and hypocrisies laid bare before our eyes we feel ourselves to be not merely spectators, but as King Claudius in Hamlet "like guilty creatures sitting at a play." Aristotle said we undergo catharsis, moral, physical, spiritual (if these be separable) and cry "There but for the Grace of God go I." Drama combines ministry and pedagogy, therapy, sociology and psychology. No one can deny the didactic value of Everyman, Green Pastures, You Can't Take It With You, Job, Our Town, St. Joan or Faust. But all these come to naught in the present shameful, unworthy, and third-rate position of Hart House Theatre in the University at this time. Yet in search of acting experience some 600 undergraduates read for parts in the four Hart House productions last year. Available was only a grand total of 98 roles.

We need a Chair of Drama, if not a Faculty, at Varsity to meet this need. A legitimate, credited lecture course in drama with required practical experience, open to all faculties, Hart House Theatre its centre and workshop, and leading to a degree, ought to be instituted now. Northwestern, Stanford, Columbia and Cornell all have courses leading to recognition in dramatic art. Why should the University of Toronto diddle and dawdle in this respect?

True the Royal Conservatory has a Department of Drama and Speech Arts, Clara Salisbury Baker its head, with an excellent standard of course and staff, and enhanced with ludicrous facilities to carry the course into effect.

In past performances of Julius Caesar, St. Joan, Crime and Punishment, and Romeo and Juliet, Hart House Theatre has proved its worth. Now is the time to recognize its invaluable contribution to the University, to consider its inter-relation with college dramatic societies and the Royal Conservatory, to create a central Chair of Drama and restore the theatre to a place of equity and dignity with music and art.

William Glenesk.

Art Review

At the Art Gallery in current display is "Collectors' Pieces", contributed by the Women's Committee, now in the Sculpture Court until December 11. The show is an "Antique Hound's Paradise".

In the first case were 18th and 19th century fans, the sticks of beautifully carved ivory or mother-of-pearl, and the foils elaborately covered with paintings. A particularly striking fan was a Philippine and Spanish type decorated in Japan. The ribs were composed of black ivory, decorated with fine golden drawings of Asiatic figures, while the foil was richly painted with flowers.

The English china was delightful. Something novel to me was a porcelain letter-holder. This was a boat-shaped vessel painted with flowers and divided in the centre by a fan-shaped panel. The diminutive 19th century Dresden figurines were the most appealing in the French cabinet.

The English and Continental silver seemed far more beautiful to me than the Early American pieces. The latter were square and heavy looking vessels, while on the former the carving was more elaborate. The most charming piece was an English serving dish in the centre of the stand. It looked like an over-size drinking goblet stretched into a curving oblong form which was emphasized and continued by the handles.

The display of Chinese dishes and ornaments seemed ugly and sombre at first, since I am not acquainted with the jade, wood and ivory used so extensively by the Chinese. You'll be interested in the gold "Jui" inlaid with precious stones. (A Jui is carried in the left hand of persons of rank to indicate their social position.) This one belonged to an emperor.

Dress Rehearsal

Flash bulbs are smashing away and a dynamic personality is guiding a group of ordinary folks through the exotic Polovetsian fragrance of dance music by Borodin. It's the dress rehearsal for Sunday evening's concert by the University Symphony orchestra and the All-Varsity Chorus.

The fragrance of the Polovotsian dances may be anything but sweet tonight, but that is only a further guarantee of the quality of Sunday evening's concert. Tonight's weakness will be Sunday's magnificence, for Lee Hepner is on the bit in a very emphatic manner, even to the point of discouraging news photographers who ask him to take his coat off so that he will look as if he's working — tut, tut! Of course he works, and when the poor newshound asks him to turn his photogenic baton towards the cellos, he fishes out a part in which the cellos need rehearsing and thus uses the pose to good advantage — not a moment to waste!

It would be very precocious to imply that we have the greatest symphony in the world — the violins sound fuzzy at best; in fact, best if they didn't play at all sometimes, but it's good noise, anyway, and the spirit is willing.

There is reason to regard the forthcoming concert with great interest; the orchestral programme is of a heavy nature, and the progress shown by these amateur musicians in the few weeks of rehearthen perhaps a little fuzziness in then ,perhaps a little fuzziness in the strings and nervousness in the horns will combine with various points of artistic unbalance to bring Sunday evening's concert of great music just a little closer to us poor mortals.

We humbly worship the generous spirit of those musicians in the orchestra who doubtless suffer great abuse to their artistic sensibilities in order to make it possible for college amateurs to share in the performance of truly great music.

Graduating Physicians Have Moral Obligation To People Of Canada

London, Dec. 7 —(CUP)— "The family doctor occupies a priestly pedestal", Dr. William Deadman told the Hippocratic Society at UWO yesterday. Because medical students do not pay the full cost of their education — the rest being provided by the public and the good citizens of this country — the physicians who are now graduating have more than a moral obligation to Canada, the guest speaker said. "The doctor must enter into the life of the community, and must make any contribution he is able to make."

VOX VARSITY

By JOHN LIVINGSTON

Orchids to Trudy Konwalina for her adaptation of la Venus d'Ille, this little lass of third year general really was wonderful, so wonderful that the powers that be at Ryerson allowed the presentation to go on for forty-five minutes instead of the usual half hour production. The cast and producers are also in line for congratulations for doing such a fine performance of la Venus. It appears that with each new program aired over C.J.R.T.-F.M. the production reaches new heights of perfection.

Tonight at 7:30 Page Four of Varsity Scrapbook will present some works of the U.C. Modern Letters Club, this show will be a little different because it is a discussion of the various works aired. The show will be made up of some members of the Letters Club and promises to be very interesting.

Since this is Varsity's week-end at U. of M., I thought a note on their Radio Workshop would be in order here. Les Carabins are quite a group, their show which used to be completely university talent now consists of outside talent, grads of U. of M. and a few undergrads. Production is by Paul Leduc and happens to be sponsored by a local foam and suds company, whose advertising agents are Spitzer and Mills of this city.

Once again a little hint to the scriptwriters, the deadline is the fifteenth of this month. Please don't let us down because it is your show so come on and produce the necessary scripts.

See you next week in the column and on the air tonight.

the only university in Canada where professor-student union under these conditions is to be had.

Toronto only offers a cold cup of bad coffee in the converted billiard rooms in the basement of Hart House," the speaker alleged.

The difficulty of getting closer professor - student get - togethers comes from the heavy duties of the professors, Dr. Long acknowledged.

Professor Mid-Wife

The position of the professor is that of a "mid-wife" whose task is to bring into the open what he "suspects to be within," Dr. Long suggested. The classroom has a place in the scheme of education in providing the instructor a chance to give accumulated knowledge of the past to the student, he suggested. But the instructor must not give way to a "veneration of the past leading to a decay of the mind" but must keep in mind the spirit of inquiry that suffused those whose teachings he is passing on, Dr. Long said.

Democracy can only be maintained, Dr. Long summed up, in keeping alive the cathartic action of trained skepticism. Only through this critical outlook can the truth be sought and guarded, he said.

"We can have no inspired leaders if we are all camp followers," Dr. Long said.

Industry Not Intellect

Moving the motion, Dave Donaldson, SPS, attacked "bottle-feeding" charging that a "degree is no longer a criterion of intellect but of industry." The round-table system should be adopted, Donaldson said, to get rid of the hindering "middle man." "What finer ice-breaker can you suggest than a bottle of beer?" Donaldson said.

In opposing the motion, Roy Neehal, Victoria, pointed out that in bottle-feeding the baby is not a "passive agent." The potentialities and assets of a student cannot be developed by his own accord, Neehal said. Suggesting that the case for the bottle lay in the fear that restraint and sobriety were needed to organize study or otherwise a chaos would result from the "beer party" type of discussion.

Second speaker for the motion, Paul La Prairie, SPS, charged that the average University of Toronto graduate is "not a learned man, but a commodity" turned out by the educational mill. An educated man is like a pear, he said, "well-rounded through his associations and bull-sessions," and pointed in the direction of his specialized education from his lectures and labs.

Supporting the negative, John Hastings, Medicine, suggested the "bottle-feeding" of professor to student involved co-operative activity because of the active participation of the student. This was essential to the development of the maure adult who must learn to work with others, he said.

SKULESPOTS

Well this one will wind it up, for the first term at least. The way things have been going lately, this might be the final wind-up for Skulespots. It seems that hardly anyone, except my relatives, ever reads these most interesting words, and those few that do, pay no attention to the sage words of advice that I am continually offering, completely free of charge. Ingrates!

Being an ardent believer in the merits of observation and conclusion I am going to conduct a wee experiment. If, by the time we hastily depart these cloistered walls for the holidays, I have not received ten (10) notes in the Publicity Director's slot, downstairs in the Skule House, saying that someone has obtained some value from the column, it will be cut. You have one week to uphold the only piece of literature that makes the Thursday edition of The Varsity worthwhile. No kidding, there is no sense wasting ten good dollars of the A.A.'s hard-pressed budget every week for something that no one pays attention to. Poor English, that. No box tops required, no prize offered, just a few words for a disgruntled author.

To pass on to subjects even more disgusting. The interfaculty committee has ruled that the final swim meet, betwen U.C. and SPS I be reswum; also that SPS be docked 100 Reed Trophy points for use of an ineligible player. That's really ducky and will help our cause along The replay will be over by the time you read these words; hope the team keeps up its standard and wins again. Things like this give a guy ulcers, especially when you have warned all the managers concerning the necessity o flearning all the rules about eligibility and player lists. Leave us have no more of such goings-on or there will be murder afoot in old SPS.

Word has it that SPS will be allowed to enter 14 teams in the minor leagues of basketball this year. If there had been room in the gym for more, let me assure you that the minor league would have considerably more that 88 teams. The way things stand, most of the teams will be made up of those fine types who don't make the first half dozen major league teams. A few will be made up of course teams, who have sent in applications.

A bit of sadness sneaks into our lives every now and then. Few chaps know about it, but our estimable Eng. Soc. president Willie Walker has been laid up in Ward 2B West up at Sunnybrook hospital for the past several weeks. The pressure of his two-fold job and a recurrence of a back injury proved a little too much, strong citizen though he is. How about showing a little appreciation for his terrific work and leadership with a few "Get well Willie" cards? You've got his address above, and the effort is small enough.

Most of you don't know Bill personally, but you have all seen the results of his work in Eng. Soc. activities, so unlimber a bit and send a card up. We hope to see you back in harness soon, Willie, so stop loafing and get well soon.

A plea to the football gallants: puleease bring your equipment back to the stores now. We want to get the stuff repaired before the New Year. Merely drop it off in the chute and pick up a receipt at your convenience from the Equipment Manager.

Yo eshakat,
Benny.

Meds Firsts Trounce U.C. For Dafoe Cup

Firman Fabulous As Docs Win 9-4

By JOHN DUGAN

A blazing hot Meds lacrosse team swept to its third Dafoe Cup in three years at noon yesterday. A hard-fighting but outclassed U.C. team just couldn't match the dazzling Doctors, who were full value for the win. The Redmen held the fort until half-time; then the Medicos broke loose and there was simply no stopping them.

Both teams were playing it close to vest in the first period, and neither was able to score for six full minutes. At 6:30, Ted Beaton speared a loose ball in front of the U.C. nets and beat Byrne cleanly. A few seconds later, Meds scored again, Al Varga taking Hetherington's free throw and blasting it in.

As in the last two games, a loose defense was U.C.'s undoing. Meds controlled the loose balls and played tight defensive ball. The accent, however was on offense in this period; both teams making hard rushes with Hetherington and Beaton leading the way for the Medsmen and Chambers and Raymond working hard for the Red and White.

The second quarter scoring was all for U.C. Raymond scored first at 3:55 followed four minutes later by Chambers with a blazing shot from mid-court. Play in this period was hard and fast, with U.C.'s defense a good deal tighter and holding Meds out time and again. Capt. Frank Chambers moved up to forward and led the play. Bill Davis dropped back on defense and checked hard and well in an unfamiliar spot.

Meds missed several scoring chances as the U.C. goalie rushed out of his net after loose balls on more than one occasion and twice nearly was scored on.

Up to half time the play had been fairly even, but in the third period Meds finally broke loose and began to roll. Heavier, more experienced players were the deciding factors, as the Redmen began to tire and the Docs notched three. The last straw in U.C.'s demise in this canto was an elbow injury to Frank Chambers, U.C.'s strong man. After he went off, The Red and White sagged visibly despite Jack Raymond's efforts to pull them together.

Meds rolled on in the final stanza with Al Varga netting a pretty goal one minute after play began. Shepherd hit the twine at 1:55 for U.C. but the play belonged to the Meds from then till 7:45, when Raymond notched his second goal of the game on a rebound. Halliburton then scored twice for Meds within fifteen seconds,—Bob Hetherington finished off the Meds scoring when he stole the ball from the U.C. goalie, who had started down the floor with it. Despite a vicious cross check Hetherington managed to get his shot into the empty net before Byrne could bet back between the pipes.

Tempers roared again as the play became really rugged. "Axe" Haliburton took an especially rough going over from the Artsmen, but kept going. An exchange of hard checks near the U.C. nets resulted in a regular "hey-rube" between Haliburton and Chambers, with players from both teams trying to get into the fray. A pile-up in the U.C. crease resulted, but the officials were able to break it up after a few punches had been tossed. A one minute penalty was awarded to Chambers, but no other players were chastised.

U.C. were trying hard at the final horn, but the obstacles were simply to great to be overcome The play was livened in the closing minutes by the sight of Pete Byrne, U.C. goaltender, joining in the floor play and making several valiant, but fruitless, rushes up the floor.

Outstanding player of the series was goalie Ken Firman, who after a poor season, came to life and played spectacular ball, foiling his opponents at every turn and coming through in the pinch every time. He was nothing short of brilliant all the way.

It would be hard to pick any individuals as stars for Meds, for every player contributed materially to the victory. The forwards played percentage ball and backchecked well, the defense, ie: one Herbie Moher, was solid and practically impossible to get by. Bob Hetherington shifted and ran like a deer with the wolves after him. "Axe" Haliburton was again the ace of old: shifty fast and hard-shooting. Ted Beaton set up plays and had some pretty shots himself. Al Varga showed real promise as a future star and Anderson, MacIlwraith and Hobson were right in there keeping the team rolling.

Second star should rightfully go to U.C.'s Frank Chambers, a great competitor and a great lacrosse player. It is significant that his mere presence on the floor made al the difference in the world to the spirit of the Redmen; without him they were lost.

Jack Raymond was high scorer for the Red and White in the series and played good solid ball. Steve Kopsky, "Dutch" Young, Emil Bluin, Bill Davis, Bob Shepherd, Jerry Soukmanowsky played hard in a losing cause. Pete Byrne

Albion Ace

Max Berry (above) is one of Albion's finest basketball prospects this year. He will be on deck when they trot onto the Hart House floor to oppose the Varsity senior hoopsters Saturday night. Berry is only 5' 1'1 and weighs 157; however, he is one of the Britons' rebound specialists. Voted "most valuable man" on the team last year, he has scored 26 points in their two games thus far.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Right now there is sort of a lull in sports activities around the town—the hockey is running along smoothly, the football is over, and the basketball is just starting, and so the sports columnists are filling up space by voicing their great concern over the lack of football seating capacities around Toronto commensurate with the population of the city. Crusading for more and bigger stadia is a fair and worthy cause, but there is, we believe, a matter of accommodation more pressing than that of the fitba'.

The reference, of course, is to basketball. This year, the University of Toronto will field about 150 (that's right, one hundred and fifty) basketball teams in the interfaculty and intercollegiate loops, and these teams will have to whip through their schedules on the limited floor space available around the school. The Athletic Department fully realizes the cramped conditions under which a sked of this large size will have to operate, and has taken (or intends to take) steps to alleviate the situation.

A five-floor gymnasium, convertible with removable seats to a single floor with a several thousand seating capacity would be the answer, and that is just what the UTAA has planned. The details, such as where to get the money for it, and where space for the building can be found, have not yet been looked after, but the planning is a big hop in the right direction.

The game of basketball (invented by a Canadian, incidently,) doesn't look on the surface to have the popular appeal that it really has. People have a fair idea of the basketball madness in the States, and especially in Utah. In the Mormon State every farm, every backyard, and every vacant lot has at least one backboard and hoop on it, and the kids start shooting from the age of four. This hot basketball mania has pervaded the border areas, and is one of the big reasons why a small college like Assumption can field such good b-ball teams when they can hardly scrape up an intermediate football dozen.

But the general impression is that around Toronto, basketball takes a back seat to hockey. Maybe this is because of the success of the pro ice teams in the city; maybe it is because of the failure of the Toronto Huskies when pro basketball was tried here. Whatever the reason is, b-ball doesn't get the consideration that hockey and football get. After giving the matter careful consideration, we have come to the conclusion that this attitude notwithstanding, more basketball is played than hockey and football put together.

Look into the Hart House gyms, or for that matter any gym in the city, and there are always ten or twelve guys throwing a ball around. How many play hockey? If the gym game was given a decent start, we feel it would draw just as many spectators as in the States. And basketball there outdraws all other sports put together. So let's have less talk about Grey Cup games and more about the game that is played for a six-month season, not on one afternoon a year.

VARSITY SPORTS

Sports Editorial

On January 2 next, those of us who are qualified will be asked to vote on whether Sunday Afternoon Sport will be allowed in Toronto. At present, children who wish to play in schoolyards, hockey rinks, or city ball parks can be chased out, since the law forbids the use of public grounds for noisy sport on Sunday. The youngsters then play in the streets. Persons without families, who work a full week and have only a room to go to on Sunday, stand around on street corners looking for some form of excitement.

Those who wish to prevent the children from playing in the parks, and to bar others from watching an organized contest, use as arguments such weather-beaten but still handy cliches as "the thin edge of the wedge", etc., and "desecration of the Sabbath by professional interests". A great many moderate beneficial changes have been made which might have been thin edges of wedges for more extreme and detrimental measures, except that the people did not want the extreme measures. The founding of the Public School system might conceivably have led to complete state control of educational institutions. But this was not the result, simply because it was not wanted.

What is so malignant about professional athletics that it would "desecrate the Sabbath", is hard to explain. Those who make their living by entertaining must work when the rest of the people are not working, which is Sunday afternoon. Consequently some of the professional athletes would have to change their day of rest to another day, but they would still be getting their one day of rest in every seven.

A common day of rest on Sunday is admittedly a fine old tradition. But there is another tradition involved which is far more essential to our way of life, namely, that of the freedom of the individual to regulate his own life insofar as he does not interfere with others. What right has one group of people to say that another group may not spend their day of rest as they see fit? And if there were such a right, no law could make them spend their Sundays religiously. People cannot be legislated into righteousness.

January 2 is your chance to vote for your right to spend your Sunday as you choose.

Editor's note: This sports editorial marks the first of two which The Varsity will present on the controversial subject of Sunday Sports. The editorial appearing today favoring Sunday Sports will be followed tomorrow by another which will present the opposite view on this question which will be voted upon in the city of Toronto at the beginning of the new year.

Practices in basketball, volleyball and hockey will continue this week and next, with games starting after the Christmas holidays.

An intercollegiate basketball tryout takes place tonight in the OCE gym from 5.30-7.00. Next week will see another in the LM gym on Wednesday at the same time. Everybody who is interested is welcome at these get-togethers.

Cay Catto, president of basketball, hopes to arrange an exhibition game with McMaster some time at the beginning of January.

Lost

One red and two blue basketball pinnies are missing. Since these are rather expensive to have made, anyone knowing where they are, should return them to the SAC office in the basement of UC.

Volleyball

Monday and Tuesday of next week will be set aside for volleyball try-outs and practices in the LM gym. There will be a couple of periods after Christmas to get back in shape before the actual games start.

Hockey

Each college and faculty are looking after their own hockey practices. Tomorrow morning at 8.00, UC will have its try-out in Varsity Arena. All those who are interested in playing this game are welcome.

Junior Pugilists Uncover Talent On Initial Card

The first evening of the Junior Boxing preliminaries was held yesterday, at Hart House. The card consisted of eight pleasing bouts, displaying a wide variety of styles. Just about every kind of punch in the book was thrown, plus many that are not in the book.

In the 140 lb. class Frank Corner punched out a clean decision over a very game, and willing P. Andrews. Frank looks like a fine prospect, and should make a name in Varsity circles.

One of the closest fights of the evening had an abrupt ending, in the third round. K. Stoner's right was the winner, and W. Draper's jaw was the loser.

The preliminaries will continue today at 4:30 p.m. Again, there will be eight bouts, two of them heavyweight.

The Old Story

Long ago on a dark winter's night a poor young man and his wife, who was with child, sought refuge from the bitter cold at the hearths of their fellow men, and were many times turned away. At last, one who was more kind than the others said they might rest in his stables, where they could share the heat of the animals.

We all know the story. The child was born into a bleak, cold world, where men's hearts were as brittle and hard as the frozen ground they trod. Into this little corner the child brought warmth and tenderness and joy. People came—the rich and the poor, the mighty and the weak, the wise and the simple. From the spot where the baby lay the circle of warmth and tenderness spread, for the people who came told others of what they had seen and felt.

From that day to this the story is told. Those who hear receive it each in his own way. In the hearts and minds of some the warmth already lives, and the story strengthens the glow which gives it life. In others, and there are many, there is no glow; but the tinder is there and the story kindles it. There are still others—those who have no glow and have even torn the tinder from their hearts, but they are few.

The greatest thing of all about the story is seldom told. Those who tell it think the story in enough, and for many it is. But the great truth that lies behind it is this. One need not believe the story, or even know it, to know its meaning. Every time a man, woman or child does an act of good-will towards his neighbor; every time a kind thought leads to a kind deed; every moment any human being is working to spread peace and contentment among people anywhere in the world, the meaning of the story is brought to life.

Female Chivalry?

Editor, The Varsity:

While diligently studying this morning I was interrupted by a "Hey look at this in the Strobe and Gail".

Apparently some of few females on this campus believe chivalry is dead. They object to carrying their own books and opening doors. (to-o-o bad) Now I wonder if these (ahem) women realize what their complaints mean.

In days past the fairer sex denied the designation of the weaker sex and fought for equality. Is this just another typical change of mind or are the fruits of success too bitter. If women want equality let them accept it.

I might also add there are certain members of the fair sex who forget the rules of society, for we encounter groups of co-eds who march along in a body, oblivious of the world at large while revelling in some juicy gossip. "Even an engineer likes at least an infinitesimal strip along the edge of the path."

Let's face facts. If you want men to be chivalrous drop that air of self sufficiency. You can't have both.

D. F. S. Caren,
Chem. Club Chairman.

Skulenite Bite

Editor, The Varsity:

We should like to correct erroneous facts re our Cast party. 1. Skule has no lack of feminine pulchritude. Among ten, only one chorine, Dorothy Wilson, was outside Skule and Architecture. 2. Agnes Portnoff did not portray Lady Godiva. 3. Jacqueline LaPrairie did not do a Bubble dance. Since these three girls hold outside jobs the Engineerettes sweaters were given as tokens of appreciation.

Tory Attitude On Education Gets Approval

Voting 36-19 in favor of a Progressive - Conservative amendment to the L.P.P. bill "To Democratize Higher Education in Canada", the UTDU Mock Parliament last night approved for the first time in three years a P.C. motion before the House.

P.C. President Tom Symons, IV Trinity, outlining the aim of the amendment, said, "The Conservative Club on the campus believes the opportunity to attend university should be greatly increased. All those desirous of an education and capable of it should not be kept from it by financial difficulties." In reply to L.P.P. government speakers who said that "finance monopolists" controlled the Board of Governors, Symons stressed that the power of Boards of Governors should be limited to financial matters. "If Caputs, student governing bodies, or similar organizations feel the Board of Governors are out of their own territory and stepping on their rights, these organizations should have direct channels of appeals to provincial boards of arbitration. To this end Bills of Rights protecting academic freedom should be passed by all provinces."

Speaking for the government bill, L.P.P. Director of Education, Norm Endicott stated, "We demand that there be proportional representation of every class in society, and not the present trend which is cutting down the number of students from the working class and farm youth."

"This bill calls for a new national Canadian curriculum," Endicott continued. "It means a policy of encouraging and subsidizing Canadian writers and scholars so that they will have the physical means to write Canadian texts. It means, not that we reject the international character of truth, science, the arts, but that we encourage the development of these things in Canada."

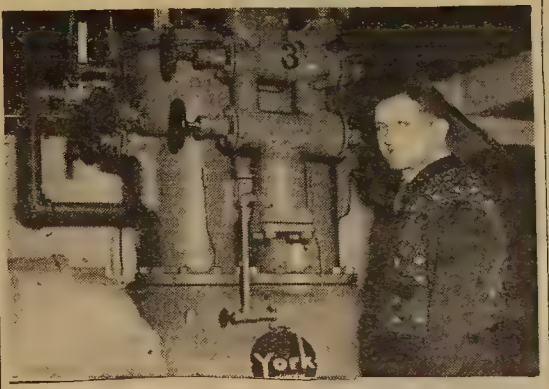
The second speaker for the opposition, Bruce Mairs, answered that rather than basing university enrolment on classes within the country, it should be based on scholastic ability. "We feel the new Canadian curriculum proposed by the L.P.P. would merely serve as a cloak to diffuse into the minds of our students the propaganda as issued from the mouth of Stalin. We are content with the curriculum as it stands where the individual has the freedom to choose his course of studies."

Liberals Violate Parliament's Laws UC-CCF Hears

The Liberal government has violated not only the trust placed in it by the people, but also the laws of parliamentary procedure, Rod Rodgers, IV UC, said yesterday at a meeting of the CCF Club of University College. The informal floor discussion, led by Rod Rodgers and Harold Carter, IV UC, cited the delay in the presentation of a report dealing with flour-milling combines.

Also mentioned was the failure of the government to provide housing for low-income brackets. It was felt that subsidized low-cost housing must be provided but that present schemes were ineffective, and merely backed up the big mortgage companies.

It was suggested that the Opposition was perhaps not sufficiently alert, but could make more use of its opportunities to provide a more efficient government.



ISS INTEREST GROWING

The total of $3,850.34 was realized in this year's ISS campaign, Bill McDougal, local ISS chairman, said yesterday. Expenses totalled $336.26.

Although this amount fell short of the $7,000 objective, McDougal expressed general satisfaction with the campaign results.

"Increased awareness of the students of ISS and its work is being evidenced," he said.

Touring Toronto Students Say Americans 'Idealistic'

The political idealism of the American students and their inability to perceive clearly the problem which confronts both the United States and the United Nations were the main impressions received by members of the International Relations Club who participated in trips to the United Nations at Lake Success, and to the Regional Conference of IRC clubs in Washington recently. Their impressions were supported by Sir Oliver Franks, British Ambassador to the United States, at an informal gathering during the Washington trip when he said, "The job of an organization such as IRC is not to provide a solution to the problems existing but to find the problem. This the delegates cannot seem to do."

Staff Is International

Sixty members of the IRC were taken on a trip to Flushing Meadows and Lake Success where the United Nations is sitting, last month. First glimpse of the UN, the entrance to Flushing Meadows is indicative of the spirit of the organization in that one sees the flags of 59 nations flying. The staff of the buildings is made up of many nationalities and thus furthers the feeling of a United Nations, said Miss Harris.

In addition to the feeling of unity there is direct communication with the homelands of each delegate by radio, television, and press. Every session of the UN is aided by simultaneous translation of the speeches into English, French, Russian, Chinese, and Spanish. These translations are aided by wire-recordings which are then mimeographed and then distributed to the delegates for correction.

Efficiency Makes Impression

The members sat in on various committee meetings and the General Assembly. The efficiency and the potential power of the United Nations for world peace, made the greatest impression.

At the regional conference of the Middle Atlantic group of IRC clubs in Washington, the members discussed the relations of the United States and (1) the Americas, (2) the United Nations, (3) Europe, (4) the Near and Middle East, and (5) the Far East.

Atomic Energy To Be Discussed By Dr. D. A. Keys

The possibility of tapping the enormous potential source of energy in the atom will be discussed in the meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute on Saturday evening, December 10 at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall. Dr. David A. Keys, Vice-president (Scientific) in charge of the Atomic Energy Project at Chalk River will speak on "Atomic Energy —Today and Tomorrow" and the lecture will be illustrated with lantern slides and experiments.

Dr. Keys obtained his B.A. degree and his M.A. degree from the University of Toronto and his Ph.D. degrees from Harvard and Cambridge. For 25 years he was a professor in physics at McGill University and, since leaving there in 1947, he has done research work in the field of piezoelectricity and applied geophysics.

Lit. And WUA Give Unofficial Approval To Amalgamation

By IAN MONTAGNES

By an overwhelming majority an open meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Association and the Women's Undergraduate Association, unofficially approving amalgamation of the two bodies, passed a motion that the Lit reconsider its previous decision of rejection.

Discuss Arts Ball

The meeting also decided that there should be 400 tickets sold to the Arts Ball, that there should be no corsages there, and that in their place favors would be sold by ISS, which would keep any profit.

The discussion regarding amalgamation was opened by Lit President Jack Hoolihan, IV, who reported that at an open meeting the Lit had "officially rejected the amalgamation in principle".

In answer to a request by SAC rep. Jane Hill, IV, that the Lit explain to the WUA their objections to amalgamation, he admitted "there were no objections, it was just voted out."

Dislikes Amalgamation

Bob Sutherland, IV, Literary Director, repeated that there were no reasons, and that the Lit was merely trying to avoid discussing the matter. He pointed out that the only reason was a desire to continue the long tradition of the Lit, and a general dislike of amalgamation.

Dave Rose, II, speaking against the motion, spoke at length of the tradition of the Lit, reminding the members about the departed professors and principals who had, for many years, "looked down from the celestial heights" upon a Lit composed of men alone.

In reply, Jack Novitsky, Third Year President, explained that when girls began to enter the College, they did not destroy its tradition, but were absorbed into it. In the same way they could be absorbed into Lit tradition.

Mentions Joint Events

In addition, he explained, most of the activities within the College, excepting athletic ones, were joint events. The real power behind these was a joint Lit-WUA executive, which had no power of its own.

"Under the present system," he added, "a deadlock can form, since there is no assurance that the Lit and WUA will agree. If a deadlock does occur, amalgamation will be impossible."

He concluded by saying that the two organizations should get together now, while they are working together.

George Wallace, Athletic Director, argued that the present system, in which the individual organizations act as a check on the joint executive meetings, was more democratic.

Considers Meetings

Sutherland answered him by pointing out that under this system the executive members spent about six hours a week at meetings, and if there were only the one meeting they had to attend, they could spend more time on College events and less on administration.

Jack Hoolihan, summing up, urged that the motion be adopted. There were only two negative votes.

Hoolihan then moved that 400 tickets be sold for the Arts Ball, although a previous meeting had favored the selling of only 200.

The main argument for the motion centred about the fact that a maximum amount of U.C. students

Reserve Seat At All Varsity Next Feb. 6-11

A new plan of ticket sales for the All-Varsity Revue was announced this morning by executives of the Revue. The principle feature of the "New Deal" is that all seats, for all performances, will be reserved. "We want no football rushes at the Hart House Theatre next February," Murray Sussman, of the Revue staff, said. Another aim, he explained, is to eliminate, if possible, the discrepancies which existed in the sales of Revue tickets last year among the various colleges on campus. Details of the revised system are now being worked out by the production staff and members of the S.A.C.

Ahead With Sets

Meanwhile set construction is well underway at the Zion Church headquarters of the show and is reported to be ahead of schedule. The directors are attempting to complete this aspect of the production before the new year in order that they may carry on with casting early in January.

At that time the Revue will be re-scrutininzing the questionnaires, and calling for more talent among the ranks of campus comedians, actors, and singers.

Asked what the picture for the new year would be, Director Ben Wise said today, "We of the Revue hope it will be a happy new year for everyone, and we are confident at the same time it will be an active one as far as the show is concerned."

It's Geodesic

No Walls At All

—By STU CAULEY—

Bucky Fuller, the man whom Einstein called the only real genius he knew of, is due to hit the Toronto Campus next Thursday, for an illustrated lecture in Convocation Hall next Thursday night. The lecture sponsored by the Architectural Society of the University of Toronto is causing wide interest around the campus and in the city.

This man of ideas, whose main interest in life is the study of man in relation to his physical environment, has all the architects, engineers, industrial designers, mathematicians and philosophers wondering just what "Dymaxion" Fuller will have to say this time. Since his Dymaxion House hit the world a few years ago, he has introduced a series of revolutionary schemes ranging from the Dymaxion Globe, a map on which distortion is cut down to an absolute minimum, to his latest dwelling unit, The Geodesic Structure.

New Type House

The earlier house was only mildly revolutionary—it just had a circular shape, the walls hung from the roof, and a revolving ventilator was on the roof. The newest effort, whose full name is The Geodesic Structure and Autonomous Dwelling Facility, has no walls at all! It sits inside a plastic sphere and makes its own weather.

The fact that neither of these houses has been built to date is not disturbing to Bucky. As a statistician of technological history he has determined a twenty-two and a half year lag, unique to the building world, between the inception of a new industrial idea and its general adoption. He feels that what is scientifically correct must inevitably be adopted; but the social spiral unwinds slowly, according to a predictable timetable.

Machinist From Harvard

The story of how he became a member of the International Association of Mechinists indicates a side of his character not usually associated with the profound thinker. His family, anxious that he should be the fifth consecutive member of his family to graduate from Harvard, enrolled him in that University. They began to doubt their wisdom as he passed through the various years. Finally he was due to write his final examinations, when word came that Bucky was not to be found around the campus! His mother's agents found him several days later entertaining the cast of the current Broadway hit at a champagne party in the old Waldorf Astoria.

It was while being punished for this escapade by being sent to work for a machinery installation company in Quebec that he picked up an interest in machinery. To this day, the nearest approach to an identifying mark of occupation is his union card.

A Decent Place To Live

Mr. Fuller comes to Toronto after an extensive fall lecture tour which took him far from his permanent address, the Institute of Design in Chicago. His champagne party days being over, he devoted himself to explaining in every way possible how we in the Twentieth Century must use our materials and our technology to make our world a decent place in which to live. He claims that the number one world problem to-day is comprehensive housing. This, at bottom, is the problem of providing high standard production with fractions of the tonnage now used, and adapting the materials to high velocity production. Unless solved by engineering enterprise, (and he considers engineering the prime phase of enterprise), the shelter problem can become a political time-bomb tossed from one side to the other with possible panic ruptures of warfare.

A Nice Round Shape

Whatever else happens on his visit to Toronto, Buckminster Fuller unlike Frank Lloyd Wright who called it "a great sprawling turtle," should like Convocation Hall. The round shape cuts down wind resistance and lowers the heat loss. Of course having the walls supporting the roof is all wrong! In the Dymaxion House, the walls hang from the roof.

Tickets for Mr. Fuller's lecture are 50 cents and may be obtained from the School of Architecture, Moodies, The King Edward Hotel and the Engineering Society Stores.

Dear Uncle Joe Claus:

We seem to be having a bit of trouble about building a Memorial Student Union. We have needed such a building ever since Hart Castle went medieval. It seems that we can't get what we need unless we lose a lot of lives in a war. Dear Uncle, couldn't you wage a war on us, just a little one, so we could realize our necessities. Cousin Adolph didn't do too bad but apparently he didn't last long enough, or something. Listen uncle, we can put your name on the corner-stone, "In loving memory of those who died fighting our erstwhile benefactors A. Hitler and J. Stalin."

TSO—Moiseiwitsch

The TSO Subscription Series Concerts this week featured the distinguished European pianist Benno Moiseiwitsch in the Second Tchaikowsky Piano Concerto (Op. 44, in G Major).

It was pure delight to hear Moiseiwitsch on Wednesday night, and to learn that his superb technique and mastery of the keyboard was as fine as it had been when we heard him play in England during the war.

The Tchaikowsky G Major Concerto is an interesting and provocative work, the greatness of which will long continue to be the subject of discussion. At all events Moiseiwitsch, with his beautifully controlled technique and masterly handling, buttressed our optimism.

For whom is the Concerto written? Is it for the soloist or is it for the orchestra? Evidently there was no question of a doubt in the mind of the conductor, since on more than one occasion he so contrived it that the soloist was forced "underground" into inaudibility. Most regrettable.

The Tchaikowsky Concerto in three movements:— Allegro Brillante e Molto Vivace, Andante Non Troppo, and Allegro Con Fuoco; is very much a concerto for the Virtuoso, a concerto for a Moiseiwitsch; full of extravagant runs, an exciting chordal treatment, and a realization of form for form's sake, especially in the first Movement; it was rewarded for its difficulty on Wednesday night.

The Second Movement was introduced thematically by the piano. This exquisite theme which, in the hands of most other pianists, might have degenerated into sentimentality of the most depressive type, was given out with satisfying limpidity and echoed by the strings.

However it was on the third and last movement which the claim to a greatness would be based. Here was the dramatic tension, Tchaikowsky's soul laid bare; the struggle of the westernizing Russian; the piano (the great German musical tradition) versus the woodwind (the native Russian music). Here was the composer rent between two forces, here the combat of two great blocks of sound. The program also included Elgar's First Symphony (Op. 56) in A Flat; and interminable Pomp and Circumstance March plumped out with cold suet-pudding chords.

Sir Ernest MacMillan conducted.

Opera Aired

Student Carmen

—By WILLIAM GLENESK—

Tall, gangling maestro Nicholas Goldschmidt musical director of the Royal Conservatory's rising Opera School and conductor of the CBC Opera Company plays a significant role in the first all-Canadian performance of George Bizet's Carmen next Tuesday and Wednesday nights at Massey Hall.

Dr. Goldschmidt conducts both the CBC Opera Company Chorus and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, with the principal roles sung by four students of the Opera School, Mary Morrison as Micaela, Pierre Boutet as Don Jose, Gilles Lamontagne as Escamillo and Margaret Kerr in the title role.

Carmen was chosen because of a desire to do something in French, and a contrast to Peter Grimes. Dr. Goldschmidt held his chief purpose to be fidelity to the score in all respects. His past interpretations of The Bartered Bride, Marriage of Figaro and Orpheus speak well for the standard of performance the Vienna-born conductor demands.

A precedent occurs in Carmen in its all-Canadian cast: Betty McCaskill from Edmonton, Ernest Adams, Vancouver, Pierre Boutet from Quebec, Beth Corrigan of Toronto; all Varsity students (in the Opera School). Carmen is also public opera supported by government funds (CBC) and Broadcast on the coast-to-coast network.

The production meets three requirements of concert form: chorus and orchestra can see the conductor, mikes can be set to receive a balanced pick-up, and the audience in Massey Hall can both see and hear what goes on.

Nicholas Goldschmidt brings a wealth of background to the event. As a native of Czechoslovakia, he studied at the Vienna Statte Academy, coming to the United States in 1937, to Stanford University and Columbia University opera schools. We learned that he once sang in unique recitals, singing leider and playing the accompaniments at the same time. The maestro is also a connoisseur of fruit.

University Officials Endorse Principle Of U.S. Exchanges

University officials have indicated general approval of the principle of American-Canadian student exchanges, it was announced at yesterday's meeting of the University of Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

U.W.O. Working On Exchanges

The announcement was made by a subcommittee which has been gathering information on student exchanges, working in co-operation with the University of Western Ontario NFCUS Committee. The U.W.O. committee is co-ordinating NFCUS work on Canadian-American student exchanges across the nation.

The University of Toronto Committee has been in touch with 50 American universities, gathering information and exchanging ideas. On the basis of this and other information they have sent an informal brief to the Council of the Faculty of Arts.

The committee has now been asked to get specific applicants for exchanges so that there may be more definite study of the plan. One of the main difficulties facing student exchanges for Toronto students is the fear that they cannot get courses in other universities comparable to those given here. Students on exchange continue their studies at their home university after one year away.

Questions SAC Authority

At the meeting yesterday, U.C. representative Wally Fram demanded to know why the S.A.C. had the right to decide whether aid should be given in sending a Canadian representative to a meeting to be held soon in London. The conference, called by the British Union of Students, is to consist of national student organizations opposing or doubtful about affiliation with the International Union of Students. I.U.S. is alleged to be a Communist-front organization.

Fram indicated yesterday that he believes the Toronto N.F.C.U.S. Committee represents the students of the University in N.F.C.U.S. and therefore should decide about sending a representative to London.

N.F.C.U.S. national Secretary-Treasurer Don Seldon, visiting from McMaster yesterday, said N.F.C.U.S. is actually connected with students through university student councils. The Toronto Committee, elected by college and faculty student organizations was meant to advise S.A.C. where all final authority lay.

Chairman Tom Symons suggested a full scale discussion by the Committee next term of N.F.C.U.S. international affiliations.

Stalin A Pacifist Can Remake Man Says Ald. Sims

"We should all be dead and buried now except for Joseph Stalin and the Red Army," Alderman Charles Sims remarked in an address before the L.P.P. Forum yesterday. The reason for the speech was that the members of the L.P.P. said they felt that the celebrations for Stalin's birthday were being ridiculed in many counries and Alderman Sims was asked to explain the reasons why Canadian university students should wish him a long life.

"Premier Stalin stands for peace, socialism and the remaking of man. He takes a stand that peace cannot be achieved without international understanding," he said.

"Canada is situated between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. and should have friendly relations between both countries. The students should congratulate Stalin," he said, "because he stands for the conquest over poverty and hard, body-crushing labour.

"Stalin stands for peace because wars are a part of the capitalist nature. In case of war, the working class should intervene to hasten the downfall of the war-mongering capitalists. Labour has nothing to lose and all to gain. Pacifism is not enough, but human action can do it."

The speaker further quoted Churchill, King, Coldwell and Gordon Graydon as praising the Red Army for its effort during the war and warning that in the post-war period we should remain friends with Russia. "The working people have not forgotten this.

Literary Issue

There will be no literary issue of The Varsity this term because the editors do not feel that sufficient material has been turned in to warrant a special issue. Early in the new year a Literary Issue will be published, provided sufficient material is turned in to give the judges a wide variety from which to choose.

Photographs, short stories, essays and poetry may be turned in at the Varsity office, Room 78, in the basement of University College.

Boards, Tympani Sports Editorial Get SAC Okay

Wednesday's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council heard reports from the Publications Committee, the Finance Committee, The Public Relations Commissioner, the Music Committee, the Executive Committee, and the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee.

Publications

The Publications Committee reported on the progress being made in the printing of Torontonepsis, and pointed out that it would be advisable to have the University Press print next year's issue if they could offer a tender as low as this year's. The press tendered an estimate $100 lower than the firm doing this year's Torontonensis, but the tender was received too late to be accepted.

The report of the Finance Committee dealt largely with the Varsity's policy with regard to publicity photos and was reported in yesterday's Varsity.

Public Relations

The Public Relations Commissioner's report dealt with the proposed SAC bulletin boards, The Council approved the erection of these boards in whatever faculties and colleges agree to have them set up, providing that the cost of the boards meets with the approval of a committee composed of the SAC President, the Finance Commissioner, the Secretary-Treasurer, and the Public Relations Commissioner. Principal Taylor, of University College, refused to allow a board to be set up in UC on the grounds that too many boards were already in the college. The School of Architecture offered to assist in the design and construction of the boards. Student Union Committee Chairman, Ian MacLennan, said the cost of the sixteen boards could be brought down to about $169.

Music Committee

The Music Committee reported on the activities of the symphony orchestra, which will be giving a concert in Convocation Hall this Sunday night. Music Committee chairman Joyce Rous reported that the committee had to pay $66 each year to rent a set of tympani without wheels for the orchestra. Her suggestion that a set of pedal tympani be purchased for $393 to be paid out of the capital fund, the money to be paid back to the fund

Book Probe Progressing N.F.C.U.S. Leader Reports

—By DON STEVENSON—

Work done so far this year by the University of Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students justifies naming the Committee "in a very real sense, the 'External Affairs Committee' of the S.A.C.," N.F.C.U.S. Committee Chairman Tom Symons has reported to his national organization.

In a letter to Paul Desmarais, national vice-president of N.F.C.U.S. for Ontario, Symons has reported on progress made by the committee, which is a sub-committee of the Students' Administrative Council. Following is what Symons has reported.

Gather Data

Work on text book exchanges and co-operative book stores "is going well." Campi across the nation have been contacted for information that will make available to student organizations ideas and experience on such student book projects.

Regarding text book costs, 20 American universities have been contacted in order to get prices that may be compared with prices on the same texts in the United States. There have been many complaints that U.S.-published texts are marked up too much in price when sold in Canada. Research being done by the Committee is meant to find the facts about the situation.

A member of the Committee is correlating information from a report on text book prices of the National Council of Canadian Universities with information gathered by N.F.C.U.S.

Get Approval

The Committee has won the permission of university authorities or regional student exchanges.

Much inormation has been gathered on Student Unions planned or in operation in Canadian Universities.

The Committee has co-operated with the local I.S.S. group to successfully arrange over-weekend visits between 40 students of the University of Montreal and an equal number of the University of Toronto.

The Committee has also co-operated with McMaster University to lay the groundwork for an Ontario music festival of university students next year.

Woman's Place

It's Not In The Home

By LENORE KERT

Young men who want to see the world can join the navy. It is harder for a young girl to get to "those far-away places." The problem has been solved for one Varsity co-ed, though; she uses her motorcycle.

From Costa Rica—One Month

Zaira Murray, III UC feels that this is the perfect answer to transportation problems. It all started in the fall of 1948 when her brother drove her to school on his motorcycle from their home town—their home town in Costa Rica, Central America, that is! The trip took from August 17 to September 14 and it was during that time that she fell in love with cycling.

Last summer her brother got his own 'plane and his motorcycle was given to Zaira. This gave her a chance to really tour Canada and the United States on her own. She left early in September on a 1000 mile trip, stopping at Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Montreal. Although she had just learnt to drive it, her education in the art of handling a motorcycle was not complete.

It took an incident with a chain that first slipped off and then broke after Zaira had finally put it back on, to complete her basic training. Fortunately she was quite near Kingston at the time and able to get a new chain, but the whole experience was new to Zaira who had never ridden a bicycle before.

Goggles? Naa

No well-dressed motorcyclist is ever seen without his helmet and goggles but Zaira says this sort of equipment is really only necessary for trips. On these trips, she likes to travel alone. It is not that she is anti-social but that on motorcycles with the long single seats, it is more comfortable to sit alone.

No Serious Accidents

Her only accident was, luckily, not a serious one. It was at night and to avoid being hit by one car, she had to ram herself into another car. She was thrown from her motorcycle, but was not hurt.

Zaira feels that one reason for the large number of motorcycle accidents is that they have such quick pickup. Having ridden from Hamilton to the outskirts of Toronto in half an hour, it takes another half hour to get to downtown Toronto. The average motorcyclist feels that waiting for the slow-moving traffic is a silly waste of time and makes an effort to get ahead by dodging in and out among them. Zaira also says that it is easier to handle a motorcycle when it is going fast and this accounts for the cyclists love of speed.

Zaira's 'bike' (that is what she calls her motorcycle) was stolen this fall. She spent a few worried days before the police recovered it near the Union Station. Oddly enough, the license plate was found near the lakeshore.

People are either friendly or curious when they see Zaira riding along, but all of them never fail to be completely amazed.

should be able to attend.

Quotes Cost Figures

Hoolihan also quoted figures, showing that the only way that the dance could break even was by selling the larger amount. If 200 couples came, the cost would be $775, with a total revenue of $600 (at $3.00 a couple). However, with 400 couples, the cost would be $1200, or equal to the revenue.

Opposing the wearing of corsages, Lyall Moran, First Year President, pointed out that the chief idea this year was to keep the cost of going to the dance as low as possible, and that added expense should be eliminated wherever possible.

Not LPP er

Editor, The Varsity:

The reporter who wrote the article on Monday's meeting of the LPP Forum misinterpreted my statements in such a manner that he had me saying exactly the opposite to what I did say and made it appear as if I were a supporter of the LPP which could not be further from the truth. The people who attend some of the LPP meetings are far from being LPPers as the caption of the article states.

Norm Endicott claims the CCF leaders are capitalists intent on making the capitalist system work under a guise of socialism. He says the ultimate aim of the CCF leaders is not socialism. He states that the CCF by a pretense of socialism hopes to attract votes from the working class while it is really doing more for the capitalist.

Despite your reporter's intimation that I agree with Mr. Endicott's views I argued that the very opposite was true. The CCF leaders are idealists and socialists, but realizing that the Canadian people are not yet prepared to vote for a program advocating radical socialist aims, its leaders are practical enough to obscure their long-term plans of socialism and give their moderate supporters short-term plans, providing for a gradual extension of socialism by democratic and evolutionary means. Because Marx and the Communists who are undeniably socialists advocate quick socialism by un-democratic and revolutionary means does not mean that a democratic party like the CCF cannot be socialist too.

I am a supporter of the C.C.F. and not of the L.P.P. as your article and its caption might lead one to believe. I argued against Endicott and not for him; not as The Varsity says: "Supporting Endi-

The Editor, The Varsity:

I was dismayed and disgusted when I saw the recent letter from three Skulemen (and I am mighty ashamed to call them that). The resulting editorial was in just about as poor taste, although a wee bit more intelligent.

A major portion of the guilt for the squabble this will no doubt foment is due to the asinine childishness of the author of the letter, but you also contributed your bit by publishing it. Don't you, Mr. Editor, as a supposedly intelligent, mature newsman realize that there is a small fraction of misguided fanatics in every organization?

I do not accuse you of trying to engender hate against SPS; you were probably trying to make sure that everyone had the true facts. But you must know that every publication receives numerous crank letters from odd individuals.

Engineers may rightly flount our superiority about cases of inter-faculty rivalry, but when it comes to such projects as those which were mentioned in the letter, which require unified effort, you won't find anyone in line ahead of the Skulemen. In short, merely disregard the silly talk of these three adolescent asses.

The report of the Executive Committee dealt with the NFCUS proposal reported in yesterday's Varsity.

Inter-Cultural Affairs

The Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee Chairman suggested that the committee be enlarged to include a member from each minority group on the campus. This suggestion was acted on on the grounds that it would be impossible to decide which was a minority group and which was not. A section was added to the terms of reference requiring the committee to call in a person or persons representative of both sides of any discriminatory act referred to the committee for settlement.

New Editor

Under the heading of new Business the Council; confirmed the appointment of Joe Harrison, IV Aeronautical, to the position of Science and Technical Editor of The Varsity. Harrison's duties will include features of a technical nature which will be of interest to the students in science and technical courses; passed the motion that the arrangements for admission to the stadium for football games as outlined in the sports Editorial appearing in The Varsity, Dec. 6, to be approved, and that an expression of appreciation go to the athletic Directorate for their consideration in the matter and the opportunity given the Council to express an opinion on the matter of reserving seats in the Stadium.

The Council also heard an application from the Faculty of Law to have representatives from this faculty included on the Council.

The following questions were given to Harvey Pickford, Athletic Directorate Representative, to be answered at the next meeting of the Council: Why do Varsity students have to pay to see football games in Varsity Stadium; why graduate students are not given the same privileges as undergraduates in relation to athletics; and why do Varsity students not get better seats at the games?

Hart House Buys Caledon Hills Farm

By JACK GRAY

Tired of life in the big city? Worn out by the morning mayhem on the T.T.C., and long line-ups at evening shows? Or do you just have a small yearning to get-away-from-it-all and return to nature?

All things are possible at The University of Toronto — or soon will be. Within a short time students here will have an opportunity to pack a bag, say good-bye to this grimy town, and jaunt off for a day or a weekend in the country to ski, paint, hike, talk, or just sit and admire the beautiful scenery.

There are a couple of catches. First of all — it will cost you as much as five dollars for a weekend. Secondly — you will be able to take along your best girl.

The University is going to have an "outing club", although it isn't being called that yet. For those of you who don't know about "outing clubs", they are groups composed of people who are fond of the out-of-doors, who like to to get the wind in their hair and tramp through snow and woods, or sit under apple trees in the fall and eat windfalls, or paint the brilliant colors of a Canadian fall — people who enjoy the freedom of the country.

The idea of the "outing club" is not a new one; there are a great many in the United States, particularly at the Eastern colleges, and McGill has one that has grown into the largest group on the McGill campus in a short nine years.

Here at Toronto the project is being organized by Hart House. About a year ago Warden Ignatieff began thinking about a scheme which would take House members away from the city and give them a chance to get to know each other a little better than we do here on the campus. He has felt for some time, he says, that the fullest expression of an undergraduate's career is not possible while he is bound by many walls and asphalt streets.

The first requirement was a place to go to. "We laid down several requirements for a location," says the Warden. "First of all, it had to be a place that wouldn't interfere with normal agricultural activities, a place where we wouldn't be running into fences and 'No Trespassing' signs. It had to have reasonably good skiing, a variety of scenery, and yet not be too far away from the city."

The spot finally picked meets all these requirements and more. The Warden found it, he says, by map reading. "I just took up a map, looked for suitable country, and when I found it, we hunted there."

Now Hart House almost owns a farm, (there are a few legal points to be cleared up yet) situated smack on the edge of the escarpment known as the Caledon Mountains. The farm, which still needs a name, jogs in a sort of z over 150 acres of land, and has just about as much "variety of scenery" as you could want.

There are apple orchards, a sugar maple bush, two old quarry pools (for swimming when it's warm, and skating when it's cold), some good hills, rocks which the Warden says are climbable, a few fields full of rocks for those interested in muscle building. There is plenty of space in which to stretch.

The farm is situated about 42 miles from Toronto, within easy distance by car, bus or train. It is about 17 miles northwest of Brampton, near the small village of Cheltenham; or about 3 miles from the Forks of the Credit if that means more to you.

Some work has already been done at the farm to prepare it for use. There are two houses on the property — a nine room brick house, and a smaller frame house, which will be fixed up as dormitories and a dining hall. In addition to this there is a large barn, and smaller, older barn which will have to be torn down. There is also a smokehouse, and (drawback for city men) a rather ancient, decrepit one-holer.

To date several work parties, made up of men from various colleges and faculties, have been up to the farm to paint and clean up the property. Mr. R. H. Perry, who until last year was out at Hart House Ajax, and is now Director of Educational Program at Hart House tells us he is looking for men who want a day of good hard work, topped off with a large steak dinner, (Mr. Perry is the Chief Cook on the work parties), to go up to the farm through the next few weeks and through the holiday to get it ready for use early in January. Mr. Perry is available on Mondays and Thursdays in his office on the second floor of Hart House, or you can phone him at MI. 6223.

Only the initial, overall planning has been done. Now that Warden Ignatieff, Mr. Perry and Mr. W. R. Cowan, the comptroller of Hart House, are sure that they will get the farm, students will be able to go ahead and do the actual work on the project.

There is a lot of work to be done. Some form of administration for the scheme has to be set up. We must decide what form the club or organization will take — whether it will have an open membership, or whether a small fee will be charged; the problems of catering and transportation have to be dealt with, prices to be charged must be set, and the question of the program must be discussed.

To get things started, a Hart House Committee, drawn from interested people in all faculties and schools, will be formed to deal with the problems. This will be a temporary committee. Membership will of course be limited to men, although "lady guests" will be allowed to go for weekends to the farm. They are another problem, incidentally, because just where they are going to stay hasn't been decided yet.

Two big questions to be decided are the membership question, and the problem of organizations who want to take over the property for a weekend. The committee will have a lot of work to do the minute it is formed.

The farm at Caledon sounds like a marvellous idea. A list of the activities possible there is impressive: hiking, camping, cycling, swimming (in those quarry pools which have to be seen to be believed), fishing (the quarry pools again), horseback riding, skiing, skating, exploration and map making of the surrounding area, social activities, such as barn dances, sing songs, hayrides etc., arts and crafts such as painting and modelling, or just plain studying are included.

Or, if your wish, you will be able to go up to the Caledon Hills and contemplate your navel.

Impossible Things

Ed. Note: Due to space limitations it has been necessary to edit these letters. We hope we have preserved the essence without changing the aroma.

Editor, The Varsity:

We read with interest your recent editorial, "Impossible Things" in which you mention the meeting of new challenges by engineers . . . Science, we think is not so much maturing but expanding . . . The scientist has included in an already bulging curriculum, the study of the humanities to promote effective administration of his technological achievements . . .

The Artsman measures today by the standards of the past. He is the product of past thought instead of forethought. He will, we believe, be superceded in responsible positions by these men of new purpose, the liberally educated scientist.

Paradoxically the advertisement regarding Beaver Club Scholarships seems to imply the exclusion of engineers. Post graduate studies of the humanities would temper the technological education of the engineer to the ultimate advantage of civilization . . . we strongly recommend equal consideration for engineers as candidates for these scholarships.

Doug Wells
John Couse
Tiny Pickford, IV SPS.

Editor, The Varsity:

. . . Our problem in life is man. Man in relation to Him who created him, to his fellow man, and the things in the midst of which he lives. The hierarchy follows in the order in which they have been presented . . . in support of your argument you have quoted J. R. Oppenheimer, ". . . in some crude way . . . the physicists have known sin". What we imply from this is that science has need of art, not art of science, and the tragedy of Oppenheimer and other great scientists is that they have only known sin "in some crude way", and yet they do not find within their system the wherewithal to correct this sin . . . What we need is not a sickle honed by science, but rather wielded by a responsible ethical agent.

However if you continue to hone the edge by science, don't be content with cutting your nose to spite your face, be thorough, and cut your throat.

Editor, The Varsity:

. . . stated in this editorial, "No human can occupy an active place in the world without a thorough knowledge of scientific techniques". From this awe inspiring dictum one logically concludes that it is your belief that the world is largely scientific. Then you would go on to speak of needing all possible heads and hands to meet the challenge of today . . . since you believe that science is the world of today you are going to combat science with science . . . that just doesn't sound good to me.

Science is the challenge of today . . . is attempting to make Man and his life a cut and dried affair . . . to name itself the Golden Rule.

Scientists, immersed in their complicated thoughts, have never found time to stop and consider the meanings of their own existence. They are now paying homage to the great god science. Can science aid them when death comes a-knocking at their lab door?

Movie Review

Film Society

Laughter reigned when the Film Society presented its fourth bill Sunday, Nov. 27. The Italian Straw Hat, a French silent film, directed by Rene Clair was responsible.

Clair is at his best in this picture. He takes advantage of the many humorous situations inherent in the plot. The treatment is light, hilarious, with a minimum of slapstick.

He ridicules elaborate wedding preparations and fussy attention to detail in dress — and petty punctility of 19th century manners, with gentle satire and uproarious comedy. Conventional symbols of fun are used to form a continuous background for jewels of situation humour.

The other picture on the program was The City, an American production directed by Pare Lorentz, (59), who directed the well known Plow That Broke the Plains (also will be shown: Feb. 12).

The City is an argument for improved cities in contrast with the previously shown 'Berline' which was a documentary and type of all cities everywhere.

The method used is to first depict the smog and squalor of large industrial cities and question why such poor environments are allowed to exist in an age of technological advance, and then, using an effective transition of a flying plane, carries the audience to the contrasting 'New City', built for the people who live in it and for the better and fuller development of its children. The alternative New City shown, though it seems a futuristic utopia by comparison, exists. Better cities are possible and needed; 'the choice is yours' is the film's message.

The only flies in the ointment are, first the presentation, at the onset, of an over-idealized bucolic life in the country or small town that preceded the large city, and secondly, the musical accompaniment which set the picture off like the overpowering perfume on a drab.

Documentaries and films with a message' are unfortunately too prone to use violently oppressive and inappropriate 'musical' accompaniment.

TALKING SHOP

(Advertisement)

A MAN TO HELP YOU choose a man's gift is available (no charge) at Teasdall's, where there's such a selection of possibilities that a girl's apt to get bewildered. Nevertheless, a man's taste in socks and ties and dressing-gowns is likely to be pretty conservative unless he's assured that another male has had a say in the choosing (docile animals, men, they do like to be man-led in matters of haberdashery). You'll find the assistants at Teasdall's very reliable in such private affairs.

LOOK UP AND DOWN THE List of accessories a girl's wardrobe requires, and you'll find the answer at Watt's. The F. J. Watt, Sportswear Shop in the Park Plaza specialize of course in such important matters as impeccable tweeds in suits and coats, day-round dresses, sweaters and skirts ... but they have also built up a comprehensive accessory department which caters to the little things you used to travel farther afield to find. Note to men ... they'll gift-wrap your parcel, no extra charge, and welcome!

GIFT HUNTING at Joan Rigby's is a pleasant diversion because the accessory counter shows items that you haven't seen around this town. Mary Chess cosmetic sets ... the kind you used to save up and buy on your New York trip, very lovely imported gloves and, most important of all, beautiful nylon lingerie, smooth as pink soap bubbles, exquisitely trimmed with crisp fine net, utilitarian but they don't look it ... handbags and evening bags, wonderful new neck-line flattery in blouses. Go to 54 Bloor Street West.

COLLEGE GIRLS treasure a British sweater ... and the Evangeline Shops price policy on these items make it smart to take a look. Suggestion ... if you have an American relative or friend, one of these would make a gift par excellence. ... The new handbags, costume jewellery, imported gloves, party-best handkerchiefs, scarves, are all in best array just now, and housecoats too, if you're out for something of ambition, have never been more interesting. Your nearest Evangeline Shop, Bloor at Bay.

A CONCERT VERSION OF THE OPERA CARMEN ... WITH COMPLIMENTS of the T.S.O. ... will be presented on the fair and warmer evenings of Dec. 13th and 14th, next Tues. and Wed. The place: Massey aHll. Conductor, Nicholas Goldschmidt, and leading parts will be sung by Canadians Margaret Kerr as Carmen; Pierre Boutet as Don Jose; Gilles Lamontagne as Escamillo, and Mary Morrison as Michaela. This is an important musical event, both from the concert and operatic viewpoint, and a wedding of two techniques that have been erstwhile musical opponents.

THE REASON SCHEUER'S, at 129 Yonge Street, feature their two engagement ring values at a hundred dollars so consistently is that they consider these values important savings which have been made possible by half a century of cash policy. Scheuer's buy and sell for cash, they do not have carrying charges or delayed payment losses, and they have built up a reputation over more than half a century as being one of the Dominion's oldest and most reliable diamond importers. All of which is why that address is a busy spot at this particular frenzied shopping moment.

Comptroller Outlines Hart House Steps To Avoid Power Cuts

Hart House will take steps, starting today, to save power in the province-wide drive to prevent power cut-offs, Hart House Comptroller W. R. Cowan said yesterday.

The Art Gallery will be open only between the hours of noon and 2 p.m., and from 6 to 7 p.m. each day.

The Debates Room, ordinarily open at all times of the day, will be locked at 4 p.m. each day except Saturday unless it has been reserved for a meeting. In the case of a reservation it will be opened just prior to the time of the meeting.

In the Great Hall lights will remain off except when absolutely required. Corridor lights will be reduced in number.

"We hope that this will help alleviate the power shortage," Mr. Cowan said. "I am sure that the members of the House will co-operate in every way they can to save power."

Blues Meet Montreal Carabins To-night

Cec Turcott Elected As Hockey Blues Prep For Carabins

By BUSTER V. DAVENPORT

Cecil Turcott was elected captain of the Hockey Blues after last night's practice, and Wilf Digby and Bud Hayes got the big A's as assistant captains. Turcott and Digby are playing their fourth years (Ed. Note—it is not known for certain how long Turcott has been playing for Varsity, but it is rumored that he helped build the arena), while Bud Hayes is a mere stripling of two years experience.

Bud and Wilf represent the married section of the team, Digby being the latest victim, as of two weeks. The wife hasn't made an official appearance for the team yet, so if the boys' eyes are all glued to the stands in the first period tonight you'll know the reason why.

Local Opener

Tonight's game is the first league game of the Blues' season in Toronto. They meet the University of Montreal Carabins, and will be out to even up for their loss to that team in Montreal two weeks ago. Wally Halder has reshuffled his lines a bit. The first line will be centred by Baldy Turcott, with Wes Moore at left wing and Norm Fox at right. The second line will see Bucky Walters at centre, Wilf Digby at right, and Pete Vernon at left, and the third, Rich Howson at centre, Phil Arrowsmith at right wing, and Art Bell at left. Addison and Kane, MacDougall and Hayes will be the defencemen. Doug Orr will guard the nets.

Young And Light

This year's team is one of the youngest and lightest that has represented Varsity. There are twelve rookies, four of them in first year, and three of tomorrow's starters will weigh less than 150 pounds.

The Blue and White Society will discontinue its practice of awarding three pairs of miniature silver skates to the three stars of the game, picked by local sports writers.

Hand Healed

Rich Howson, classy winger pictured at right will play his first game of the season tonight against the Montreal Carabins. Up until now Rich has been sidelined with a broken hand bone. This is Howson's second year with the Blues, and before that he was with the Junior Bees and got a good basic training in the THL.

Novice Fight Tourney Shows 7 Good Bouts

By NICK BETZ

Out of seven blood tingling boxing bouts in the junior tournament at Hart House yesterday afternoon four were cut short by technical knockouts. The heavyweight bouts were much better fights than have been seen in the novice tourney for a good many years. Although some fighters showed a lack of conditioning, all the bouts were satisfying to the large crowd.

Leisurely Heavyweight

Stocky Al Davie (UC) emulating the leisurely style of Lee Oma, won a clear decision over Caldwell (SPS). Davie contented himself with piling up points and then keeping out of the range of the taller Skuleman. Davie showed a potent left jab and hook. This win will enable him to advance to the finals at A-Night Saturday where he will face deadly G. Else of SPS who scored a TKO over Boljkovac of Dents in the second.

In the 140 pound class B. Berting, SPS, won a close slugfest over J. Buckler of Vic. The bout had the crowd in an uproar throughout. Berting's stronger finish won the fight for him.

Wozniak, UC, in the 165 pound division grabbed a TKO from Wartman of Vic. Walter Buleychuk of Vic (147) won over G. Weaver of SPS when Weaver's nose refused to stop bleeding.

Six more bouts will be contested tomorrow before the finals Saturday.

Results

140 Pounds

B. Berting (SPS) defeated J. Buckler (Vic).

147 Pounds

W. Buleychuk (Vic) defeated G. Weaver (SPS); TKO in first.

165 Pounds

M. Wozniak (UC) defeated M. Wartman (Vic); TKO in first.

D. Hooper (Emman) defeated A. Freeman (SPS), by default.

175 Pounds

H. Greenly (SPS) defeated J. Hart (Vic).

Heavies

G. Else (SPS) defeated N. Boljkovac (Dents); TKO in second.

A. Davie (UC) defeated B. Caldwell (SPS).

Sports Editorial

"TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME"— BUT NOT ON SUNDAY.

Anyone writing against the proposed program to allow commercial sports on Sunday in Toronto is necessarily handicapped. No group should have the right to dictate to another group how they should spend their leisure time. All this is quite true; but it is a principle of our form of democracy that the will of the majority be served, although not to the complete disregard of the minority, it is true.

Those of us who will vote on the question of Sunday sport in our city will do so as property owners and citizens of Toronto, supposedly having the overall interests of the community at heart. With this in mind a consideration of the relative merits and evils that Sunday sports will bring to Toronto can be made; and it should be an objective appraisal. Despite sarcastic remarks about the "thin edge of the wedge" etc., activities such as commercial sport are the "foot-in-the-door" for further opening up on Sundays. Theatres, pubs and other less savory forms of amusement are bound to follow. Now many people are inclined to say that public opinion can readily control such expansion, but human nature has faltered in the face of temptation before, and human nature being weak, is not always right.

Canada, and especially the great province of Ontario, professes to be a Christian nation and it is one of the tenets of the Christian faith that Sunday be set aside as a day of rest and prayer. Today the Christian nations of the world have far departed from this ideology. Why need they go further astray? Sunday Sports would mean that countless people would have to give up their day of rest and go to work. Of course they would still get a day off somewhere in the week, but it would not be a day of rest. Who wants a day off when everybody else is working; when the kids are in school and the wife has to do the laundry? Our national life centers, or should center, around the home, which has been aptly named "the citadel of democracy". Sunday sports would lead the way to a further demise of home life. Also it cannot be denied that modern sports, pro or amateur, are the breeding ground for all sorts of gambling and commercialization which certainly have no place in the observance of the Lord's Day.

The fact that something must be done to alleviate the conditions which now exist in Toronto cannot be denied. Loitering on street corners is not a healthy situation, and people who do not own homes have a right to some sort of recreation on Sunday other than the golf courses and the Royal Ontario Museum. The question is, is commercial sport the answer to the problem? Why is it that city parks are closed for anything but sedentary meditation and pigeon feeding?

Would it not be more salutary if the city were to sponsor a participant recreation program for Sunday afternoons? In the long run a few dollars laid out for sandlot ball diamonds and hockey rinks and cushions would seem to be a better answer than a long drawn out fight over commercia

Well, this is it! The last column of 1949!

Just think, when we all get back after the holidays, another year will be ahead of us with more sports to participate in and new challenges to meet.

Volleyball, hockey, skiing, bowling, and badminton are ready to start rolling the minute we hit the campus, but let's turn back the pages and have a look-see at what was accomplished this term.

Last week the swimming team copped top spot in the Intercollegiate meet at Hamilton. Marg Harrington was the star of the squad when she finished first in four events.

In the intramural basketball finals, St. Mike's A gals defeated the fast-shooting UC Sr. Jr. A squad by only one point to win the coveted championship.

After three final games PHE I. garnered the softball title for the third successive year, although Vic gave them some terrific competition.

Further back we find the interfaculty splash do, with the honours going to an amalgamation of Meds, Nursing and Physio Therapy. Jean Cossar, Physio, won the Ishbel Robertson Cup awarded for the highest number of individual points and Charlotte Chisholm, Trinity, copped the Cochrane Trophy for her diving.

The archery tournament was a big thing, since it was the first one ever to be held at Varsity.

Early in the morning—certain mornings—Joyce Rous and her ground hockey enthusiasts could be heard on Trinity field.

Interfaculty Doin's

Meds volley-ball team in winning their second championship in two years showed a well-integrated crew that really played as a team to defeat UC in the best of five series in Hart House yesterday. Meds won the first by a land slide score of 15-3, but UC fought back strongly in the second to grab a 15-10 win. Meds eased through the next game 15-9 and really had to go all out to take their third and last win 15-13.

This last game was the thriller of the series, each point being hard to win and the score see-sawed until near the end when Meds pulled away to a 14-10 lead. At this point UC pulled up their supporters and narrowed the score to 14-13 before Meds finally sewed it all up.

Mitch Tanz played sensational ball and easily was the best player on the floor. Although not overly tall Tanz made use of the terrific springs in his legs to spike a large number of points for the Doctors. Marty Lindzon also played well for Meds.

10,000 Extra Seats In Enlarged Bowl

Will Use Surplus AA Funds

By BOB DNIEPER

The University of Toronto Athletic Association has recently announced that Varsity Stadium will be enlarged to hold some of the overflow of the college and Grey Cup games. According to plans, about 10,000 more seats will be added to the present capacity of a little over 19,000 to bring the new total up to 29,000.

Pays For Itself

This move is in line with the Athletic Association's policy of putting all surplus funds into the upkeep of plant and equipment and adding to facilities whenever possible, so all those students that have been wondering where their money for football tickets is going will have an opportunity to see this fall. The cost of the expansion will be approximately $650,000, which, if paid through fees would cost each and every student $46.

It would, of course, be amortized over a period of ten years, but this would still cost each student $18.50. With the success of intercollegiate football and the added capacity, the stadium will pay for itself without necessitating the allocation of Athletic fees for the alterations.

Finished This Fall

The blueprints for the work are being drawn up now and the contract will be let as soon as these plans are finished. The engineers on the project are Proctor, Redfern, and Laughlin, with Professor T. R. Loudon acting as Toronto consultant. Mr. Warren Stevens, Director of Athletics, expects the work to be finished in time for the opening of the football season this fall, so that Athletic Association can start collecting the added gates as soon as possible.

Plans call for the demolition of the old covered stands on the west side, as Warren Stevens put it . . . "before it falls down itself". This stand will be replaced by a concrete grandstand of the most modern design, with new dressing rooms underneath. New rest rooms and refreshment stands, more accessible to the public, will also be included in the grandstand construction. The football teams will no longer have to use the dressing rooms in Varsity Arena, and the visiting teams will get better shower and dressing facilities.

Biggest In Canada

This expansion will make the University of Toronto the proud and lucky owners of the biggest stadium in Canada, with 4,000 more seats than the next largest, Delormier Stadium in Montreal. Delormier, however, is laid out for baseball, and is nowhere as satisfactory for football as Varsity. There was talk of adapting the Civic Stadium (the Exhibition Grandstand) for football, but the Parks Department of the City of Toronto ran into snags trying to fit a rectangular field into a curved stand, and there is nothing definite on it now. If this was done, it still would not affect Varsity very much because the Intercollegiate games would of course still be played here, and the executives of the Argonaut Football Club have told University of Toronto officials that the Argos will stay at Varsity as long as Varsity will have them.

Rhodes Scholarships Taken By Two Toronto Students

Robert F. Hetherington and Michael Hornyansky have been awarded Rhodes Scholarships in Ontario. Murray Rhodes Smith, of the University of Manitoba, was the only other Canadian student to receive a Rhodes Scholarship this year.

Hetherington, who is 23 years old, has been at the University of Toronto since 1946. He plans to continue studying medicine at Oxford.

Born in British Columbia, Hetherington attended Oak Bay High School, Victoria, where he took part in sports such as rugby, football, basketball, soccer, lacrosse and track and field.

After completing High School, he went to the University of British Columbia for a year, where he took a course in arts and sciences. After his first year, he joined the Navy at 18, and was demobbed in 1945. He went back to UBC and completed a second year in arts.

Hetherington came to Toronto in 1946 and enrolled in the Faculty of Medicine. He got first class honors in his first three years, leading his class in his first and third years.

He was elected Vice-President of the Medical Society in '49-49, and President in '49-50. Last year he was elected President of the Students' Administrative Council, the highest post in student government at Toronto.

Michael Hornyansky was born in Belgium but has lived in Toronto since 1929. He entered University College in 1945 with the Prince of Wales Scholarship and the Reuben Wells Leonard Scholarship.

Hornyansky stood second in his first year of Philosophy and English Literature, and first in his following three years. He received

London, Eng., Jan. 4 — (Special) — Representatives of seventeen democratic student unions met in London, England, over the Christmas holiday to discuss the International Union of Students. All of the seventeen unions represented have either not joind IUS or have recently disaffiliated from that group.

IUS Denounces Meet

The meeting, called by the British National Union of Students to urge western nations to join the IUS and fight for their views within that organization, was boycotted and denounced by the IUS, whose president Josef Grohman attacked it in cables to most of the delegates as a "danger to student unity."

Most western nations are not at the moment members of IUS, which is dominated by students from communist countries. The United States walked out in 1947, following the communist coup in Czechoslovakia. IUS at that time did not present what the American National Students Association felt was a sincere and honest denunciation of the treatment accorded Czech students and professors.

In the last two years many western nations have walked out of IUS, maintaining that they cannot do any effective international work in the organization because of its communist elements. The National Federation of Canadian University students almost joined IUS in 1948, was refused admission on a technicality, and subsequently decided not to affiliate at all.

The meeting, which lasted three days, was lobbied by communists from London University, protesting

NFCUS Passport To Laval

Wanta Parlez-Vous?

By DOREEN JESSOP

Situated high on the cliff in the heart of old Quebec, Laval University attracts thousands of students from all over the continent who come to learn the French of Quebec.

All members of the class of 5T2 and Pass Arts students 5T3 have the opportunity of studying at Laval for a year. This chance is given by the National Federation of Canadian University Students offer of a tuition scholarship to any student in his pre-graduation year who wishes to attend another Canadian university outside his own province.

Laval University was founded in 1663, by royal charter from Queen Victoria, and in 1876 received a charter from Pope Pius IX. The university is named after the first bishop of Quebec, who founded a seminary in 1663 for the training of priests.

Courses at Laval differ from ours in accordance with their different system of elementary schools. A pupil leaves elementary school about the age of twelve, to enter one of the classical schools, perhaps the Seminaire de Quebec. This classical course lasts eight years, the last two of which are university work. This course comprises a B.A. degree. From thence the student can go into training for the priesthood, or to the University of Laval. This system means that most of the courses at Laval are graduate courses.

The emphasis is more on social than sporting activities at Laval. Hockey is the popular spectators' sport rather than football. Unfortunately there is no organized schedule for hockey games, and though the Laval team may play Montreal and Ottawa one year, the next year these games may not be played at all.

Laval students go in for the more individual games, like bowling, chess, and ping-pong. Of course there is great enthusiasm for skiing. The University Ski Club is situated at Lake Beauport with accommodation for boys and girls. Here many students spend the snowy weekends of the winter.

Social life on the campus is hampered by the ban on dancing. Students overcome this difficulty in the tremendous "all-university" Ball held in historic Chateau Frontenac.

The social season is marked by receptions held in the Hall on the Engineering Campus. The engineers are leading the way at Laval, since the University is planning to abandon their traditional location in Le Quartier Latin for the site on the outskirts of the city, now occupied by the Engineering Faculty.

Mugwumps....

With the start of a new year an old question is about to be thrown again into the lap of Canadian students. The debate on whether or not we should join the International Union of Students has received new impetus from a meeting of western nation student unions held over the Christmas holiday in London, England.

The question of IUS has become a political football at Canadian universities. In 1947 we decided to join, but our delegates were refused admission at a meeting of the IUS in Paris in the summer of 1948 on a point of procedure.

Brought back to the NFCUS Conference for debate in December, 1948, Canadian universities decided not to join IUS. The vote was 10 to 7 against affiliation at that time, although the 7 universities voting for affiliation represented a substantial majority of Canadian students.

The NFCUS Conference at Ottawa last fall considered the matter closed, and it was not discussed. Since that time, however, there have been rumblings at various universities.

We think the issue, basically, is a simple one. Do we feel that a minority group can effectively make its voice and opinion felt in an organization which has the totalitarian ideal as its guiding light? Do we feel that we can increase understanding and effectively promote world peace in an organization in which the control is firmly held by communist students?

Many of the arguments presented for joining IUS put the discussion on the basis of "practical activities," such as international student games, international exchange, and similar undertakings. We do not think this is either a realistic or an honest approach to th equestion.

If we join IUS we are in effect joining a communist-controlled group, at least as it now stands. The only purpose we could have in joining a communist-controlled group is to attempt to change the set-up and basis of judgment of that group. We do not subscribe to the communist ideal; we do not feel that their methods allow the intellectual freedom which we feel lies at the basis of our conception of society.

The practical advantages, or disadvantages of belonging to such a group come later, or are at least subordinate to this first purpose. There is no point in going into the IUS with barrels of sand placed carefully around our heads.

If we join the IUS there are some things we must understand. It will be tough, and nasty. It will provide the press of Canada with a lot of good copy on the "red-tainted National Federation of Canadian University Students." It will be expensive, for we will have to be prepared to send students currently studying in Canada to IUS meetings and conferences; we will have to be prepared to provide members for the secretariat in Prague. It is probable that we will not be able to secure any effective control of the IUS, that we will remain a minority group in that organization.

But: We will have an opportunity to present our view. We will have an opportunity to debate "world student opinion" and perhaps modify the frankly anti-democratic outlook IUS now presents to the world. We will have an opportunity to participate in many spheres of international student activity where we can never hope to have any say unless we are members of an organization which apparently wants to have all sides of the question at least represented.

We are faced with some large problems in the question of IUS. It is all very well to talk about democracy, and truth, and freedom, but so far we have not shown that we are convinced enough of the worth of our position to debate it in such hostile arenas as the conference floor of the International Union of Students.

There can be no peace in the world unless we can exchange ideas. It is possible that we will not be able to do this inside the IUS. It is certain that we cannot do it outside. There is no other international union of university students. We cannot solve the problem by forming a "western bloc" outside IUS. We must form it inside.

The British are going to stay in — if necessary, alone. The Americans are going to stay out, which is typical of American students. We are in the position of the Mugwump, with our mugs on one side of the fence and our wumps on the other.

It's time we made up our mind.

Asks Drama Support

Editor, The Varsity:

I was glad to see in The Varsity of Thursday, Dec. 8 that the A.M. & D. Editor has again stated a case for recognition of Drama on the campus. In the Dramatic Societies students spend untold hours in executive work, rehearsing, building sets and seeing good theatre. All of which time they consider well spent, and this in spite of heavy time-tables.

But what about the U. of T. authorities? It takes more than peanuts to run a theatre like Hart House, and much more than sixty dollars a night rent to college groups. The Governors of our outstanding university see fit to subsidize the Theatre to the tune of over ten thousand dollars every year. But if they provide this support for Drama, it must be considered valuable. Why then is it not recognized as a worthy subject for a university course, even a pass course, available to students of all faculties of the university.

III Vic.

Carabins Wonderful Hosts Toronto Students Agree

By PEARL PARNES

On Monday evening, Dec. 12, forty students from the University of Toronto invaded Toronto's Union Station, singing and cheering in a mixture of French and English. They had just returned from a weekend as guests of the University of Montreal on the second annual Carabin week-end.

The trip, sponsored by the ISS and partly subsidized by the SAC, included students from most of the faculties on the campus. The group was chosen from a raft of applications and represented the University as a whole. Friday morning the group left Montreal, and spent the following nine hours on the train learning French songs and getting to know each other.

Enthusiastic Reception

On their arrival in Montreal, and after many Montreal news photographers had snapped pictures of the enthusiastic reception, the Toronto group was rushed to the University for an official welcome. A large, beautiful building high on Mount Royal, the University overlooks the city of Montreal. Father Llewelyn officially greeted the group, and a toast was raised to the continued and increasing understanding between the two main cultures of Canada.

Understanding the fact that few lasting friendships are made at a formal meeting, the group was broken up into small parties. "This enabled us to get to know and like these people as individuals, and greatly aided the way to understanding them as a group," was the comment of one of the U. of T. delegates.

"One of the nicest parts of the weekend," stated another, "was spending some time in the French-Canadian homes. Their hospitality was wonderful, and their families welcomed us as cherished friends." Tours of the university and the city of Montreal were interspersed with discussions of many of the current problems of the day, and the students from the two cities learned the opinions of members of their own university, as well as those of the visitors.

A civic reception by the City of Montreal was given the visiting students on Saturday evening in the University dining hall. Dr. Leon Lortie, professor at the University of Montreal, represented the mayor in his capacity as City Councillor. "I hope that the exchange of French and English students will be established on a longer basis; association brings understanding and knowledge of different cultures," he said.

Thrilled By Play

The "Bleu et Or" choir sang a group of French and English songs and many of the Toronto students commented on the especially fine rendition of "Danny Boy". Brilliant sets coupled with effective lighting and outstanding acting on a stage without curtains thrilled the U. of

Toronto NFCUS To Hold Debate On Joining IUS

"We should get into the International Union of Students," Tom Symons, chairman of the Toronto committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students said yesterday.

Symons said that Toronto NFCUS will hold a full dress debate on the topic on Thursday, January 12, to enable Toronto students to present their views on the question. Students' Administrative Council President Bob Hetherington and The Varsity News Editor Jack Gray will speak at the meeting.

"We should go into IUS, taking as many of the western student unions with us as we can," Symons declared. "We should go in with the specific purpose of trying to direct IUS activities along practical lines such as student exchanges, seminars, and cultural acrivites, rather than to engage in the confusion caused by the political controversy as it is at present.

Would Join

"It would not be possible for us to affiliate this year. But next year we should go in. I don't know what it is possible for us to do by ignoring the IUS."

Any change in the present NFCUS relations with the IUS would have to be made at a national conference. The next national conference will be held in September, 1950, and no change can be expected before then. NFCUS tried to affiliate with IUS in 1948, but was turned down on a technicality. At the NFCUS conference in December, 1948 affiliation was rejected by a vote of ten to seven. The University of Toronto supported affiliation with IUS at that conference.

No Such Club, Campus Atheists Say Fun Only

Newspaper and magazine reports about an atheist club on the campus were punctured this week by the two Skulemen who wrote the letter to The Varsity about forming the club. Tony Stonehill and Norm Forbes, both III SPS, said that their suggested Atheists Club had only been formed in the letter itself.

The letter, which appeared in the Nov. 24 issue of The Varsity, was used as basis of a feature in the Toronto Globe and Mail and was subsequently published across Canada through the Canadian Press. Time Magazine in a recent isue also picked up the item which reported the club folded up because of the lack of a third member.

In their letter, Stonehill and Forbes proposed uniting campus atheists, welcoming all men "no matter what church they are staying away from."

Just For Fun

"Object of writing the letter was mostly for entertainment and to stir up a controversy," Forbes said. "As we said in the letter, we wanted to test the degree of freedom of speech on the campus. We were confident there would be an outcry, but no one rose to the bait at all. On the campus everyone is obviously very tolerant about these things."

'Torontonensis' Orders Accepted All Coming Week

Orders for Torontonensis will be available in the various colleges and faculties next week, Editor Bill Raymond announced last night. It was decided to keep orders open because many students had been unable to place their orders for the All - Varsity year book before Christmas.

Orders will be taken in these places at the times indicated: UC rotunda—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 10-2; VCU office—Tuesday, 10-12; Trinity front hall—Wednesday and Thursday at 3; Engineering stores, all week.

At the other colleges and faculties, orders will be taken by the Torontonensis reps until the end of next week. After January 13 orders will be taken at the SAC offices, in Hart House and the UC basement.

Student Christians Gain New Attitudes At Montreal Meet

A general "shaking up of opinions" was a significant result of the Student Christian Movement's conference in the holidays in Montreal, three University of Toronto representatives to the conference agreed in an interview yesterday. The official theme of the conference was "Men, Machines and the Maker," and representatives discussed the need for the churches to adjust themselves to conditions created in our modern technological society.

Groups Clash

Mary McCrimmon, Associate General Secretary of the SCM Council on this campus, Audrey Feasel, IV-U.C., and Mary Pierce, I Emmanuel, Toronto's representatives at the conference, said every discussion at the conference was dominated by arguments between those who considered religion purely the affair of the individual and those who believed religion must be related to changes in society. For instance, churches had to consider and act about the problems of industrialism, maintained the second group.

When discussing the general impression they got from the conference, the three girls agreed that many who came to the meet favoring the individual approach to religion were shaken in their convictions.

The chief speaker at the conference was Reverend Warren McKenna, rector of St. John's Church, Roxbury Crossing, Mass., where he helps lead a group called the "Workers of the Common Life." Members of the group work together on everyday problems of the community.

Outlines Assumptions

His addresses illustrated the aims of this group. Miss McCrimmon said he outlined seven common assumptions about the church that Christians are coming more and more to agree upon.

First, the church had to adjust itself to "a non-Christian world" which was adjusting itself during the "destruction of western civilization."

"The mass of the people will not be reached by words," Mr. McKenna declared in describing the second assumption. "They want a demonstration of Christianity."

The churches were a part of the declining bourgeois and reflected the class structure of our society.

The "growing edge of the church" was on the "social plane." By this he meant that the church has to take an intimate part in the social and economic work of society.

Laymen Must Help

The last three assumptions were that the churches must work with specific groups as well as expand to other nations, that the laity must take on greater duties in the church and that the church must identify itself with the lot of the masses.

Illustrating the last assumption, Mr. McKenna said, "The problem is not to get the people into the church but to get the church into the people."

Three other speakers at the conference developed the main theme outlined by Mr. McKenna, by speaking on three related themes. They discussed the church and modern technology in relation to rural areas, the university and individual growth.

Requests Of Students Result In Time Change For Carnegie Musicales

The Carnegie Record Collection, which has presented recordings of classical music each week-day in the Mechanical Building has announced a change in time for the recitals. The time has been changed from the old period of 4:30 until 6 p.m. to 5 until 6 p.m. in order to accommodate students whose lectures last until 5 p.m. The time change came as a result of requests from students prevented from hearing the recitals by their late lectures.

Drama Show To Feature Comic Plays

Emphasis will be on the experimental and the unusual in the 1950 Drama Weekend to be held at Hart House Theatre on Friday and Saturday evenings. Sponsored by the University of Toronto Drama Committee for the second year, the weekend will feature six one act plays produced, designed and acted by the students. Friday's bill includes "Gammer Gurton's Needle," a modern adaptation by Colin Clements of an old medieval comedy presented by Vic; "The Bathroom Door", a farce to be produced by the School of Nursing and Wycliffe and "Press Cuttings", a satirical comedy by Bernard Shaw offered by the U.C. Players' Guild.

On Saturday St. Mike's College has a religious play by Paul Claudel called "Tidings Brought to Mary"; Vic will present a comedy by the successful Broadway playwright George Kelly and the U.C. Players' Guild will offer a fantasy by Oliphant Downes called "The Maker of Dreams".

Plays To Be Criticized

These plays will be criticized by Professor Hicks of Trinity privately to the directors and performers instead of publicly for the best performances as has been the custom in the Drama Festivals of the past several years. The UTDC is making this change because of the expiration of the Cody award which was considered to be doing more harm than good in co-ordinating dramatic activities on the campus.

The UTDC is made up of the presidents and vice-presidents of the college drama groups. Its functions include co-ordination of campus dramatics by pooling of sets and costumes, acting as a liaison between Hart House Theatre under Robert Gill and the college drama clubs, and producing one-act plays.

This is the committee's second undertaking. Tickets are on sale at Hart House box-office and the four Art Colleges.

Vic College Girls Victims Of Theft; No Evidence Yet

Three Victoria coeds lost a total of $36 from their rooms in Wymilwood Tuesday afternoon when their wallets were stolen from their rooms while they were away having lunch.

When they returned at 1.30 their wallets were missing, although the rooms showed no other signs of disturbance.

Miss McCosh's wallet was found this morning behind some fire extinguishers in the upstairs hall of the residence. All her papers were there but the money, amounting to $12, had been taken.

Wymilwood house president, Ket Tanner, IV Vic, says there is no news of the other girls' money or wallets.

Gone: One Bottleneck

Parking Space Disappears As Crescent Re-Opened

Students arriving in the morning to reach nine o'clock lectures from Vic, St. Mike's and points east will no longer be frustrated by a solid stream of rush-hour traffic pouring down the west side of Queen's Park Crescent.

As part of its effort to ease the stranglehold of transportation bottlenecks in Toronto, the city during the Christmas holidays succeeded in completing enough work on the bridge over the Wellesley street entrance to the University to be able once more to route southbound traffic around the west side of the crescent.

Work on the bridge, going on since last spring, forced traffic to double up on the previously widened east side of the Crescent. The resultant endless ribbon of traffic at rush hours would have out the University in half if it were not for the pedestrian traffic light opposite Victoria College.

The temporary closing of the Crescent to through traffic affected University members in a way no one foresaw. It provided an auxiliary parking lot in the form of the barricaded west side of the Crescent, very useful to students and staff member faced with the university parking problem causing consternation on campi across the Dominion.

Construction of the bridge attracted the usual crowd of "sidewalk superintendents" from the university population. Some commented on whether the bridge is wide enough for the traffic it will have to bear, but most seemed content to watch and wonder whether the little bulldozer could handle the huge loads its operator attacked.

They were among 58 representatives at the conference from 12 universities, including one from Amherst College in the United States. The conference, lasting from December 27 to January 1, was sponsored by McGill University and Sir George Williams College SCM councils.

No Such Club

Asked if they were serious in forming an atheist club on the campus, Forbes answered "We had it in the back of our minds. If a whole flock of people had turned out I would have strung along and considered forming a club."

Agrees With Globe

However he stated no definite steps were taken towards forming an atheist club beyond writing to The Varsity.. "I agree with the Globe and Mail editorial that contempt for others' ideas is not sufficient basis for a club."

When asked if he was an atheist, Forbes replied matter-of-factly "Oh yes . . . But I don't work very hard at being an atheist."

University CCF Scores Garson At Holiday Meet

Kingston, Jan. 4 — (CUP)—Federal Justice Minister Garson came under attack here over the weekend for violation of "the rule of law" concerning the tabling of milling reports under the Combines Investigation Act. The Co-operative Commonwealth University Federation, meeting here during the holiday weekend for its annual convention, called on Mr. Garson to resign because of his actions in connection with combines investigations.

The student delegates passed a motion that CCF members in the House of Commons should bring legal action against the federal minister if he fails to voluntarily resign.

Another federal cabinet member, Agriculture Minister Gardiner, was also severely criticized at the conference when delegates proposed resolutions demanding that he "face the problem which confronts Canada because of the loss of markets."

Lowered Canadian tariff barriers against British and European goods and long term trade contracts were suggested as means to restore the balance of trade between North America and Europe. It was charged at the convention that Mr. Gardiner is "attempting to hide the meanness and inadequacies of his government behind the screen of the present dollar crisis."

Delegates said the federal government might better spend on education money now being used for defence.

Fourteen Canadian universities were represented at the conference.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

All That's Past

Dash and colour were the keynotes to Toronto's Yuletide season of theatre and concert fare for '49, flashing the old year out and singing in the new. Productions ranged from oratorio (The Messiah) to pantomime (Mother Goose), were all-Canadian in cast, played to capacity houses, and in general the standard of performance was surprisingly high.

Blossomtime

At the Royal Alexandra from December 19th was the perennial Shubert production of old chestnut Blossomtime a fanciful snatch of Franz Schubert's biography, with many snatches of his most-played melodies, adapted to a restaurant and a rooming house by Sigmund Romberg. It is difficult to believe this distortive musicomedy was once a Broadway hit. It certainly wasn't Monday night. If any one factor was the cause, most probable was the absence of a commanding personality in the cast, whose stage presence and singing might have carried the piece. Webb Tilton as Schubert had the voice but no presence, Franklyn Syme as the Baron the presence but no voice. All in all Blossomtime had few blossoms, looked more like a stiff collegiate production than finished professional theatre.

Mother Goose

Closing this (its 2nd) week at the Royal Alex is the New Play Society's presentation backed by the Riverdale Kiwanis Club, of the old English pantomime Mother Goose. Staged by Eric Christmas, who played Mother Goose, with superb choreography by Betty Oliphant and Gladys Forrester, music directed by Samuel Hersenhoren, Mother Goose danced across the stage and over the footlights to win its audience from the first scene.

With all its polish and finish even to the children's dancing, the beautiful ballet interludes, the side-splitting skits, and the lighting and costuming, one can barely do justice to the fresh, sparkling performance that Mother Goose indisputably was. Much of it reminiscent of old vaudeville, crammed full of light and breezy tunes: Happy Family, Whistle While You Work, Song in My Heart, Mother Goose had two old hands at the business, Al Harvey and Eric Christmas, whose clever wit and quick repartee kept the show moving fast.

After hearing soprano Beth Corrigan as Jill and Pegi Brown as Colin, both of whose performances were effervescent with charm, after the impressive ballet sequences the crisp humourous dialogue, the pace, the music and the skits, we conclude that Mother Goose outshone many a New York production that has graced the same theatre's stage in the past.

Christmas Box Symphony

At Massey Hall for three nights before full houses, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra let its long hair loose at the annual Christmas Box Symphony, Sir Ernest MacMillan in charge, if not the victim of what transpired at the event.

Conductor and orchestra commenced the proceedings with Quilter's A Children's Overture and Vaughan Williams' Fantasy on Greensleeves. Both were executed in clear, defined terms, both had the sense of abandon and gaiety needed in the orchestra to produce the desired effects. High spot in the performance came with the entrance of Anna Russel, Toronto comedienne. Her take-off on Italian opera, squeals and belches and piercing shrieks alternating with diva-like tones and trills brought down the house. Her lecture (illustrated) on Wagner in the second half, complete with helmet was a gem in caricature culminating in the grand entry of Siegfried.

The Messiah

Last week The Toronto Mendelssohn Choir with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan performed the oratorio for which they are nationally renowned, George Frederick Handel's The Messiah, in Massey Hall. Sir Ernest has always had a flair for Handel, rarely misses the grandeur and the majesty of the composer's works. His demanding direction in both performances blended choir and orchestra in exultant song, subdued all technical discrepancies to the power and sheer intensity of the choir's interpretation.

Soloists were Lois Marshall, soprano, Nellie Smith, contralto, Albert Marson, tenor and John Ashur, baritone. Highlights for us were "For unto us a child is born" (chorus), Nellie Smith's pathos-filled rendering of "He Was Despised," and her warm, glowing "He Shall Feed His Flock," Albert Marson's ringing "Comfort Ye" and Lois Marshall's "Come Unto Him." The TSO Mendelssohn Choir performance of Handel's Messiah was a memorable event in message and music in closing the decade at Massey Hall.

Faust

On December 8th, a group of students in the German Study Club attempted several scenes from the first part of Faust. As I sat watching the performance, I had to keep reminding myself that primarily these students were availing themselves of an opportunity to emote in German but not to act. The attempt was far from rewarding, for although the students seemed to have an underlying feeling for their material, sensitive dramatic ability, organization, rehearsal effort and a good sound knowledge of the parts by all participants were all vitally needed. The strikingly effective costumes and simple sets were quite satisfying and did a great deal to raise the quality of the performance.

Miss W. Konwalina as Margareta, seemed most effective, in the prayer scene in which she asks forgiveness for succumbing to Faust. (The latter who has been given a potion to renew his youth by the devil and falls in love with Margareta, a symbol of life in all its charming simplicity, but who fails to rise up to the deep inner need and longing that infuses Faust.) O. C. Froggett and V. G. Turner handled their turns at Faust adequately enough.

Again I respect the German Study Group for its ambition even though I find fault with their choice and approach. It is to be hoped, however, that "Faust" which seems to have been regrettably neglected on this continent until the past year with its Goethe festivals, stimulated a few people to inquire into the intellectual and emotional delights that "Faust" has to offer.

It's unfortunate that men are going to replace women as hockey referees but the switch back to men is nevertheless necessary.

Last year the women referees, on the whole, were definitely unqualified. Any men who saw games last year will vouch for this. Many of the female whistle tooters seemed to lack even a fundamental knowledge of the rules. Even if they did, too many of them seemed incapable of making a clear decision and sticking to it.

We don't blame the girls involved. They had had little or no previous experience. It was the first year that girls had been used exclusively as referees and no adequate system of training or testing them had been worked out as it has in basketball.

If enough properly trained women refs could be found, they would rate far above the men, for the men do not have an adequate knowledge of women's rules. They are apt to overlook bodychecking which often results in severe injuries.

Unless an adequate system of training referees is begun, women baseball umps will be the next to go. With training, women are just as capable of officiating as men. Don't forget that when women replaced men as basketball refs there were all kinds of people who said they would never do as good a job. They are doing a better job. Since they took over rough play has been more closely checked and injuries have been proportionately fewer.

Two years ago Joan Hume formed the Referees Club to handle the training, examining and co-ordinating of officials. Since her graduation the club has become defunct and with it died many of the hopes that women would referee all their games themselves.

the gathering. Police from the London metropolitan force were present to see "no breaches of the peace occurred," but there were no disturbances.

The first day and a half of the conference heard the seventeen unions represented express a unanimous condemnation of the present IUS, its policies and activities. In spite of this, the British, Scottish, South African and Irish delegations urged the delegates join them in their attempts to reform the IUS from within.

Co-operation Urged

A large majority of the unions indicated they not only disapproved of the IUS but are so opposed to the present set-up and so sceptical of the possibility of reforming it that they will not join until there is a reasonable guarantee of major changes in IUS policy. Many who expressed this view said it did not mean they will not co-operate with IUS where possible, and several, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Holland, Australia and New Zealand, said they will be sending observers to the World Student Congress to be held in Europe in 1950. To date Canadians have not indicated whether they will attend the 1950 Congress or not.

Among the views taken by the various unions present:

—British: "We believe the IUS is the best possible link between students from all parts of the world . . . and that it is still possible to do something to modify the policies and actions of the IUS . . . We believe there has been too marked a tendency to withdraw from the IUS merely because we have no immediate prospect of making our point of view prevail."

"Weakness" Say Scots

—Scottish: "It is the opinion of the Scottish Union that the present policy of certain national unions in refusing to take any active part in the work of IUS is a policy of weakness . . . We hold the view that there will never be any constructive advancement in the present position, not only in international student relations, but also in world affairs, as long as the representatives of certain countries, 'ostrich-like', bury their heads in the sand and refuse to admit the possibility of a compromise."

—Canadian: The Canadian delegate, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, former president of NFCUS and of the Toronto Students' Administrative Council, urged the need for greater emphasis on practical activities. "There is a crying need for co-operation on practical measures . . . I suggest to you that it is in working in and for such practical problems that students can find the understanding which must be the basis for an enduring peace. Emphasis on political philosophies can only serve—as IUS has amply shown—to bring greater emphasis on all our differences. Emphasis on common practical problems will serve to emphasize those things which we have in common.

Must Work Together

"My own country is an example of this latter policy. As some of you know, there are two great cultural and language groups joined in it. This happy and significant union did not come by pitting one philosophy against the other, and thus building up hatred and distrust. It came rather through a pursuit of common practical solutions to practical problems which arose . . . We sincerely hope these matters will not go unattended . . . I believe they can be effectively cared for without drastically changing our attitude to IUS, or without removing the possibility of co-operation with them in whatever we consider to be sincere and honest in their activity.

"It does not indeed mean that any of us need close the door to IUS, should members of this conference decide to join. It means, rather, that within and without that group, we must work together to actualize such plans as can build towards a greater understanding and the time is now."

"IUS Benefits Negligible"

—New Zealand: "Because we felt that the majority of its members seemed concerned chiefly with acting as propagandists and agitators for the 'People's Democracy' way of life, that its practical activities and benefits to individual students were negligible, that the cost of affiliation and participation in its Council were out of all proportion to its value, and our budget, we decided to withdraw our support from IUS . . . We do not consider that there has been a significant change in the situation since."

—American: The American delegate, Erskin Childers, said that while the United States National Students Association was willing to co-operate in practical matters, they would not join the IUS as long as IUS maintained policies "inconsistent with the democratic heritage of American students."

Germans Doubtful

—Western Germany: . . . "From the very experiences we had and still are having in our country with totalitarianism, we are doubtful whether a minority can influence at any time an organization which is dominated by a totalitarian ideology."

—French: The French deplored IUS generally. They had a particular beef, the International Games Festival, held by the IUS in Budapest last summer. No arrangements were made prior to the meet for weight-lifting and kindred games. At the last minute the USSR organized a contest in weight lifting, and brought forward some "Russian muscle men," who won hands down. The points for this event counted, so the French said, equally with other events. They could only explain the inroduction of this event as "a further attempt to prove that proletarian muscles were superior to burgeois muscles." In another event, the 800 metres race, a Mongolian girl was "pushed into the race in an effort to make the games 'international'." The French were convinced the girl had never run before.

Too Partisan

—The Danish, Swedish and Dutch delegates, while warmly pressing the need for international co-operation, refused to re-affiliate with IUS as long as it continues its partisan policies. The Swedish delegate quoted Josef Grohman, IUS president, writing in an article, "Students Fighting For Peace": "Through the celebrations of the International Students Week, progressive students, organized and led by the IUS, once again proudly announce that they belong to the World Popular Movement of Partisans of Peace. Through their celebrations and manifestations they want to give a concrete expression of their fight for peace against the warmongers led by Anglo-American Imperialists."

Price Too High

De Baum, the senior Netherlands delegate, seemed to express the feelings of many unions when he stated: "It would require the total energy of the national unions to fight the tendencies of the IUS, which means that our own national student interests would have to be disregarded. The price that is already being paid by national unions present here for their lenient attitude towards IUS is too high if it consists of constantly postponing our own activities and constantly relegating our own opinions to the background for the sake of this not truly international organization."

For two of the last three sessions the delegates broke up into commissions to discuss (1) the IUS and practical activities; (2) the IUS constitution; (3) the problems of colonial students. The Canadian delegate sat in on the first commission.

All Reports Critical

The final day was devoted to the presentation of Commission reports, all of which stressed the importance of International co-operation. At the same time every report was critical of the present IUS structure. In general they tended to be a summary of the complaints or hopes brought forward in the delegates' statements.

One of the most stirring speeches of the conference was given by the Finnish observer. In broken English (the conference was carried on chiefly in English, but speeches were frequently heard in German, French, Dutch and Italian) he stressed the dislike of Finnish students for the political activities of IUS, but asserted that the people of Finland, and especially the students, wanted the maximum co-operation between the East and West.

The meeting ended with a speech by the chairman, Stan Jenkins, president of B.N.U.S. He said that alone, if need be, hand in hand, if the others would come, the BNUS would work to reform the IUS from within. Even if the unions present would not affiliate he sincerely hoped that they would attend the World Student Congress 1950.

When the conference closed, 14 unions were still non-members of IUS. Many, however, planned to send observers to the 1950 conference.

50 Years of Women's Sports

Paperchases To Hockey

By CONN SPARROW

Not just a new decade, but a completely new half century was ushered in last Saturday night. What the future holds for us is always clouded with an uncertain mist as we walk onwards along the path of life . . . sometimes quickly, while sometimes the progress is slow and depressing.

It is gratifying to stop once in a while and look back over time. Let's see what has happened to women's sports in the last fifty years.

By 1900 UC had a Ladies' Tennis Club, Women's Fencing Club and a Golf Club all in full swing. Actually tennis was the first formal athletic competition and tournaments in mixed doubles lasted until 1913.

Swimming also was enjoyed and around 1900 there was a need for more gym space as "the small tower room in UC has become inadequate." This room now houses the Fine Art Department.

St. Hilda's Athletic Association had already been formed and in 1901 UC organized a Women's Athletic Association to sponsor tennis, hockey, fencing and physical culture. That year saw the first hockey competition between UC and Vic.

From 1901 to 1913 paperchasing was a merry Saturday afternoon sport arranged to finish for supper at the various college residences in turn and was only stopped because of the encroachment of city buildings.

In 1905 Vic's WAA was formally recognized, although it had sponsored basketball, field and ice hockey for several years.

Also in 1905 the Women's Toronto University Athletic League was formed to look after tennis, hockey, basketball and paperchasing, while its other purpose was to stimulate inter-university interest in sports. However on November 6, 1920, this League was merged into the U of T WAA to handle intercollegiate competition.

Women were gradually gaining recognition and in 1910 the first T's were presented by the League. The use of the men's gym was granted for basketball in 1911 and by 1913 the Faculty of Education was admitted to the League. A new design for T's with the U of T coat of arms was introduced in 1916.

A letter to the Deans of women to permit bloomers for hockey was sent in February, 1918, and the request was granted in December of that year.

Six man hockey was approved in 1919 and teams from Medicine and McMaster were added to the interfaculty hockey schedule. Hart House pool was given for the interfaculty swimming meet in 1920.

Money was raised by selling favours at rugby games and parking cars to send a basketball team to Kingston to meet a challenge from Queen's and McGill in 1920. They became the intercollegiate champions and were all awarded the first senior colours by the new Athletic Association.

St. Mike's became a member of the Association that year and intercollegiate hockey was added when Toronto and McGill formed a league which Queen's entered two years later. However, this has been abandoned in the last six years except for the odd exhibition game.

Since 1927 five universities have competed in an annual tennis tournament and a swimming meet has been held since 1936. In 1938 badminton tournaments started and in 1939 the first intercollegiate ski meet was held at McGill and Toronto came home with the cup.

What the next fifty years will do to women's sports, no one knows, but if the concessions are as many as in the past, we will probably end up with our own rugby team in 2000!

A TEACHING OF THE BAHA'I WORLD FAITH

"That all nations should become one in faith and all men as brothers; that the bonds of affection and unity between the sons of men should be strengthened; that diversity of religions should cease and differences of race be annulled. What harm is there in this? Yet so it shall be. These fruitless strifes, these ruinous wars shall pass away, and the 'Most Great Peace' shall come. Do not you in Europe need this also? Let not a man glory in this, that he loves his country; let him rather glory in this, that he loves his kind."

The above words of Baha'u'llah quoted by Dr. Henry H. Jessup, D.D., while speaking at the World Parliament of Religions held at the Columbian Exposition of 1893, in Chicago, introduced the Baha'i teachings for the first time to the North American Continent.

Samson and Delilah

The queues on Victoria Street these days are defying the rain to sit in on Cecil Blout De Mille's latest spectacle, Samson and Delilah. Over the holiday it has proved to be an unexpected and special hit with the teen-age crowd. Since the picture has only been premiered in New York and Toronto, its public reception is being carefully watched by Hollywood.

Spectacles are in a class by themselves, particularly De Mille epics, and since 1912 they have developed their own "Mille" characteristics. Using two factors, a whopping budget of $3,000,000 and the Biblical narrative, both part of the De Mille tradition, the result attained has to be seen to be comprehended.

De Mille objects strenuously to having such pictures termed religious spectacles. "I work on a broad canvas . . .", he said. And you can say that again, Mr. De Mille!

Based on the Bible story found in Judges, 14 to 16, the story deals with a good man gone stupendously wrong and with the cruel dictatorship of the Philistines and their subject people, the Danites.

The background dealing with the day-to-day activities of the townsfolk and the swaggering Philistinian soldiers is beautiful under technicolor. The rainbow variety of colours is breathtaking. Against this rich background put Victor Mature and Hedy Lamarr, a couple of people with enough collective sex appeal to heat a good-sized city, and the result is terrific.

The showmanship of De Mille reaches its peak to date, anyway, in the destruction of the pagan temple, Dagon, at Gaza. Samson, humbled, blinded, and repentent, calls on his Lord to avenge the loss of his eyes.

With the first ominous rumble, the crowd is hushed; they watch spellbound as the huge stone image tilts, then crashes down on the now screaming thousands who had come to watch Samson humiliated. When it is over, you let go a big sigh and realize that you had been holding your breath. De Mille literally leaves no stone unturned in achieving the full effect.

Perhaps because he works on such a lavish scale, De Mille manages to achieve a realistic effect without making a burlesque of it. His big scenes, the destruction of the temple and the slaughter of 1,000 Philistines, are credible. Samson's fight with the lion is noteworthy for its realism. It must have taken months at least to train the lion!

Hedy Lamarr as Delilah suits the western world's aesthetic ideal of voluptuousness perfectly, and by the time the picture is finished you can't blame Samson for his folly. Victor Mature as Samson is suited perfectly, physically and temperamentally, for the role.

faculties presents a stage show in the Engineering Hall. Everybody comes. Here the rivalry between the faculties is quite apparent. At the end of the year the best shows are presented before the public in the "Carabinades". Last year the revue was transported bodily to McGill University where it was presented as part of their "Carabin" weekend.

In addition to the regular holidays, one day each year is set aside as "La Journee des Etudiants". It was customary on this day to stage a parade through the streets of Quebec, followed by the "Festival des Etudiants" at the Coliseum where a hockey game, ice-show, skits and dancing were in order.

Two years ago, when the course of the parade lay past a house of ill-repute, someone got the idea of clearing out the house . . . They started a riot, and the University faced a $2,000 damage suit. Since then the parades have been suspended.

Laval also has a very active radio club which broadcasts once a week. In a recent broadcast, Gilles Lamontagnes, a graduate of Laval, who won the "Singing Stars of Tomorrow" contest two years ago, attributed his interest in singing to his work with this club.

Those wishing to accept an exchange scholarship to Laval are advised to consult their professors about this.

strong, definite editorial policy", was the opinion of the majority of editors at the annual conference of the Canadian University Press at the University of Montreal last week. "The editorial page should not be just a mirror — it should also guide and stimulate the reader", said Stan Fillmore, Varsity editor and delegate to the conference. A minority opinion, led by Murray Smith, Manitoban editor, insisted that the editorial page should be open to anyone who wished to write an editorial.

Maritime Complaints

The delegates, who represented twenty English and three French-Canadian undergrad newspapers also discussed the reorganization of the CUP wire service; a service by which news breaking on any Canadian campus is immediately relayed to other school papers. The Maritime Universities felt that the rest of Canada was ignoring the East and requested a more equitable distribution of news.

No News Suppression

The position of undergrad papers on the campus was examined. All papers, with one exception, reported that there was little or no attempt made on the part of Student Councils to coerce papers into printing certain views. The McGill Daily reported that it was not being permitted to report Student Council meetings in a manner consistent with proper news coverage.

The conference ended with the presentation of trophies to the Western's Gazette, Saskatchewan's Sheaf, McMaster's Silhouette and Laval's Le Carabin for best papers of the year.

MUSTARD IS COPP TROPHY WINNER

Fraser "Moose" Mustard has been voted by his team mates as this year's winner of the Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy. This trophy is given every year to that member of the Senior Varsity football team who is adjudged by the team as the most valuable player on that team. It is stipulated that the trophy be given on the basis of playing ability and strength of character.

Has Starred Three Years

Mustard has starred in the middle-wing spot on the Varsity Blues for three years, and has been hailed by coaches as one of the best linemen in Canadian football. He has made several All-Star teams and Canadian coaches' selections. "Moose" is in his first medical year, and so has three more years of football left at Varsity.

This year Mustard's play has been especially outstanding, and it was largely due to his hard charging efforts that the Blues' line held so well throughout the season. The team must have thought the same way, because although the voting was not unanimous, Mustard got an overwhelming majority of the votes.

Copp Was Outstanding Student

In past years the trophy has been given about equally to linemen and backs. Last year it was awarded to quarter-back Tommy Waldon, and the year before that, triple-threat Bruce Cummings got it. There were no awards made during the war because senior football was suspended.

The trophy was established in memory of Johnny Copp, a student at the University of Toronto, and a player on the Varsity Blues, who was fatally shot while investigating noises in his home. He came upon a prowler, who immediately shot him.

Sportswoman

HOCKEY

Hockey president Donna Haley announced last night that this year men would replace women as referees. She said the system of referees last year was unsatisfactory because there were not enough qualified women.

Practices have been going on this term and last in the arena and the scheduled games start next week.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Back to the grind after three lovely weeks! Wonder who's sorrier . . . the writer or the readers? On our return to the office Tuesday morning we found a copy of the "Temperance Advocate" on our desk. How did they find out?

But to get back to sports . . . the Varsity Basketball Team seems to be in tight straits judging from their road games. They didn't win a single one. Closest game was with the University of Rochester, when they lost by nine points, but we are informed that they should have won by twenty. Varsity took 92 shots at the Rochester net while holding the opposition down to a measly 52 throws. As Masterson said yesterday, "the boys have to improve their shooting, checking, and condition, and they'll win games." We both smiled, and remembered Vic Obeck's sage advice to a gathering of McGill alumni to the effect that if a football team has good conditioning, the will to win, and the ability to play good football, they would go a long way towards winning a game.

Western may or may not have a good team; their exhibition games tend to show they haven't, but with Wade back in action, they will certainly be no pushovers. Kentucky beat them 90-18, but Kentucky could beat just about anybody; and they were beaten by Assumption, even without Freddy Thomas. McGill and Queen's are supposed to have good teams this year, and rumor has it that Varsity will not be able to dispose of the Queen's men as easily as they have in past years.

On the other end of winter sports, we have the Varsity Blues Hockey Team going like a house on fire. Lo and behold — they're on the top rung of the senior intercollegiate ladder. That victory over the U of M was sweet, albeit unexpected.

That game with the Carabins before the holidays was really a picture game . . . first one team was on top, then the other. Varsity supporters were plenty worried until Varsity rapped in five fast counters in the third to salt it away. Varsity took that game on sheer fight and scramble — it was evident all the way that the Carabin forwards were smooth and fast skaters and that the Varsity boys just weren't as good. The Carabin defence was bigger and heavier than anything the Blues could offer, but Joe Kane and Porky McDougall just weren't taking anything that night, although they sure handed out plenty.

We saw the Montreal coach after the game, and he agreed that the Blues were sure a fighting team. He said (in a heavy French accent): "It was a good game . . . for you! But look out for next game!" Which all just goes to show that those of you who didn't heed our advice to go to the game really missed something.

Blues Share First; Split With Michigan

By MAL CRAWFORD

One week's work last December has tied the Toronto Hockey Blues in first place with University of Montreal, by virtue of a thrilling 12-7 win over the Carabins at Varsity Arena, Friday the 9th, and a 7-3 triumph at Queen's the following Wednesday. Two days later, they were in Ann Arbor, Michigan, playing the University of Michigan Wolverines.

Come Long Way

The Blues have come a long way from the state they were in when they were shut out 5-0 by Montreal the first week of the season. Wally Halder has welded them into a fast, hard-skating outfit with a scoring record of 24 goals in their four league games. The fact that 16 goals have been potted against them in the same four games is almost as impressive, but the checking improved considerably in the Michigan series, in which the Wolverines were held to four goals in two games. The goal-tending has been very steady in spite of the goals-against total, and Halder has a tough fight with himself before each game to decide between his two freshmen goalies, Doug Orr and Gary Carl.

Two Lines Clicking

Two high-scoring forward lines have proven themselves. The first line, with Cece Turcott at centre and Wes Moore and Norm Fox on the wings, was the big scoring factor in the win over the Carabins, and figured in six of the seven goals against Queen's. The Vernon-Roberts-Digby line were the sharp-shooters in the Michigan games.

Split With Michigan

The first game with the Wolverines was lost 2-1 on a goal in the last three minutes. Digby scored the Blues' lone tally. Except for a three minute stretch at the end, in which they incurred three penalties in a row, the Blues had the edge in the play. However, it didn't show until the second game, which the Blues won 4-2 to snap a Michigan winning streak of nearly 20 games. Digby and Vernon split the four goals between them, and Walters two assists, to keep the series' glory pretty well to their own line. The games were roughly played, with a generous number of penalties being distributed.

Junior B's Lose Again In Cellar

By DAVE BUTTERS

Overcoming a three goal deficit midway through the second period of a Junior B hockey tilt Tuesday evening, St. Mike's rapped in seven goals before Varsity's Junior Bees flashed the red light. Led by the stellar playing of hat-tricker, Don Peart, the Mikemen defeated the Bees 9-6. This defeat at the hands of the Saints left Varsity in the cellar of the Junior B race, one point behind St. Michael's.

Varsity came out in first period looking as if they were going to play rings around the Mikemen. Art Holmes collected a pass from Bill Moore in a goal-mouth scramble and hit pay-dirt. Thirty seconds later St. Mike's tied it up with Don Peart scoring the first of his three goals. Varsity then went ahead on goals by Wardop and Ladly to make the score read 3-1 at the end of the first period for Varsity.

Wardrop hit the scoring column again shortly after the start of the second period. St. Mike's began to attack and carried the play from there and before the period was over the score read 4-3 for Varsity. One minute after the start of the third period St. Mike's tied the game from a face-off following the issuing of a penalty to Paul Prendergast of Varsity, with Art Clune getting the goal. From here on the game turned into a rout with the Mikemen scoring five goals in ten minutes.

Sandwiched in between the fourth and fifth Saint goals was a lone counter by Dave Kent of Varsity. At 19:58 of the period Monty Koughan shot a consolation goal for Varsity to make the final score read 9-6 in favor of St. Michael's.

Outstanding for the winning Mikemen was Peart, Joe Millson, and Bill Lee. The shining point of the Junior Bees was the play of Art Holmes and the usual stellar effort of goalie, John Milne, whose defense was poor.

Line-ups:—

Varsity: Goal, John Milne; defence, D'Arcy Prendergast, P. Prendergast; center, Holmes; wings, Kent, Yeo; alternates, Fullerton, Wardrop, Brown, Ladly, Sinclair, Nichols, Moore, Koughan.

St. Michael's: Goal, Young; defence, McNamara, Clune; center, Plata; wings, Millison, Scanlon; alternates, Clark, Harrison, Peart, Wolochatiuk, Lee, O'Hearn, McDonald, Bourke.

Mural Basketball Schedule Starts Boys In Top Form

Still dragging at the knees after a joyous Yuletide, 16 of the intramural's 132 teams swung into action yesterday at Hart House and Little Vic. The result of the long Christmas lay-off was particularly noticeable in the senior UC—senior Vic game. The game ended in a 20-20 tie with most of the players on both teams dragging their tongues by the end of the low-scoring encounter. This year the games are played in three ten minute periods.

U.C. blew a nine point lead in the second period and had to go all out to salvage a tie. Jack Robson and Cy Durbin were best for the Red and White, while Reid and Andrassy were the pick of the Vicsters.

UC junior won the other major league game, downing junior Vic 46-33. Newsky with 13 and John Kuzmochka with eight led the winners while Bob Rumball paced Vic with 10.

In the minor league, Meds V laced the UC Huskies 37-10 while Vic sixths eased past UC Falcons 44-39. Bruce Halperin on the Falcons was the day's high scorer with 21.

Intermediate Hockey Club Win And Lose In U.S.A.

The little-publicized and sparsely-followed intermediate hockey club came back from their annual visit to the United States with a two game split with Clinton (N.Y.). They lost the first game 8-7, but fought back to take the game the following night 5-2. This team has won the intermediate crown for the last four years and have, in the person of Jack Life the man who coached them to the laurels last season.

Russ Seltzer, the goalie, had the misfortune to get hit in the eye in the first game and had to retire from further competition. His place was taken by Bob Dickson, a volunteer who had never played the position before. Toronto scorers were Jon Lickley with 3, Pat McLoughlin 2, and Wolf and Wally London tallied one each.

Varsity played the second game with Dave Pynchon of Williams College in goal and came out on top 5-2. Lickley led the scorers again with two followed by McLaughlin, Gawinski and Conboy with one each. Toronto roughed it up in this game getting 21 minutes in penalties to Clinton's 2.

BLUE CAGERS DROP THREE

It might have been due to Christmas exam jitters, or even a simple preoccupation with the holidays to come, but whatever the reason the Senior Basketball Blues dropped three decisions to U.S. squads in the last week of the fall term.

A smooth-working, sharp-shooting Albion College squad visited the Blues at Athletic Night on December 9 and were victorious by a 69-50 score. The Blues, led by Jack Gray with an 18 point effort, managed to keep pace with the Albion boys up until the last quarter when the experience of their floor general, Vince Sigrin, began to tell the tale. He hooped 22 points himself and set up a dozen more basket-making plays.

Visit Buffalo

On December 16 the Blues travelled to Buffalo accompanied by the Intermediates. The Seniors could not do a thing right in the first half of their tilt and succeeded in scoring only four points to Buffalo's 28. Things brightened up in the second stanza, but even playing their hardest the Blues could not overcome the lead piled up against them and the scoreboard at the final whistle read Buffalo 60, Varsity 34.

The Intermediates fared a little better, and although they dropped 10 points behind in the first three minutes while trying to get used to the larger floor, they held their own throughout the rest of the game and ended up on the wrong end of a 53-63 score. Doug Kettle, moved down from the Seniors for the game, was top scorer for the Intermediates with 14 points.

On To Rochester

In Rochester the next night, the Senior Blues were playing much better ball than they did in Buffalo, but were still somewhat rusty in the shooting department. The Blues were only 4 points behind at half time, but the Rochester team proved too strong and the final count was 51-42 in Rochester's favour. Braithwaite led the Blues with 11 points

Hart House Now Owner Of Caledon Hills Farm

Hart House now owns a farm in the Caledon Hills, lock, stock and barrel. After months of negotiation during which the closing date of the deal had to be put forward four times, the deed was finally signed last Dec. 9.

Every week-end since September, work gangs from a group of about 75 people representing all faculties except Dentistry, have been going out to the farm and toiling to put the 85-year-old building in shape. To date a new roof has been put on the house, and the chimneys have been rebuilt. Gravel has been put down on the half-mile drive leading to the house to enable cars and trucks to reach the place without becoming mired in gumbo during the moist weather we have had up till now.

To Have Hydro Soon

Hart House Educational Program Director, R. H. Perry, who holds the position of Chief Cook on the work parties, is the man responsible for most of the work which has been put into the farm to date. Although there is no electricity or running water at the farm yet, there should be soon. Mr. Perry is negotiating to have a hydro line built from the nearest farm having hydro, a distance of three-quarters of a mile. When this is done, the oil lamps which have been the only means of illumination since the house was built can be retired and electric lights installed.

Meeting On Monday

The problems of membership and of organizations wishing to use the farm for a week-end will probably be ironed out at a meeting of the farm committee to be held in Hart

WOMEN AGAINST EQUALITY

Kingston—Jan. 5—(CUP)—"It has been my aim for years to abolish conscience; we need intelligence and maturity instead," Dr. Jessie MacPherson told the women of Queen's University at a meeting of the Levana Society last month.

"Women don't want to be the equals of men because they want the best of worlds," Dean McPherson said, "Theoretically we believe in equality but emotionally we do not."

It is possible, she pointed out, for a woman to be too clever to be successful socially, thereby endangering her ultimate social status which is determined by marriage.

Comic Books, French Texts Escape Taxes

Big mark-ups in American texts imported into Canada can be understood more easily than other factors that increase text costs in Canada, it was reported at a meeting yesterday in the Trinity College Board Room of the University of Toronto Committee of NFCUS.

The NFCUS Committee has set up a sub-committee to study text costs for the national organization. A report of the sub-committee's work has been sent to national NFCUS President, Richey Love by Toronto Committee President Tom Symons.

Comics Tax-Free

Symons has reported that investigations are going ahead about the "apparent inconsistency in the Canadian Government's excise and customs on books." The sub-committee has learned that comics are tax-free while law texts are not.

The sub-committee would like to know why U.S. publishers pay for deliveries to retailers in their own country while they will only give Canadian retailers F.O.B. terms.

Symons' report also refers to the "inexplicable classification of French as a 'foreign' language for purpose of customs." As foreign language books, French books imported into Canada escape taxes applied to English-language texts brought into this country.

Imperial Preference Absorbed

The sub-committee would like to know why many British book agencies absorb the ten percent "imperial preference" which would otherwise relieve Canadian buyers of British books of costs non-Commonwealth nations must pay.

Another sub-committee has presented a formal interim report to the national NFCUS organizations, dealing with used book stores and cooperative book stores on Canadian campi. This report is to be sent to other universities represented on NFCUS and is based on answers received from nine universities about used book stores and

Paging Carnegie

One Weekend Avec Les Carabins

By ROCKY MARTINO

Dale Carnegie didn't have all the answers when he wrote his famous "How to Win Friends and Influence People." The best way to make friends is to go to Montreal on an exchange weekend.

The making of friends was the keynote of the trip. With friendship comes understanding; with understanding comes appreciation; with appreciation comes a solidarity for our Canada in the years to come. That was the entire purpose of the trip and it was achieved.

Our two days there were taken up with dinners, tours, parties and talks. It doesn't sound like much on paper but in the minds of those who went, the whole week-end will stand out in their memories like the illuminated cross stands out on Mount Royal. Mere words can never capture the spirit and atmosphere of those few but full hours spent as guests of the students of the University of Montreal. I can't tell you everything that went on because it would require volumes to recount the many events planned and carried out to make the weekend so pleasant for us. All I can do is merely tell you a few of the humorous events of the trip.

University Tour

Take that tour of the University for instance. After touring the sections of the impressive building on the back of Mount Royal, we came to the biology department's animal room. In this room are kept the animals used in experiments now being conducted. Peter Wade nonchalantly walked in, looked around and walked over to take a better look at a monkey. The poor thing nearly went crazy. After taking one look at Pete, the monkey started beating the cage, trying to tear the bars out. Rolling his eyes at the cage, Pete walked on to the next cage. The same thing happened. After a third try, he gave up. It's a good thing that he did. I don't think we could have laughed anymore.

Then there was that party on Saturday night. We had just come from the concert by the Blue and Gold Chorus and the performance of Musset's "Fantasio." For a while we talked about the humorous antics of 'le maquis'. We couldn't understand the dialogue too well (un pue trop vite) but the pantomime was half-explanatory. After a while we broke up the small groups and started talking about everything in general. Then it happened!

Students Entertain

Some fool of a Varsity feature writer started singing the Skule song. He was immediately surrounded and drowned out by a chorus of male voices when he came to Lady Godiva. That got everybody singing.

One hour and fifty songs later, a hoarse voice suggested that we form a ring and get Guy Gagnon (director of Fantasio) to go a 'recital' for us. No sooner said than done and Guy really put on a show. Don't ask me what he said, I couldn't understand it. But, like the play, you didn't have to understand the words to enjoy it. The act that accompanied the words would have made Danny Kaye sit up and take notice.

That started the ball rolling. More of 'les Carabins' put on a show for us. For our own side, Audrey Lowrie gave her interpretation of Mrs. Skillet, the famous 'recipe' connoisseur. Her recipe?—Burnt bottom pudding with eggshells.

Paul Fauteux (St. Mike's, '49) who is now attending McGill came to the party and brought with him stories of Baptiste and his 200 lb. wife who lost 100 lbs. and made him very sad. If you want to know what happened, come to Montreal next year and ask Paul.

A welcome change from the bleat of human voices came with Herb Wedderburn's dance. Herb—inspired Carolyn Gratton to tell us about 'Rachel'. It wasn't so much what she sang as how she sang it that made that song so memorable.

There's an old saying that all good things come to an end. As far as the party goes, the saying is wrong. That party is still going on in the memories of everybody there.

At the official dinner earlier in the evening, a rather humorous incident took place when a pretty young thing tried out her French on her dinner partners. She mixed up the verbs 'être chaud' (to be drunk) and 'avoir chaud' (to be hot). She wanted to say "We're hot in here and the evening is just beginning." You can guess what she ended up saying.

The Trains

I've told you some of the humorous incidents in Montreal but some of the most humorous events occurred on the train. Some students were worried about the nine-hour trip there, so they came well equipped with things to do. Jim Allin brought along his surveying problems and sliderule; Dave Watson brought cards along and played bridge; George Halpern brought a portable chess game but Pete Wade

New Column...

Beginning today The Varsity presents to its readers a new column: "Science and Engineering." For some time now we have been trying to find ways to improve our coverage of events of significance to university students. "Science and Engineering" is one of a list of projected steps.

Lest the arts student be frightened away by the head, we hasten to assure him that the column, which will run each Tuesday and Friday, will be non-technical in nature and will deal with outstanding achievements in the world of science and engineering, both on this campus and in the world at large.

"Science and Engineering" will try to do for the arts student, in a smaller compass, what the Art, Music and Drama department tries to do for the engineering student — present him with some significant events which he may not have the time for in the rush of his undergraduate life.

The Seventh Day...

Now that all the downtown papers have had their say on Sunday sport it strikes us that this is a good time to say a few words on the subject.

The question was opposed by our big brothers downtown. The Varsity found it couldn't get very heated over the subject, since many of us are only temporary Torontonians, and most of the rest do not have a vote in Toronto civic elections.

Now that the Toronto voters have indicated their preference for Sunday sport, we want to say that we think it is a Good Thing.

It is to be hoped that the Ontario Legislature will lose no time in changing the law to suit the wishes of the people of Toronto, and of Windsor, who also voted in favour of Sunday sport. We note that some members of the Federal house, hearing the far-off crack of baseball bats in the hustings, are considering changing the Lord's Day Alliance Act, which has been the law of the land for many years.

While there is bound to be a great deal of argument before anything is made definite, we think the Federal members have the right idea. It seems to us that the Lord's Day Alliance Act does not exactly fulfill the wishes of many Canadians.

It does not seem quite fair to us that those who wish to go to baseball games, or football games, or even to the movies, should be deprived of that right by law. Those whose religious convictions are such that they disapprove of these activities on Sunday have every right to stay away.

There are a lot of emotional arguments mixed up in the question, but in our so-called modern world we hate to think that we are bound by legislation to either go to church, or for a walk, or stay at home. It seems to us that it is the right of every man to make up his own mind how he shall spend the seventh day of his week, which is set aside for meditation, relaxation, and rest.

Our grandfather considered playing cards the instrument of the devil, but we find that a little game of two-handed canasta relieves us of a lot of tension, and keeps us from losing our temper quite as often as we used to. What was good enough for grandfather is not quite adequate today.

We think that is what has happened to the Lord's Day Alliance Act — it is a little out of date. Perhaps it is time for a change.

Bottle-Feeding

Being one of the topical type—I read Time magazine every week to keep up with the latest development of Rita Khan—this seems the right time to talk about bottles and the feeding therewith.

The Christmas holidays are a good time to brood. Been brooding every day. Got started about Open Sunday. The advertising and the unbiased reports were good brooding fodder. Then as the bottles decreased in the refueling process that is essential to successful brooding, the brooding switched to bottle-feeding. Naturally this made me think of Professor Marcus Long.

Dr. Long was the feature of a Dorothy Howarth interview in the Tely at the year-end, as you may know. Made a snide remark about The Varsity too. And he was the leading figure in the recent discussion of bottle-feeding in Hart House. So I brooded about Dr. Long and Bottle-feeding.

Family Journal

In this recent discussion on bottle-feeding, Dr. Long aided and abetted by several Hart House members, carefully investigated the various aspects of baby-feeding through bottles and otherwise. Influence of the dairy interests and bridge parties and cigaret-smoking were among the facts openly considered in the debate.

It will be remembered that the report in The Varsity the following day neatly side-stepped this pertinent discussion by talking vaguely about methods of instruction in the university. Reason given for this unseemingly approach was some fool talk about The Varsity being a "family" journal. If you think this is going to be revelation of the censorship goings-on at the debate, you're going to be fooled. For the same reasons—"family" journal. If, because of this, you are going to feel frustrated, come up and see me sometime. Got some crime comics stashed away in my bedroom along with the etchings and God's Ltlie Acre. But right now, I'm going to talk about tutorial groups too.

The superiority of the tutorial group system—based on the Oxford idea—was stressed by Dr. Long and the government forces in the Hart House debate. In contrast to the prevalent classroom system, the tutorial group idea would encourage "attempts toward original inquiry and critical discussion," Dr. Long said. The debate carried the resolution for the government that the group idea was better than the classroom lecture plan by the one-sided vote of 87-11.

Too Much Talk

This led to some brooding. Most groups, it is happy to say, pretty well get the informal atmosphere of professor - student discussion. There are unavoidable difficulties, of course. Increased enrollment has expanded groups to hard-to-handle bunches of ten or more students in the junior years. But most groups, especially those run by experienced faculty members get the right kind of results.

But not all. There aren't enough groups of this type in any course. To have even a few of them spoiled through incompetence of the group tutor is inexcusable. A common fault seems to be that the young tutor who forgets that he is leading a group discusion and lectures for the hour. Often this shows the brilliance of the tutor and explains why he has been given the responsibility for group tutorship. But brilliance can be boring outside the lecture hall.

Maybe this is kicking because the tutor keeps on talking when I want to talk. That's the definition of a bore, isn't it? But tutorial groups left. With us we carried a hope that of hectic exam-ridden courses. In a monstrously large university like Toronto, most students get few chances to discuss their subjects and any other subject on an inform give-and-take basis with their professors and lecturers. These chances should not be stifled because of one-sided verbose brilliance.

Not Enough Talk

There may be some group tutors who will recoil from this undiplomatic complaint and stiffly say, "This would be all very well if only the students who come to groups would not sit there like so many mute bumps on wooden logs," Pertinent as this comment may be, it

Brekker Flight Air One Way Bus Return

Weather didn't stop the eager flyers of the Ajax Flying Club when they made their Sunday morning Flight the Sunday before the holidays began.

Poor Weather

Weather reports from Oshawa sent four of the pilots back to bed that morning as they were told that the ceiling was less than the thousand feet required for safe take-off.

Later bulletins from the Island Airport were encouraging enough to entice 12 souls from their beds, down to the ferry landing and across the bay to the airport.

In spite of the threatening clouds four planes took off, and 12 fully awake persons looked forward to the breakfast awainting them at the landing strip in Hamilton.

Following the shoreline they cruised along below the clouds watching for Bronte, then Burlington, and finally Hamilton itself showed in the distance.

Breakfast Downtown

By the time they had unshipped at Hamilton there was a slight drizzle, and hurrying through the unnatural gloom, the 12 were met by a shivering committee of one who had been elected to meet them there. "Sorry, have to go down town for breakfast as the airport lunchroom is closed." was the sobering welcome.

By car the party went to a beanery in downtown Hamilton, and then scurried back to the airport in better spirits. By this time the sky had really opened up—to rain.

Not only was the airport lunch bar closed down, but now the airport itself was closed off. Visibility, quarter mile, and ceiling 300 feet. No flying in that stuff.

The party walked away from the weather office, and back to the car. The spirits of ten minutes before were now dampened by the weather, the weather's effect on flying, and disappointment. The breakfast was all right, but the flight sure was a washout.

Bus Ride Home

In Hamilton the party boarded a bus, and made a complete day—travel by land, sea, and air.

Not dampened by this set-back, the stalwarts have plans for another outing, in the very near future. President Al Heisey feels sure that they will hit better than the one in '11, their score to date in clear Sundays. "Give us the weather, and we'll fly the machines" is his hearty comment for the future plans of the club.

News Restricted On Council Action For McGill Daily

Montreal, Jan. 6—(CUP)—McGill Daily is the only campus newspaper which has any restriction placed on its news reportage, it was revealed at a recent Canadian University Papers conference. Although other undergrad newspapers are subject to a vote of censure from the student council of their university, in no instance is there a directive as to what news may be printed.

Under present regulations at McGill, the student daily may print accounts of only those motions passed at meetings. Sponsors of motions may not be identified. In effect this means that all discussion of a motion is withheld from the students. It also means that if a motion is defeated there is no reportage given to the mover or any of the reasons why it was defeated.

Meeting in Camera

Clyde Kennedy, editor of the McGill Daily declared that the student body is virtually kept in the dark about council affairs by these rules. This situation is not likely to improve as the outgoing council has tabled a motion asking that all future meetings be held in camera.

The students of U. of T. are kept well informed of Council meetings. The Varsity has full newspaper privileges, while the editor is a non-voting member of the S.A.C.

Winter Wonderland

The Varsity, having the interests of its readers at heart, as always, is publishing the two pictures above showing what winter on the campus should be like. The snow scene shows the old way of cleaning white slush. Horseface looks tired, doesn't he? The skating is in open air in the Stadium. We used to skate in the Stadium each winter, remember? (This is going to sound awfully silly if it snows or freezes violently overnight. Probably will too.)

Naughty But Nice Is Word For Next Hart House Play

A naughty, flippant little comedy is the way Robert Gill described "The Guardsman" to be presented at Hart House Theatre from January 21 to 28. This is the play that, in 1924, began the popular and successful partnership of Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontanne on the American stage.

Of a type that is typical on the European stage and is often found there with much success, "The Guardsman" concerns an Austrian actor and actress who are married. The husband suspects his wife of infidelity and disguising himself as a Russian Imperial Guardsman, makes love to her in an attempt to prove that she is really perfidious.

Donald Glen will take the part of the actor, Robin Taylor the actress. June Turnbull, Audrey Lowrie, Edith Greenberg and Michael Smith are included in the cast.

Adapted from the Hungarian play by Ferenc Molnar, who has also written the successful Broadway comedy, "The Play's The Thing" and "Liliom" upon which Carousal was based. This play was considered quite naughty in its day. "We have been concentrating on serious works so far, but this is to be the light filler this season," Mr. Gill said.

The ladies' costumes are being made expressly for the show, tickets for which go on sale Thursday, January 12.

SWEDEN SUMMER SESSION

The University of Oslo will again hold a summer session for American and Canadian students who have completed at least their sophomore year in any accredited college or university. The exact dates for the six weeks' session are not yet final It is believed however, that the opening date will be about June 26 and the closing date about August 5th, 1950.

Girls' Residences Report Petty Thefts, Atmosphere Is Tense

Girls' residences on the campus have been the scene of several petty thefts in the past weeks. Before the Christmas holidays and since, there have been reports of articles missing from Wymilwood, Annesley and Whitney Hall.

Wallets Missing

On Tuesday, just one day after their return from vacations, two girls in Wymilwood had their wallets stolen from their rooms while they were out to lunch. About the same time another girl left her watch in her room while she went out to a lecture, and when she returned some time later the watch was missing.

In explanation of how this could occur, one of the girls in Wymilwood said that all the girls in Wymilwood are eating at Annesley this week, and most of them are gone from the building from one to one-thirty. Although this was not the case on Tuesday, when three girls were still in the residence, many persons could know about this, and since Wymilwood is open to the University girls in general for the lunch hour, almost anyone could walk in.

Papers Returned

Before the holidays there was another incident, this one across the street in Annesley Hall. Two girls went out to lectures and sometime between two and three-thirty someone entered their room and made off with their purses. One wallet was recovered under the stair carpeting, and the papers were returned by mail from the other purse.

During the fall term there were other thefts from Whitney Hall, University College girls' residence. In this case a culprit was caught and prosecuted for trespassing. Because of lack of evidence the woman was released under suspended sentence.

Probably Not One Person

Miss Ferguson, dean of women in UC, thought that the thefts in Victoria college were similar in perpetration, but she doubted that the same person had done the job. The threat of six months in jail, and the prospect of another trial would deter this person from repeating the offense.

While police have been informed of the incidents, the University authorities do not think that it will be possible to catch the criminal involved.

The strain of the situation has been felt in the residences. Yesterday afternoon a stranger was noticed in the upper halls of Wymilwood and the girls acted quickly and carefully. First they notified the don, and together they advanced toward the suspicious person. Gathering courage, the group faced the woman, and asked her what business brought her to the place. It turned out she was a friend of one of the dons living in the upper wing.

Men Only Room Bouncer-Guard One Xmas Job

During the Christmas holidays jobs varied from clerical work and sorting mail to driving trucks, the employment office reports. The exact figures of the number of students employed during the holidays will be forthcoming from the employment service which is awaiting confirmation from various companies. There is usually not too much variety during the holidays but there was one unusual case they stated.

Club 391 is a very special place—operated by the Robert Simpson Company for men who have trouble picking gifts for wives, sweethearts and friendly acquaintances. The employment office answered the call of Simpsons' by sending over two men to act as guards. The guards' job (bouncers) was to guard the door in case women tried to enter the club. Hart House isn't the only place where women aren't allowed.

The employment bureau reports there are many part time jobs open for evening work. These jobs are in the main of clerical and mail-room work.

Regarding a letter which appeared in The Varsity in December that the employment service was strictly for artsmen, the employment bureau replied that the letter was probably put in as a joke. We have no favoritism and all faculties take advantage of our service.

CIVIL SERVICE JOBS APPLICATION DATE BEFORE JAN. 16

Want a job? Into The Varsity office keep pouring Civil Service bulletins offering jobs to those students who may be interested in working for the government. There is even a booklet published by and available from the Commission called "Careers for College Graduates."

In summer employment, jobs are being offered to geography majors with the Department of Mines and Resources in field work. There are 350 vacancies in agricultural pur-

Canadians From China

Chop Soup To Road To The Isles

By MARGARET WORLD

"Ghosts in China!" That was an amusing thought. But then there could be; so the young Chinese children decided that it was best to learn a prayer against the spirits, to be said on Hallowe'en, just in case.

"From ghoulies and ghosties and crookedie little beasties and things that go 'whump' in the night, may the good Lord protect me. Amen."

Learn Canadian Customs

These small boys every weeknight sit patiently in a little room in the Chinese Public School. They didn't know any English when they came to Canada after being chased from their native land by the Communists. But now they can read the language fairly well, although they find difficulty in speaking, just as anyone might when obliged to think in their native tongue and then translate into the new language. But these children are not just learning how to talk, they are learning Canadian customs and way of life. Their teacher is Terry Jaeger, IV U.C. who patiently reads to them while they listen and then repeat after him:

"There is a card. There is a blue card. There is a green card."

The school room is bare except for a map of the world, a picture of Sun-Yat-Sen, and two flags A few straight desks with backless benches almost fill the room. The sing-song hum of the boys' voices is interrupted now and then by a giggle over an odd-sounding English word. Upon the desks are exercise books containing pictures of objects with the English name underneath.

Canadian Names Puzzle

The pupils have to count, to tell the time, to distinguish between colors, and to learn the names of Canadian dinner utensils plus many other things. Telling the time is a necessity, particularly when nearing the end of a lecture, and it is all the more difficult in a foreign language. The teacher drew several clocks on the board and moved the hands about. Then he asked each pupil the time. One boy replied, "Past half three." A dinner setting was also sketched on the board naming the knife, fork, plate, cup, and so on. After the children knew the names of the cutlery and china they had to learn the average contents of each course. One child, when asked what a Canadian first course consisted of said, "Chop Suey." Upon learning that it was soup, remarked, "Oh, Chop Soup."

Scottish Indoctrination

After learning the little prayer for Hallowe'en the small students wanted to learn a song, whereupon they were taught "Road To the Isles." Terry explained that long ago there had been a war in Scotland as well as in Asia, and this had been the song sung by the victorious Scotsmen. The juvenile songsters unintentionally had a Scottish accent; as the sound "away" is hard for them to say, they sang "awa."

Some of these boys work or go to school in the daytime as well as at night. In the fall when the weather is milder and the days are longer, the little room is packed with children. Sometimes extra benches have to be brought in to take care of the surplus; for not only are the students anxious to learn but their parents push them out to make them learn. They want their children to be taught the ways to be Canadian citizens. It would be interesting to find out how many people know about this school, and how many similar ones there are across Canada helping young new Canadians feel at home in our Canadian way of life.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

TSO—Steinberg

William Steinberg conducted this week's regular concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. William Steinberg is now in his fifth season as music director of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra. Regarding his guest appearance here in Toronto, the reception tendered the conductor at last evening's concert would indicate that Toronto Symphony goers appreciate a change, particularly when the guest displays a technique as interesting as Mr. Steinberg's.

Mr. Steinberg's most admirable quality would seem to be that of submission rather than leadership, of subservience to the music rather than of exacting domination of the orchestra. One senses that the members of the orchestra have a high regard for the man, for he seems to give them credit for sufficient musicianship to successfully carry through of their own accord certain passages which do not require any great guidance from the conductor. Moments in Death and Transfiguration of Strauss received little from the conductor other than abandoned movements of satisfaction in what the orchestra was doing on its own initiative, and perhaps the relatively elemental emotional content of this work would account for the unanimity of the orchestra in co-operating towards a really fine performance.

This same relationship between conductor and orchestra became a weakness in the Beethoven fifth symphony; yet, a guest conductor, working with men whose capacities he cannot know fully, can do little else than hope for the best, and if all concerned are not in full accord—and more cannot be expected in a heavy work like the Beethoven fifth even if it is very familiar,—then the performance simply has to suffer, and nobody is to blame, least of all the conductor who cannot be expected both to know and direct the work in the manner to which the performers are most accustomed.

Regarding the program, we hasten to make mention of the Two Choric Dances by Paul Creston, the Modern American composer who takes a sweetly realistic attitude towards music. His work displays an interest in rythmic trickery and a deficiency in that expansiveness of understanding which is the mark of a great artist. His tendency to overwork every little idea cannot help draw a comment which can apply to many moderns—"much ado about nothing," but who can criticize this, for there is little else anyway, as far as things go, and the man who can make much out of nothing is surely greater than the man who has to have something to start with. Paul Creston says simply, "I believe that everyone should compose." What a delightful personality!

William Girvin.

University Symphony Orchestra

On the evening of Sunday, December 11, the University Symphony Orchestra presented its first concert of the season under the well-controlled and unspectacular guidance of its new conductor, Lee Hepner. The event had been well publicized, and attracted a crowd which, while it did not overflow Convocation Hall, was sufficiently large to occupy the second gallery and proved to be satisfactorily appreciative.

The program consisted of Franck's D Minor Symphony, three selections from The Damnation of Faust by Berlioz, and Borodin's Polovetsian Dances from Prince Igor. It was somewhat surprising to find the most demanding work used as the opener. We are inclined to wonder if the symphony would not have been more suitably placed in the middle of the program, using the Berlioz to tune up on, especially as it was in the performance of the symphony that the orchestra showed least well.

In passages of mounting excitement there was an audible uncertainty of expression and a visible disunity which was overcome by the time the performance had moved into the bars of familiar melody. Franck's symphony is in itself exciting, but the excitement of this performance wasn't entirely that intended by the composer.

Following intermission the program continued with parts of The Damnation of Faust: minuet of the will o' the wisp, ballet of the Sylphe, and Hungarian March. Of the entire evening that part which now, after almost a month, seems to have suited best the abilities of the orchestra was this. Here again the musicians contributed something which the composer had not included in his score—he could not have done so, for the added element was an enthusiasm which touched everything from the skilfully performed oboe solo to the humming sympathy of many violins, synchronized by the easy rhythms of Berlioz.

To close the evening the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus joined the orchestra in the Polovetsian Dances from Prince Igor. Here again the orchestra—the percussion section in particular—provided a warming and enjoyable interpretation, marked as before by the enthusiastic interest of all concerned. The choir, although correct, lacked something of this vitality. In places even a vague discomfort was created by the apparent unwillingness of the tenor voices to sound the higher notes.

For the evening as a whole I would say, "Well done!" The Franck was certainly imperfect, but still impressive and encouraging, with the latter part of the performance stimulating and generally proficient. We may well commend the Students' Administrative Council for its almost magnitudinous effort in providing students of this university with a rewarding opportunity to participate in so fine an undertaking.

seems to me, after two-and-a-half years of university experience that any competent tutor can draw forth enough opinion from these mute bumps. Sometimes this is like drawing wisdom teeth, and demands expert probing. But if a group tutor is not able to completely probe, he has no business to be presiding in group discussions.

Other aspects of tutorial groups often found wanting are more physical. For instance, a table surrounded by chairs instead of a straightforward classroom would held the informality. And ash trays on that table would also give a sense of freedom that is so rare. There are many tutorials where tables are used, and many where smoking is permitted (quite often in calculated violation of non-smoking regulations) but these conditions are not universal.

The answer to these minor complaints is of course that if a competent tutor leads the discussion, physical difficulties can be forgotten. Here at Toronto, we have many competent tutors. But the responsibility for competence rests with all those who lead tutorial groups.

Against IUS

Editor, The Varsity:

Congratulations on Thursday's editorial. It was informative and thoughtful, and it took an honest stand on a controversial issue. And now, let the controversy begin.

You think that NFCUS should affiliate with IUS, and your argument seems to run like this: "There can be no peace in the world unless we can exchange ideas; an international union of students would facilitate this exchange; since IUS is the nearest thing to such a union, we should affiliate in the hope that there we can present our view." That first premise, like most of the sweeping generalities with which you mess up your editorial page, is a little too foggy and slushy for me to perceive its rationale. But it has a nice warm glow about it, so I'll concede the point to you. The second statement is also safe enough; but let's consider that last idea.

If the International Union of Students were all that its name implies, I would support your stand. But like so many other international organizations, it too seems to have been "nationalized" by Communists whose loyalty is to Russia. Do you know of any Communist-dom-

Einstein Theory

From the standpoint of Science the second half of the twentieth century could not have had a more auspicious introduction than the announcement of a new theory by Albert Einstein. The man who set the pattern and direction for the scientific thought of the past fifty years with his "special and general theories of relativity", theories which culminated in the application of atomic energy, has again developed a theory which will in a similar fashion affect scientific thought for decades to come.

The new theory which he calls "a generalized theory of gravitation" attempts to correlate the physical laws governing the motion of the heavenly bodies with the laws governing the motion of the elementary particles constituting the atom. The electromagnetic forces which govern the motion of atoms have their counterparts in the gravitational forces affecting the motion of the planets and the "generalized theory of gravitation" attempts to bring both these systems of forces together as the manifestation of one all-embracing cosmic entity.

Although the practical applications and experimental verifications of this theory may not be achieved for many years (twenty years elapsed before Einstein's mathematical formulae could be transformed into the physical reality of the atomic pile), it is the philosophic implications of the concept that inspire the imagination. For here we have the infinitely small world of the atom connected to the infinitely large world of the planets and the realization that we may have an existence in relation to some greater pattern, similar in magnitude to the role of the atom in our world; that we may only be a point on a line which extends to infinity in both directions. Perhaps the humility which is so sadly lacking in the mind of man today will be inspired by the work of Albert Einstein, one of the humblest of men.

Meaning of Equations

An intriguing part of the announcement of the new theory in the popular press was the publication of the mathematical equations involved. Suspecting that their apparent innocuousness was an example of the mathematician's customary symbolic simplifications carried to their ultimate degree, I turned to Professor Leopold Infeld for an explanation.

"A mathematical interpretation of even one of the terms would involve pages of formulae," stated Prof. Infeld. "The form of the equation is similar to that developed for gravitation. Where the original equations involve ten unknown functions, the present equations include sixteen, the additional six referring to the electromagnetic components. Our printer tells us that it is difficult to reproduce the equations here, but so much publicity has been given to them in the press that I am sure they are familiar to everyone. I will therefore refer to them by their characteristic letter. The term 'g' characterizes the electromagnetic field. 'Gamma' gives the relationship between the various points in space, and 'R' indicates the manner in which our universe is curved."

The latter term refers to the concept developed in the theory of relativity in which space and time were considered as one space-time continuum, a system of co-ordinates, the lines of which are curved and therefore infinite (e.g. a circle is a line of infinite length).

According to Professor Infeld, who was associated with Professor Einstein at Princeton University in research on the nature of gravitational waves, the present theory is the result of more than thirty years of effort which began immediately following the work on relativity. The development of the theory took many forms but the last step is contained in a number of papers which will be published in February by the Princeton University Press. Because of Professor Infeld's long association with the noted scientist, the University of Toronto will have the privilege of publishing one of the two ke papers some time this month in the Canadian Journal of Mathematics printed by the University of Toronto Press.

On February 20, Professor Infeld's fifth book will appear, the purpose of which will be to analyze the role of Einstein in modern world culture. Recalling the success of books such as "Quest" and "Whom the Gods Love", Professor Infeld's latest book will be eagerly awaited.

inated "international" organization that will give a non-Communist a sympathetic or even a just hearing? Do you think the Communists would allow any procedure that would constitute a risk to their control? A NFCUS delegate would look as impressive in their midst as a Knox freshman in the midst of a tribe of atheistic cannibals.

We have nothing in common with the things IUS represents; for it is no longer concerned with universities and university students. It is just another medium of Communist propaganda. Those essential features of a university, which you have so often discussed ad nauseum —the free exchange of ideas, the "clash of mind on mind"—no longer exist at the schools it purports to represent. If we were to affiliate, the prestige hereby gained by IUS would be at the expense of the prestige of NFCUS; for it would only be aiding and abetting the power and spread of Communism.

Sit Tight, My Foot!

Editor, The Varsity:

You are quite right when you say it is an old question which has been tossed into the laps of Canadian students at the beginning of this new year. And like all old questions this one has an answer — not necessarily a formally written one, but rather a practical, unwritten one.

The answer is this: It is too late for that sort of collaboration. It is too late to walk into a Communist assembly, stand in the minority section and hope we will be called upon to voice an opinion.

We missed the boat several years back. The only course we have is to keep our present democratic-style union and to make it stronger. We can best show the students of IUS how the democratic students work by having a student's union in which students are vitally interested. And how can we make students interested in our union (NFCUS)? By giving NFCUS the prod and getting some action.

For example there has been a lot of noise about getting a workable students' textbook reduction. But has there been any actual action? The last meeting of the SAC tabled a report that we are at present sitting tight on the matter of refusal of certain publisher to furnish us with texts.

Sitting tight, my foot! Come next fall, when we really buy textbooks and see how many of the students will be able to resist buying the texts elsewhere and at full prices. Why can't NFCUS produce a scheme such as central warehouse purchasing of texts for all Canada? Why can't NFCUS get some new action and stop resting on the laurels of the exchange scholarship system which was brought in before any of the present delegates were elected?

Do you get my point? I spoke earlier of standing in the minority section, awaiting the call. Well, we can't wait very long unless we have a good strong student body behind us. And the way things are now, most students would hardly be bothered reading the texts of the communiques, never mind supporting, encouraging and helping our embassy in a "foreign" organization.

Toronto Helps Bunnies Boost Time For Fun

The building of Toronto's new rabbit transit system is going ahead according to plan, Street Commissioner Harold Broadlay announced last night. Broadlay was found after a long search in the back of one of the Street Department's nice new white trucks that never seem to be around when the snow starts flying. He was very willing to talk about the rabbit transit system anything to take the public's mind from the rain, you know.

The system is designed to take all the rabbits in the congested downtown area up to the northern limits of the city where they rightly belong. The rabbits work downtown all day and are eager to get to their little homes so the city is spending some fifty million dollars to see that they get home about 20 minutes sooner than they do at the present moment. If you put all those 20 minutes together look at all the time that will accrue, Broadlay pointed out.

And what will the rabbits do with all that extra time? he asked, innocently.

Movie Review

Saints And Sinners Devils In The Flesh

Hats off to the sister Cinemas for starting the New Year off right with two of the best movies we've seen for quite a while.

Up at the International they are showing a refreshing film about how a group of Irish villagers are tricked into exposing their follies and sins, as a result of which, coincidentally, the hero wins the girl. Besides originality in the plot, written by Irish playwright Paul Vincent Carroll, the picture has good dialogue, studded with Irish humour and wit, and delivered without phony brogues by real Irish players from the Dublin Abbey Theatre. Portraying as wonderful a collection of characters as ever hit the screen, these people succeed in making you forget they're in front of a camera by persisting in acting natural. With their aid Leslie Arliss, by concentrated but straightforward direction, few camera tricks, and with excellent photographic feeling for atmosphere both indoors and out, has imbued the film with a warm humanity matched recently only in Italy's "Four Steps In the Clouds."

"Saints" abounds with enjoyable scenes. Some we liked especially are the relay broadcast of the Irish National by an ear-phoned telephone operator to the excited crowd below her window, interrupted periodically by the exasperating buzzing of the switchboard, the cagy canon's sermon to those who bet on it, and a scene in which English Christine Norden, a tall blonde with a rather unimpeccable past but personable warmth and candor, sings "He's My Guy" low into the ear of Kieron Moore, dancing him a la juke-box under the hurt eyes of his sweet but weak and proud girl-friend, Sheila Manahan. Outstanding among the top supporting cast are Michael Dolan as the Canon, Maire O'Neill as toothless and mischievous Ma Murnaghan the seer, Noel Purcell as the innkeeper, and Liam Redmond as a drunken lawyer.

Faults! Unfortunately, there are a few. A crucial storm and, later, a fire pop up a little too conveniently for the plot, and it seemed a bit thick that during the whole town's final penitent barefoot trek up the mountain only the two healthy young women should stumble and have to be carried. But, then, you can't have everything.

The Towne offers "Devil In the Flesh." So much has been said about this one by now, you probably know it is the "frank and understanding contemplation of a tragic love affair, during the first world war, between a seventeen year old French schoolboy and a soldier's wife, older but still young." And when they say "frank" they mean it. Based on a brilliant autobiographical novel by Raymond Radiguet, who died at the age of twenty, the picture tends to emphasize the romance itself where the book leaned more toward its moral implications. Nevertheless, in the inevitable comparisons with the Swedish "Tormen" (which unfortunately suffered over here at the hands of the censors), this movie comes out far on top. In fact, remembering the illustrious adjectives showered on previous foreign films, we are surprised at the critics' restraint in describing "Devil," which excels even "Symphonie Pastorale," in our opinion the best one shown in Toronto up to this time.

A masterful two hour screen translation of the novel has been fashioned by Jean Aurenche and Pierre Bost, the team who did "Symphonie," containing superb dialogue and characterization, and this in turn has been directed with loving care and great sensitivity by Claude Autant Lara. The result rightfully won "best picture" awards at both the Brussels and Milan film festivals.

Photography is good, adding dramatic effect without distracting audience attention by flashy technique. Rene Cloeres' sympathetic score provides an intensely beautiful theme which may return to you bringing a nostalgia for the events as heavy as if you had actually lived them. Also worthy of praise are Elliot ("Last Time I Saw Paris") Paul's English titles which adequately summarize the content of the French without losing their tone and thus allowing the audience time to watch the picture.

France's No. 1 box office draw, Gerard Philipe is so good in the leading role that he overcomes the disadvantage of being obviously older than seventeen, convincing you that he really is the precocious François, sensitive, imaginative, self-willed, isolated in his own family, and too big for his britches, becoming involved in an affair, the responsibilities of which he, at any rate, is not capable of fulfilling. For tahis he won the "best acting" award at the Brussels Film Festival.

Micheline Presle, also a leading French film star, commands the role of the older woman, bringing beauty and compassion to the love-starved Marthe, sophisticated but humble in her love for the boy, aware of its implications but determined to have this love regardless of its cost. Miss Presle, incidentally, is now in Hollywood making a film of a Hemingway story, presumably "The Snows of Kilamanjaro."

Jean Debucourt and Denise Grey as the boy's father and girl's mother, respectively, lend outstanding support.

Although the ending is tragic, this movie is not a tear-jerker. It is a realistic and rugged emotional experience. It is a great motion picture.

D. Davidson.

The Chiltern Hundreds

In the present crop of English comedy-movies "The Chiltern Hundreds" playing at the Odeon-Hyland has by far the most satisfying humour. It reminds you of the quiet and at times rambling quality of "Quiet Weekend." It also has the same effortlessness.

The opening shows an army base in Brussels towards the end of the war. A junior subaltern is dashing away to London on leave to meet his American fiancee. However, he misses the lorry to the train and since he just can't miss this train he steals the Colonel's staff car. Unfortunately, he collides with the Colonel's jeep with the Colonel driving through the camp gate. No leave for Lord Pym!

A friend then suggests that Pym should say he will run as Service Candidate for Parliament since there is a by-election in his home constituency. This idea sounds great because he can thus get immediate leave. And so away to England, tra-la, tra-laa.

Meanwhile his family has been living an unperturbed life in Blenheim Castle which is sullied only by the fact that there are only two servants on the entire estate and no game warden. The bane of Lord Lister's life is the rabbit problem. Accordingly he carries a gun with him wherever he goes and the movie is interspersed with loud explosions and subsequent calls for "Beecham" who is the butler and the real hero of the story. His part is played by Cecil Parker, a truly magnificent actor. The spirit of the breakfast awaiting them at in the soul of Beecham.

Anyway, Lord Pym finally arrives at East Milford station and to his horror discovers that a band and committee is there to welcome him as the Conservative candidate. His father tells him to ignore them, "Probably only the Salvation Army."

From here on the story unwinds like a ball of snarled yarn. A great ribbing is given to both the Labour and Conservative parties. Lord Pym almost marries the kitchen-maid, Bessie Sykes, and Lord Lister placidly shoots rabbits. There is only one thing which puzzles me and that is just what is the Chiltern Hundreds? Lots of vague references but no explanation.

Pierre de Rambouillet.

House on Monday. It is expected that the farm will be open for members next week-end.

Mr. Perry estimates the cost per person for a week-end at the farm to be about five dollars, including transportation, meals and lodgings.

One of the good things about the farm week-ends will be the fact that you can bring your girl friend along, as there will be accommodations for women as well as men.

If It Snows, You Can Ski

The farm itself is situated nine miles from Brampton in the heart of the famous Caledon skiing district (snow is expected this week-end) just three miles from the forks of the Credit. Other activities include hiking, camping, swimming (in season), skating, barn-dancing, hay rides, etc., etc.

The latest additions to the farm are in the form of two brand new bunkhouses, tastefully hidden in clumps of trees, from the door of each of which one can look over 35 miles of rolling hills to the spires of Toronto (on a clear day, with a west wind).

Institute's Guest Speaker Advocates World Calendar

"The World Calendar" is the subject of an open address to be delivered before the members and friends of the Royal Canadian Institute on Saturday evening, January seventh, at 8:15 in Convocation Hall. The speaker, Miss Elizabeth Achelis, is president of the World Calendar Association, Inc., in New York.

Miss Achelis, daughter of a millionaire rubber manufacturer, has been interested in a simplified calendar since 1929 and has spent half her life and $500,000 for its adoption. She bases her campaign on an article she once read in a Sunday newspaper explaining a twelve-month calendar created by an Italian priest in the 19th century, which would standardize the days, weeks and months throughout the year.

The plan provides for the division of the year into four quarters, with 91 days in each. The first month of each quarter, January, April, July and October, would always have 31 days, and the remaining two months 30 days each. Since each quarter would begin on a Sunday and end on a Saturday, all dates would inevitably fall on the same day.

The World Calendar Association is a non-profit organization, and is run by its president, Miss Achelis.

Montreal Campus Paper Leaves Page Blank In Special Protest

Montreal, Jan. 5—(CUP) — The Georgian, student newspaper at Sir George Williams College, appeared the week of Dec. 8 with one of its eight pages blank. The blank page had been destined to carry a repeat of the special one page issue put out last week protesting a threat by the Engineering Faculty Students Society to withdraw financial support for the paper unless its managing board "explained" the reason for holding a paper party the same night as a college dance.

The editor-in-chief was told by the Students Council that he could not run the same material again. He therefore chose to run a blank page.

Other prize winners: D. I. Gove, the Charles E. Frosst Sscholarship; R. O. Antoni, the William Edward Corlett Memorial Scholarship; W. D. Friend, and D. A. Smith, the Medical Alumni Scholarships; and F. J. Kelly, the W. C. Millar Memorial Scholarship.

suits as well as some positions with the Department of Immigration checking on people who wish to enter Canada. Home Economics students are also being requested. These summer positions range from $110 for first year students to $185 for graduates or people with previous experience.

Wide Variety of Jobs

For potential graduates there is a wide variety of permanent positions being offered in all parts of the country. Opportunity seems to be greatest in the agricultural lines such as Agricultural Entomology, Micro-Analysis for Botany graduates, Animal Pathology for people with an M.A. in Physiology, Horticulture for Food Technology graduates and Botany and Plant Pathology for those with M.A.'s in Botany who prefer labratory research.

In addition there are opportunities in Meteorology for graduates in Maths and Physics and Physical Engineering. Forest Entomology, Chemistry research and Economics graduates with Master's degrees are also being called for, as are graduates interested in administrative assistant positions.

These careers offer salaries from $2,000 to over $4,000. Applications which are available at the post offices for both summer and permanent jobs must be filed with the Civil Service Commission in Ottawa before January 16, so that arrangements for competitive examinations may be made.

Basketball Blues Score Smashing Upse

Varsity Down Tri-Bells In Rousing Exhibition Luck, Gray, Wigle Star

By JOHN KENNEDY

The Varsity Blues basketball team playing really heads up ball took on the Tri-Bells of the city senior league last night at Hart House and handed the hitherto undefeated senior league leaders a sparkling 56-50 set-back. A scorching pace prevailed throughout the rugged contest that had the Blues' avid supporters bug-eyed with wonder that their team should keep pace with the Tri-Bells outfit that has been called a "packed" team by the Toronto basketball world. The game was far and away the best showing made by the team this year with Ted Luck, Doug Carruthers and Doug Wigle emerging as potential high scoring material.

Wigle in Hero Role

Tri-Bells took the lead through most of the game but never headed the Blues by more than four or five points. Doug Wigle was the hero of the contest as he sank a foul just prior to the final horn, that forced the game into overtime. In the fourth quarter the Blues had been leading by one point with time running out but Max Grossman drew two fouls and calmly sank both to apparently win the game for the Bell Boys. At this point Wigle took a hand and gave the Blues their chance to win in overtime. Regulation time ended with the score 45-45.

Ex-Blue Shines

Tri-Bells line of Grossman, Litvack and Glen Pettinger thrilled the large crowd in the first quarter with their lightning attacks and sensational ball-handling. Pettinger was a standout early in the game but faded in the stretch. Grossman, the old vet, showed that he is probably the best hook shot artist in the city, as he sank 17 points with his deliberate shots. He was the highest scorer of the game.

McManus Backbone

Jack McManus played a tremendous game, scintillating with his clever ball-handling and accurate set shots. He is the backbone and steadiest player on the team. Jack Gray played well also and sank ten points, one behind McManus.

Mere Stars

Lanky Ted Luck played the best game we have ever seen him play in a Blue uniform. His all round play was a big factor in the win. Doug Carruthers, a sophomore who played only fair ball with the juniors last year, emerged as a possible big gun as he sank most of the shots offered him and was brilliant defensively.

Luck, Gray and McManus were the pay-off boys who snared the overtime baskets that cinched the game.

Line-ups — Varsity — Gray 10, McManus 11, Huycke 4, Gibbs 4, Luck 9, Wigle 9, Carruthers 4, Bell 5, Total—56.

Tri-Bells—Madonik 3, Litvack 10, Tenenbaum 3, Grossman 17, Cooper 9, Pettinger 8, Stulberg, Terler, Total—50.

Faculty Teams Really After Reed Cup

Latest results in the Reed Trophy intramural point competition show one of the most hotly contested races in recent years. With record turnouts for nearly every athletic event, the different faculties are showing that they are really interested in going after this important trophy. UC who headed the list for most of the fall term have been supplanted by SPS who picked up a lot of their points in the individual contests, (golf, tennis, track etc.) Trinity and Forestry are right up there with the leaders.

The number of teams entered in the basket ball leagues is phenomenal—123 teams, which probably represents close to 1500 athletes. The rest of the sports are the same, literally everyone is getting into the act. Complete standings follow: SPS 6152, UC 5996.5, Trin. 5992.5, For. 5438, Vic 5129.5 Meds 47..5, SMC 4502.5, Emm. 4431, Wyc. 4012, Arch. 2728.5, Knox 2723, Inst. Mgt. 2716, Dents 2559, Pharm. 2394, Law 1642, Music 352.

Hockey Sked Starts Again; SMC Win Two

In the first day of post-holiday intramural hockey two St. Mike's teams made strong showings. The "A" team downed Senior Vic 3-1 while the "B" entry overpowered Meds thirds to the tune of 5-3. St. Mike's "A" are now leading their group.

2 For MacNamara

The first game was a thriller all the way and was always in doubt. MacNamara was the big gun in the St. Mike's "A" attack with two nicely executed counters while Robertson added the remainder. Johnny Rahme was the lone player to reply for Senior Vic.

Share Goals

The St. Mike's "B" team, playing fine pattern hockey spread the goal getting glory around evenly with five players each getting a score in their 5-3 conquest of Meds. thirds. Callahan, Cameron, Foy, McIntyre and Coles all turned lamplighters. For the Doctors Jones, Ehrlick and Kerr all tallied.

Pre-Meds Win

The Doctors picked up in the 4 p.m. contest beating Junior UC 5-3. This however was the Pre-Med team. McDougall with two and Ehrlick, Morris and Keenleyside accounted for the Pre-Medsmen's goals. Ian Macdonald carried all the scoring load for the Red and Whiters nudging home three tallies.

Upper Gym, Hart House—(Staff) Yesterday afternoon the UC Barons' basketbal team succumbed to Vic Sevenths by a 57-14 score. The game was not as close as the score would indicate. For the winners, Prittle, Eaton and Williams were the big cogs scoring 17, 15, and 11 respectively.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

We don't know what the reason for it is, but there have been extremely few Negroes or Indians playing in senior league hockey, and the NHL has been completely devoid of non-white races. It seems odd that colored boys can do so well in other sports and yet can't crash the hockey big-time. There have been many notable Indian athletes in many sports . . . Tom Longboat, Jim Thorpe, the Carlyle Indians, but none in hockey.

We doubt that it is because they can't play, more probably it is because they live so far away from senior leagues that they can't show themselves to hockey scouts.

Which reminds us of a story. Away back in the early thirties (when both you and I were in knee pants) we saw a game of hockey played between a team of Indians and a team of whites. There was a small town up around North Battleford, Saskatchewan, that had one of the finest hockey teams in the north of the province. They had four members of the Canadian Olympic team playing for them, and they had beaten all the teams within travelling distance handily. With the winter nowhere near over (this was in March), they decided to challenge the Saskatoon city champions.

In preparation for the big game, they practiced four hours a day for three weeks, and in addition to this, acquired two forwards from the previous year's Western Canada champs. They looked good, but the coach wanted to try them against competition before the big game. He tried to get some of the local teams, but they wouldn't accept, so in desperation he invited the Battleford Indian Reservation to send their team. He was told that they had no team, and even if they did have, it was too far to go (40 miles). Fortunately the coach mentioned that their train fare would be paid and they would get three dollars a man besides. His offer was immediately accepted.

The day of the game, nine hard looking Indians tramped into town and made for the rink. When they got to the rink manager, they asked him if they could have a place where they could sleep for a while before the game because they were a little tired. They had received their train tickets, but had immediately cashed them at the station and walked the forty-odd miles!

At game time the arena was filled with villagers waiting to see their team make mincemeat of the opposition. The Indians started putting on their equipment—and what equipment! None of their skates were worth more than fifty cents, and one even had wooden blades with filed wire runners. Their sticks were carved out of hickory branches, and their pads consisted of discarded copies of "LIFE." When they skated out on the ice the crowd had a good laugh They were about the most nondescript team ever assembled.

But from the opening whistle is was evident that those nine were no laughing matter when it came to playing hockey! They just skated rings around that well-drilled senior club. Most of the town supporters left at the end of the second period, and the game was called in the third when the Indians were leading 23-0.

Phizz-Ed Win 38-19 Over Buttery Boys

By JOHN LEE

The action on the basketball front continued hot and heavy yesterday with the players trying desperately to get back into the top-notch shape that they enjoyed prior to the late debauche—vacations.

Victoria Defaults

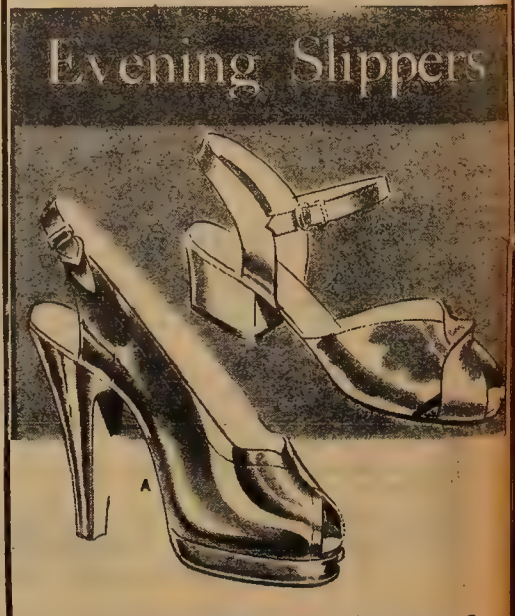
Only one major league game was played although two were skedded. Victoria–fourths defaulted and the game thus went to UC fourths. Miss Boyd of the intramural office is inclined to take a broad view of teams missing games this week because some teams were not aware that they were to play due to the fact that there was no means to publicize the events. Vic will be allowed a re-play provided they can dream up an adequate excuse. Get at it fellows.

PHE Wins

In the 1 p.m. engagement PHE I drubbed the Trinity A entry by a score of 38-19. The Phizz-Edders won the championship last year when they defeated the St. Mike's team in a thrilling series, but the have only a few players back from year from that team.

Strom Hot

PHE surged ahead in the second period of the game behind the deadly set-shot work of Bob Strom and footballer Murray Hogg low. The Muscle-Men exhibited once again the superior conditioning for which they are so justly famed and were able to wear down the hard working Buttery Boys.



Boxer-Hoopster

Tiny Tim Turner of boxing repute, was the stalwart of the Trinity attack but he lacked a certain 'je ne sais quoi' around the basket. Gord Montizambert, an Institutional Management re-habilitee was another star in the crumpet machine hurling in four points. The victory made it one in a row for PHE.

Line-ups—PHE—Keegan 3, Strom 13, Heath 6, Gayman 2, Hadlow Furlong, Housley 5, Carr, West total 38.

Trinity—Hall, Grant, Fisk Turn 6, Scrivener 4, Corbett, Montizambert 4, Keen 4, Hainsworth Rogers, Total 19.

Frustration, Failure, Defeat, Confusion, In NFCUS-IUS Policy

(This is the first part of a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations of the International Union of Students with the National Federation of Canadian University Students. The second article in the series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

On December 20, 1948, a tired Canadian student sat down and wrote a letter to Robert S. Harwood, then president of The National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS). His letter formed the preface to his formal report on the Council meeting of The International Union of Students (IUS) which had been held in Paris in September of that year.

"Frustration, Failure . . ."

Part of the letter reads:

"On a whole it is a story of frustration, failure, defeat, regret, humiliation and confusion — but there is still a hope of NFCUS benefitting from experience."

Grant Livingstone of The University of British Columbia, who had led the Canadian delegation seeking affiliation between NFCUS and IUS at the Paris Council meeting of the IUS in the summer of 1948, summed up in those few words the end of which NFCUS policy had brought Canadian students trying to enter an "international" student group. His history, and the story of that summer, are interesting, because they mark the climax to three years of Canadian student fumbling in an international arena which was from the first hostile to their traditions and heritage, which few "average" Canadian students knew anything about and weren't really very interested in, and in which they were unable to move surely and confidently towards a realization of their goals.

Fourteen Unions Not In IUS

Livingstone comes relatively late in the history of the NFCUS-IUS relationship. Before him there were many of Canada's most able student leaders, almost all of whom saw in the international union an opportunity for Canadian students to get out into the world and support their ideas and ideals, even though they might have to fight a long, hard battle to make their relatively small voice heard.

The story of Canada's NFCUS and the IUS is, with variations, the story of almost every union of students in democratic countries today. Denmark, Sweden, Belgium, The Netherlands, Australia, New Zealand, The United States, Switzerland,—there are fourteen altogether—are not at present members of the IUS. They are not members because they refused, for one reason and another, to stay in an organization controlled and dominated by communists. The weakness of their position lies in the fact that they have not been able to band together in a common defence of their ideas and ideals. The fourteen, along with Great Britain and Scotland, presently members of IUS, represent more than two million students. No "international" union which does not have them as members is truly "international."

The story of IUS, as far as Canadian students are concerned, is certainly one of "frustration, failure, defeat, regret, humiliation and confusion," although some of the terms are more applicable than others.

IUS was born, in the words of the Preamble to its Constitution, "—to build again a better world, desirous of liberty, peace and progress,—to take that place in the vanguard of the youth of the world which we have held so often before in the course of history." Its purpose: ". . . to defend the rights and interests of students, to promote improvement in their welfare and standard of education, and to prepare them for their tasks as democratic citizens."

The idea of IUS was first acted upon in London, England, in the summer of 1945, following the World Youth Conference held there that year. Delegates from 37 countries met, and formed an International Preparatory Committee (IPC) to organize a representative student congress to be held the following summer in Prague, and to present to that congress a draft constitution which would, when adopted and ratified by member student unions, bring the proposed international student union into being.

The IPC did its work, and organized the World Student Congress in Prague in August, 1946. Representatives from more than thirty countries came and over the two week period that the Congress lasted adopted a constitution, and laid the basis for the future work of the new international union, called The International Union of Students.

Jazz, Chess, Puppets Feature Big Festival By English Students

London, England—(Exchange)—Jan. 9—Plays, concerts, art and photo exhibitions will be the main features of the annual National Union of Students Arts Festival in England this year. The festival, which is open to all British college and university students, brings the best student work before the general public.

This year plans are being made to include student films, folk dancing, puppet shows, chess tournaments and jazz sessions in the programme.

NFCUS Service Only Way To Get Tickets To Europe

By DON STEVENSON

Although most of them probably do not know it, students who intend to travel abroad this summer will need the help to get steamship tickets now being offered to them by the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Hard To Get

A student on the University of Toronto campus, Warren Wilkings, III Trinity, is working as representative of N.F.C.U.S. to get Canadian university students' hard-to-get tickets for ship travel abroad this summer. "It is too late now for private individuals to get passage abroad during the heavily-travelled summer months," Wilkings said in an interview last week. "The trouble is that most students do not realize this."

Many students wait until a few weeks before summer holidays before attempting to book passage abroad, Wilkings explained. "But even now it is too late," he said. "Your only hope for tickets now would be if you happened to get a last-minute cancellation."

Must Know How Many

To meet this situation, Wilkings has been negotiating with W. P. Neils, C.N.R. City Passenger Agent for Toronto, who has previously got tickets for students. Neils hopes to get 100 tickets, but must have a fairly accurate estimate of the number of students wishing to buy them.

Wilkings therefore wants students on this campus interested in travelling abroad by ship this summer to leave their names at the S.A.C. office in Hart House. "The applications must be in this week, or it will probably be too late," Wilkings added.

No Obligation

He made it plain no student making application would put himself under any absolute obligation to buy a ticket.

Not only University of Toronto students will get a chance at these scarce ducats. Since Wilkings is working for N.F.C.U.S., students in every university affiliated with N.F.C.U.S. may apply for the tickets. Tickets acquired will be sold to students on a first-come, first-served basis. Wilkings says the average price (emphasize average) will be $150 one way.

One reason why passages abroad are hard to get this summer is that pilgrims will be going to Rome this year for the Holy Year.

American Source

Since the tickets Neils will be able to supply will probably be far from enough to supply Canadian students' needs, Wilkings and N.F.C.U.

Shaving Mug

For those without imagination, the only thing you can get out of the automatic Coke Machine is a paper cupful of Coke and some change. As reported in Herb Wood's story below, one Rocky Martino, shown performing his morning toilette, found another use for the Coke robot. It all started with a Christmas gift straight razor. Read about it yourself.

Holwood Too Hot

Razor Fiend Finds Haven In Hart House Sanctuary

By HERB WOOD

Please folks, we're not trying to show how tough the housing situation really is. So don't send in those kind letters and telephone calls offering a room and a place to shave.

This fellow above is not lacking in that particular respect . . . It's something more serious than that. Now don't jump to conclusions. He's perfectly harmless and is really a fine type. So if you see him, or catch him shaving in a public comfort station, just ignore him.

Straight Razor Best

In the above completely unposed picture, do you recognize anything strange, er . . . that is, outside of the gentleman? Well notice that razor, it's straight, but more than that, he's holding it upside down!

Now you might say that a little fatherly advice on the side would put both him and the razor right side up. But it's not as easy as all that. No sirree, not by a long shot.

Rocky got that razor for Christmas. Of course he's been shaving long before that but with the conventional instrument. Like a lot of Christmas gifts that men receive, it looked like a white elephant. But someone whispered that a straight razor does a wonderful job, and leaves the skin as soft as, well, as soft as a baby's face. That did it.

Shaving Dangerous

Two days after Christmas, Rocky tried the razor. Now it should be explained here, that Rocky lives in Holwood House with lots and lots of friends. This situation ordinarily is very nice and chummy, but since Rocky started shaving, and using that knife, the morning hour of ablutions has become chaotic.

The first morning caught the rest of the boys completely by surprise. Just picture the situation. Nobody suspects a thing. The rest of the boys are in various stages of wakefulness, cleanliness, and beardlessness. Enter Rocky, with knife.

"Hey, what do you think you're doing? My God Rocky, put that thing away, I'm going to pay you back that buck!"

"Oh, don't be nuts, I'm going to shave, not cut your throat."

"Hey fellows, get a load of this, Rocky's shaving with a butcher knife!" hollered Bruce Macdonald, II UC.

Hart House Sanctuary

"Ah scram fellows, you make me nervous," said Rocky.

"We make you nervous! What do you think we're doing, softening our cuticles?" they chorused. "Put that thing away, you're dangerous."

"Ouch! There you've made me cut myself. What's the matter with you guys, haven't you ever seen a guy shaving before?"

"That's done it fellows. We don't want the joint, er, the house all

Dr. William Goldie Meds Staff Member Died On Sunday

Dr. William A. Goldie, 76, of the University of Toronto Medical Faculty, died in Toronto early Sunday morning. Dr. Goldie taught students in the School of Medicine for 31 years.

Two of Dr. Goldie's patients were Sir John and Lady Eaton. In 1919 Sir John and Lady Eaton endowed the chair of medicine at the University of Toronto. In actual fact, Sir John turned the money over to Dr. Goldie, "Here's the money, you do what you like with it."

Dr. Goldie was born at Ayr, Ontario, in 1873. From Galt Collegiate Institute he went to the University of Toronto where he graduated in medicine in 1896. He worked with the University Pathology and Bacteriology Departments for some time. Later he joined the University Department of Medicine, and the staffs of the Toronto General Hospital and the Hospital for Sick Children.

Dr. Goldie retired from the University of Toronto staff in 1929—at the age of 56. He continued to practise until 1947.

The cause of his death was cancer of the lung which was discovered when he attended a community X-ray clinic in the city.

AVR Choral Productions Biggest Ever Planned Here

The All-Varsity Revue Choral Production will be the largest (and hopes to be the best) ever staged on the campus. The Choral Numbers have been designed as an integrated part of the show, with especial attention to staging. At least 35 students, male and female, representing all types of voices will be in the group.

A Newsboys' Production that takes place in the court of a Newspaper King, and "Hart House Towers" are two of the five proposed numbers. Never has choral production been on such a large scale, nor so enthusiastically planned as this year.

Director Needs Singers

Singers of all ranges, interested in choral work, are urged to try out. "As long as we get the turnout, Varsity will see something of a real choral production," says director Ward McAdam. Casting for choral work will be held at the Women's Union today, 3-6 p.m.

Bill Kirby and Ted Whiteside have supervised the building of new sets and backdrops for every number in the show (from 16 to 20 sets in all), during the holidays. The many sets are now being painted.

Norma Pankhurst, in charge of dancing, has drawn up a schedule for rehearsals which are being held all this week. One number, enticingly called the "D. T.'s", promises to be a masterpiece.

Suggested Resolutions

There are four projects either started or continued by the SAC in the last school term that deserve continued action in this, the new year and the new term.

In order of importance these are, the Students' Memorial Union, the SAC-NFCUS book investigation, the raising of the SAC fee and the Student-Caput Liaison Committee.

The Memorial Union:

Number one and most important of the jobs facing the SAC in 1950 is the task of putting on paper a plan for the financing of the Union.

At the end of the 1948-49 session the then chairman of the Union committee, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, said the plans for the Union had gone as far as possible without definite financial support.

The most immediate need, then, for the present committee is to formulate a plan by which the million dollars needed for the Union may be raised. As we have said before and repeat below, we believe the most satisfactory way of doing this is by compulsory student subscription through increased SAC fees. When the committee decides upon a workable plan for the financing the Union, the last big step before final approval by the Board of Governors will have been taken.

NFCUS Text-Book Investigations:

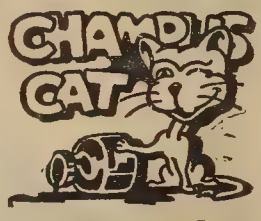
The second problem that should be settled soon is the question of text-book prices. While NFCUS was carrying on an investigation along these lines last term, the problem came to a head on the Toronto campus when three publishers refused to sell texts to the University of Toronto Press for as long as the Press continued its policy of 10 percent discount on all text-books.

As a letter to The Varsity pointed out last Friday, unless some workable scheme is brought forward soon students will be purchasing books next fall at full list price. The reduction this year has meant a sizeable saving to most students. It would be unfortunate if the saving were not continued next year.

SAC Fees:

The third project that should be settled before this year's SAC leaves office is the necessary increase in the SAC fees. During last term it became increasingly evident that the SAC and the entire structure of student-operated activities was being hampered by the absurdly low fee contributed toward these activities.

The importance of this task is hardly over-emphasized. Harking back to what was said above, the increased fee could certainly be the means to an early attainment of the Students' Union.



It would be a serious loss to student life if no definite action were taken this term to bring the SAC fee into line with the services rendered.

SAC-Caput Liaison Committee:

We have discussed this committee previously at length. There is no need to repeat here what has been said except to add that this new term is the time to prove to the students that such a committee can operate efficiently.

For several years The Varsity has insisted that a student body without some say in the administration of its own affairs was something less than democratically governed. This new liaison committee has the chance to show that it is the first step along the road to more responsible student government.

Comment On The Fair

I came to Varsity to see
All the things they promised me,
A wealth of knowledge to be sure,
A social heaven or a cure
(For lonesome nights behind a book)
So to a desk my notes I took
And thereupon I did write
To show the facts in their true light.
It seems to me the girls at College
Didn't come to gain some knowledge
But to get themselves a man
Any kind of fancy Dan
Who takes them out to Balls and Dances
Where lack of knowledge himself enhances
With these girls who want a guy
So they can later rock-a-bye
Or drop him quickly like a bet
For someone who is richer yet
(Then drop him too when they get bored
With riding in a '40 Ford)
For someone who can stir their passions
With the latest in men's fashions.
So in conclusion I confess
College women are a mess.

Tigger, Phm. B.

ADVICE TO THE FAIR

Our advice to girls who want admirers and husbands is to entertain young men in their homes as often as they can and to feed them as well as they can. If a young man is not well-to-do (and very few young men are) he cannot afford the company of a girl who expects him to spend a large part of his weekly pay on her, nor can he afford to marry a girl with extravagant ideas. And let the girl reflect upon this: the young man may eventually assume responsibility for feeding, clothing, housing and entertaining her for a period which may extend for 60 years. While he is courting her he deserves as many free meals and as much consideration of every kind as she can give him.—The Peterborough Examiner.

New Calendar Divides Year Into Quarters

A new "World Calendar" which stands a good chance of being put into practice on a worldwide scale in 1956 was outlined by Miss Elisabeth Achelis, President of the World Calendar Association, before the Royal Canadian Institute last Saturday night in Convocation Hall.

No Canadian Endorsement

The calendar has already won widespread support and endorsement among political, scientific and other organizations throughout the world, among them being the governments of 14 nations. A resolution for the world-wide adoption of the new system will be placed before the United Nations at its next general meeting. If accepted, the new calendar will go into operation on January 1, 1956 — the next date when the old and new calendars coincide.

Canada is not among the nations officially endorsing the World Calendar, though the Canadian delegate cast his vote against a majority ruling at the last United Nations session that the calendar be left off the business agenda because of pressure of other more urgent matters.

Two New Holidays Claimed

Three main advantages of balance, regularity and a perpetual nature are claimed by the new system over our present Gregorian calendar. Shown in the accompanying illustration, the calendar divides the year into quarters each of 91 days length. The three months within each quarter maintain a regular pattern of 31, 30 and 30 days. Days and dates would agree from year to year. To make up discrepancies, two new holidays — a Worldsday to be celebrated every year, and another Worldsday to be held every leap year — are included.

According to Miss Achelis, "Business men and industry in general will derive untold benefits in the planning of production, distribution and sale of merchandise with this orderly and steady arrangement wherein days do not only agree with their dates but are comparable as well."

"Personal anniversaries, national holidays, and other such events will in the World Calendar always be known as to the day, date, month and year . . . for college students, vacation periods will be known and fixed from year to year facilitating Active as an undergrad (she was Women's Editor of The Varsity), Miss Parkes can answer questions on anything from women's T's to part-time jobs.

'Vanity Fair' Is Sold Out For First Two Performances

Commencing tomorrow night and continuing for the remainder of the week, the Trinity College Dramatic Club will present the first Canadian run of "Vanity Fair", the play adapted by Constance Cox from William Thackeray's serial-novel of the same name.

Directing the play is Herbert Whittaker, the well-known author and Globe and Mail entertainment critic. The comedy, "Vanity Fair", will be his first Toronto production, though he has had a good deal of experience in other cities in the production field.

The plot of the play centres around the intrigues of Becky Sharp, a seductive governess living in Wellington's England, in the early nineteenth century. The Napoleonic wars are in progress and the Battle of Waterloo also figures prominently in the story.

Heading an all-star cast is Trinity student Katherine Hawtrey, as Becky. Miss Hawtrey is the great-niece of the famous British actor-manager, Sir Charles Hawtrey.

Although this is the first Canadian production of "Vanity Fair", it has recently enjoyed a three-year run at the Comedy Theatre, in London.

Tickets for the two opening nights of the 3-act play have been sold out, but any available for the remaining performances, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings may be purchased at the Hart House box office, or in the Front Hall of Trinity College.

A special rate of 65 cents is in effect for students at the University and affiliated organizations, while other tickets are $1.25. All seats are reserved.

Johannesburg U. Fees Increase 90% Since '39

Johannesburg — (Exchange) — Jan. 9—Tuition fees in all faculties of Witwatersrand University have risen by an average of 90% since 1939, and by 155% since the inception of the university in 1923, according to a recent survey. The fees of this university are the highest in South Africa, and probably come close to being the highest in the world, says the undergrad journal "S.A. Student."

Only Woman At Recital Will Be Pianist Grudeff

Women's rights at Hart House have always been a bit of a mystery not only to the Freshie, but to any male on the campus. When can a girl go in? When must she stay out? On Wednesday, Marion Grudeff, pianist, will play at the Five O'Clock recital. Can girls come to listen, just listen?

"No," says Mr. McLaughlin, the Warden's assistant, "to let girls in, a special dispensation would have to be made. It would have to be classed as a 'Special Occasion'. Besides, because the Music Room is small, it will be filled with men."

Terms Say "Men Only"

The Deed of the Charter of the gift states that Hart House is just for men. If women are to be allowed in as members or to participate, the terms of the gift would have to be changed — something that has never been done. There is a Special Occasions clause in the charter which permits women in attendance at Hart House. Special Occasions include dances, swimming meets, dinners for the Governor General, King and Queen, and banquets. The freshies have a chance to go on a tour of Hart House during freshie week-end. These Special Occasions must be approved by the stewards. Girls cannot go in unless invited and, of course, cannot be members.

The original purpose for Hart House was to bring all men together, to provide a place for the extra curricular activities of the male undergrad and grad. This idea of a student union has been stressed and the American unions, (at colleges, that is), have been fashioned on this system.

Pressed For Space

Though the suffragettes could champion women's rights here on the campus, there's the practical side to the matter. "Some of the boys think it would be nice, but we're sorely pressed for space as it is," McLaughlin went on, "so that there isn't room for everything here."

Hart House is over-crowded already for eating and sports facilities, without the inclusion of girls. There are women in the Hart House, quite a surprising number of them, who form an integral part of the staff — secretaries, stenographers, cooks and waitresses. Female recognition in Hart House is a dying controversy on the campus.

"It's nice like it is—" Bill Philipuk, I U.C., answered quickly when asked his opinion.

"Well, I really don't care," said Nancy Oskirko, Vic freshie.

So that's the Hart House picture. It looks as if it will remain a male stronghold

The Refuge

Here is one of the rooms in Hart House from which women are barred for the reasons outlined in a story on this page. In this room, the Hart House Library, male undergraduates can escape not only from the sight of beautiful co-eds, but also from schoolbooks and all the hustle and bustle of the rest of the campus.

Polio 'Anti-Serum' Aim Of Scientists Aided By US Fund

A $28,990 March of Dimes grant will enable scientists at the Connaught Medical Research Laboratories of the University of Toronto to attempt to develop a new defense against polio, President Sidney Smith and Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said last week.

To Develop Anti-Serum

The money will finance an attempt to develop a high strength polio "anti-serum", for possible protection against the disease. (An anti-serum neutralizes a disease virus, head of the School of Hygiene, Dr. R. D. Defries says.)

A team of scientists, headed by Dr. Andrew J. Rhodes, Associate Professor of Virus Infections, whose polio research has been supported since 1948 by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, will carry out the new project. They will do the work in the Virus Labs of the Dufferin Division of the Connaught Laboratories, 12 miles from the campus.

Grant To Dr. Rhodes

Dr. Rhodes and Dr. C. E. Van Rooyen, who are in charge of the virus lab., collaborated in writing the book, "Virus Diseases of Man". "It is the definitive work in the field," Dr. Defries says. "Through the work of these two scientists this grant comes to the University. The grant is specifically to Dr. Rhodes because he is the one who concentrated on polio research."

Under the terms of the grant, the Canadian scientists will try to develop a method for producing an anti-serum especially rich in polio antibodies. Recent reports from other laboratories have indicated the possibility of increasing the amount of polio antibodies in serum through the use of certain chemicals. If such a high potency anti-serum (high titer anti-serum, is the scientific term) can be produced, it will then be tested in animals to gauge its protective effect against polio.

Other Anti-Serums Success

In commenting on the research, Louis A. Wehle of Rochester, March of Dimes Chairman for New York, pointed out that similar anti-serums have been prepared and are successful against other diseases such as rabies.

He added that the University of Toronto grant brings the total to nearly $23,000,000 spent by March of Dimes funds since 1938 for research and education in polio.

Money Granted Varsity Scientists For Polio Study

The sum of $5,150 received from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis will enable the University of Toronto scientists to complete their basic studies aimed at eventually improving physical therapy techniques for the treatment of polio.

The grant was announced last week by President Sidney Smith and Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Muscle Tissue Study

The scientists are studying muscle fibres and the circulation of blood in muscle tissue, using rats for their experiments. Victims of polio suffer the usual crippling after-effects because muscles in the affected area are cut off from their normal nerve impulses.

Dr. Donald Y. Solandt, Professor of Physiology at the University, and head of the scientific task-force against polio, explained Saturday that all evidence indicates nerves excite muscles into action by chemical means, although excitation of the muscle is accompanied by a tiny emission of electricity.

However, electrical stimulation of muscles seemed to have the same effect as the normal chemical stimulation and was used in physical taherapy. And electrical stimulation had the advantage that it could be accurately measured.

Knife Or Virus

Dr. Solandt also said the same effect as that caused by polio can be created in the rats' muscles by cutting the muscles' nerve paths to the brain by any other method. "As far as we know, it doesn't make any difference what cuts the nerve-link; a knife or a polio virus," he stated.

Using these methods, the Toronto group will determine the electrical, physiological and chemical changes which occur in muscle fibre cut off from nerve impulses (like muscle fibres attacked by polio).

But along with this basic research, the scientists are evaluating various physical therapy techniques ordinarily used to treat polio-stricken victims. So far they have discovered more about the value and exact effect of electrical stimulation of denervated muscle than has been previously known.

The research team has been supported in its work since 1940 by March of Dime Funds. Dr. Solandt has studied the effect of polio on muscles since the great epidemic of 1938 and has specialized in medical treatment of muscular disorders since 1928.

Parliament Bldgs. Scene Of Mock Parliament At Next Debate Session

No definite information is forthcoming yet about the Mock Parliament debate to be held on Thursday, January 19, in the Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park. Dave Quigley, IV St. Mike's, SAC Debates Commissioner, said Friday he would make a statement on this debate and the second later debate this Tuesday.

"This will be an interesting experiment in democracy and shows the interest the provincial government has in University students," said E. A. MacDonald, SAC Secretary-treasurer.

Parliamentary ceremonies with all the trimmings will enhance the debates.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Drama Festival

The University of Toronto Drama Committee presented their second drama week-end Friday and Saturday at Hart House.

Nursing and Wycliffe did an old wheeze called The Bathroom Door. This one did not list a director and it seemed altogether likely that there wasn't one. The players concerned enjoyed themselves hugely and showed that one way to make a bad farce funny is to give some unconsciously bad performances, (excluding Zoe Lomap).

St. Michael's presented Tidings Brought to Mary. Religious plays are quite all right to play-goers so long as they are good plays. But this was a slow solemn business, offering no more in the way of theatre than the sum total of two earnest performances by Clarine Jackman and Helen Armesto. As religion it is rather medieval. Nowadays few people are converted by miracles and the virtue, even the morality, of rejection of the world and voluntary suffering is dubious.

Gammer Gurton's Needle, C. C Clements' adaptation of a medieval farce, was Vic's choice, but why Mr. Clements bothered adapting it or Vic choosing it is curious. Perhaps Mr. Clements had it as a homework assignment in Old English. However, the play was acted out with a good deal of spontaneous enthusiasm and was fairly well received. Michael Roberts gave vent to his screwball streak again and Carol Evans was a most appealing "Gammer" — especially when Joan Heise kicked the poor old soul.

Press Cuttings by Shaw was a wise and satisfying choice by U.C. Much of Shaw's upsetting of popular traditions of the War Office, military discipline, and British Democracy are still pertinent. Less pertinent, but funnier, was the main theme — Suffragettes and anti-Suffragettes. Peopled with Shaw's frightened men and frightening women, the play leaves little doubt about who is the weaker sex in the Shavian world. It is exceptionally well cast with Ron Grant as General Mitchener, Chris Kirkoff as Prime Minister Balsquith (Mr. Kirkoff gabbled his lines somewhat) and Edith Greenberg and Naomi Strauss as the frightening women.

Vic's The Flattering Word ("Weren't you on the stage?") is another conversion play. This time an actor converts a minister, the minister having rejected the theatre. Everyone succumbs to flattery and the audience succumbs to an unlikely "actress" who missed her calling, and a hilariously terrible child that recites Tennyson. This play might have stopped a couple of minutes sooner to advantage but it is a neat little job and had an excellent cast.

The Maker of Dreams, U.C.'s comedy-fantasy had the most professional polish of all. Charmingly set and costumed, prettily and ingeniously written by Oliphant Downs, it was delicately performed by Patricia Scott as a garret butterfly and John Hampson as a revived Cupid.

Some important omissions have been made from the above outline. The U.T.D.C. made the adjudications as private constructive criticisms, not as a competition. I wish to single out certain merits in acting and directing for informal mention but they are personal opinions only. Male actors: Robert Osborne, a most disorderly orderly in the Shaw play, and Chris Taylor, a slightly ridiculous, slightly ethereal Thespian in The Maker of Dreams. Actresses: Sheila Craig, the profoundly silly and highly decorative Lady Corinthia of Press Cuttings, Betty McKay, the infant prodigy of The Flattering Word and Nadyne Smith, her mother. Directors: Ron Grant for a light hand in The Maker of Dreams and David Gardner, who imbued his medieval problem and its cast with the pace and explosive buffoonery of a Disney cartoon. Michael Davis stage-managed The Maker of Dreams, the handsomest looking play.

Vic presented the most new faces (all good). I am sorry to observe that in two festivals so far only two of nine plays were serious. In their remaining evening we'd like to see one heavy, preferably non-mystic.

The plays above, if anyone is interested, are listed in reverse order of overall merit.

TSO Pops

Whether a conductor is justified artistically or otherwise in submerging the guest soloist by sheer tonality in the course of a performance is a question many a musical director might be well-advised to ask.

The case at hand was baritone Igor Gorin's guest appearance Friday night with the TSO in its weekly POPS at Massey Hall, Paul Scherman the wielder of the overbearing baton. Mr. Gorin appeared first in Rossini's La Danza and Haydn's She Never Told Her Love. His rich, flowing baritone, well-amplified by skilful resonance, projection, and crisp consonants, had an uphill task in emerging above the orchestra in each song. We are surprised at Mr. Scherman's conducting at this point for his baton has never exerted so much spirit in the past.

For a pops performance, Friday's programme was exceptional in colour, and unconventional in calibre and form. On the first half were Strauss: Furioso Polka, Berlioz: Roman Carnival, Mendelssohn: Scherzo, and Bizet: Carmen Suite No. 1. The Berlioz showed the excellent TSO string section to advantage, their precision and sense of style, while the string tones in the Traviata prelude were white and crystal clear, capturing the essential sombre mood.

We last heard Igor Gorin in Varsity Arena two summers ago, and his programme was similar in two numbers, Massenet's Vision Fugitive (Herodiade) and his encore, the Largo al Factotum (Barber of Seville). His Vision was a carefully-intoned picture in song, in essence quiet and restrained. But in the Figaro aria, Gorin stepped into the Barber role, combined vigor and pantomime, and gave his best rendition of the entire night.

The orchestra concluded the evening with the Farandole from L'Arlesienne.

Evelyn Pasen

Saturday night's concert in Eaton Auditorium was one which might well have ended at the intermission; had it, our opinion of Evelyn Pasen's performance would have been higher. Her mezzo-soprano voice has a broad, almost reedy quality best suited to her second group of selections. Here Beethoven's setting of "The Erl King," and his "The Glory of God In Nature" were very satisfying, even thrilling; the latter is austere, but Miss Pasen made it glow by reason of her breadth of tone.

The two Hebrew numbers were also pleasing, Bernstein's setting of texts from the Book of Lamentations, and a lovely song by Mordecai Sandberg with a pronounced but very restrained rhythm.

Much technical ability was evident in the Rossini aria "Non Piu Mesta," but the same breadth of tone seemed less appropriate here than it had in the preceding group.

But in the last half of the concert, it was evident that this voice would be well suited to night club or "popular" radio singing. It would seem that the modern taste must be jaded if artists have to combine incongruous works in their programmes. The common, even vulgar atmosphere which characterized the last half of the programme completely ousted the nobility of the second group in the first half, and sent this writer home in complete disgust. It is inexcusable in an artist to choose such selections.

I would be failing in my duty if I omitted to say that the song by John Weinzweig, really three in one, was cheap, even repellent, except in the third part. If musicians have complete freedom in writing, we all must express dislike or enjoyment if any standards of criticism are to remain.

The implications for Torontonians in the fact that New Year's Eve would always fall on a Saturday night, were not discussed by Miss Achelis.

Besides requesting that the Royal Canadian Institute officially endorse the World Calendar, Miss Achelis stressed the urgent need of the general public's support by means of letters to their governments.

Jazz Review

Beat From Way Back

Featured every Wednesday night at the Collegiate Club is Ken Dean's Jazz Band, a group that promulgates the traditional in jazz.

The customery front line of trumpet (in this case, cornet), trombone and clarinet is adequately maintained by Messers Ken Dean, Roy Glandfield and Don Priestman respectively. Leader Dean, whose relatively delicate, clear-cut cornet phrasing is especially attractive, is at the same time the driving force which is essential to a dixie band.

Comparatively unspectacular on the other hand is the rhythm section: Mike Snow, piano, Ken Glandfield, bass, Bill Hicks, guitar, and Ron Sullivan, drums. Notable exception, however, is Mike Snow, who shows a fine feeling for the varying jazz moods, particularly the blues. Sullivan, a newcomer to the group, is rather short on technique but keeps a good beat.

Incidentally, Dean, Priestman and Snow are Varsity men; Dean in III Pass; Priestman, II Pass; Snow, II Ontario College of Art.

On the whole the boys achieve a pleasing, if somewhat loud, effect and occasionally they really jump. Undoubtedly the band is at the present the best of its kind in Toronto.

Its music is that of the joyous "jazz age", of Fitzgerald and Dos Passos, of Capone and Prohibition, and of much more. Its roots are in the twenties and Chicago's famous Loop and Black Belt, and before that in New Orleans' infamous Storeyville.

Its tunes are those played by dixie bands all over the world: "Jazz Me Blues," "Clarinet Marmalade," "When the Saints Go Marching In," "Royal Garden Blues," "Twelfth Street Rag," and blues and more blues.

Maybe you like watching musicians bouncing their feet and enjoying themselves, maybe (heaven forbid) you are a fan who feels that this is the only "real" jazz. At any rate, you will have a lot of fun dancing to Ken Dean's Jazz band.

Clara Salisbury Baker

Gave Recital When Four

By ED RASKY

Hopefully both mother and father watched their daughter's early childhood actions. It was a toss up what she would do first—walk or talk. Strange as it may seem that coin never landed. Daughter Clara fooled them both and began reciting poetry. She made her first recital at the age of four and has been reciting ever since.

And so began the life of Clara Salisbury Baker, senior teacher of Speech, Arts and Drama at the Royal Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Baker who is exceptionally tall for a woman (close to six feet) attended Hamilton Collegiate. She remembers in her early youth singing "The Erl King" in German because it was satisfying and had dramatic value in it. Another adventure was reciting "The Lord is my Shepherd" in the middle of a lake—as a sort of caprice. A great desire was fulfilled when she went abroad to London, England, and enrolled in the Royal Academy of Music. It was here that she specialized in Speech and Interpretation.

Those Were The Days

Upon graduation in 1927, friendly Mrs. Baker toured England amidst the "heyday of concert work," before radio came into its own. "Concert work was much different then," she said. "It had more variety: it was a combination of famous professional singers and dramatic interpretations on the same program."

How well she remembers doing a characterization of "A train ride from Simcoe to Hamilton" until she was affirmedly sick of it. Mrs. Baker brought forth a poster of great names of those days who starred along with her at the Palladium Theatre, (London)—Margaret Bannerman, Thorndike, Coffins. "Perhaps those names aren't remembered now, but those were the days," she said with a sigh.

Busy Women

After eight years of concert and radio work in England fate and marriage brought her to New York and thence to teaching at the Hamilton Conservatory. In 1939 amidst the screaming headlines of war, energetic Mrs. Baker came to Toronto to teach Speech, Arts and Drama. Teaching takes up a lot of her time, yet she helps in the direction of plays, adjudicates at speech festivals and the odd concert work.

"Oh yes," she said with a smile, "in my spare time I make costumes for our play productions." She teamed up with Sir Ernest MacMillan to do the narration of "Peter and the Wolf" and 'Midsummer's Night Dream'. Many of her students are associated with little theatre groups around the city. "One of the better productions the conservatory had attempted was 'Pride and Prejudice.' Their Shakespearian Scenes were of high calibre," she exclaimed proudly.

Need For Speech Education

"It's a shame," Mrs. Baker said in a downcast tone, "that so many people cannot express themselves although their thinking may be great. Lack of speech education is the main reason. Look at the plight of the Theology student whose speech training usually begins at college and then I think it is only one hour a week. Speech training should start in public school so the very young can come out with free expression of what they feel. I am flooded with enquiries about child speech training. Surely this is a sign when speech training should begin."

"To-day, many of us read newspapers and listen to the radio. We don't seem to realize we are losing a way of expressing ourselves. Take the living room scene where the father reads the newspaper and suddenly turns to his wife and tells her about an article he had just read. There is such a vast difference between the written and the spoken word. In the days of old the wise monks had the right idea; they always read to each other."

Hope For Weak Speakers

We asked Mrs. Baker what were the most common errors of everyday speech. she replied in a clear, confident voice, "slurring over the consonants, flat intonations and lack of warmth. People seem to think they have a poor voice it can't be developed. The secret is finding the pitch that belongs to them. Voice depends on vocal mechanism, bony structure and brains utility. Although breath is the basis of speech—it is our attitude to life in general that colours the voice."

If given the chance to live her life over again, she would have turned to the life of a professional Dramatic Soprano. "Such a singer was Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell who went on to become a great star in the Chicago Opera Company. She was the first singer I had heard that gave real value to words," she said.

A professional reader before she did any singing, Clara Salisbury Baker confessed her profession caught up with her and prevented her from changing to singing, because she considered it too late in life.

In order to teach students work connected with the stage, "You must tread the boards yourself," she stressed. "When you've done both teaching and concert work you are able to evaluate the student as a prospective artist or a good player."

Mrs. Baker's reward: "That feeling of satisfaction one gets when a student becomes successful."

Our Readers Write

Chiltern Hundreds

Editor, The Varsity:

Pierre de Rambouillet, concluding a review of "The Chiltern Hundreds" in Friday's issue of The Varsity, states,

"There is only one thing which puzzles me and that is just what is the Chiltern Hundreds."

Luckily this lack of knowledge of a very interesting point in English history did little to spoil his appreciation of the picture as a whole, but must have cheated him out of a very amusing ending. A 'hundred' in English history, for some reason of which I have not the slightest notion (a hint to other writers of Letters to the Editor), means a division of a county. The Chiltern Hundreds are Burnham, Stoke and Buckinghamshire. At one time robbers infested the Chilterns, hills between Bedford and Hertford, and a steward was appointed by the King to keep them under control. The necessity for such a post has long since ceased but since 1740 a member of Parliament wishing to vacate his seat in the house may do so by applying for the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds.

No member of Parliament may on his own account resign, but if he accepts a position for which he is paid by the Crown he must be re-elected to retain his seat.

Our friend Beecham (in the film) never did try to be re-elected, being I suppose, among other things, preoccupied with Bessie Sykes.

Bob Cringan and assistants have been working for weeks at writing, rewriting and arranging all the music in the show. Music has poured in from all the campus shows as well as from students of all faculties.

Ben Wise, director of skits, has revealed that skits have been coming in from everywhere on the campus. However, an air of mystery surrounds the skits selected. Mr. Wise has hinted that the skits satirize university life, and is very enthusiastic, if uncommunicative.

Rumor has it that tickets will go on sale in the near future—to be specific, the latter part of this week.

Discriminatory Legacy Refused By Lafayette

New York, (Exchange) Jan. 9—Because a legacy of $140,000 contained a proviso discriminating against Jews and Catholics, the Board of Governors of Lafayette College recently voted to refuse the money. The money, willed to the Easton, Pa., College was left with the express purpose that none of it could be used for other than Protestant scholarships.

The Board of Governors had considered using the funds for general endowment but later reversed this decision on the grounds of there being "intimations of discrimination, which are contrary to the history, practice and ideals of Lafayette college."

Last term the Jefferson Military Academy turned down a $50,000,000 legacy because of anti-negro, anti-Jewish provisos.

Radioactive Iodine Tested At McGill

Radioactive iodine, a product of Canada's atomic energy plant at Chalk River, Ont., could be used to treat scores of cases of hyperthyroidism and certain types of thyroid cancer, local experts said today on the basis of evidence in United States' medical centres.

Prof. C. P. Leblond and Dr. J. Gross of the department of anatomy and histology at McGill, who have done extensive experimental work with radioactive iodine, on animals, noted with interest that professors at the University of Manitoba Medical College are the first in Canada to use radioactive iodine on humans. The Winnipeg experts use the isotope mainly for diagnoses.

The work done at McGill has largely been to find out exactly what happens to the iodine once it gets into the thyroid. Dr. Leblond and his associate have put their findings in several research papers. They have found that the iodine is changed into thyroxine, the hormone produced by the gland and released into the blood stream.

The technique in McGill research is to use sufficiently small amounts of the radioactive iodine so that the thyroid under observation is not damaged and then by chemical and histological tests find out what happens.

The radioactive iodine acts as a "tracer" in diagnoses. The thyroid's use of iodine can actually be checked by a Geiger counter, an instrument to detect radiation.

Years Of The Modern

The emergence of the United States of America as the richest and most powerful nation in the world is perhaps the most important development in international affairs during the first half of the twentieth century.

Contrary to the expectations of her founders and her traditional isolationism she has been increasingly drawn into active participation in world affairs in times of war and peace. Upon the shoulders of this relatively young and inexperienced people has fallen the task of providing not only material aid to Europe and Asia, but also leadership in political and economic organization.

The future of civilization will largely depend upon the ability and wisdom of the American people in meeting their new responsibilities, and the challenge presented by the disorganization of the post-war world, together with the rise of the conflicting political ideology of Communism and the national aspirations of Russia.

In this bewildering world crisis it is heartening to learn that many of the leading thinkers in the United States are acutely aware of the problems confronting their nation.

"Years Of The Modern — An American Appraisal" (Longmans Green, $4.25) is a tremendously interesting study by twelve specialists, each dealing in the field he represents with the fundamental problems of the spiritual sickness of our times.

Henry Steele Commager, professor of History at Columbia University presents "a Portrait of the American." He analyses his background, his ideals, his traditions, his prejudices, his abilities and aptitudes, and his limitations.

"Education Under Crossfire" is treated by Percy Miller, Professor of English at Harvard, and "The American Economy, Substance and Myth" by J. K. Galbraith.

Extremely revealing is the contribution of Dr. Harrison Brown, vice-chairman of the Emergency Committee of Atomic Scientists entitled, "Of Science and Man." This eminent scientist deplores the great gulf created by modern specialization between scientists and non-scientists, between chemists and physicists, and between pure scientists and technologists.

After working for six years first as a scientist and then as a technologist on the development of the atomic bomb the realization came to him that technological materialism had created grave dangers for modern man—dangers with which he may be unable to cope in the limited time available.

"The atomic bomb (he writes) as a symbol that technological developments during this century have converted wars into operations of unprecedented destructiveness, thus placing our civilization in immediate jeopardy . . . . and there are other equally dangerous effects . . . Modern implements of war make it relatively easy for small groups of men to enforce their rule over larger groups. In modern totalitarian states, the weapons in the hands of the rulers make successful popular revolts impossible."

U. S. foreign policy is dealt with by former U.S. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. Elder statesman Welles sees Peace as "Our Greatest Challenge." He issues a clear call to Americans to realize their responsibilities and to cast away the last remnants of isolationism. The policy advocated by Welles is simply that of the containment of Russia, and persistence within the limits of the Charter of the United Nations, in opposing further Soviet expansion, no matter how long the struggle may be and no matter how great the sacrifices incurred thereby.

Whilst calling for material relief for suffering humanity, Welles also stresses the need for the spiritual redemption of mankind. Nevertheless he believes that in a world in which force, greed, fanaticism and injustice are still predominant, armed strength remains essential to the survival of even the most peace-loving of peoples.

The tremendous pressure of the world crisis is felt by all the contributors. The editor of the "Saturday Review of Literature," Norman Cousins, expounds the faith of a journalist in "An Adventure in Ideals." "The Faith of a Skeptic" is proclaimed by special researcher, V. David Riesman of Chicaga and Yale.

Indeed if these thinkers strike one common note, it is a firm faith in a courageous idealism and hope for the future, in spite of the disillusionment, strife and forebodings haunting mankind today. "Years of the Modern" is a stimulating challenge to thought for all interested in world affairs.

Revive Square Dancing At Mountaineers' Show

Vancouver—(CUP)—The revival of old time square dancing was illustrated at UBC a few weeks ago when a group of campus square-dance enthusiasts were entertained by the colorful exhibition of Lloyd Shaw and his Cheyenne Mountain Dancers.

Dr. Shaw, who we hear is both a showman and a missionary, is principal of the Cheyenne Mountain Public School in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Using picked performers from his own group of Cheyenne Mountain boys and girls, Doctor Shaw has in the last ten years travelled more than 75,000 miles demonstrating and teaching the art of the square dance. His group can demonstrate over 100 European peasant forms besides native American dances.

"Let's bring grandfather's dances back," says Professor Shaw, "but let's bring 'em back alive."

S. are continuing efforts to get tickets from a United States student travel organization called "Youth Argosy."

A non-profit organization, Youth Argosy several years ago established itself as a ticket agency for the Cunard Steamship Company. Thus, it is able to buy large numbers of tickets months in advance and sell them to students, even those who make up their minds to travel at the last minute. Tickets are sold at the regular price, and the normal ticket agency profits pay expenses of maintaining the nation-wide organization.

Tickets bought from Youth Argosy will cost Canadian students ten per cent more than those bought in Canada, because of the devalued Canadian dollar.

Air Travel Future

Eventually Wilkings and N.F.C.U.S. hope to set up a similar organization in Canada, but it is impossible at present to get an agency. When this is done, N.F.C.U.S. may be able to arrange large scale air-travel schemes like those at present run by Youth Argosy.

Youth Argosy charters planes from the myriad charter airlines in the U.S. to carry students abroad at half the scheduled airlines' prices (about $300 instead of $750, Wilkings says).

With its large permanent organization, Youth Argosy is able to arrange especially cheap transportation for students once in a while, Wilkings explained. Last summer United Nations delegates coming to the U.S. chartered planes. Youth Argosy learned of this and arranged extra cheap passage abroad for students on the planes, which otherwise would have returned empty to Europe.

The Health Service is anxious to see all members of hockey teams who have not yet had their medicals and has issued a warning that a team could be disqualified if this essential business has not been looked after.

Hockey practices are still going on early every morning in Varsity arena for the various faculties and the actual games start to-day at 12:30 when UC plays OT.

Both OT and Physio have been rather up against it so far this season, as they were depending on outside ice for their practices and have not been very lucky with such warm weather.

Twelve teams have been put into four leagues of three each, with PHE I, Vic I and St. Hilda's I in the first league. UC I, Meds and PHE II are in League II and St. Hilda's II, St. Mike's and Vic II are in League III. League IV is comprised of UC II, OT and Physio.

Skiing

For the first time this year enough snow fell up at the Varsity ski grounds to make this sport enjoyable. Dan Gibson's tow was working on the north slope near Mr. Edwards' place.

Next week-end Conn Sparrow, president of women's skiing, hopes to have all intercollegiate team potentials up at Collingwood getting their "ski legs" in preparation for several important meets in Ontario and Quebec.

Unfortunately Conn will not ski this winter because of a back condition that has come to a head in the last few weeks. However, she still hopes to carry on as coach and manager.

The date has not been set for the women's intramural ski meet, but it will be announced shortly and plans are being made to run it in conjunction with the Proudfoot trophy which is awarded each year to the best woman skier on the campus.

Extensive Athletic Night Plans Outlined

West Yorks Lose In Exhibition Tilt To Ice Blues 7-6

By MAL CRAWFORD

Scoring four goals in less than ten minutes, in the second period, the Blues edged West York Motors 7-6 in an exhibition match at Varsity Arena Friday night. Considering that all they had to cheer them on was twenty-odd rows of empty seats, the teams played pretty fast hockey most of the way. The distinction of getting the only penalty of the game went to Ross Knipfel, West York defenceman who, incidentally, played a while with Pittsburg Hornets before coming to West York. Knipfel's comment: "We bash each other's heads in for two periods and now he gives me a penalty." Even when a little later two fights came up involving Porky McDougall and an unidentified West Yorker, the penalty box stayed vacant.

The victory was something in the nature of sweet revenge for the Blues, who suffered an 8-2 drubbing at the hands of these same opponents early last December. The difference in the score is a fairly good indication of how far they have come since then.

Weak Start

In the first period, Varsity looked like the same team that started the season in Montreal six weeks ago, as the visitors skated around them, through them, and over them to run up a 4-0 margin. The personnel was about the same (except for Wilf Digby, who sat the game out with a cold), but they had been laid off since the middle of December and did well to get back in stride as quickly as they did.

In the second period, they showed almost as much improvement in their play as they did in the score. They hung onto the puck better than in any of their home games so far. The Bell-Howson-Arrowsmith line started the parade with two quick goals by Bell, Arrowsmith assisting on the first and Howson on the second. Bob Bazos, filling in at right wing for Digby, got the third on a pass from Vernon, and earned an assist on the next, fired in by Vernon who picked up Bazos' rebound. Right wing is something new to Big Bob, who shoots left and has played on the left side all along. Besides getting two goals and an assist, he showed more drive than at any time this season.

Lead In Third

Norm Fox got the first goal of the third period from Wes Moore to forge ahead 5-4. The last two were by Bazos from McDougall and Moore from Turcott. West York scored two goals in a dying attempt to even it up, but couldn't get the tying marker. Frank Rutledge put on a one man show, getting five of the Motormen's six scores. Doug Davidson got the other.

This loss isn't likely to have too severe an effect on West York's morale. With a record of four wins and thirteen losses, they are pretty firmly entrenched in the cellar of

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

With the completion of the new addition to Varsity (largest in Canada) Stadium, the University of Toronto Athletic Association will be in the odd and unenviable position of handling a commercial enterprise on an amateur plane. The original purpose of the Stadium was to provide a place where the Varsity students could watch their senior football team make mincemeat of the opposition, and there was very little thought about the desires of the public.

With the success of senior football in a financial way, the stadium was enlarged to cater to a greater extent to the general public. This latest enlargement plan is a direct result of complete sellouts over the past few years both in the Big Four and Intercollegiate loops. The $650,000.00 to be spent can in no way be attributed to a desire on the part of the Association to enable more students to attend—there was plenty of room in the old stands for all them as wanted it. This addition was planned for the express purpose of making money, mainly from senior college ball. Six hundred and fifty grand is a lot of scratch, and will have to be paid out of future profits.

The point is this—to be sure of a sellout, and thereby be assured of meeting the mortgage payments, Varsity will need at least a second place team. Twenty-nine thousand Varsity supporters will not pay out good money to see the Blues get trampled as predetermined underdogs. To get a good team, a good coach and good players are needed. Varsity has a good coach, but with the graduation of many key Blues, Masterson may be hard up for good players in future years.

This situation is now aggravated by the positive actions of the other three teams in getting the best of the recent high school crops, and it seems that these actions will become more and more positive. It all boils down to the fact that if Varsity is ever going to pay off the Stadium building costs, not to mention building the much-needed five floor gymnasium, good football players will have to be prevailed upon to attend Varsity rather than Western or Queen's or McGill.

The attitude of the Board of Governors that prevents the coaching staff from even bringing together well-to-do munificent grads and needy football prospects can be defended to a certain extent, but it has always been the contention of this department that fire should be fought with fire, especially when the financial solvency of a student organization is at stake.

The coaching staff is doing all they can to publicize Varsity to up-and-coming football stars . . . Masterson speaks at banquets and extols the virtue of Varsity, he interviews young players on the recommendations of their coaches, and has an informative grapevine, but unfortunately, if a kid's parents can't afford to send him to college, and some university offers him help for playing football, that kid can not be swayed by pretty speeches. Not only can the Athletic Department not offer scholarships, but their superiors (the omnipresent Governors) even frown on the finding of employment for players.

A senior football player cannot possibly attend practices and work his way through college, so he must be given help of some sort. So we have this to say to the Governors . . . while their ideas on amateurism pure and simple is a commendable thing to have in college, if they are not ready to apply University funds to the paying off of Athletic Association debts, they should pay a little more heed to the Athletic executive's ideas about giving Varsity successful teams, and thereby a successful athletic plant to benefit more students to a greater extent. A new streamlined trailor loses its usefulness if pulled by a decrepit horse rather than a powerful diesel.

Sportswoman

Nearly everybody is back and everything has started to run again, including the women's sports world. Snow in the last few days has made skiing possible, while basketball, volleyball, badminton, hockey and bowling continue despite any change in the weather.

Basketball

Intercollegiate basketball practices are being held again this term on Tuesdays and Thursdays at OCE from 5:30-7:00. To-morrow is the first one and Mickey Barnett, the coach of this year's team, will be there to give everybody a work-out.

There are still two basketball pinnies missing. One is red and the other is blue. Cay Catto, president of basketball, would appreciate if these were turned in to the Women's SAC office.

Volleyball

Thelma Henderson, president of volleyball, reports that practices continue this week in the Lillian Massey gym, with the first four games on Thursday and Friday.

The turn-out for a few of the faculties is not so good and there is a need for more members on the Physio, UC and School of Nursing teams. PHE had so many enthus-

B-Ball Supporters Well Looked After With Sports Nights

By JOHN KENNEDY
SPORTS EDITOR

Mac MacCutcheon, the rotund impresario of the intramural office, in an interview Saturday revealed one of the most extensive master plans for Athletic Nights ever drawn up by the ingenious higher brass over in the Athletic wing of Hart House. The plan, chiefly devised by MacCutcheon, includes six regular Saturday night athletic do's, plus four Wednesday strictly Sports Nights. This plan will look after every Saturday night from this coming Saturday until the eighteenth of February.

Finish With Boxing

But don't leave yet, there's more—every third year the senior intercollegiate boxing tournament is held in Toronto, and you guessed it kiddies, this is our year to play the hosts. So, winding up this fine season of A-Nights, boxing will come into the lime-light on Friday and Saturday the twenty-fourth and fifth of February.

Ticket Changes

One important change and improvement in the plans this year is the method of ticket allocation. In the past there has been some discontent in some of the colleges and faculties largely due to the manner in which the tickets were put on sale. This year 600 tickets will be given to the various intramural reps who will put the tickets up for sale as they see fit. Then the ticket office in Hart House will withhold the remaining 600 tickets and they will be put on sale on the night of the attraction on the first-come-first-serve principle. (See ad in today's paper re the sale of tickets for this week's show.)

This method should give all who really want to go to the A-Nights a fair shake at getting tickets, because if they are unable to secure tickets at their own faculties early in the week, they still have a chance to obtain the ducats at the eleventh hour, or to be more exact at 5.30 p.m. on the day of the event.

The Wednesday night Sports Nights will start Jan. 25 and continue weekly until February 15. These events are directed at the really dyed-in-the-wool basketball fan and will feature all three Varsity teams with top American colleges being the opposition for the seniors. Although these Wednesdays are billed as Sports Nights, there will be absolutely no dancing, although females of the opposite sex are cordially invited.

High School Ball

This year, in a move to interest the high schoolers in the university and vice versa, high school basketball teams will play at the Athletic Nights as part of a triple header. The high school games will commence at 5.45 p.m. so people who like their food are advised to bring a light lunch. For these nights attendance will be limited so that all the fans will have good spots to view the games.

Two Saturdays, when the Blues are on the road, Athletic Night will feature boxing. McCutcheon assured us that the co-eds should not stay away on these nights as the boxing put on is really high-grade stuff and should please the girlies no little. Wrestling will also come in for a share of the spotlight, with the senior intramural being one of the chief events.

Gym Finals

Once in two years the gym team finals are held here and again this is our year. Sports enthusiasts who have not yet forgotten football will have ample opportunity to see on the silver screen the Blues games with Western and McGill and the Grey Cup final. The game at Western will be shown this Saturday.

Of course there will also be the water sports in the pool room, the chief attractions being the visits of the U. of Syracuse and U. of Buffalo.

The main attraction this Saturday will be the senior basketball game betwixt Assumption College and the Blues and the intramural senior wrestling finals. Trinity and Wycliffe will be the hosts for the first gala evening of the term and are pleased to present Bill Bunting and his Olde Tyme Squares for your square dancing enjoyment in the upper jim. Of course normal style dancing will prevail in the big jim after the B-Ball festivities.

Juniors Descend Deeper Into Hockey Basement

By DAVE BUTTERS

The Varsity Junior Bees descended deeper into the cellar of the Junior "B" OHA race Friday night at Weston when they lost to Corner Boys 5-1 while St. Mike's fought to a well-earned 1-1 tie with the league-leading Weston Dukes. Norm Gray paced the winners with the hat-trick, scoring all three goals in the last period. The Bees forward line of Art Holmes, Dave Kent, and Bill Yeo were the best for Varsity with Bill Yeo sinking the only goal for Varsity with assists going to both his line-mates.

Yeo Tallies

The first two periods of the game presented to the spectators some excellent hockey featuring fast skating, hard checking, and clever puck-carrying. The periods were cleanly-played with first Corner Boys scoring in the initial frame and Varsity tieing it up in the second. Fraser Scott, the clever pivot man for Corner Boys, picked up a pass from Don McIntosh, skated around the Bees' defence and planted the puck behind Johnny Milne. Shortly after five minutes of the second frame Varsity's first line of Holmes, Kent and Yeo tied it up on a three way passing play which ended with Bill Yeo flashing the light for Varsity's only goal.

At seven minutes of the third period Paul Prendergast received a ten-minute misconduct for abusive language. Two minutes later Norm Gray sank the first of his three goals of the evening. Fraser Scott fired the other of Corner Boys' four goals of the period to make the final score read 5-1 in favor of the red-shirted hockeyists from the east end grill.

Line-ups

Varsity: Goal, Milne; defence, P. Prendergast, D. Prendergast; centre, Holmes; wings, Kent, Yeo; alternates, Fullerton, Wardrop, Brown, Lady, Nichols, Sinclair, Kougham, Machim.

Corner Boys: Goal, Battaglia; defence, Posivy, Penfound; centre, Scott; wings, Dunn, McGraith; alternates, Craig, O'Donnell, Romagnola, Ptashnik, Gillanders, Gray, McIntosh, Forbes.

First Meeting Sees Blocs Develop In IUS, The Dutch Walk Out

(This is the second part of a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations of the International Union of Students with the National Federation of Canadian University Students. The third article in this series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

The political nature of the new union was evident from the very beginning. In fact, even before the Congress met the IPC had protested "to 'fascist' governments — Spain, Egypt and Greece," said one Canadian delegate to the Congress. "There were some delegates who felt that these protests, whether they were justifiable or not, gave a certain political character to the acts of the IPC."

Blues Develop

At the Congress a bloc of Eastern nations developed at the start of the proceedings. One delegate to the Congress (Miss Catherine D. McLean, representing the Canadian Federation of Newman Clubs, from whose report most of the quotations which follow are taken) reported that ". . . without too much effort one could see that while the preparations (for the Congress) were indeed efficient, they betrayed a little too much efficiency, and one could not help but see that one group intended to dominate the Assembly. As the delegations were not representative, it was impossible to win on any issue that group were determined to win. Logic was sadly missing from many deliberations, and when it was employed, was used in a sense that made it nothing more or less than a travesty."

Parliamentary procedure, not well understood by the eastern nations apparently, was not the basis for discussion, according to the reports. "A few rules were laid down," Miss McLean said, "but no detailed method of procedure. This caused innumerable difficulties all through the Congress."

Three Part Program

The program of the meeting was divided into three parts: (1) the task of students in the post-war world; (2) the creation of a new world student organization; and (3) the organization and co-ordination of student activities.

"The main key-note of the Congress Program (said Miss McLean) was anti-fascism. For example, the following statement taken from the official program:

"We regard Fascism and oppression as being the main obstacles to peace and progress and our proposed agenda deals with the problem of organizing students nationally and internationally to meet the dangers which they evoke to the lives and liberty of young people and students. Organization is, above all, necessary so that the will of students all over the world can be expressed, thus enabling students to take the greatest possible action towards the elimination of Fascism and oppression."

Wouldn't Define 'Fascism'

"Several attempts were made during the next few days of the Congress to have the word 'fascism' defined. These requests were usually met with the statement that 'everybody knows what fascism means'."

The Constitution was the toughest thing the Congress had to deal with. The manner in which it was done is worth noting: "The IPC had prepared and sent out a draft constitution with a request that all delegations submit proposed amendments. A sub-committee was set up to do the preliminary work of paring down the amendments . . . Some thirty pages of amendments were submitted (to the Congress) and it was significant to note that there were no amendments from the Russians, Jugoslavs, Bulgarians . . . in fact, no amendments from any of the delegations that had been voting 'en bloc' from the beginning."

Three Contentious Issues

Three main issues developed in the discussion on the Constitution: (1) whether the World Federation of Democratic Youth should be affiliated in the constitution; (2) the question of the autonomy of the national unions forming the international union and (3) the make up of the Executive Committee.

The WFDY issue was finally settled by leaving them out of the constitution. The vote was very close, however, and it was only a firm stand by the American delegation which saved the day. The WFDY has since gained a reputation for being an extremely militant communist front organization.

Miss McLean's remarks on the autonomy issue are interesting: "The question of the autonomy of the national unions was one of the most bitterly contested issues of the Congress. According to the draft constitution, the national unions, by virtue of their membership in the IUS, were bound by any policy laid down by the IUS. The Dutch delegation led a decided opposition to this, and in fact, finally withdrew from the Union on the grounds that even the final concession made by the constitution to the effect that: 'any decisions of the IUS not adhered to by the National Organization shall be submitted to the Council for final judgment' was not elastic enough. In this the Dutch received a great deal of support, but not enough to warrant the autonomy of the National Unions being constitutionally guaranteed."

On the Executive Committee issue the draft constitution had said that body could be formed of any number of students from any country. This issue was finally resolved by limiting the number to seventeen, and stipulating that the seventeen should be from different countries. This "compromise" was carried by a very small vote.

Surprise Finds In Turkey Described

"Nowhere can you find so many promising areas to excavate and so many archaeological surprises as in Turkey," Professor G. M. A. Hanfmann of Harvard told the Archaeological Institute yesterday.

One of the recent surprises in Turkish Archaeology was the valuable discovery in 1946 of a key to the translation of Hittite hieroglyphics. An inscription excavated at Kara Tepe in southern Turkey was in both Phoenecian, which has already been deciphered, and Hittite hieroglyphics.

Other Turkish finds of Roman, Greek and Assyrian remains of a culture at Tarsus dating back to the fifth millenium were described by Hanfmann.

Wonder Drug Research Aided At University Lab By $7,500 Federal Grant

A federal government grant of $7,500 has been given to the Connaught Laboratory of the University of Toronto for the development of the production of Acth, the wonder drug now performing miracles in the war against arthritis.

Although the grant will not come near covering expenses, it is expected to be of considerable aid. In addition, the Laboratories have been promised the co-operation of all the Canadian meat packers, in the recovery of the pituitary glands of hogs, from which the drug is manufactured.

Expect 2 Pounds Yearly

So far, Acth is made in quantity by only one organization in the world—Armour and Company of Chicago. Small quantities have been made in Toronto, but it will be some time before full-scale production is begun.

Acth is a hormone of the pituitary glands which stimulate the adrenals. All its properties are not yet known. An enormous number of pituitary glands is necessary for its production, and it is estimated that in one year Armour and Company will be able to produce only enough to treat 2,000 people. Connaught Laboratories expect to produce two pounds a year.

New hope of greater production has come from Chicago University, where researchers have discovered that the compounds of the drug have the same beneficial results as the drug itself. Although no definite information is available, it is expected that research will be done here to find a way to manufacture these components artificially.

The only reported use of Acth in Toronto was for seven-year-old Billy Broderick, suffering from leukemia at the Hospital for Sick Children. He is holding his own against this otherwise incurable disease, but it is not yet known if the drug will save his life.

Experimental Use

In all cases the patients on whom it is used take it in the capacity of guinea pigs. Doctors study them to learn more about the drug.

Acth has received a great deal of attention because it may help in the treatment of many diseases, among them some forms of cancer, leukemia, arthritis, rheumatic fever, hay fever, and many others.

It is manufactured as a white crystal substance, looking somewhat like salt. Before injection it is dissolved in a saline solution.

Discovered by Canadian

It results in a feeling of well-being. Sometimes patients grow beards because it stimulates the secondary sex characteristics. Sometimes it produces enormous appetites; in other cases it results in swelling because of rétention of water in the body tissues.

Acth was first produced by a Canadian, Dr. J. B. Collip, now dean of medicine at University of Western Ontario, in 1933. Its properties in treating disease were discovered by U. S. researchers early in 1949. Since then it has been hailed as one of the great medical discoveries of the 20th century.

These little children built themselves a snowman in front of St. Mike's yesterday and The Varsity photographer just happened to be passing by to get some joyous Winter scenes and so here you are. The children are (l. to r.) James Brennan, II Pass; Bob Ringwood, II Pass, and Julie Landreau, II Art and Archaeology. The one in white is called Boozer Brown, our reporter was informed. The bottle in the pocket contains antihistamine for cold prevention, of course.

Federal Cabinet Member To Speak Here Tomorrow

The Honorable Milton F. Gregg, V.C., Minister of Veterans' Affairs, will visit the University of Toronto tomorrow, Wednesday, to speak on "The Veterans' Program and Canadian Social Policy" in a lecture of particular interest to ex-servicemen. The lecture is the third in a series being sponsored by the School of Social Work.

Open to the public, the address will be given in Room 153, Economics Building at 4 p.m. tomorrow afternoon. An opportunity for discussion will be allowed at the close of Mr. Gregg's lecture.

Mr. Gregg won his V.C. at Cambrai in World War I and commanded the Royal Canadian Regiment, and later the West Nova Scotia Regiment, overseas during the World War II. He resigned as President of the University of New Brunswick in 1947 to enter the federal cabinet.

Purpose of these series of lectures being sponsored by the School of Social Work is explained in a press release:

"Students have felt the need to give some thought to those larger philosophical, political, and social issues which lie behind their immediate studies but which go well beyond the topics of ordinary class discussion. They wish to consider their known responsibility as social workers, as citizens and as Canadians in respect of these larger and more fudamental questions.

"The lecture series has been designed to meet this need. Faculty and students share in planning the series. The lectures are offered to faculty, students, and other interested persons on the campus and beyond. Outstanding persons in the University world, the Public Services, the Professions, Business and Labour are taking part."

News Reporters

With the resumption of publishing The Varsity reminds its news staff that they are expected to report to The Varsity office for assignments as often as they can.

The Varsity also extends an invitation to all those interested in working on the paper to come down to The Varsity office in the basement of University College. All types of jobs are available to undergraduate students who are able to devote part of their time to work that is often ignored, seldom appreciated, fairly hard on the nerves, but fun.

Poll Of Student Interest Outlined By Peace Council

The U. of T. Peace Council is going to take a poll to judge student interest or apathy in Campus and outside organizations. The poll will be taken from one of the students in each faculty. Any faculty having 75 students or less will not be polled. The person chosen to be polled will first be phoned to find out whether he is willing to fill out the questionnaire. To keep the poll confidential only course, sex and year will be asked.

One of the questions asked will be whether you have ever attended a campus political club and if so which one? Have you ever attended a meeting of either Dominion or Provincial parliaments or ever read Hansard? The answers to this questionnaire will be published in The Varsity along with the method of taking the poll and then the students themselves will be allowed to judge the accuracy of the poll. Anyone interested in helping with the survey is invited to go to Wymilwood this Thursday at 7:45 p.m.

West Indies U. Invites Students

Applications for attendance at the University of the West Indies are now being taken by a representative of that university now present on the campus. Any one interested should phone Errie Thompson at MI. 7319.

The university, situated in Jamaica, has three faculties — Arts, Sciences and Meds. Its three terms last from October 1 to June. Requirements are a Matriculation from London, England or its equivalent. For Canadians, this would be Senior Matriculation.

Examinations are set by the University of London.

Campus Politics

The same interest that, on the eve of an election, causes even the most innocuous conversations to become fiery arguments, has led to the creation of political clubs on almost every campus in Canada.

In Toronto, political interest has been assumed by outsiders to be so strong that charges of "a hot-bed of Communism" fly about with the regularity of the first snows. While the students at this University are not sufficiently politically minded to validate accusations of a bed of Communism or a bed of any other description, interest and participation in political matters is active.

Campus political activity benefits both the students who participate therein and the men in government who visit the University. For young people about to become adult, responsible citizens, and especially for university students, who, if they take advantage of their opportunities, can become prominent in every phase of Canadian life, a knowledge of the country's government and the workings of the political system is indispensable.

Through campus political activity, students can obtain that knowledge. They can become acquainted with the aims and ideas of any one or all of the ranking parties. They can hear top-flight men speak on current issues, and can question these men.

As students are notably lacking in reticence where criticism is concerned, speakers, too, may come away from campus meetings with something of value—a knowledge of how they "stack up" in the eyes of today's young people, a knowledge of the political ideas and ideals of a large segment of the nation's voters and almost-voters.

For those who intend to make a career of politics, such activity on the college level provides an opportunity to get a foothold—as the success of a campus party leader in the last provincial election shows. For those who merely wish to broaden their education, on the other hand, the clubs offer students a chance to participate without committing themselves to any "line." In the same way that students who have no intention of making acting their livelihood take part in the numerous dramatic productions, so students who do not have an Ottawa-bound gleam in their eyes take part in political gatherings.

To those who would keep our campi politically "pure", who fear a generation of rabid Lefts, we say that only those who are pre-disposed to indoctrination can be indoctrinated, and emphasize that in a country neither under dictatorship nor mentally stagnant, political education is part of any education that can lay claim to the term.

We are not creating a "bed" of any temperature, but if we do, it will, perhaps, provide a reliable thermometer with which to judge the state of the nation's political health.

Headline Right Story Wrong

Editor, The Varsity:

I beg to call attention to the error carried in your paper last Thursday. The headline correctly reported that surplus A.A. funds would be used to enlarge the stadium. But the story beneath referred to the Athletic Association as providing the funds. This is incorrect.

As you all know, there has been for quite a while a secret society on this campus. It is secret in the sense that no one has heard of it till now. This Society is the U. of T. A. A. (University of Toronto Alcoholics Anonymous): it is this society that is providing the funds for 10,000 more bowl seats.

I wish to bring this error to your attention and I would ask you to reveal the true facts of the case.

You may be surprised that our group should donate to such a cause but on investigation of the principles of our charter you will no longer have any difficulty in understanding our position. Our group is formed to prevent drinking on this campus. We feel that if you must give up one form of 'bowl' (the punch bowl) then you should gain pleasure from another (and I don't mean a wassail bowl). That explains why we wanted to help the student body.

As for the addition of 10,000 seats, I feel that I must strike a note of personal pride here. After attending so many games at Varsity Stadium, particularly the Varsity home games, I felt that something had to be done to keep people from gathering the impression that all who attended the games used more than a blanket to keep warm.

Game after game, the jostling, pushing, milling and general mayhem of the crowd so upset people that they walked with a dazed, bewildered look that I used to notice in the mirror on the day after. Time after time I told myself that this was not to continue. At meeting after meeting of our executive, held at the K.C.R. I brought up my point. Something had to be done!

Finally, after a particularly exhilarating New Year's Eve party (we all drank tomato juice) a policy was decided upon. The Monday after, each of our group descended on some prominent brewer or distiller and after explaining how people were becoming 'punch-drunk' at games we managed to secure donations from each. These men naturally didn't want people to feel 'fuzzy' when they hadn't even had a sip. Such things were bad for business — I mean, it would give their product a bad name.

That is how the A.A. got the funds for the enlarged stadium.

Yours for more tomato juice,
Arty.

Fish Story From CUP Conference

Montreal, Jan. 9 —(CUP)—Credit for the most humorous remark of the CUP conference held here December 29 to 31 goes to Clyde Kennedy, Editor-in-Chief of the McGill Daily.

Atom Secrets And Russia

A report in Time states that Russian scientists had all the essential secrets of the atomic bomb in 1940, and yet did not attempt to develop a war weapon from their information. The implied question in this new information is whether the Russians could have had bombes had they tried, or whether there might have been another reason for their apparent refusal to utilize this information.

Chiltern Hundreds Again

Editor, The Varsity:

The movie critic is mystified by the meaning of the term "Chiltern Hundreds". This is a term used to indicate an area in Buckinghamshire which has belonged to the Crown from a remote period.

A member of the House of Commons may cease to be a member by death, by a resolution of the House declaring him to be insane, by becoming an alien or a peer, by taking orders, by conviction for corrupt practices, or by acceptance of office.

A member has no power to resign his seat, but he may accept the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, which being held to an office of honor and profit under the Crown, renders him incapable of retaining his seat in Parliament. The stewardship, the profit of which is purely nominal, is in the gift of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. It is customary to resign the office as soon as it is accepted.

Editor, The Varsity:

In the review of the Drama Week-end in Monday's issue of The Varsity your reviewer gave me credit for a fine piece of stage-managing for the Maker of Dreams. That it was really good stage-managing there is no doubt; but all the credit goes to Blandford Kay, I U.C. Hold Contest For Drawings In Song Book

A novel illustration contest has just been announced by the S.A.C. Song Book Committee. Open to any undergraduate, graduate or faculty members, the contest is being sponsored in order to secure illustrations for the new University of Toronto Song Book now being compiled by the committee.

The drawings, which can be of any size, must be in India ink on white paper illustrating in a comical sense or otherwise the following five songs picked at random: "Whiffenpoof Song", "In the Evening by the Moonlight", "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi", "Follow the Blues" and "Lili Marlene".

Surprise Prize

Here's where the novel part of the contest comes in. Because the song book will be an All-Varsity, non-profit enterprise, the only prize planned will be the satisfaction of seeing the results in print.

The Song Book committee consisting of Al Heisey, III S.P.S.; Bill Marwick, IV Music, and Susie Davidson, III U.C., hope to have the book in print ready for sale by next September. The pocket-sized song book will contain 250 songs complete with illustrations and music, and a few faculty and college yells.

Heisey hopes the contest will bring in illustrations worthy of an official University of Toronto publication. He said entries must be handed to the S.A.C. Office, Hart House on or before January 31.

U. of T. Boasts Member On 'Mademoiselle' Staff

Outside of Ubyssey, Toronto is the only Canadian university with a member on Mademoiselle's college board for 1950. The Toronto representative is blonde and attractive Diana Fishleigh, II Trinity.

As a member of the board of this New York fashion magazine, Miss Fishleigh has to submit several articles during the year on everything from philosophy to the meaning of words. She has hopes along with the 300 others on the board, that she will be one of the 10 chosen from Canada and the USA to become a guest editor at New York in June to work on the September college issue.

This Trinity co-ed is no stranger to the fashion world. At the age of 15 she was already a full fledged model and a few years later she became a professional fashion commentator, supplying the mike chatter for the teenagers' shows at a large department store here.

Miss Fishleigh still manages to commentate at fashion shows "squeezing it in with my modern history courses". However she does not begrudge the time as fashion commentating is her choice of a vocation. Upon graduating she intends to go to fashion school in New York.

Breakfast Flight, Trial Flips Plan Of Ajax Flying Club

To give a push to their membership drive, the Flying Club is planning an introductory flight weekend at the Island Airport for February 4th and 5th. By subsidizing the flights, the club offers to anyone interested, a 20 minute flip with one of their four qualified instructors at an exceedingly low rate.

The club is also planning another breakfast flight guaranteed to be more successful than the last one in December, which was grounded at Hamilton and forced to return by bus. At least ten aircraft are expected to take part in the flight to Mount Allison near Hamilton, scheduled for Sunday morning, January 22. Club officials have invited anyone interested to go on this breakfast flight.

Summing up the Flying Club's activities this year, President Yves Garneau reported that five members have completed their private pilot licenses since September and ten more are working towards it. Pointing out that new members can start on their license anytime, Garneau emphasized the extremely reasonable cost to club members of obtaining a license. He said the Government subsidy combined with that of the RCAF for those physically qualified made the cost of 30 hours flying time as low as 50 dollars.

Garneau also stressed that perfect physical condition was not absolutely essential and that people wearing glasses can usually qualify. As the club roster includes four qualified instructors, the ten hours ground school required for license candidates is provided gratis to club members.

Start Outing Club With Caledon Farm For Weekend Trips

At an informal meeting in the Debates Room of Hart House last night, the newest club on the campus was formed. With about 60 interested people present, a motion was passed to "establish an outing club in connection with the Caledon Hills farm" recently purchased by Hart House.

Temporary Committee Formed

A second motion was passed "to appoint a small committee to hold office for a month", its purpose to "build up the plan of the club and report back to the committee". Out of the recommendations of this committee, composed of Milton Mowbray, George Slater, Gordon Griffiths, Malcolm Archibald, Eugene Racicot, and Don Linney, the constitution of the club is to be formed.

Hart House Warden Nicholas Ignatieff said, "We hope to be in operation in two weeks." This tropical weather can't last forever, he said, and we want to be able to look after those people who come up to the farm to ski.

It was decided to leave the questions of policy, membership, publicity and operation to the temporary committee, since the meeting had no definite recommendations on which to vote. The concensus of opinion was that a membership fee would have to be charged, but the size of the fee was not determined, although it was not expected to exceed two dollars.

Restrict Membership

The problem of membership excited the most debate at the meeting. It was agreed that the membership would have to be kept comparatively small, since the present accommodation limit at the farm is approximately forty. This figure will be higher in the spring and fall months, when the sleeping porches will be available as well as the dormitories for overnight guests.

The formation of this club puts Toronto on a par with McGill, Dartmouth, Harvard and other universities in Canada and the United States which have their outing clubs. A unique feature about Toronto's club is the fact that they own their own property. This will enable the club to make additions to the property as they see fit, without interference from outside sources.

Looking For Name

Hart House Educational Program Director R. H. Perry, who has been active with the Warden in the formation of the club, suggested that a contest be held to find a suitable name for the club. Most of the universities having such a club, he said, called it the "Outing Club". Mr. Perry hoped that a more imaginative and descriptive name could be found. He suggested as a prize for the winning name "a bushel of apples from our own orchard."

The former owner of the farm, who was unwilling to sell at first, readily agreed when he learned that he would be able to stay on the farm in the position of caretaker. He will continue to farm the land.

Trophy At Stake In Daily Debates

The Portia Debates, a series of impromptu debates for University College Women, began yesterday, January 9.

The debates will be held daily in Room 4, U.C. at 1.30 p.m. Presentation and delivery will be stressed rather than material. The subject for debate will be announced a few minutes before debating begins.

Each team is made up of two members from the same year. Freshies will debate against Freshies; seniors against seniors. First year will meet third, and second year will meet fourth in the semi-final. The winners will compete for the Portia Trophy. The final champs will meet the winners of the Robinette debates.

The Portia Debates started during the year 1945-46 as a parallel to the Robinette Debates.

"The anonymous donor of the Portia trophy believed there should be a competition of women as well as men in a co-educational college," said Miss Ferguson, U.C. Dean of Women. The trophy is a statue of Portia carved in a teak wood by Mr. Donald Stewart, Canadian woodsculptor. There is a series of plaques on the base on which the winners' names will be inscribed. The champions themselves will get a framed black and white etching of the statue with their names inscribed.

Posters for signing for the debates have been placed in the rotunda and schedules will be posted with the program to enable everyone to listen to their potential rivals.

Makeup Staff Overworked

All members of the makeup staff of The Varsity are requested to turn up on their scheduled nights. On resuming publication in the New Year, The Varsity has been operating with a skeleton staff who find themselves considerably overworked.

All previous makeup staffers are asked to make an appearance on their night of duty to ease the pressure on the few and faithful.

Any others interested in working on The Varsity in any capacity will be welcomed with open arms by the editorial staff.

Roscoe Slugged

Writer Puts Foot In It

By HERB WOOD

The shoe shine boy in Hart House is a swell kid. And he's a fella who doesn't expect a tip for a measly minute and a half's work. No siree.

Mind you, his way of doing business is novel. You pay him first then he goes to work — but you get value for your money. The whole business is run very efficiently; in fact, he had a motion study man in recently to save him money and time.

Roscoe, the bootblack, follows that expert's advice down to the last minute. You know, you can actually set your watch with the time he takes to put a shine on your shoes.

Usually we get a shine when our hair is out (sic). But in Hart House there is some silly ruling to the effect that shoe shine boys are not allowed in the barber shop. So the poor guy has to wait outside. I think something should be done about this. Don't you?

Not To His Face

But what I don't like is the way some of the guys talk behind his back. Gosh, what do they expect. After all he's only . . . well . . . let's not be catty about this thing. A fella can only do his best. Right? . . . Right.

However, some of their beefs cannot be overlooked. Some border on the ridiculous and definitely reflect a maladjusted personality.

"He does a lousy job," said Mal Crawford, I Vic. Here, take a look at this shoe, . . . now this one. See what I mean?"

"Mal, . . . take it easy after all, he's only a . . . ah skip it", I said.

"Don't try to alibi his way out of it," he said. " It cost be almost a buck to get a decent shine. Bah! After this I'm making my little brother do the job."

Don't Know To Quit

Another fella complained that he never knew when Roscoe would quit, leaving him with one foot dull. But business is business, I always say, and if a guy doesn't know enough to move his own foot so it gets shined, that's his hard look out.

Hey, quit tapping my shoulder. What's that you say? You want to be quoted like Mal . . . But John, what you said, you know it wasn't . . . well it wasn't suitable for a family journal. Ouch, . . . Ok . . . Ok, I'll talk.

John Kennedy, III U.C. says, quote, "I think that Roscoe is a menace, and something should be done. I'm just the man to expose him too."

"Here, look at my shoe laces. Look! He's knotted them so darn tight that I had to sleep with my shoes on all last night!"

Roscoe Gets Slugged

"You must have done something, John, . . . think. You didn't use a slug on poor Roscoe, did you?"

"Gosh, Herb, I didn't think that he was on the ball that much. I'll go right back and give him a good time and apologize."

Now that John's run along, there's something that comes to mind. Isn't that just like a sportswriter, using a slug on a guy like that. And another thing, and this is true too.

The sports department is . . . .

Baha'i Compatible With Christianity States Vic Coed

"The teachings of Baha'u'llah in no way detract from the station and teachings of Christ," Elizabeth Manser, II Vic, told a student group yesterday at a panel discussion sponsored by the Baha'i Student Group in Room 64 of University College. "On the contrary, through the Baha'i World Faith, the station and teachings of Christ have now been recognized by Jew, Moslem, Hindu and Buddhist without, at the same time, causing these people to reject their own religion."

"The Baha'i teachings affirm the unity of all the great spiritual teachers through whom man has evolved from the most primitive forms of society to the highly de-

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Radio: Stage 50

On Sunday Stage 50 presented us with "The Man Who Was Thursday", the brilliantly dialogued parody on spy thrillers, by G. K. Chesterton. It is the story of a man employed by Scotland Yard to wipe out the leaders of a band of anarchists. Thursday worms his way into the band and manages to become one of its seven leaders, each of whom are code-named by the days of the week. We eventually discover that six of the men are detectives, but the identity of Sunday is still a mystery, although he informs his radio audience that he is the "Peace of God"—undoubtedly his identity is veiled in allegorical significance, a significance which must remain forever conjectural.

Thanks to the vibrant voice of Lister Sinclair in the title role, and the excellent mood music of Lucio Agostini, the play remained interesting up to the point where we discover the third member of the anarchists to be a Scotland Yard man. From here on it is apparent that the remainder (except Sunday) are in the same category, and interest rapidly dissolves. Suspense centers around the identity of Sunday, an identity which still remains a mystery. The ending is melodramatic, stilted, and incomprehensible with the result that the entire point of the play is lost.

Lister Sinclair's interpretation of Thursday was the best performance he has given us to date. His voice, enveloped in an air of suspense throughout, captured the mood so effectively that it almost redeemed an otherwise dull hour of intended dramatic art. Lloyd Bochner, as Gregory, deserves special mention for a sincere and genuine interpretation of the one true anarchist in the play.

The major fault from the production standpoint is one that is almost consistently maintained by Andrew Allan. Most of his shows sound as if they were set in a six foot cube, regardless of whether the scene calls for its setting in a street, a large hall, aboard ship, on a moor, or in an 18th century drawing room, and one continually gets the impression that the actors have their lips glued to the microphone. Inartistic Hollywood may present a lot of drivel, but at least there is realism of locale in everything they do. It is to be hoped that this one major flaw may eventually be rectified and thereby remove the one main stigma that withholds from Stage 50 the title "great".

M. Schwartz

The folk comedy, Yosele, The Nightingale, offers some of the most compelling characterizations I have ever seen. One after another these old country, slightly grotesque, and intensely miserable figures pass before us, each with his own overwhelming burden and crippling fault.

The play, dramatized by Maurice Schwartz from the novel by the great Yiddish humorist, Sholem Aleichem, and also stayed by Mr. Schwartz, does not offer the comedy of the situation. Yosele is persuaded to leave his home and his betrothed, Esther, by a grafting impresario who wishes to exploit Yosele's outstanding voice. He leaves because he cannot bear his nagging stepmother and because he feels bound to follow his holy vocation as a cantor.

He succeeds in his calling, but is lured into marriage and a life of luxury and leisure by the wealthy temptress, Pearl. Meanwhile, the deserted Esther has contracted a marriage with an old miser, and Yosele in a feverish attempt to rescue her, arrives too late to stop the ceremony. The author, Sholem Aleichem, who has entered the lives of these people in order to write a true romance, regretfully explains that he could not find a happy ending for the story, since life is stranger than fiction.

The humor, perverted as it is, lies in the acute awareness by these people of their own weaknesses and foibles, and the aesthetic, even tragic, exaggeration with which they move towards their accepted fate. The lovers are lacking in humor; they are too young. It is their parents, the villagers and especially the fantastic impresario, portrayed magnificently by Maurice Schwartz, who have lived long enough to laugh.

The excellent sets by Leon Foch continue the bizarre effect, and the music by Sholen Secunda is very often effective, although there is too much of it. In some instances the staging is masterly—the ominous scene outside the synagogue, the weird wedding dance—but too often the business is sloppy and people crowding each other, and important characters having to force their entrances.

Lillian Decker.

The Critic Talks Back

Showers of harsh words have rained upon the shoulders of Varsity critics, calling them cold and ruthless and anything but kind. Readers have hailed us as ignorant or tasteless or pedantic, but rarely have the art, music and drama critics come in for showers of praise. On this account, as the new year begins, it appears a defense of sorts ought to be set forth.

First of all is the critic's role. His craft deals with works of art, and the purpose of art is the creation of beauty. The task of the critic is to interpret the art, judge it and tell the truth. Thus the artist aims at beauty, the critic at the truth.

But then there is the problem of the relative and the absolute in passing judgment on a concert, a painting or a play. Whether the reviewer speaks with authority is often a moot point. One voice recently attacked the critics for assuming an authority, a mantle of divinity, in passing their decrees, as if with the divine right of kings.

However, in one sense all criticism is personal expression. We may strive to minimize the personal element even as the barrister is removed from issuing a writ. But the personal equation cannot be ruled out, and it certainly ought not to be. That critic is fortunate who notes clearly where the facts end and his own judgment begins. Before he begins his interpretation and analysis, before he dons judge's robes to pass sentence, he must first assess the nature of the work at hand. It is difficult to find facts which are unalloyed with feelings and emotions and individual taste. To be sure, some call their tastes standards to invest them accordingly with the prestige of authority. Flourishing these standards such critics claim to have reached an objective state. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Notwithstanding this the critic must enter the gallery or theatre with some criterion which he may apply. And that criterion should be his own. We do not mean by this that he should enter with an open mind, as many do suggest. For an open-minded critic inevitably becomes an empty mind.

Varsity critics have always aimed to tell the truth, often until it hurts. Ever fearless in the performance of his duty, he often must be cruel in order to be kind.

As we face a season rich in drama: The Guardsman, The Barretts of Wimpole Street, Othello, The Streetcar Named Desire — in music: Brailowsky, Traubel, Menuhin, and Rubinstein, the need for criteria of value is paramount in order that from wave upon wave of undulating praise rolling over the productions from critics and press agents alike, we might sift a few grains of artistic truth. Such will be our future task.

Dear Diary:

Gee whiz! The seccond term is fast approaching just chockfull of tests and essays, and I haven't even caught up on my last term's notes. Oh where are the carefree days of the fall term? No worries, no cares—just campus shows. Here I sit with my book open and what do I think of—THE U.C. FOLLIES. Ah, what a show! What music, what dancing! "We're all for U.C., tra-la-la-da-dum." Genius—sheer genius! But, who can forget the SCARLET AND GOLD, and the "Chicken Song" or . . . "They're Laying Eggs Now." Vic—a terrific college and a tremendous show. And diary, do you remember SKULE NITE? Ah me, what those engineers can do to a girl! ! ! To top the term off, we went to see the "terrific tremendous, colossal, stupendous "DAFFYDIL NIGHT." I remember it all now, including my date, dear diary—the most adorable potential doctor you've ever seen. Of course, I couldn't understand all of the jokes, but I did appreciate the "Trial of Allan Clown" and no words can describe the humour of "Some Little Bug is Going to get You Some Day." ....

Y'know, dear diary, now that I think of it, there is a campus show this term and what a show! The

of course! ! If it's anything like last year, it certainly will be a colossal production. Remember the "T-o-r-o-n-t-o Song" with the ribbing of the T.T.C., the "Vocalist Blues," and the "French Can-Can Production"? I could rave on and on but what's the sense? I'm sure that the be even better. Why, with all the incorporated talent of the 1949 campus shows, we have a marvellous evening to look forward to. I wonder where I can get the all-important billet. I did hear rumours, although I'm not sure, that tickets go on sale this week. But rest assured dear diary, I'll beg, borrow or steal to get a ticket. I may even resort to a date.

Oh well—I guess all I can do is sit and dream until Feb. 6, because dear diary . . .

For the show that's nifty
It's the revue of 'fifty,
And for the talent that's new
It's the All-Varsity Revue.

Good-night dear diary,
KATY KO-ED.

Acadia's Students' Union

(From the Acadia Athenaeum, Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S.)

At long last the students' Union Building is completed and in operation. The task has proven to be a momentous one, but hard work, determination and a realistic approach have brought about the completion of the project.

The task now, as has been impressed upon us before, is to make a success of operating the building. As regards the management of the building, we can rest assured that the administration is as good as it is possible to obtain. The support of the Union Tuck Shop remains, however in our hands.

For the past few years all of us on the campus have been donating to the proposed Union Building. We have annually paid a fee of $5.00 which went solely to the Union Building Fund. In addition to that we have donated much money through the medium of Penny Arcades, Amateur Shows, Fool's Day Productions, and the Annual May Day Fund raising scheme.

After putting so much money and effort into it our duty lies clearly before us. We must patronize the canteen and do everything in our power to make the enterprise a financial success. Failure of the building could point only to a failure of Acadia students to complete a task that they had begun.

The simple truth of the matter is that, in patronizing the canteen, you can at the same time get more than your money's worth out of it. You can eat excellent food provided with better than average service in an atmosphere which is second to none in the district. What more can we ask?

If you disagree with us about the food, service or atmosphere, the wise thing to do is to take your reason for dissatisfaction to the Liaison Committee. You will find that every effort will be made to provide you with what you desire, within reason.

By all means don't just refuse to buy there without voicing your complaints. The task of the Union Building staff is to satisfy our needs. Our task is to support it to the best of our ability.

Other parts have been taken from Popular Science, the Forestry Magazine, and Applied Compresses, the Medical Journal. In order to follow the directions properly, the reader is advised to have by his side during the reading, one box of assorted workshop scraps, one box covered with a shroud, and one brass pittoon (cuspidor, professor) 12 inches in diameter.

I shall discuss the subject in two parts. Any questions? Good, I proceed.

How to meet girls. This is a very interesting question, a pastime that all men under forty (in some cases, under 81, biological freaks) like to partake of. Your religious beliefs, political ideas, or marital status doesn't matter. Meeting girls is a democratic institution. Some girls are hard to meet. With this type one must make a date a few days in advance. A very silly procedure, I think. Why not phone the same night and get refused. That makes it more exciting. Some girls are easy to meet. They stand around on corners and look you over as you pass by. Students, beware. This is dangerous territory to tread upon. However, if you must tread, tread water. There is always the health service (I also know a good lawyer).

There are some girls who lie in the class between hard to meet and easy to meet. They are found in dance halls, restaurants, in fact any place where there is a wall for them to form a stag line beside. Typical habitat of the species brings to mind such names as (no, I wasn't there. I got them from my friends?) Columbus, Masonic, Palais, Breeze, etc etc. (Readers who can offer further contributions as a result of honest exploration are invited to send them in.) This type constitutes semi-dangerous territory. Go ahead, dance your head off.

There is also a little matter of hotels, but the Editor tells me this is a family paper so . . . take it for what it is worth.

Oh yes, I forgot. You can meet girls at school too, can't you? How nice. Glasses and braids, buck teeth and braces. They're cute, so intelligent too. I'll bet they dance too if you force them. If not, you can always discuss physics intensively. Just don't try doing it with biology. Sure, these girls are okay, a little eager but okay. Some may even get married. Who knows?

How to enjoy yourself cheaply. Now that you have met the girl, you want to enjoy yourself. You want to take her out. You dance her silly. Then you dance some more and feed some more. Then you run out to a bootlegger for a couple of drinks. Then over to another dance. Or if you're the silly (rich man's son) type you take the crummy looking female from frat to frat and let the boys ogle her and assess her like the tax department assesses your house. Finally you take her home. You horse around for awhile, ha ha ha, so you can hang around longer. You talk and talk. She keeps pushing you towards the door. She has to be in

By JOE HARRISON

Perhaps it was the Christmas spirit or merely a strange coincidence but in the two weeks preceding the end of 1949 any reference to atomic power was all of the beneficial kind; and the press, radio and public platform all seemed to have united in deliberately avoiding such ominous subjects as bombs and allied methods of destruction.

The concerted emphasis on radioactive isotope and atomic by-products seemed all the more obvious because of the relatively meagre information on the subject up to that time.

On December 10, Dr. David A. Keys, vice-president of the National Research Council, in charge of the atomic energy project at Chalk River, delivered a lecture on the uses of atomic by-products to the Royal Canadian Institute. A full page article in a Toronto weekly devoted itself to the application of radioactive isotopes in medical research. Numerous radio talks and newspaper items gave an amazingly varied illustration of the potentialities of this new weapon of science. A complete list of the uses to which radio isotopes are put would require far more space than I have at my disposal, but I will try to illustrate the variety of applications which are possible.

Man-Made Atoms

Before going into the uses of isotopes perhaps it might be wise to give a chemical interpretation of them. Isotopes are variants of some basic element and differ physically from it only in their atomic weights. The addition of one or more neutrons causes the element to become radioactive but does not change any of its other chemical or physical properties as far as is known. A few isotopes exist in nature but the word is generally applied to one of nearly 800 forms which are available as byproducts of atomic bomb projects, and isotopes therefore can be considered as man-made atoms.

Penetrating Power

Radioactive isotopes are replacing X-rays because of greater powers of penetration and the fact that no elaborate equipment is necessary in their use. A Toronto company has successfully conducted tests using Cobalt-60 supplied by the Chalk River plant in detecting flaws in steel plates, cog-wheels and heavy machinery. So strong are the gamma-rays, which Cobalt-60 radiates, that pieces of steel 4 inches thick have been penetrated by the powerful camera they operate.

Radioactive Eggs

Radio isotopes are being used to learn more about body processes. Radioactive phosphorus fed to chickens produces radioactive eggs. An examination of the yolk and cell indicates exactly the percentage of phosphorus which finds its way to each part of the egg. These eggs in turn produce radioactive chickens which can be identified from the regular variety only by means of a Geiger counter traversing the barnyard.

Fertilizer, too!

Radioactive phosphorus is introduced into fertilizer and then traced through the plant in order to determine the best methods of fertilizing. In the process of photo-synthesis the plants utilize the energy of sunlight to synthesize sugar, fats, proteins and vitamins out of the carbon dioxide and water in the air and minerals in the soil. In the process sunlight energy is stored in the plant to provide energy for the living organisms which use the plant as food. These plants are sealed in jars and grown in the presence of radioactive carbon dioxide. Each substance manufactured in the photo-synthesis process then becomes radioactive and when the plant is fed to animals the amount of protein, vitamins, sugar and fats which are absorbed by each animal tissue can be measured.

Piston Rings, Gears and Cylinders

Radioactive isotopes are such a sensitive medium, according to Dr. Key, that one teaspoonful of radioactive substance such as carbon dioxide or iodine dissolved into Lake Ontario would permit the amount of water in the lake to be determined by sampling one teaspoonful of the mixture. This characteristic is utilized in various manufacturing processes, particularly the paper industry. A radioactive source is placed on one side of the sheets being processed and a counter on the other. The amount of radiation penetrating the paper is an exact function of its thickness. With the output of the counter amplified and controlling the pressure on the rollers an extremely accurate product is possible.

The rates of wear in machinery are also very accurately determined by means of isotopes. Machine parts such as piston rings, gears, etc., can be "radioactivated" and examination of the lubricating oil will give an indication of the amount of radioactive material worn away. Cylinder walls may also be examined to determine the amount of metal deposited.

Leaks Traced

By introducing a small amount of soap containing a barium isotope between two types of crude oil in a pipe-line the junction of the two types may be followed above ground by means of a Geiger counter. This same radioactive property can be used to operate check and cut-off valves automatically to regulate the flow of different grades of oil. In a similar manner leaks in dams or waterpipes may be detected by the introduction of some radioactive sodium in the water. The leaks may be detected with a Geiger counter above the surface.

But it is in the field of medicine and surgery that the isotope really comes into its own. Phosphorus-32 injected into the veins of patients suffering from deep-rooted brain tumors finds its way directly to the diseased tissues and concentrates there. By means of needle-like counters, invented by Dr. Charles B. Robinson of the Harvard Medical school, which probe into the brain these tumours can be easily located.

Radioactive iodine is used to cure cancerous thyroid conditions. Radioactive gold is effective in eliminating cancerous tumours; the gold-isotope is very cheap costing only $2 to $5 per treatment. Investigations into the cause of oedema of the heart, a fairly common ailment, by means of hydrogen and sodium isotopes reveal some startling information regarding body functions. By tracing these isotopes, Dr. George E. Burch at the Tulane Medical School, estimated that 20 barrels of water and 50 pounds of salt pass back and forth through the walls of our blood vessels every day. He found that oedema, which gives rise to swellings in the body is caused by the presence of excess salt in the tissues. Similar experiments show that the body is an incredibly dynamic structure. Millions of chemical changes take place constantly and at incredible speeds. Cells are built up, perform their mission, are torn down in a fraction of a second, yet in that amazingly short time they perform a thousand functions. Sugar becomes protein, proteins becom fats and amino acids and vitamins do their work. The speed at which these things were done was not apparent until doctors began experimenting with isotopes.

Bird-watchers and Detectives

So much for the medical aspects if which only a few can be mentioned here. Are there any bird-watchers among you? Then you will be pleased to know that it is no longer necessary to spend long hours waiting for the return of migrant birds. A minute radio-active substance attached to the leg of the bird will set off a recording mechanism when the bird enters or leaves the loft. Criminologists? Scotland Yard is experimenting with radioactive materials concealed in valuable packages as a means of foiling prospective thieves. The radioactive material leaves a trail and by means of the invaluable geiger counter every policeman is a potential bloodhound.

Thus the story of one of the by-products of atomic fission. Perhaps that battered and bewildered individual "the man in the street," will rest a little easier knowing that the scientist and the atom are not completely the Frankenstein monster he had been led to believe they were.

U. of Manitoba Nuclear Research Progressing Well

Winnipeg, Jan. 10 —(CUP)— Nuclear spectroscopy research at the University of Manitoba is yielding interesting and profitable results. Since last spring the research, under the direction of Dr. W. Pringle, has been employing a rare Gamma-ray spectrometer to determine energy levels of atomic nuclei by examining their radiations in much the same manner as an ordinary spectroscope analyses visible light.

A Beta-ray spectrometer is now being constructed and when it is in working order, it is hoped that there will be ample grounds for supporting or destroying the theoretical considerations of atomic make-up as advanced by Hans Bethe of Cornell and the English Devons.

bed before four, alone, she says. You talk till you're red in the face. Then you click. She gives you a kiss. You're happy, just getting started. Then she slams the door in your face, and you're on your way home. It cost you some dough for that little shindig. And what have you got? A parched throat, sore feet, a swelled head, a headache, hangover, indigestion, and frustration. Yes, you got a kiss. So what? You can do better with a wet sponge.

You want to enjoy yourself cheaply? This is what to do. Call up a nice girl. When she answers the phone, hang up. Take a quarter out of your pocket and then go down to the corner. There you can do wonderful things with that quarter. If you are intellectual, buy a good book. If you're athletic snoot pool. If you're sleepy, step into the neighborhood show.

The best way to enjoy women cheaply is to avoid them.

VIC'S CORNER

With "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer" still ringing in the ears and "I Just Go Nuts At Xmas" (how true!) bringing back happy memories, there's not much incentive to get back to the books. The old fence will be up before you've met Miss Honey for the year!

Don't worry though, we're all in the same boat.

The Victoria-At-Home is number one on the date books this term. A wonderful dance of distinction, to be in Hart House, Jan. 27. Tickets next Tuesday.

The dress is optional. This means it's optional for men only. And they don't get much option at that! It's a choice of the "Sunday-best" or Sid Sylver's worst for most of us! The girls will wear those extra long hangovers from Queen Victoria days.

There's a rumor that the VCU Ex lads will be in dress suits.

— v —

The Gilbert and Sullivan production for the year, "Rudigore," Jan. 31 to Feb. 4, promises to be something for Toronto. It's the first time it's been staged in this fair city, so they say.

Tickets will be on sale from the cast members quite likely, and they are putting on a Saturday matinee for the busy types.

Most music fans in Vic will know the names of Marg Carmichael, Cathy McBain and Dit DeCarrol. They are taking the main parts. But there's a rumor they are importing the ghosts from some secret source. (More of this later when the secret reporter gets back on the job.)

— v —

The SCM is planning an ambitious program for this term in the form of four commissions. The "University Commission" meets Mondays to discuss current problems, professors, societies, activities, etc.

The Political Com. on Tuesdays (today, 1 p.m., in House. Ec. bldg.) will talk on racial questions, freedom, world and Christianity, etc. Ecumenical Com. meets Thursdays (Jan. 12, Room 21, Vic), considers problems of church unity, SCM and VCF cooperation, etc.

The Evangelical Com. meets Wed. (Jan. 11, Room 21, Vic) to talk of Christianity and its work in the world.

The Commissions will not merely talk about these problems but also try and get something done.

Gathletics: Girls' Hockey Team makes its initial appearance this Friday against PHE. The Frosh perhaps don't realize it, but Vic's girls are internationally famous as the 8th Wonder of the World.

You think this is a joke? Well, have a good laugh and then wonder why some people down Kansas way wanted them to come down as a feature attraction! (The details may be wrong, but Jeff has the story!)

— v —

Mathletics: Only information here is on the Director himself. Our friend Al Strike is keeping in condition chasing the same old street-cars at the same outrageous hours.

Tickets for Athletic Nite will be on sale Tues. and Wed. at VCU office, 10-2 p.m.

— v —

Impromptu Debates again this week, Wed. and Friday. The winners are in the semi-finals. Then we reach the grand finale, and send a team to McMaster to make the season worthwhile.

Financial failures have been quite prevalent in student productions this year. Perhaps it's due to reduced enrolment. Some think the average person just hasn't the extra money any more.

However, the Scarlet and Gold did better than hoped for, went in the hole but a "moderate amount." A big congrats to the financiers of the show, Tom Ingles and Bill Sharpe, who did such a fine job.

Candidates for VCU positions, especially for SAC reps, should make themselves known. SAC reps Doug Thomas and Ruth Manning would like to take those interested to a few meetings. Just leave your name in the VCU office.

— v —

Snoopography: Al Strike, Athletic Director, is a fine specimen from Bowmanville who believes in the theory of proximity. Graduating in History this year, he plans to go to Osgoode "if all works out well." His favorite occupation is going for a run; favorite saying "TTBS Less?" If the athletic society ever has a surplus, it will be under Al's capable direction.

This is Party Pooper Week, the one and only week set aside during the year to study.

"We're Really All Alike"

By HELEN BOEHLER

"I'm taking my son to the Mother Goose Pantomime this afternoon," said Professor McIlwraith, head of the Anthropology Department, "and confidentially . . . I think the adults enjoy these things more than the children."

He confides this between puffs from his pipe lit every two minutes. Before that this kindly, shrewd-eyed professor had been reminiscing about his life-work and his all-absorbing passion — anthropology. He told us that after his service with the Imperials in the first war, he gave up his plans for African Colonial Service in favor of studying anthropology at Cambridge. Then he became interested in anthropology only for itself, not just as a profession.

25 Years Among Indians

The Ottawa National Museum offered him a research position, which inaugurated his twenty-five years of field-work among the Indians. With Canadian field experience, he was exactly what the University of Toronto wanted to establish a department of Anthropology and also take over certain Museum responsibilities.

So in 1925 the young professor came to Toronto. His department has now grown to a permanent staff of four. He is in charge of all the anthropological material in the Museum, the arts and crafts of all the primitive people of the world. He is responsible too, for the setting up of galleries, the acquisition of material and for the arranging of the erection of totem-poles in the Museum rotunda.

Organized First "Digs"

But his duties do not stop with anthropology. As an associate director of the archeological section of the Museum, he has to know something about the Chinese, Egyptians and Europeans. "But I don't," his eyes twinkled. Anthropology, he informed our English Lang. and Lit. ears, includes everything about non-Europeans — society, religion and mythology.

No doubt you have heard of student "digs," (student work in terms of archeology). Professor McIlwraith organized the first of these, at a site near St. Thomas in 1938. One of the students who accompanied him on this "dig", Mr. Emerson, who arranges the student "digs" such as the autumn one at Woodbridge, is now on the staff in charge of archeology.

Prof. McIlwraith also recalled his work at the Jesuit Martyrs' shrine at Fort Ste. Marie near Midland, interesting from the viewpoint of the history of civilization as well as of religion as the site of the oldest permanent settlement in Ontario. On these "digs" observers note that the Professor always appears with a lumberjack shirt, high boots, beret and the inevitable pipe.

"We're All The Same"

Students of the professor will tell you that he always begins a lecture with "I want you to think now" or with "I once knew an Indian who said . . .". It is an undisputed fact that Prof. McIlwraith is very interested in Indians. He himself, as a true anthropologist, says that if he found it convenient to get to Africa he would be just as interested in the African native. But, since the trip to the Six Nations Reserve in Brantford takes only one day, it is natural for him to be interested in Indians.

Then asked about the peculiarities of Indians, he came back with this bit of philosophy, "The more you know of other people, the more you realize that they are all essentially the same. You come away with greater admiration for other people and greater tolerance for their idiosyncracies."

On the wall beside his desk he has the picture of Sonaoun, a B.C. Indian, one of the most intelligent men he has met in any community, but an absolute blackguard. "If he were a white man he would probably be a millionaire promoter of shady enterprises, but shrewd enough never to break the law." Prof. McIlwraith came to know the essential human characteristics of this old lawbreaker. He finds that the differences from white men are only superficial. "They are no dirtier than Shakespearean Englishmen."

Expects Assimilation

The Indians may merge with their white compatriots more and more for as the world moves on and changes, the Indians will change too, and change involves loss as well as gain. But if they only preserve the pride in their ancestry, Professor McIlwraith will be satisfied.

His summers have been largely spent on Museum activities and field work among Canada's 120,000 indians. He hasn't "particularly dashed off to the corners of the world," neither has he made it a habit to live among Indians.

His chief extra-curricular interest is outdoor activities. He loves canoeing, is interested in natural history as a hobby, is a "somewhat mad field naturalist" which he finds a relaxing hobby, more so than the squash and tennis he used to play. His travels have extended as far as Hawaii.

Uses "Taste Test"

Professor McIlwraith is noted, among other things, for the most comprehensive book on Canadian anthropology. He has exhaustively studied the Bella Coola Indians in British Columbia. Now he is busy writing two or three papers on archeological work done near Orillia three years ago. But he must find time to work over 10,000 specimens, many of which he tastes, "the tongue being more sensitive than the fingers."

Anthropology doesn't run in the family, he said. His oldest daughter is in Food Chemistry, steering well away from anthropology, but she enjoys going on the digs.

Professor McIlwraith is more interested in teaching than in abstract research. He also is one of the few people who lectures without notes. "The problem of man brings in the problem of human interaction," he said, as he glanced over his morning correspondence which included anthropological letters from the Maritimes, Ottawa, New York, etc., and essays on everything from a description of an Eskimo bowl.

And then to the Mother Goose pantomime with his eight-year-old son.

Masculine Matters

Sartorial Look Lacking McMaster Head Complains

The state of male dress on the far west campus of McMaster University in Hamilton gave rise to some concern as the year 1949 drew to a dismal close. Chancellor Gilmour of the university was interviewed by campus weekly, The Silhouette, and the following front-page report resulted.

Questioned by The Silhouette as to his outlook on the problem of undergraduate male costumes on the campus, Dr. Gilmour immediately replied that the question had its pathetic side, its psychological side, its cultural side, and its serious side.

No Integration

Warning the reporter that he might at any moment break out into a full length address on the subject, Dr. Gilmour suggested there is something rather pathetic about supposedly grown people disregarding the ordinary canons of dress. This disregard argues a failure to integrate themselves either with the university body to which they belong or to prepare themselves for responsibility in the larger community to which they go.

Since matters of dress are so much a matter of self-discipline, the Chancellor confessed frankly some sides of the problem could not be approached by way of discipline, except that the University was at liberty to close its dining hall and lecture rooms at will against people who did not conform to minimum standards of correctness. Such extreme action, he felt, was scarcely conceivable.

High Schoolers Casual

Asked what he meant by the psychological side, Dr. Gilmour pointed out this year, for the first time since the war, the entering class is made up almost entirely of high school matriculants. Thus there is not the strong body of older men who have learned the discipline of appearance and dress in the armed services to set a mature example to boys who have been allowed to drift along in the very casual tradition of secondary school dress.

This means a carrying-over of the high school mind, which has not been a problem for several years, and which could be solved by a little gentle ridicule and sound advice from older men. Dr. Gilmour also suggested there might be truth in the psychological analysis of North America made recently by a British psychologist. This psychologist claimed that the North Amrican male tendency to go around in carpet slippers and braces, without ties and sometimes without shaving, was an indication of their unconscious rebellion against the dominance of the female on this continent. The Chancellor suggested that probably no undergraduate would want his carelessness to be interpreted in this manner, but the British psychologist possibly might have been right.

On the cultural side, the consideration is one of the good mannersners and ordinary politeness. No one on a university faculty should be subjected to the ordeal of lecturing to people whose dress and general attitude label them as being incapable of appreciating so much that a university stands for. No one would want to go to the point of forbidding the classroom to offenders, but an instructor would be justified in openly rebuking unshaven and untidy males, and insisting that no one is so poor or so studiously boorish as to be unable to afford a tie and something better than a sweater. The presence of ladies in class would ordinarily solve the problem, except that the high school tradition has been so dubious at this point.

Campus Integration

The Chancellor hinted, however, that the most serious matter was that of integration, both here and and after graduation. A man who wears insignia of some other institution, reflecting boyish memories and achievements, has not yet counted himself a member of the University. If he did so, he would immediately recognize that only insignia belonging to the campus should be worn by university members on it, no matter what their decision as to life off the campus may be.

Some universities have a written rule, and most an unwritten rule, that only local achievements will be celebrated on campus garments. But the most serious matter is that a man who cannot integrate himself suitably into this student community is under a severe handicap when he wants to take his place in the larger community after graduation. If he does not learn lessons of suitable dress and good self-discipline before graduation, he is not likely to command attention and respect in the world outside the campus. No man can start too soon to learn simple lessons in good grooming.

"Look Sharp"

In the business world men in responsible posts are accustomed to wearing ties and coats. If in undergraduate days the coat is translated into terms of windbreakers, that may be acceptable. But the matter of the inclusion of a tie, care in personal cleanliness, attention to the condition of one's shoes, and so on are matters which can affect vitally all relationships on the campus and all prospects beyond it.

Baha'i Compatible

veloped cultures of the present time," Manser pointed out.

"As the child moves from grade to grade, the teacher reiterates what the child has been taught in the lower grades while adding new teachings which the child is able to digest in accordance with his development," she stated. "The prophets can be compared to the different teachers and humanity to the pupil. Jesus reiterated the teachings of Moses and then added to them. In like manner, Baha'u'llah has reiterated the teachings of Jesus and added to them," she said.

Arthur Irwin, demonstrator in the Department of Geology, pointed out that the unique feature of the Baha'i World Faith was its social teachings for world unity. "The essential teachings of all the prophets are the same," Irwin stated. "They only differ in the social teachings which change to keep pace with the changing conditions of life on the planet."

The speaker spoke briefly about the institutions for world government and other social principles concerning the abolition of the extremes of wealth and poverty, universal education, the necessity of all men having either a trade or profession and the principle of equal opportunity for all regardless of class or race.

Gerard Robarts, I Arts (Trinity), pointed out the need for a new revelation of God. "The evolution of religion can be compared to the evolution of the seasons," Robarts stated. "The coming of a prophet is like the springtime of a new era, the acceptance of His teachings is like the summertime in which a new culture emerges, the crystalization of these teachings into forms and rituals is like the autumn, and the decline of religion as a vital, formative influence in society is like the wintertime of a religion," he pointed out.

"Today," he concluded, "the whole world is passing through a winter period in which all the great world religions are in a period of decline. Thus it is that Baha'u'llah has come as the breath of new life, providing a new springtime for all humanity."

Movie Review

On The Town

A little over three years ago Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra were teamed for the first time to sing, dance and mug their way through a musical called "Anchors Aweigh." It was swell! Last year they made "Take Me Out To the Ball Game." It was generally so-so! Maybe it's the sailor suits that make the difference (remembering Paramount's delightful "The Fleet's In"). At any rate, in "On the Town," at Loew's, the boys are gobs again and the picture's fine.

But something new has been added. Just to prove that the ball park sojourn wasn't a waste of time, Betty Garrett and Jules Munshin, two of the boys' teammates who kept "Game" from fanning out completely, have tagged along and once more give a good account of themselves. Furthermore, there are two lovely dancing ladies: brunette Ann Miller, who does tap-dance routines, and blonde Vera-Ellen, who does ballet.

As you may have noticed, there are three boys and three girls, and this makes things just as cosy as you probably suspect. But actually it's not as coincidental as it might be. You see, the girls don't live together. What happens is this. These three gobs have a 24-hour leave in New York. Before three of these hours are up, one of them (Kelly) has fallen for this month's Miss Turnstiles," a girl on a subway poster. During their search for her they pick up a female cab-driver and a lady-anthropologist, or rather are picked up by them, as these are two of the most forward young ladies you'll ever hope to see. Before 6:00 a.m. rolls around again they have disappeared with a taxi-cab, taken a museum apart, given a wallflower something nice to write in her diary, led the cops a wild chase across Brooklyn Bridge, broken up a kootch show at Coney Island, landed in the hands of the Shore Patrol, and seen the girls again for one last kiss. So much, as they say, for the plot.

What makes this just about the lightest thing that ever hit the screen is the dancing, directed by Kelly, and going on nearly all the time in one form or another. Most of it is of the stage-y, intimate revue type, which is rather refreshing after so many movie extravaganzas, especially when Kelly, Sinatra and Garrett humbly, although hilariously, double as a chorus line in the back-ground for Miller's museum number "Pre-Historic Man." The outstanding dance scene, however, is pert Vera-Ellen's "Miss Turnstiles" Ballet. The "Day In New York" Ballet, while well-executed, is not nearly so well conceived as Robert Alton's superb choreography for "Slaughter On Tenth Avenue," which introduced Kelly and V-E, as partners in "Words and Music."

The music in "On the Town" is not melodic enough to become popular, but it is appropriately plenty lively and has some very catchy lyrics. We especially liked the title song, "New York, A Wonderful Town" and "You're Awful," as sung by Sinatra and cab-driver Garrett on top of the Empire State Building.

Lots of pleasing scenes! Opening has a steel-helmeted workman walking down a dock at Brooklyn Navy Yard singing an operatic good-morning yawn; Garrett takes Frankie on a wild ride, chases him in and out of the cab, trying to drag him up to her apartment; the tango takes a beating from Kelly and Alice Pearce, a panic as the wallflower, before he takes her home and kisses her good-night in a pathetic little scene director Stanley Donan could easily have let get out of hand, but didn't; and an M.G.M. chorus-line does a clever take-off on night-club floor-shows.

Lack of Height

Blues into shape for Intercollegiate competition. Eight of the ten players on Varsity's last year squad graduated last spring, with only Johnny McManus and Jack Gray remaining to play this season. Thus Bob is faced with the problem of an almost completely new squad.

In addition, the coach is bemoaning the loss of several Intramural hoop stars of last season to other colleges. For example, two stars of last year's St. Mike's A team, big 6 foot 6 inch Ray Ryan and teammate Pat Figel, formerly in the Western course here at U. of T., decided to transfer to Assumption College in Windsor when they were offered their room and board free, and will be in the starting line-up against the Blues next Saturday night.

The Western University squad this year have three big men to control the rebounds at both ends of the court. These boys, all 6'6" in height, will give the Varsity team a lot of trouble when they meet in their Intercollegiate schedule games. Wearing and Wade are already known to Varsity fans, and the newcomer is Jim Ellis.

The Blues will come up against a former teammate, big Doug Tyndall, when they come up against the Central Y Seniors at 8.45 on Thursday night in the Central Y gym. The game will probably indicate just how well the Blues can do against a taller team now that they have a few games under their belt.

The Athletic Night next Saturday will bring a visit from Assumption College. The Blues were the only Canadian team to defeat Assumption last year until they were defeated in the Dominion final by Vancouver. Without Freddy Thomas to worry about, perhaps we can hope for a repeat performance next weekend.

Hot Music Survey

I Soc. and Phil., and Doug. Davidson, II Eng. Lang. and Lit., have been asked to supervise the session.

Only records which combine jazz value and popular appeal have been chosen for this initial program, Davidson said. The general survey will only be a very "sketchy" one because of the limitation of thirteen records, he said.

Manitoba Has Poets Too

We have our Themistocles who daily tersely verses. The Manitoban, the University of Manitoba paper, has no regular limerick producer, but one inspired writer got going the other week. Probably after a violent New Year's Jag.

His efforts went this-a-way:

There was a young man from Calcutta
Who coated his tonsils with butta,
Thus converting his snore
From a thunderous roar
To a soft oleaginous mutta.

Getting well into it, the western lyricist went on:

There was a young man from Bombay
Who . . .

A comrade from near Crimean
Once said he had only one feah
That if the Bosphorus
Were any more phosphorus
The fish would become very deah.

And to round it off in the best Eastern manner:

A laddie from Vladivostok
While bewailing wan day his hood lock
Had only invective
For courting collective
"This free love, she's nodding budt talk."
He quit here.

1922, is now out of date. The committee is busy studying the Ubyssey song book for tips and picking the most suitable songs from a possible thousand. They believe the new book will compare favorably with those of Ubyssey, McGill and Queen's.

Asked how the committee would censor or eliminate certain questionable songs, Heisey commented "the song book is planned for mixed company."

Have At Thee!

Varsity now has in the person of Julius Alpar, a Hungarian immigrant who is rated as the continent's top fencing master. Alpar, who is 41 years old, arrived in Canada last May after a distinguished career in the U.S. army of occupation in Germany. During the war he was a ski instructor in the Hungarian army. Besides being an expert in fencing and skiing, both as a participant and as an instructor, Alpar is also accomplished in the fields of water-skiing, judo and ju-jitsu.

It is Alpar's hope at present to raise the standard of Canadian competition in these sports. At present he is working hard with the fencers in preparation for their meets which are coming up this week and next.

At the CNE last Fall Alpar entered the water-skiing event although he had never participated before. Proof of the fact that he is a natural athlete is the silver hardware he won on that occasion.

He has won more athletic silverware in the past than most people see in a lifetime. Most of these baubles were taken away from him however when the Nazis moved in. He has lots of testimonials from high sports officials, giving him credit for proficiency in no less than 22 sports.

For ten years he was professor of physical education in the Royal Hungarian Academy and at the same time instructed in fencing in two Hungarian clubs that produced Olympic and world champions.

His addition to the staff of this University should prove a happy move for all concerned, as Julius Alpar is an extremely interesting and colorful personality.

VARSITY SPORTS

on the sideline

By Betty Aston

Noon hours, noon hours, noon hours! And never anything to do!

But that was last year's song. That was before the girl's hockey games had started.

Don't spend your noon hours with a cigarette in the common room. You'll meet more of the opposite sex in Varsity Arena. (Ed. Note: Look out guys.)

Don't waste a dull hour in the library. You'll learn more watching a girl's hockey game.

What better way to spend an hour than cheering your favourite team in your favourite sport to a smashing victory over their bitter rivals?

What is your favourite sport? Why, girl's hockey of course! And your favourite team? Why, for the male species of spectators at any rate, it's the girls with the longest legs (because they can skate faster). Those satin bloomers and wool stockings make leg judging a cinch.

As you nibble excitedly on your ham sandwich, no doubt you are ardently discussing the obvious reasons why you wouldn't miss a girl's hockey game for four A's in four essays.

First of all, where alse could you see such a clean sport? No body-checking—not intentionally anyway; No tripping—unless the ref happens to be looking the other way. Oh yes, that was last year when girls were refereeing, wasn't it?

Then too, there is the pure enjoyment you get from watching a girl on skates stop "on a dime." It has been done. Didn't you know? Not at the beginning of the season of course, when skates are so sharp that the sudden breaking action produces a top-heavy effect, and consequently an embarrassing flat-on-her-face fall.

You won't see it at the end of the season, when momentum carries the player on dull skates ten yards past the puck—but you should see them in the middle game of the series!

The 1950 Women's Hockey League had its official start yesterday at 12.30 in Varsity Arena, when U.C. defeated O.T. 3-0. Come back again Wednesday, same time, same station, and bring all your friends who don't know what they're missing in fun and enjoyment.

Sportswoman

The first women's hockey game of the season was played yesterday at 12:30 in Varsity Arena. U.C. II started off with a win defeating O.T., 3-1.

U.C. carried the balance of play, taking an early lead with Wilma Booty, scoring the first goal.

Men have taken over the refereeing again this year, but there was only one penalty handed out in the game to U.C.

Bowling is gliding along smoothly, according to Elizabeth Ross, Bowling Club president.

An Interfaculty tournament is being planned to take place late in February. Each college or faculty will be represented by two bowlers to be chosen from those who have been bowling with the club at the Midtown Bowling alleys.

It isn't too late to join. If you'd like to take up the sport, just contact Elizabeth Ross, or your individual college rep.

A Ski T Dance is being arranged by the Ski Committee to take place within the next two weeks.

The committee is also planning to have three instructors, for beginners, intermediates, and seniors at Newmarket in the near future, but, as usual, it all depends on the snow conditions.

Lack Of Height Great Handicap Declares Coach

By BRUCE MACDONALLD

"We are coming along better all the time, but lack of height is a big handicap that we must overcome," declared Bob Masterson last night as his watchful eye glanced over the Senior basketball Blues during their practice session.

"I feel we can give any team our size a real battle," stated Bob, citing last Thursday's victory over the Tri-Bells as an example. "Although the Tri-Bells are rated high in city basketball circles, we showed that we had the scoring ability to keep pace with a good team that is no longer bigger than we are."

However, mere height is not the only problem that coach Masterson has to face in whipping the

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

There are a couple of big weeks coming up for Varsity sports now . . . . boxing, wrestling, hockey, fencing, and the rest.

For this Saturday Mac MacCutcheon (who claims he's going to take off some weight) has another super-colossal, magnificent, superb, gigantic, all-embracing, Athletic Night scheduled for those who want to have a lot of fun at a ridiculously low price and show off to their girls what a swell University they attend. In the Feecha Attrakshun of the evening Bob Masterson's Hoop-Ball Blues take on powerful Assumption College in their first CIAU game.

Last year Assumption, who then had the services of red-hot Freddie Thomas, were favored to take Varsity by as far as Rube Waddell could throw a MacIntosh apple. But the Blues were "ready for Freddie", and beat the Purple Raiders, albeit by the slimmest of margins. It was one of the most exciting games seen in Toronto for a long time; neither team led by more than a couple of baskets at any time, and the fans had their hearts in their mouths on an average of five times a minute.

This year the Raiders haven't Thomas, but they're still good enough to have beaten the University of (everybody boo) Western Ontario.

This week the interfaculty senior wrestling competitions will be run off, with the finals coming on this Saturday's A-Night. These scrambles really produce some fine action; just as much, if not more, than the boxing bouts. Varsity wrestling coach Morris Sobel will be there to look over intercollegiate prospects; which reminds us . . . . wonder who is the better wrestler, Morris or the Broadview Y coach? Maybe this could be decided by a bout in the main gym between basketball games on an Athletic Night.

Next week brings the interfaculty senior boxing competitions, and if these bouts will be as good as the junior competitions last month, they will certainly be worth going to. This department would just as soon see these bouts as any that the professional promoters put on. Each bout goes three two minute rounds, and it is this short time in the ring that enables the boys to come out swinging till the last bell. And what the bouts lack in length of rounds, they make up in the prodigious number of bouts put on. In fact, there are so many, that four nights are necessary to finally declare winners in each weight class.

Bob Masterson is always disappointed that whenever the bouts are on, he has to be at a team practice. But since most of you aren't in this position, you would be well advised to go out and give your college a boosting shout . . . . January 18, 19, 20 at five post meridian and January 21 at eight.

No senior hockey till the end of next week, but the Junior Bees (What's the matter with the Junior Bees?) will be playing their regular rounds every Tuesday and Friday, and the little publicized, little known, and still less followed Intermediates take on Waterloo College Wednesday. The Intermediates are in the same league as the Western Seniors, and do we ever hope Jack Life's boys give the Purple a beating! Something like 15-0 would do nicely.

And speaking of little-publicized efforts, on Wednesday at five the fencers will be at each other's throats . . . en garde! Touché! Parlay! and look out for his elly-bay!

Our friends the Fizz-Edders are putting on another sizzling Healthzapoppin show come February. Come one, come all . . . . if you can get a ticket!

Interfaculty Sport

By BILL THREET

The calibre of basketball being played in the interfaculty major league these days is indeed not up to the high standard of years gone by. We trust the reason for these poor showings is the short period the schedule has been under way and the scarcity of practice time in the gyms. Maybe the conditioning of the athletes also has something to do with it. You know, New Year's Eve and all that sort of thing.

In the only major league game struggled through yesterday the SPS fourths outlasted and outfought the UC fourths entry to a 23-19 win. The game was not very exciting for the large noon-hour crowd and was considerably marred by wild passing and fouling. UC fell down badly on the checking phase of the game and gave SPS numerous easy field goals.

Al Davie was the outstanding player on the floor. He was also pretty good when he was on his feet. Besides hurling in two large points, Davie was dynamic defensively. For the Skulemen Foster with seven points was the highest player but the fastest and trickiest SPS'er was Kabayama who added 6.

Line-ups:—

SPS IV: Foster 7, Speed, Brown, Service 2, Milne 4, Neff 3, Simpkin, Jacques, Kabayama 5, Kamioka 2. Total—23.

UC IV: R. Cohen, C. Cohen 2, Phillips, Freedman 6, Farber 6, Davie 2, Tomesek. Total—19.

In two minor league fixtures Chemical thirds and UC Pee Bees took one-sided victories from Architecture and Vic ninths. The Chemicals beat Architecture 39-9 with Todd and Shurie shining with 11 and 10 respectively.

The Pee Bees (whatever that stands for) drubbed Vic ninths 27-2 with Tobe and Miller carrying the scoring load with ten and 11.

On the hockey front SPS IV handed UC IV the worst shellacking of the season, downing the arch men 9-1. Bill Scott prevented a shutout. For the Skulemen Mustard, Sterling and Kaiser all tallied twice with Cole, Jenner and Colquhoun adding singles.

Trinity "A" knocked off the junior Skulemen in another ice encounter 4-1. Tom Crerar notched two for the winners, followed by Leiscman and Whitehead. Smith responded for SPS.

Today the indoor track meets start in Hart House. Still time to get your entry in. You get points, credits, Reed points, etc.

Basic Political Split Sends Dutch From IUS, Sets Pattern For West

(This is the third of a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of the International Union of Students. The fourth article in this series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

The political slant in the newly formed International Union of Students, which had shown itself even before the Constitution was adopted at the World Youth Congress held in Prague in August, 1946, became more evident as the Congress proceeded.

'Blocs' Soon Appear

Miss Catherine McLean, who attended the Congress as a delegate from the Canadian Federation of Newman Clubs spent a large section of her report dealing with the voting procedures used in Prague, and the "blocs" into which the nations represented soon divided. She reported:

"From the very first important issue that came up to the last, one could almost draw a definite line in the hall and predict who would vote which way on any issue. From the first proposal of the Russians or Jugoslavs that met with any opposition and required a vote, the following general division was seen. Supporting the Russians and Jugoslavs were the entire delegations from Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Mexico, Mongolia, Poland, Roumania, and Spain (the Spanish delegations was all from outside Spain). The following delegations were divided: British, American, Cuban, Indian, Italian, French, Norwegian, New Zealand, Dutch, Irish and Chinese. (Some delegations are not mentioned because it was impossible to ascertain how they were voting.)

Canadian Delegates Split

"The Canadian delegation requires special mention. They were: Mr. Guy Rocher of the Jeunesse Etudiant Chretienne, Mr. Paul Gerin-Lajoie of The University of Montreal, Miss Dorothy Beales of The Student Christian Movement, Miss Catherine McLean of The Canadian Federation of Newman Clubs, and Mr. Gordon McLean of the Canadian Student Veterans Association. On all issues of any importance the first four voted together, opposed to the 'bloc', Mr. McLean voted on the other side, with the 'bloc'."

Gord McLean, a University of Toronto student, was connected with the L.P.P. Club at Toronto. He later organized the Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, and according to reports did a very good job. While at Toronto he was a controversial figure, mainly because of his political views. It was McLean however who was elected at the Congress to represent Canadian students on the IUS Executive, after Mr. Lajoie's name had been proposed, and then withdrawn by the British delegation. It did not seem at the time that McLean was the most "representative" of the group, according to Miss McLean (no relation).

The Dutch Walk Out

The Dutch delegation walked out of the World Youth Congress in 1946, refusing to take their seats on the IUS Council. Their statement at that time was to be the basis on which most of the fourteen "western" nation student unions refused to join IUS, or left the organization. It reads in part:

"The Dutch Delegation regrets very much this decision, but it has been taken unanimously because of the fundamental objections against the foundations of the constitution and against the tendency of this Congress.

"Every minute of this congress we are talking about democracy and the fight against fascism in all its forms, but you may depend on the following: we in Holland know the idea of democracy, but that is something quite different from the policy of domination that some groups have shown at this congress towards the minorities.

". . . although the acting on majority decisions must be called a democratic procedure, it is not complete without the following: the maintenance of the rights and privileges of the minority."

Pattern Set For West

So the Dutch did not become members of the IUS. The union set up at Prague displayed a split from its very beginning and showed that the political backgrounds of its members were to prevent the IUS from finding the common basis for work and agreement which would have produced the best "international" student group, the on ewhich would be most acceptable to the greatest number of students, no matter what their policies were.

The communists won the first round, as they were to take every succeeding one, and Canadian students began their two-year trek along the road to "frustration, failure, defeat, regret, humiliation and confusion."

Affiliate With IUS Minority Is No Bar Says Vic Assembly

An almost unanimous opinion that NFCUS should affiliate with IUS was voiced by the VCU Assembly at its regular monthly meeting held in Alumni Hall on Monday night. The U. of T. branch of NFCUS meets on Thursday to vote on joining IUS, and Dick Gage, Vic NFCUS representative, asked the Assembly to express an opinion in order to help him to cast his vote in the interest of Vic students.

The discussion which ensued was chiefly concerned on the advisability of serving as a dissenting minority in a Communist-run organization, and the general opinion favored participation in order to make the Communist students realize that Canadian students have an opinion and are ready to express it. It was pointed out that NFCUS should not be deterred from affiliation because of being a minority, since Russia is in the minority on the UN, but decidedly manages to make itself heard.

New Vic Pin

Phoebe Templeton, VCU Assoc Pres., reported that the decision of a previous Assembly to order the newly designed All-Vic pin from Trophy-Craft would have to be revised. There is already an official Vic pin which has been in existence since 1928 for which the college has a contract with Mr. Edwards, U of T jeweller. It will be possible to obtain these pins, now made only in 14 carat gold, in a gold filled edition, and this was finally accepted as the official year pin. It will be available to all undergraduates, not just to the graduating years, as has been the policy in the past.

The Vic At Home, which is to be on January 27, and at which dress is optional for the men, was voted a "no corsage" dance, unless ticket sales exceed the social directorate's estimated 400, and the budget allows them to present the girls with flowers at the door.

Tradition Triumphs

Tradition triumphed over materialism when the Assembly voted down the motion to cease the presentation of a Bob cane to the Bob director, and to place his name on the list of those to be considered for the honor ring awards instead. A letter from Bursar Little asked users of the co-ed common room to keep cigarette butts, sandwich wrappers, and The Varsity off the floor. (New ash trays and waste baskets will shortly be provided.)

Objection To Congestion

Mr. Little also objects to the fact that continuous ticket sales for various college and campus activities cause congestion in the downstairs hall of the college. He would like to see the selling of tickets reduced to a maximum of two days for each event, and the business activity carried on in the VCU office. It was pointed out that this would mean ruin for many worthwhile shows and dances, which are already difficult enough to sell because of decreased enrolment and the crowded social schedule.

Inside View Of Painters Who Paint Peoples' Insides

Perhaps it is not the type of art that Raphael or Michaelangelo went in for, but in its detail and intricacy it rivals anything these masters have produced. What is this kind of art that takes three years of intensive study to master? It is Medical Art, a course affiliated with the Faculty of Medicine.

The University of Toronto offers the only course in this branch of medical knowledge in Canada. The students learn to illustrate medical subjects for textbooks and medical journals. To insure accuracy in their work the students are given thorough instruction in courses pertaining to medicine.

Small Enrollment

At present there are 10 students enrolled in the course — three in first year, five in second year and two in their graduating year. Although there are no male graduates this year (one of the two graduates was a boy last year) one boy is enrolled in first year and another in second.

Any group affiliated with Medicine is bound to have a full schedule and this group is no exception. Part of the routine that keeps them constantly occupied includes drawing from a cadavers and other such studies in the Anatomy museum. This occurs mainly in second year for the first year consists of studying medical subjects with first year Medical students.

In second year they study pathology with the second Medical year and learn to draw such complex diagrams as those of brain tissues.

They Wear Masks

Another difficult, but extremely interesting phase of their work involves watching operations and making sketches at the various stages. The operations move so rapidly that the hand must be as quick as the eye in order to note all the details. The students wear surgeons' masks and gowns during the operations for they must work as close to the patient as it is per-

HH Problems Will Increase But Open Baffled East Door

'Sesame' has been uttered, and the long-locked door at the East end of Hart House will swing open again. For over ten years this door has been kept locked, because of the structural oddity which causes a violent draft to sweep through the Great Hall whenever the East door is opened.

Plans Are Afoot

The Warden's office assures us that there is a plan under consideration in the Superintendent's Department of the University. The ventilation system installed in the servory of the Great Hall draws air from the Hall itself, and in turn, this creates a current running along the upper hallway.

The baffle to be constructed will resemble that in the South entrance to U.C., although there will be special considerations due to the relative sizes in the arches and vestibules.

Thefts May Increase

Another drawback in the opening of another door to the non-athletic wings is the problem of theft — mainly of coats. This problem is being handled by the addition of another check-room open from 8:30 in the morning until eleven at night. The staff members here would be suitable for the extra policing.

There is one other situation that presents an awkward point for the opening of the East door. The present enrolment at the University makes it impossible for the Great Hall staff to handle the rush of lunchers without first forming a long queue, and there is the possibility of confusion that those entering by this East portal, well-baffled and all, would cause more confusion than at present.

The report from the Superintendent's office should be returned to the Warden's office soon, and then it is hoped that the door will remain open permanently, another means of relieving the congestion at the entrance to Hart House.

Books Displayed By British Council

London, Jan. 10 —(CUP)— A display of books sponsored by the British Council will open at The University of Western Ontario on Monday, Jan. 16. The purpose of the exhibition is to promote a wider knowledge of the United Kingdom and the English language abroad and to develop close cultural relations between the United Kingdom and other countries, according to the student newspaper "The Gazette".

There will simultaneous displays at University of British Columbia and Laval University, and later in the year it will move to Toronto.

Western Acquires Book On Anatomy Printed in 1555

London, Jan. 10—(CUP)—A second edition of "Fabrica of Vesalius" was added to the U. W. O. library during the Christmas holidays. The rare edition, printed in 1555, has been described as "one of the greatest books of all time."

The fabrica is bound in pigskin and contains over 700 beautifully printed pages and 300 original illustrations. It is a collection of the experiences of Vesalius, the first teacher in anatomy to introduce and popularize actual dissection, combined with critical observation and individual findings.

The superb anatomical woodcuts by Stephen van Calcar are well known to medical students, having been reproduced in many later books. The body appears in accordance with the conception of anatomy held by Vesalius as "a piece of vital mechanism suggestive of the functions of the various parts."

Again, This Apathy

Yesterday's announcement that the University of Toronto Peace Council was to conduct a poll to determine the extent of student apathy on this campus is indicative of the concern felt in many quarters for the apparent lack of interest in matters which should be of vital student concern.

During the recent Canadian University Press (CUP) conference in Montreal, most student editors said they had found student interest in such organizations as campus political clubs and debating unions was at an alarming low.

Here, at Toronto, the problem has been discussed at SAC meetings and at debates and round-table talks. The discussions have settled nothing. Before the problem of "student apathy" can be solved the definition of "apathy" must be decided upon. This has been overlooked so far.

There is certainly no question that towards the more cultural aspects of a university career there is a well-defined disinterest. Hart House Warden Ignatieff pointed this out last term in a letter to all student society heads.

However, the assumption that the disinterest extends across the board and applies to all student activities should be closely questioned.

The breadth of student activity is increasing and however much it detracts from the more serious side of extra-curricular activity, student participation in these diversified events shows no signs of falling off.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

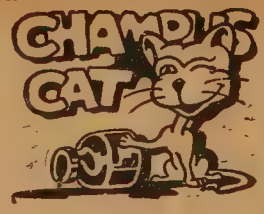
New Brunswick Art

The Hart House Art Gallery is presenting an exhibit of New Brunswick Art. We expected a miscellany, but there was an agreeable surprise in store. The "primitives" were well represented by two studies in blues, greens and brick red.

A piece of wrapping paper is stuck to the glass covering "When the Morning Stars Sang Together", a phantasy that seems to have been drawn from the American Indian and the gods of Old Norway, but it is unnoticed in the confusion of colour.

The most elaborate work is an unimpressive, theatrical "Crucifixion" that combines all of the worst traits of twentieth century melodrama. It combines would-be horror with a shallowness that has produced a travesty.

But with these behind us there was much worth seeing. "Portrait", by Lucy Jarvis, holds true feeling and solidity. It is a clever study, unpretentious yet sure. "Fish-House Garden", by the same artist, is an ordinary subject, daisies among the lobster traps, but Miss Jarvis has painted more than that. She has concentrated on the warmth and light in an otherwise barren corner and caught it.



Two dock scenes, in water colour, by Avery Shaw, have a heavy, dull atmosphere to depict. The lowering clouds and smoke-caked shipping are, nevertheless, both interesting and attractive. This is fine work, and the subjects are intricate.

Ted Campbell's river scenes are more leisurely and relieved by blocks of vivid colour. His sense of space is excellent. "From my Window" holds an interesting study in large planes.

Frank Allen draws on warm and brilliant colour as he depicts foreign scenes of peace and silence. But strength of the exhibit lies in that use of gentle, "contented" subjects that make no pretence at importance. Although they are no challenge to the "masters" they have their own place, which they will hold.

One small stray impressed us. Brilliant colour runs riot, red, blue, green and yellow, yet Lucy Jarvis' "Chicken and Ducks" is another victory in mood. Three farm children stoop to watch goslings on a pond while the distance is covered with a tangle of scrub. Again, it is not startling, as a subject, but we shall remember it.

Graydon Bell.

A Story Book Romance

Locale:—The quadrangle of University College on a beautiful moonlit night.

Cast:—"He" and "She".

He:—Ah, my darling, you are beautiful in the moonlight, you are the epitome of loveliness and I adore you. But are you really sure of your present deodorant? Test it against new, perfect "STALE".

She:—Yes, I should really see for myself which stops perspiration; prevents odour better.

He:—And your skin, your soft shimmering skin, abounding with that azure glint of loveliness.

She:—And why not? Doctors proved that the COCONUT PLAN brings 4 out of three women lovelier skin in 2 days.

He:—Yes, I know; 136 doctors, leading skin specialists, tested the plan on 12 women and proved that it works for two out of three in less than nine months.

His lips lingered over hers for a few pulsating moments and then he kissed her soft yielding lips.

He:—"My dearest, I can tell that it's SLAP FASTER lipstick you're wearing. It's the favourite of movie stars such as "THORAX" Russell, "LEGGY" Lynn, and "SURGE"

Mystic Distinct And Clear States Armstrong Lecturer

By WILLIAM GLENESK

Dean J. S. Thomson of the Faculty of Divinity, McGill University gave the first of the annual Armstrong Lectures yesterday in the Chapel of Victoria College. His subject was the Mysticism of Francis Thompson. Dean Thomson declared there was much basic confusion in the attempts of many to identify the mystical with the mysterious, to describe all mystical belief as irrational, whereas in essence the mystic is on the contrary distinct and clear.

Access Through Mysticism

In the eyes of Francis Thompson, mystic, poet and philosopher, mysticism is an immediacy of access to spiritual truth, vivid and real, according to the Dean (no relation), to which intuition and insight are equivalents. But these terms embrace too wide a field of meaning, include all directness of grasp, and may include abstract concepts. "Mysticism" said the speaker, "is a direct access not only to knowledge of spiritual existence, but to spiritual existence itself, a communication of life, the apprehension of the Divine in terms of life."

Two Extremes

Dr. Thomson explained the poet's life and poetry were in a sense utterly apart. Born in 1859 to a Victorian age alien to his spirit, and faced with the repellent ugliness of London slums, Francis Thompson "transmuted a profundity of sorrow and suffering" was "an exquisite and aloof spirit" who sought escape in the career of a private soldier and was ignominiously rejected. It was a common practise in 19th century Manchester to take opium, and the speaker stated the poet must have been influenced by the drug. There was a correlation in Thompson's own literary hero, who also was an opium addict, namely Coleridge.

The Poet: Interpreter

According to the Dean, Francis Thompson conceived the poet as minister and interpreter of beauty. The poet's vocation was to render the invisibility of imaginative colour into the visible and tangible panorama of life. Dean Thompson held the poet to say that the Devil could not write poetry ,that beauty must be laid on the altar of renunciation until the poet comes before the altar and becomes a priest of the Divine. "Francis Thompson", said the Dean, "saw the poet as an imaginative interpreter of spiritual beauty, who must disenchant his mind by the pathway of renunciation, to see God in austerity through his own stripped and naked soul."

To-morrow at 4.30 Dr. Thomson will conclude the series with a treatise of the poet's "Hound of Heaven."

Spanish Club Starts Charla This Friday

Starting this Friday, the Spanish Club is sponsoring a series of informal gatherings for students of Spanish and students whose native tongue is Spanish. The executive of the Spanish Club has long been aware of the need of affording students of Spanish the opportunity to make leisurely and informal contacts with Spanish-Americans on the campus. In addition, all the members of the Spanish staff are invited to these "Charlas" as the meetings will be called, to give to the relationship between student and professor a closer and more personal touch.

Spanish-American students are specially urged to take advantage of the Charlas, in which Spanish will be the language spoken.

All students of Spanish who are interested in becoming better acquainted with their professors, in broadening their knowledge of Spanish culture, and in making new acquaintances, should come to the charlas. Each charla will gather every Friday afternoon at Diana Sweets, corner of Bloor and Avenue Road. The back room has been reserved for them from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

missible. One doctor, when sewing up a wound, accidentally sewed through the sketchbook of one third year girl — oh well, he didn't want that thread anyhow!

Photography is studied in third year, for though you cannot see every detail in a photograph, the techniques are useful for medical art. More histology is also studied by the students but the bulk of their time is spent in perfecting their accuracy in drawing.

Lucrative, Too!

After graduation the students can take their choice of a position in a broad and financially attractive field. The demand for them is so great that a number of them assist doctors while still undergraduates.

Students can come directly from high school into this course but it is a great advantage to have a degree before entering. It is especially preferable to have taken a Fine Arts course. Their studio is in back of the old Zion Church, a location most accessible to the hospitals.

This course may be short on the quantity of students but it is long on the quality and anyhow, as they put it, "it's a lot of fun!"

Don't let that long name scare you. Five new items have been added to the long list of sports already available: figure skating, fencing, tennis, golf and modern dancing.

Figure skating will begin as soon as ice conditions permit on Thursdays at 12.00 and 2.00.

Have you ever done any fencing? There is a tournament being arranged for all those who have, and also an outside team from Toronto will be contacted to play a university team.

Classes for those who have fenced before will be held on Friday from 5.00 to 6.00. If you are a beginner, register for the Thursday classes, 4.00 to 5.00 or 5.00 to 6.00.

If you need some exercise, want to learn something new, or enjoy your favourite sport, there is still lots of room in these classes, or in the gym classes taking place every morning.

Registration begins on Monday, January 16, at the LM gym, but be sure to get there as early in the week as possible as classes will fill up quickly. Those who participated last term must register again either in the same or another sport for the spring term.

If you want to practise any of these sports, or take some recreational swimming, Monday through Thursday at 5.30, scoot up to 153 Bloor next Monday, but don't forget your medical. As always that's a must.

Weston Dukes Lead Bees As Second Period Ends

By DAVE BUTTERS

At the end of the second period of the Junior B hockey tilt at Varsity Arena last night the score read 3-0 in favor of the league-leading Weston Dukes over the cellar-dwelling Varsity Bees. In the first game of the scheduled double-feature the hard-fighting St. Mike's team won a 2-2 draw with the second-place Corner Boys from the east-end.

Fast Hockey

With the opening bell the goal-hungry Bees came out fighting to attempt an upset of the league leaders. The play was fast and clean with few whistles to interrupt proceedings. About nine minutes of play had elapsed when Eric Nesterenko flashed the light for the Dukes with the assist going to Bill MacFarland. Two minutes later, Art Holmes, the Bees classy pivot man, was hit hard, but clean, by George Nicholson and was carried off the ice on a stretcher. (Your reporter was talking to Art after the period, but he never returned to the game.) Shortly afterward Fred Bell, on a pass from Jack Whel-drake, put the Dukes ahead by two goals.

Play in the second period of the game was fast, but not so clean as the first. The teams began roughing it up and the loss of Holmes to the Bees resulted in the using of only two forward lines by Coach Wade. Fred Ladly, centering Bill Yeo and Dave Kent, in place of the injured Holmes, was hit hard and had to be assisted from the ice. He returned, however, on his next turn to play. At 15:19 of the second period MacFarland on a three-way passing play with Nesterenko and Balfour put Weston ahead 3-0 and the period continued scoreless until the bell.

Varsity: goal, Taylor; defence, P. Prendergast, D. Prendergast; centre, Holmes; wings, Kent, Yeo; alternates, Fullerton, Wardrop, Brown, Moore, Koughan, Ladly, Sinclair, Nichols.

Keiczor And Fee Top Contestants At Track Meet

Indoor track enthusiasts got their start last night at Hart House as they convened for the running of the half mile and fifty yard novice events. Earl Fee of SPS took top spot in the half mile bracket and Frank Keiczor of Pre Dents covered the 50 yard distance in 5.6 seconds for first honors in that event.

Bob Walker of PHE finished second in both events, turning in 2:9.8 for the half mile and 5.8 seconds for the 50 yard dash. Fee's winning time in the half was 2 minutes, 6.9 secs.

Tied with Walker for second place in the 50 yard event were three other competitors. Bruce Miles of UC, Pat Galasso from PHE and Tom Ward of Pre Meds all shared second spot.

Lorne Creighton captured third place in the half mile followed by Chas. Wortman of Vic. Creighton ran for the Pre Meds team.

Next Tuesday will see the continuation of this indoor competition with the 50 yard open and 600 yard open events being carded for this night. Each Tuesday night until March 14 there will be two events run off at five o'clock in Hart House to determine the interfaculty championship.

A win in these events counts five points while place spot nets three, third gets two and a fourth is good events. Earl Fee of SPS taak top

A TRIBUTE TO THE BAHA'I WORLD FAITH

"I have had on my desk, and have read several times, the three extracts from 'Abdu'l-Baha's Message of Social Regeneration'. Taken together, they form an unanswerable argument and plea for the only way that the world can be made over. If we could put into effect the program, we should indeed have a new world order."

A goodly crowd lined the sides of the Hart House oval last night, their attention divided between the interfaculty indoor track meet and a basketball game on the floor below. This was the first meeting of the indoor tracksters this year (see story on this page) under the management of Greg McMullen who has performed in intercollegiate circles for the past few years.

The senior wrestling championships will get under way today with the draw being made this morning at the interfac sports office. About twenty-five of Varsity's choicest bruisers are expected to perform tonight, Thursday and Friday, with the finals scheduled for this week's Athletic Nite. Among last year's standouts who have signed up so far are Jack Kirkup, H. Lubbock and Walkden, a 165 pounder.

At the local arena yesterday Junior Vic and Junior UC tangled wiht the red and gold skaters taking a first period lead which they refused to relinquish. Both squads counted singles in the last frame but the Vicmen were good for two goals in the first half and took the game 3-1.

Sheridan netted Vic's first goal after eighteen minutes of play while teammate Walden scored just about a minute later to establish a 2-0 half time score. Walden drove in for his second tally at 16:50 of the second period with the assist going to Dover. Jim Morlock was the lone UC goal-getter with an unassisted effort with but a minute to go in the game.

The senior ice representatives from SPS and UC fought to a deadlock yesterday. After a scoreless first half both squads turned on the pressure and ended up with a 2-2 decision. Cunningham and Sawyer paid off with one each or the skulemen while Dickson and Fullerton were the U.C. marksmen.

Institutional Management overcame the penalty jinx in the remaining hockey fixture of the day, to overpower the SPS fifths 2-0. Dobson garnered both counters for the purple shirts as netminder Taylor got his shutout.

The "managers" collected eighteen minutes in penalties during the encounter to none for the SPS crew. Among their punishments were a five minute misconduct and a five minute team penalty. Quite a lot of time served for a friendly set-to.

SPS thirds took the measure of St. Mike's Bees in the noon hour major hoop tilt. The skule basketeers took an early lead and coasted to a 33-24 victory over the mikemen. LaFontaine for SPS and O'Heaney for St. Mike's led the scoring parade with ten points each.

Among the top skule marksmen were Austin with seven, Thrasick with six and Nagata who counted four points. Double blue scorers included Brennan with five, Vogtisek and O'Hearn with four per and Murphy with two.

All-Varsity Revue Tickets Go on Campus-Wide Sale

The rush is on! Today is the day tickets go on sale for the All Varsity Revue. This year the SAC and the All Varsity ticket committee have announced a new plan for the purchase of tickets for the performance. Admittance tickets will be on sale throughout the campus; this entitles the purchaser to exchange them at Hart House box-office for the reserved tickets at any time after Monday, Jan. 30. The tickets will go on sale today.

The SAC is trying out a new system for the distribution of tickets this year. These tickets do not entitle the buyer to a reserved seat until he exchanges the ticket for such at Hart House box-office any time after Jan. 30.

The only stipulation the student must give when he buys his admittance is the night which he intends to go. The tickets will be differently colored for each night the performance is given. When you exchange your ticket for a reserved seat you must have a colored ticket.

The ducats will be on sale at the SAC offices, Hart House, and Room 62 U.C., U.C. rotunda, V.C.U. office, and the Engineering Society. George McGowan, producer, said yesterday, "Due to expected sell-out of the show, there will be a matinee performance given Saturday afternoon, Feb. 11."

There will be no sale of tickets at Hart House box-office. The only tickets at the box-office will be the exchange tickets, until all tickets are sold. This is unlikely according to Murray Sussman, Publicity Director of the review.

Watch Your Shoelaces!

Few students know what the SAC is.

Some know it's the students' council that governs things but they don't know what it does and couldn't care less. The majority of them don't even know who their own SAC representative is.

Elections for next year's SAC reps will be coming soon, along with the college and faculty elections for their own student bodies. Before we can vote intelligently for the student to represent us on the all-Varsity council, we must know what we are voting for.

The Varsity commends the step taken by Victoria SAC rep Doug Thomas in forming a new committee to work with him on public relations. The primary purpose of the committee is to publicize SAC activities and square off the SAC with the individual student.

This is a big job.

In the near future the SAC Finance Committee intends to recommend to the Board of Governors that the council fee be raised. In order to make it clear to the student the necessity of raising the SAC fee, the cost of the many free services, such as the housing, loan and employment services, must be well publicized.

The new committee is now working to set up the machinery for taking polls of campus opinion on anything from NFCUS-IUS relations to the price of Torontonensis. One member of the committee suggested a "What's your beef?" service to clear up student gripes with the SAC. Commissioner Thomas has proposed erecting large SAC bulletins in all the colleges and faculties. However, as some of the major campus groups, including UC, Skule and Vic have refused permission, and considering the large numbers of notices and announcements already plastering our halls and rotundas, the value of this type of publicity is questionable.

These and other projects undertaken by the Public Relations Committee will require a great deal of time and work in order to be successful. There is a danger that in attempting too much, the committee will accomplish little or nothing.

Soon The Varsity, in support of the committee, will run a series of articles on the SAC, its functions, scope and activities. This is a positive step towards acquainting students with their governing body. The newborn Public Relations committee must be practical if it is to have any measure of success. Their ideals are good, but if they aim their sights too high they may trip over their own shoelaces.

They've got to be careful not to bite off more than the students can chew.

A Fable For Kiddies

(This is a fable designed to help parents to teach their children the hard facts of life. Aesop's Fables, faced with the lively competition of comic books, have unfortunately lost their lustre for the average child of today. If at all possible, this story should be read to the kiddies just before their bedtime so that they will have time to brood over it before going to sleep.)

Jimmy Smith was the apple of his mother's eye. She bought him new overshoes, matching wool cap and mitts, and earmuffs for Christmas. He could never step out of the house without being thoroughly examined by her for flaws in dress. "Be sure to button up those overshoes," she would say, or "Tighten up that muffler around your neck, Jimmy."

Every time he went out to play in the snow after school, she would tell him: "Bundle yourself up carefully, Jimmy. If you don't, you'll catch pneumonia and die."

A tremor used to run through Jimmy's little body when his mother said this to him, and he would break out in a cold sweat. Only the knowledge that he was wearing two suits of long underwear comforted him.

Across the road lived Sam Johnson. Sam was the same age as Jimmy and played with him after school. Sam's mother was always at the bridge club or passing the time at some downtown cocktail bar.

As a result when Sam came home from school, he had to dress himself to go out to play. He hardly ever did a good job of this. He never wore galoshes because it hurt his fingers to do up the catches. He'd lost his muffler several weeks ago and his mother had neglected to get him a new one. Three buttons were missing from his coat and a thumb protruded from his mitt. All in all, he was a sorry sight.

One day he and Jimmy Smith were playing in the snow after school. They had just about finished a big snowhouse they were building, when Jimmy clambered inside

Reorganized NFCUS Investigates The IUS, Three Views Develop

(This is the fourth of a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of the International Union of Students. The fifth article in this series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

The Constitution of the International Union of Students, adopted at the World Youth Congress held in Prague in 1946, was rejected by the Dutch. The Canadian delegation had no authority to accept the IUS Constitution for Canadian students, since they represented five different organizations and not one national student group.

NFCUS Is Reorganized

The National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS) did not have a representative at the Prague Congress in 1946, because at that point NFCUS was little more than an executive group. It had been revived following the war, but during 1945-46 nothing was done, mainly because of a lack of money and of support from Canadian universities.

In the fall of 1946 however NFCUS hald a conference at the University of Toronto to which the representatives of many Canadian universities came, resolved to make NFCUS an integral part of student life across Canada.

Under the leadership of Maurice Sauve NFCUS made great strides during 1946-47. Sauve travelled the country from coast to coast, speaking to students, and assisting the universities to form local NFCUS committees.

Decide To Investigate IUS

At the 1946 NFCUS Conference it was decided to investigate the IUS thoroughly before actually joining the organization. A telegram was sent to the IUS stating that Gordon McLean, who had been elected at the Prague Congress as Canadian representative on the IUS Executive, did not represent NFCUS.

The various Canadian universities then began a study of the IUS, its constitution and its aims, and later appointed three Canadian students to attend the 1947 IUS Council meeting held in Prague from July 31 to August 11 of that year.

Robert Rambusch of the University of Toronto, Camille Laurin of the University of Montreal, and George Robinson of the University of New Brunswick sat as observers for NFCUS at the 1947 IUS Council meeting. All three delegates recommended that NFCUS join the IUS. All three pointed out the dangers, the pit-falls and the steps that would have to be taken if NFCUS was to make any effective contribution to the IUS.

(The three reports submitted by Rambusch, Laurin and Robinson will be dealt with in later articles).

Canadian Opinion Develops

During this period Canadian universities had an opportunity to study the IUS Constitution, and particularly the clause which had caused the Dutch to walk out of the IUS. It reads:

"Member organizations of the IUS shall . . . abide by its Constitution, carry into practice the decisions of its Congress and other Governing Bodies and support organizations pursuing general aims similar to its aims. Any decisions of the IUS not adhered to by the national organizations shall be submitted to the council for final judgment."

Meanwhile the IUS continued on its path of political partisanship. It also began to develop the more practical side of its work, which was the aspect of the IUS that appealed to Canadian students. The opportunity for international contacts, and for an opportunity to assist in non-partisan work in the international student field was the spark that kept Canadian interest alive in the IUS.

There was another side to the question. Many Canadian students, particularly those in the Maritimes, felt that NFCUS was not yet a strong enough organization to engage in international work, and the first strains of the argument that had a great deal to do with defeating NFCUS-IUS affiliation at the NFCUS Conference in Montreal in 1948 began to be heard.

Three Points Of View Held

Even at this point it was possible to see the lines the argument would follow. There were three groups: 1) Those who thought NFCUS should stay out of IUS because it was communist and we couldn't hope to do anything in a communist organization; 2) Those who felt that NFCUS was not strong enough to enter IUS and work in the international field, especially since IUS was such a controversial question in Canada and would require so much of the recently revived Federation's time and effort; and 3) Those who thought that NFCUS should get out into the world and support the ideas of the Western democratic world, and try to change the IUS so that it would be an acceptable group for Canadian students to work with.

These three opinions were in Canadian thinking when Rambusch, Laurin and Robinson reported to NFCUS on the first IUS Council meeting of 1947.

Pep Rallies Out? SAC Critics Jump On Rah-Rah Spirit

A move to combat the trend towards what was termed "Americanized rah rah college spirit" was made at last night's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, held in the Medical Board Room. A motion passed by Council will "restrict the number of pep rallies to be held next fall."

Trinity, St. Mike's Against

The move came following the report of Blue and White Society Chairman Bill Turner. Both St. Michael's College and Trinity College put forth resolutions from their councils to restrict the number of pep rallies.

The general philosophy behind the wove was that extra-cirricular activities at the University of Toronto were becoming too numerous, that more worthwhile activities such as debating and cultural pusuits are suffering and that the place to begin cutting down is on pep rallies.

David Quigley, St. Mike's SAC representative said that he saw in pep rallies a trend towards the American rah-rah spirit seen so often in colleges south of the border. "Pep rallies are certainly a contributing factor to this trend," Quigley said, "and should be curtailed."

Tom Symons, Trinity College, also factor to the decline of interest in cultural activities at the university, and told council that the Trinity College student council had unanimously supported a motion calling for restrictions in the number of pep rallies.

Defends Rallies

Blue and White Society Chairman Turner said that he didn't want to debate the value of pep rallies on the grounds of intrinsic worth, but he defended them against attacks that they were interfering with more worthwhile activities.

Turner saw the attack on pep rallies as a move by undergraduates to find a "scapegoat. . . .to explain the general decline in student activities." Turner said that he felt

Asked If He's Communist, Student Editor Dismissed

Los Angeles (Exchange) Jan. 12—The Daily Bruin, undergrad newspaper of the University of California, Los Angeles, has started the new year minus three of its top staff members. The UCLA Student Executive turned down three of The Bruin's nominations for masthead posts during the next semester. One of the candidates was quizzed by the Executive as to whether or not he was a Communist.

Lid Blown

"I think I blew my lid a little. I was incensed that a student organization should have the audacity to assume the role of political inquisitor. It was disgusting," was the statement of one of the rejected candidates.

Speaking editorially, the Daily Californian (circulation 30,000) pointed out the barring was the result of an "edict handed down by the Dean of Students". The editorial continued. "This restriction on The Bruin's freedom of expression may not seem great at the moment. But the ease with which the first rejections and substitutions were made warn of the role to which The Bruin will soon be relegated—a mouthpiece for student politicos."

Loyalty Oath

This development is especially topical in that the University is at present engaged in a series of conferences to determine whether an oath of loyalty may be required from all faculty members. One of the members of the physics staff was fired by the Board of Regents on Dec. 16, for refusing to state when he appeared before the House Committee on Un-American activities whether he had been a member of a Communist "cell" at the University radiation laboratory during the war.

Close Street By Old Right If Necessary

The University of Toronto has applied to the City of Toronto for permission to close Devonshire Place, which is legal under an agreement made way back in the early days of the city, when York was muddy.

The plan was submitted by the Superintendent's office to make possible the enlargement of the present Varsity Stadium, which involves building out over the sidewalk on the East side of Devonshire Place. The original agreement between the University and the City was that the University could close Devonshire Place at any time. If it uses this right to close up a portion of the highway, it gives up forever its right to close any other section of the street.

Board Votes Against

When the plan was sent down to City Hall the Works Committee forwarded the plan to the Board of Control, and after discussion this board voted to make the University close the street under the old act.

However, the University still had its application to have the street closed partially by the city itself, still allowing the University use of the old right to close the street at a future date. This application was resting before the Works Committee, and after the Board of Control had recommended against the plan, the Committee passed it, which is binding by precedent to the City Council.

Ralph Spence, Comptroller of the University, made a statement yesterday afternoon, explaining the action of the various bodies.

Ducat Demand Terrific Play Matinee In Offing

Due to the unprecedented demand for tickets to the Trinity College Dramatic Club Production of 'Vanity Fair', there may be a Matinee performance of the three-act play on Saturday afternoon. This was announced Wednesday by Dave Fry, Director of publicity of the Production.

Already scheduled to run for five nights this week, the addition of a sixth performance will probably establish some sort of record in College Dramatic circles.

This first Canadian production of 'Vanity Fair' is being directed by Herbert Whittaker, entertainment critic of the Globe and Mail, and features Katherine Hawtrey, great-niece of the famous British actor-manager, Sir Charles Hawtrey.

Amid a flood of well-wishing telegrams and flowers the opening performance went off without a hitch Tuesday night, before a well-filled house.

Students are advised to watch The Varsity for notification of the intention to hold the Matinee Saturday. However, a few tickets are still available for the evening performances, at the Hart House box-office.

Federal Grants To PHE Graduates For Grad Studies

Federal scholarships are available for postgraduate training in physical fitness and recreation, the minister of National Health and welfare, Hon. Paul Martin anounced yesterday.

The eight grants, each worth up to $1,000 were set up "to encourage training of leaders in recreation and fitness" explained Ernest Lee, chairmah of the National Council on Physical Fitness. Last year five grants were made to Canadians taking either master's or doctor's degrees in physical education at American Universities

The deadline for receipt of applications this year is February 1. Application forms may be obtained from any provincial fitness office or from the secretary of the National Council on Physical Fitness, Ottawa.

Pep Rallies Out?

students running undergraduate societies have over-estimated the demand for their various functions, and blamed the decrease in attendance on the lowered enrollment.

"We are having diminishing pains," Turner declared. "We will either have to raise our standards or curtail our activities."

Some members felt that activities like pep rallies do not build the right spirit in college, while others saw pep rallies as harmless outlets for student enthusiasm. The motion curtailing the activity was carried by a substantial majority.

Engineers Protest

Heard protests from the Engineering society concerning the rise in the Torontonensis charge. Claiming there had not been sufficient explanation of the rise, the Engineering Society went on record as "disapproving the manner in which the matter has been handled." SAC will write a letter explaining the rise in detail to the Society.

Heard a detailed report of NFCUS activities from NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons. Symons pointed out steps taken on the national level, and by the Toronto Committee. He reported that for the first time Toronto students will be able to participate in Canadian Regional Exchange and Canadian American Exchange. Symons explained that the Senate of the University has "given its blessing" to both these plans.

Decided that all university organizations should pay for space in Torontonensis at the same rate, thus reversing a decision of the Publications Committee which had recommended that The Athletic Association, The Women's Athletic Association and Hart House pay ten dollars a page for the number of pages up to that taken last year, and the regular rate of $17.50 a page after that. These groups had received special consideration in former years.

Approved the payment of $131 for members of the Symphony Orchestra who were not members of the University. Music Committee chairman Joyce Rouse reported that the players are Conservatory students, and told Council that the committee had asked President Smith for a ruling on the matter. The Musicians' Union ruled that Conservatory members are not university students.

Heard a report from SAC President Bob Hetherington on text books, and approved the sending of a letter to all other Canadian universities asking them to support the Toronto stand in not giving into the Macmillan Company's boycott of the University Bookstore for giving a ten per cent discount to students.

Approved the payment of three hundred dollars by the Blue and White Society for a debt left over from last year for ribbons. Blue and White Society Chairman Bill Turner reported that the bill had been lost. The Blue and White will still have a surplus of about $800.

Sent a letter to the Athletic Association asking them to consider changing the seating for students at football games to the fifty yard line area, in view of the increased seating in the proposed new stadium. Another letter will be sent to the Athletic Society requesting a financial statement.

proved a plan submitted by the University to allow erection of the proposed new grandstand at Varsity Stadium which would overhang the present easterly limit of Devonshire Place by eighteen feet. The committee's recommendation will be forwarded to City Council."

When contacted late yesterday afternoon, members of the council seemed willing to pass this resolution when it was presented to them sometime within a week.

Street Will Be Closed

That the closing of Devonshire Place is coming seems sure. If the City of Toronto refuses to do this themselves, the University of Toronto has the right to do so themselves. It is a question of keeping the right to repeat this privilege, rather than whether or not it is now possible. If the City cooperates the old act will still be in effect, while the present object will also be attained.

What Now?

Editor, The Varsity:

Everywhere we go we are assailed, on the one hand by complaints of student apathy, on the other hand by the remarks of our elders to the effect that college life to-day is not what it used to be or ought to be. What is the answer?

We are not among these who advocate a return to the "roaring twenties." The craze for the Charleston and other such inanities of that mercifully defunct decade now in full revival south of the border would not improve matters in the least; in fact, things would be even worse. The answer lies elsewhere.

At what time were universities at the height of their influence on society? when did a baccalaureate degree signify a man of supreme importance to the community. It is to medieval times that we must turn for the regeneration of our Alma Mater.

Sir, what is needed is a return to the olden ways of the olden days. The student who came to class in an academic gown, wso subjected his mind to the rigorous mental discipline of Theology, Ethics, Logic, Heraldry and Eschatology was far superior, mentally and physically to the spineless, weak-kneed, chicken-hearted, semi-moron of to-day who is content to cheer the team and steal the Skule Cannon for amusement.

Our salvation lies in ancient traditions. Let us bring them back to full flower and no longer will we be an object of scorn.

Respectfully,
Henry Arnold.

Paradoxial Allegory

Editor, The Varsity:

We were interested to read Tuesday's review of Stage 50's "The Man Who Was Thursday"—a play which held us enthralled throughout its length and left us feeling it was one of the best things we have heard on this particular program. Our interpretation differed so markedly from the reviewer's that we would like to present it.

In the first place we did not consider it literally as a parody but as an allegory in the form of a parody. To us the play was suddenly clarified when the third member of the council turned out to be a detective. We no longer waited breathlessly for the outcome of the PLOT—which was only the medium for an idea—but began to wonder just what that idea was.

Your reviewer states "The ending is melodramatic, stilted, and incomprehensible with the result that the entire point of the play is lost." To us the ending contained the gist of the play; that in man's blind futile efforts to serve a God who is only half comprehended, he works at cross-purposes with himself and with that God, and that only through the suffering engendered by these efforts can he find peace of mind.

In view of the fact that Mr. Chesterton is a deeply religious man whose works have reflected this part of his nature we feel that we have not misconstrued the meaning of this play.

Cursed Verse

Editor, The Varsity:

The other day you carried a squib by one Themistocles, that needs correction. Herr Johann Sebastian Bach (he says), went into a room that was dach. As he switched on the candle, George Frederick Handel played Franz Schubert's "Hach, Hach the Lach!"

Now which of the three (I ask) was the ghost? Young Schubert was minus fifty at Mhost; for George to play Franz he had to enter a tranz deeper than Nostradamus could bhost.

Man Knows God By Soul's Search —Dean Thomson

The direct apprehension of God through the mysticism of experience of the soul of man was the theme developed by Dean James S. Thomson in the second Armstrong lecture yesterday afternoon. The subject matter for the Dean's address was the allegorical autobiographical "The Hounds of Heaven", a poem by Francis Thompson.

The intense divine pursuit of man that refuses to let him go is common to great poetic and literary works of the world. In the case of Francis Thompson he begins his search after the hell of slums, impoverishment and opium and, treading the way of a fugitive in utter renunciation first in his own private will, aspiring hope and ever present fear, he turns to the outside world to find fulfillment of the riddle of life. But the poet finds sudden disillusionment there by his perception of the world also as a divine and inescapable pursuer. In nature too Thompson is disillusioned and finally is driven back into the barren nakedness of his own soul, but he does not find himself alone there for what seemed to be the demands of life in searching his soul is actually the finding of God.

This is the essence of the mystical discovery of God that Dean Thomson put forth in his analysis of the poem. "The secret of existence and the realization of divine presence that is nearer to us than we dare to believe needs spiritual courage to depict. For the poet presents a picture of the momentous journey of the soul from the path of hell and purgatory to the experience of paradise, in a dynamic mood of an encounter that is contemporary with the entire experience of life. Francis Thompson's description of Shelly's 'Prometheus Unbound' presents a vivid description of his own poetry that leaves one staggered and giddy from the poetry spilt like wine," the dean expounded.

"In Thompson's poem, the divine reality is the climax of a grim encounter of fading into twilight and darkness of human despair, yet the final failure achieves inevitably man's quest of God. From self-abhorrence come the trumpets which

Don Giovanni

Don Giovanni was first produced in Prague on October 29th, 1789. It was sung in Italian then and has been almost ever since, with one notable exception: last night's performance by the CBC Opera Company under Nicholas Goldschmidt, which was sung in English. This discrepancy made by my artistic hackles stand up for when I turned my radio into the first scene of the first act, it greeted me with what sounded like some of the worst moments of the Messiah. Should it be sung in English or in its native Italian and what good reasons are there for each choice?

The music was originally written around an Italian libretto and it is a truism that Italian is a musical language with soft rolling vowels and easy rhyming metres. The words suit the music and vice-versa. However, we don't all speak the language and in a radio performance there can be no visual action and so the poor listener has no peg of reference on which to hang his artistic soul. I always get this feeling listening to the Metropolitan Opera when they are doing their Saturday broadcasts.

So, by singing the opera in English, the listener is able to follow the plot perfectly and also is able to catch all the humor and the tragedy in Don Giovanni. The only shortcoming is that in English some of the recitative is made up of ridiculous words, and gives the wrong meaning. The arias are ridiculous in any language.

After much listening I believe that this singing of Don Giovanni was justified. I discovered things in the performance that I never would have known if it had not been sung in my native language. Needless to say, the translation was very good if not too literal.

There has been much learned muttering about this opera being one of the greatest art-forms ever created. The theme is universal, both in significance and in importance. The hero, Don Giovanni, sung with great competence by Edmund Hockridge, is the man who stands above all other men and defies their conventions, in other words, the superman. He is Don Juan, the great lover who takes what he desires and gives nothing in return. Some try to equate him to the artist in modern society.

Edmund Hockridge gave Giovanni a manner of absolute conceit and superiority with his magnificent, full voice. The only deficiency was a lack of flexibility, a stiffness in decorative passages.

Giovanni and henchman, Leporello, well sung by John Sturgess, are in an eternal quest for women, but they are in constant conflict with Donna Elvira who leads the other personnae in the battle against them. She has been betrayed, but is still in hopeless love with Giovanni. As this she symbolizes his conscience and how it allies itself with society. In this role Elizabeth Benson Guy gives an excellent performance, singing with good intonation, pure tone and beautiful diction.

Don Gio's affair with the peasant girl, Zerlina, is the beginning of his downfall, the great climax coming in the ballroom scene where the soloists do some beautiful part—singing, and the orchestra plays some very contrapuntal music.

Still Giovanni is invincible. Only a divine force embodied in the Commandatore can overcome his own rather supernatural power. He accepts his fate, almost willing it, and the final scene of the opera shows Giovanni being carried to hell, heralded by an infernal chorus.

Superb orchestra, good singing and something to think about!

Jack Ferguson.

The delicate reserved English drawings now on exhibit at the Art Gallery of Toronto are dull and uninspiring to one such as I, conditioned to the colourful imaginative free traditions of 20th century art. They cover a wide period of time from the reign of Charles II to Mid-Victorian days . . . but in most the subjects are "typically English": that is, romantic castles in misty landscapes, realistic portrait studies, and careful animal studies.

Where colour is used to tint or shade a drawing it is either absolutely natural or used sparingly as an ear-coloured monochrome. The result is so subtle as to seem muddy. This is evident even in the drawings of such masters as Constable, Gainsborough, and Turner. Constable's drawings are natural and solid but not at all exciting. A Gainsborough sketch of three cows beside a glade of trees is quite free and impressionistic but still dull in colour and filled with conventions. Turner's water-colour drawings of boats at Dover in simple greys and soft blue washes, is clearer and more mood evoking than others.

The studies of figures by Alfred Stevens show a rhythmic and varied line and a thorough knowledge of anatomy. The Benjamin West, an American who became a naturalized English citizen, is represented by an animated line-drawing of an angel drawing two children together. The only drawing that conveys emotion however, is "Lady Hamilton Consulting a Fortune-Teller" by George Romney. This artist achieves a free and simply expressive line that foreshadows modern techniques.

The English artists represented aimed at a romantic idealization of nature and their over-attachment to the model resulted in a lack of imagination and vigour in their art.

Victoria College Exhibition

The exhibition of Jean Ross Skoggard, on display in the Alumni Hall of Victoria College, is fascinating since it represents a partial synthesis of the European and Oriental painting traditions. Mrs. Skoggard, a graduate of Victoria in 1939, was trained in China under a Chinese artist.

The attempted fusion of the Occidental artist and the Oriental technique provides the main interest in the show. Mrs. Skoggard's approach to her subject is freer and less intellectual than the average eastern painting. When this subdued intellectualism is coupled with western vigour the result is completely captivating. Mrs. Skoggard is seldom tempted from her half way position between east and west.

The two component parts of Mrs. Skoggard's art are best integrated in the black and white studies, such as the cat and the bird, and the horse, and the black and whites with the light-coloured tints, of which the most attractive examples

Affiliation And Democracy

(An editorial in The Manitoban, University of Manitoba, Winnipeg.)

One of the greatest dangers associated with large and unwieldy organizations is that they may become unrepresentative, and to prevent this occurrence elaborate precautions are frequently taken to ensure that the policies executed by the national officers shall indeed be backed up by the constituent bodies. We have seen large powerful bodies crumple into uselessness because they have deviated from this principle and lost contact with and support of the member groups.

The policies of the National Federation of Canadian University Students are laid down by the annual student conference, at which delegates from each campus, endorsed by their student councils, deliberate the pros and cons of any particular problem and make a decision. They then return to their own universities to carry out the plans laid by the conference, and in important questions, ratified by their local groups, while the national executive conducts such activities as take place on the national plane.

It is furthermore clearly understood that in the period between conferences, the right to make major policy decisions lies not within jurisdiction of the local NFCUS executive, but within that of the local NFCUS committees or student councils. If the executive were granted this power, we would be in constant fear that sometime that body would act in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the Federation and that serious damage would result.

At its recent meeting, NFCUS executive took a stand on a question which has bothered the Federation since the cessation of war, and has expressed its intention to carry out that decision without referring it to the local bodies for ratification.

This problem, in which a great deal of interest has been shown in recent years, is our relation with the IUS. In December, 1947, many hours of conference time were spent on this matter and in the end it was decided that NFCUS would join the International Union of Students, but withdraw if certain tendencies towards undesirable political activity were not constrained. At the 1948 conference three long reports from those who had attended the Paris IUS Council meeting were the basis of further discussion and it was decided by a vote of ten to seven, that attempts at affiliation would be dropped, but that NFCUS would send observers to the conference held in Sophia, this fall.

The long and bitter dispute over the matter could not be resolved by the NFCUS conference held in Ottawa this September because no report had yet been received from Ross Hamilton, who represented the Federation at the IUS Council meet. Therefore, although it was discussed in commission, the question of affiliation never reached the plenary sessions, and the situation was left as after the previous conference — that NFCUS would not affiliate but still considered the matter open.

It was reported last month that in Hamilton's opinion, it would be of little use to affiliate unless two-thirds of the nations of Western Europe and America were with us. Whether we agree with his contention is not of too much consequence of the moment, but the point remains that he left the impression that something could definitely be accomplished if a sizeable group of non-Communists were present in the Union.

The National Union of Students of England, Wales and Northern Ireland called a meeting for December 20-23, at which representatives of all those national unions which are not members of IUS or are considering dis-affiliation discussed the important problem of their relations with the presently Communist-dominated group. Since the British NUS has long been an active member of the IUS and indeed the only western country which has stuck to its guns through all the political wranglings of the IUS Council meetings, it was expected that they would make a plea that the other unions join them and lend their support to the democratization of the IUS.

Since this editorial was written, the conference was held in England during December. Canadian representative at the conference was Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, last year's SAC president at the University of Toronto, now a student in England.

(Although several Commonwealth student unions headed by the British Union urged membership in the IUS by all western nations to preserve the stand of the students of democracies against the Communist leadership of the IUS, most western nations now disaffiliated with IUS were not in favor of joining the organization.)

Says Veterans Citizens First — No Cleavage

Questioned regarding federal government use of expanded university resources yesterday, Veterans' Affairs Minister Gregg declined to make any personal comment. His only answer was that the House of Commons had discussed the question during the last session, and had decided that "something should be done". Mr. Gregg added that there would probably be some reply to this in the report of the Massey Commission.

No Veteran Prejudice

The question was placed after a lecture given by Mr. Gregg under the auspices of the School of Social Work. The topic was "Social Benefits Necessary to Those Who Served Canada in War and Peace".

In another part of his speech, Mr. Gregg pointed out with gratification that from all his travels throughout the dominion, he had found that the veterans of the two wars—making up one-quarter of the population with their families—looked on themselves first as citizens of Canada, and second as veterans. In this way we were very fortunate in that no cleavage existed between the two parts of the population.

The majority of the Minister's talk was concerned with a description of the work of DVA, and the comparable work done by the social service branches of the Federal and Provincial governments.

DVA Began In Rome

Gregg began by describing the history of veteran service, tracing it from its origin in the Roman Empire, through the founding of Chelsea Hospital by Nell Gwynn, and the settling of British Veterans from the Revolutionary Wars on land in Canada.

He pointed out that even as late at 1914, the Canadian soldiers going overseas had no idea what would happen if they should be killed or wounded. In 1916 there appeared the beginnings of state pensions and hospitalization for veterans.

In 1940 it was decided that plans superior to those of previous wars would have to be made. Consequently the federal government passed the Veterans' Charter, a set of 21 acts relating to benefits for those who had served in the war.

$340,000,000 For Training

These benefits fall into two groups:— economic and social. Economic aids include mustering out pay and re-establishment credit. The latter averaged $500 per person. Meant to help setting up a family or furnishing a home, its closest equivalent in civil life is Family Allowances.

Also in this class is aid for vocational training and for university education. It is expected that 160,000 veterans will take advantage of this plan by the end of next year, at a cost of approximately $340,000,000. Of these, over one-quarter of the veterans attending university have gone to Toronto.

The government scholarships which correspond to this aid can hardly be compared, since they provide only a small fraction of that sum.

DVA Surpasses Civil Aid

In the social field, hospitalization and pensions for disabled veterans correspond very closely with hospital plans and Workman's Compensation.

Illustrating his point with the War Veterans' Allowance, Mr. Gregg pointed out that DVA aid was superior to federal and provincial aid (in this particular case old age pensions), particularly as regards qualifications.

He ended his talk paraphrasing a recent speech by Sir Stafford Cripps, hoping that DVA can be "a social service with a soul."

Talk On Australia By Doctor Taylor

Saturday night the Royal Institute will hear Dr. Griffith Taylor's lecture on "Northward across Australia" which he is taking leave of absence to deliver in Great Britain.

His address, based on his recent geographical survey in Australia, embodies new developments from Tasmania to Darwin in the 20 years since he left Australia. This open meeting, to be held January 14, at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall, will be illustrated.

Dr. Taylor, who is the head of the Department of Geography, has been associated with the University of Toronto since 1935. He served as senior geologist on Captain Scott's Antarctic expedition during 1910 and 1913. In 1913 he received the King's medal for Polar Exploration for his work in the Antarctic.

By JOHN LIVINGSTON

Tonight volume two of Varsity Scrapbook for 1950 will be presented over C.J.R.T.F.M. at the usual time 7.30 p.m. Leading off the new year schedule will be an original story of love, courtesy the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme (we even have the English accent to go with it in the person of Des Bolte, one of our Jamacan neighbours). This is a story of a war marriage which goes on the rocks and is finally straightened out by the two lovers reading their old love letters (moral: save your old love letters). Production will be by Jack McQuorrie. The title of this work is "Tomorrow We'll Sing" and is our first venture into the soap opera field.

News from our Script Writing Contest Department, the deadline will be January 20, that is a week from this coming Friday. The contest has come along very well and enough scripts are now in the hands of the judges to enable us to continue our new year programs. All scripts should be turned into the S.A.C. office marked Radio Script Contest.

Our help-wanted sign is still out for one assistant director of programs (male or female) and one assistant director of the workshop (male or female). Applications for these positions should also be handed into the S.A.C. office.

If any of you would-be actors or actresses, writers, directors, producers or technicians feel that your talents are being wasted come down to the campus observatory any week day night after five p.m. and show us your talent, we will only be too pleased to see you.

Coming next week: a return of Trudy Konwalina teamed with Ronnie Bryden in an adaptation of Charles Dickens "Chimes". Be sure not to miss this one.

See you next week in VOX VARSITY.

Canuck Student—IUS Bond For Discussion Today At Regular NFCUS Meet

College and faculty representatives on the University of Toronto Committee of N.F.C.U.S. will air their views as to whether N.F.C.U.S. should affiliate with the International Union of Students, today at 5 p.m. at their regular meeting in Trinity College boardroom.

Held at a time when affiliation with the allegedly Communist-front I.U.S. is attracting increasing attention on Canadian campi, the meeting is meant to give the representatives a chance to clarify their attitudes toward affiliation, Committee President Tom Symons said yesterday.

Symons indicated the Committee would have no final vote today regarding affiliation. "It is a chance for N.F.C.U.S. reps to discuss the matter informally among themselves," he said. "They will then go back to their respective colleges and faculties for instructions regarding their final votes." Students at the Victoria College Union meeting Tuesday voted almost unanimously in favor of N.F.C.U.S. affiliation with I.U.S. No other college student body has yet voted on the question.

Even the final N.F.C.U.S. Committee vote will not decide whether University of Toronto students will urge union of the national body with I.U.S. Only the Students' Administrative Council can decide what will be the University's official policy in the national organization. However, it is generally believed that the advice of the N.F.C.U.S. Committee will always have much influence on the decisions of S.A.C. regarding N.F.C.U.S.

are the water-buffalo, and the swallows. In the cat and the bird, the cat is the essence of the feline, but it also has a personality of its own. This difficult effect is gained by the bold and sure use of broad black lines of varying density. The most delightful picture in the show is the study of a group of ducklings, set upon plain paper without any supporting background. Mrs. Skoggard achieves, while using only blobs of black, a marvellous roundness and softness for each individual duckling. The ducklings is an almost perfect design, but unfortunately Mrs. Skoggard cannot completely defeat the problems of design, with the result that patterns, similar to the ducklings, of fishes and squirrels, are disappointing.

The pictures with a background are not comparable to those without. It seems impossible to get rid of the disharmonious elements.

"Each man must make his individual way to God. There is no preassured way for salvation except our own experience. No philosophical formula can solve the meaning of life. We can't emulate Francis Thompson, we cannot envy him but we must be akin to his experience." In these phrases Dean Thomson emphasized the message of The Hounds of Heaven.

In conclusion the Dean emphasized that although theologians insist that the soul can have no direct contact with God since Thompson's poem denies the need for a mediator to achieve the pure presence of God, the soul can have direct contact with God and further noted that the influence and function of the imagination in theology has been too much alienated. Mediate revelation and mysticism need each other. The individual experience of divine love must be the final fruitful light and in that sense life becomes an overture to His love that exceeds death into paradise.

Dnieper Invents Economic Theory

By BOB DNIEPER

On Tuesday evening around five o'clock we paid a visit to the fencing room on one of our regular rounds of the sweat and muscle factory, and lo! we were treated to the sorry sight of the Varsity Basketball Blues holding a practice in that small room. From the coach we got the information that they couldn't get the gym for that night, but since a couple of big games are coming up, and since the team needs practice, they had to take what they could get.

It's a fine state of affairs when the senior intercollegiate team of a university can't get practice space. Sure, this was an isolated instance, but it only serves to point out the deplorable lack of gym space at the U of T.

We have hundreds of basketball teams, and potential material for hundreds more, and yet there is only one decent gym floor on the premises. WE NEED MORE FLOOR SPACE!

Never to be one to criticize without offering constructive advice, we have finally licked this problem . . . in theory of course. And this (are you listening, Dr. Smith?) is how:

A field house of five floors would do very nicely for the present, and in fact the Athletic Directorate is considering this. The only thing that stands in the way of construction is (a) lack of space to put it on and (b) a slight financial deficiency of only two million dollars.

The first problem could be licked easily if the University of Toronto would sign over to the AA sufficient land, either next to Philosophers' Walk, or behind the Observatory. In a pinch, the Observatory could be torn down . . . after all, what's more important, heavenly bodies, or student bodies?

As for the second matter . . . the lack of two million dollars . . . the AA could have enough of the long green in their pockets for a down payment on the field house inside of five, and maybe three, years without touching a cent of their present revenue.

There are approximately 9,000 male students at the university that come in contact with Hart House at least once a day. Of these, 90% admit they drink, and nine more per cent lie about it. The remainder have stomach ulcers. At a conservative estimate, if beer were sold at Hart House, at least 10,000 glasses or bottles would be sold every day. From our hotel-owner friends we find that the clear profit after overhead and depreciation on each dollar taken in from the sale of the brew is fifty cents.

With the concessions as to rent and taxes this venture could obtain, the profit would be about 60%, with the result that each and every day $500 would be earned. Over the two hundred school days, $100,000 would be realized, and if the summer months (with the summer sessions, etc.) are included, this take could be increased to $150,000 smackers per annum.

All the Athletic Association has to do is to convince the Governors of the feasibility of letting the AA have this beer concession. We feel sure that the university itslf would not touch this money, considered by some as tainted, and we feel equally sure that the Athletic Directorate would have no such Victorian objections . . . especially since it concerned a couple of grand a year. The AA could even build a tavern of their own on the back campus.

In five years the students could have the five gyms, in view of the fact that 25% cash building advance is sufficient for university debts. Okay! Mr. Warren Stevens, let's get cracking on this line of advance!

Interfac Boxing Hopefuls Convene Pros Not Wanted

Come on fellows, let's get cracking — the Senior Intramural Tournament starts next week. This is the earliest ever that the tournament will be held, and certainly leaves little time for conditioning. The gym is open daily, and coaching is given between 5.00 p.m. and 6.00 p.m.; so, come out all ye Varsity hopefuls, and limber up those mittens. If you cannot always make it to the gym try tuning up on the doors around home, and give your mother's front room rug a fine-tooth combing with a razzle dazzle exhibition of shadow boxing. This tournament is open to all, except you ex-pros.

Following the Senior Tournament, will be two home and home dual meets with O.A.C., which will serve as tune up bouts for the Varsity boxers in the coming Senior and Intermediate Intercollegiate Tournaments to be held at Hart House late in February.

Keep posted folks; this is Toronto's year for the fisticuffs!

Hockey

The Mikemaidens came out on top of a 3-2 score yesterday in the hockey game between St. Mike's and St. Hilda's II.

The first period was just a warm-up session in which St. Hilda's held the lead for a few minutes on a goal by Elizabeth Sproatt. B. J. Fraser tied the score as the period ended.

Second period play was all St. Mike's with B. J. Fraser and Fran O'Brien sinking two counters. Both goalies, Joan Beattie, St. Hilda's, and Agatha Leonard were terrific throughout the play.

Last period fatigue hit both teams and play was rather at a lull but St. Hilda's rallied enough to sink the puck via Ruth Hintzan. All in all the game was good and showed promise for the coming season.

Next game is today at 1.30 when PHE II plays Meds.

Swimming

An all-university Splash Party is coming up for the girls of the campus on Thursday, January 19, in the LM pool at 7.30. The program consists of such events as relays in pyjamas, and will be strictly for fun instead of competition.

Medicals

Before participating in any sport, an A or B rating with the Health Service is absolutely necessary. C rating means that the student is temporarily unfit for all types of athletics.

The Health Service does a thorough job in examinations, thereby protecting not only the team, but also the individual, so be sure to visit 43 St. George before you sign up for any sport.

From Soup To Nuts

The inter-collegiate volleyball team will visit McMaster for the day on February 11. This will be the first time that such a get-together has been held. Queen's, Western, Mac Hall, McMaster, and Varsity will all compete, but the meet will be more of a friendly match, than inter-collegiate tournament.

An All-Varsity tea mis to be picked at special practices starting at the beginning of February.

Intramural volleyball starts today in the LM gym at 5.30 when Physio plays Vic I. At 6.15 Institutional Management plays the School of Nursing.

Special feature at the Athletic Night in Hart House on January 21, is a girl's basketball game. McMaster is the visiting team.

Physical Education classes in the LM gym start on Monday, January 16, so be sure to register this week if possible, as classes are filling up quickly. Come early and avoid disappointment.

The Ski T Dance night has been picked for Tuesday, January 17th. Everyone is invited to the J.C.R. in U.C. where besides dancing, there will be a sing-song, and a display of equipment.

JUNIOR BASKETBALL

CENTRAL "Y" – 30
VARSITY JUNIORS – 27

Senior Blue Basketeers Play Central Y Tonight

The Senior Blues will don their basketball shoes tonight and lock horns with the Central Y Seniors at 8.45 p.m. in the Central Y gym on College Street, for what should prove an exhibition tilt well worth seeing.

Fresh from a 56-50 victory over the highly-rated Tri-Bells of the city league, the Blues are anxious for another victory in their second game since the holiday layoff. Coach Masterson is anxious to get in all the practice possible before the opening league game with Assumption this coming Saturday night.

The Blues have shown plenty of scoring potential against teams of their height, but have had trouble when forced to cope with a tall squad that can control the backboards. Big Doug Tyndall, who played for the Blues the last two seasons is in the Central Y lineup this year, and will give the Varsity squad an opportunity to practice their tactics for defence against the tall player.

Saturday night will bring the first Athletic night of the year and also the first league game of the year for the Blues. Assumption College will be the visiting squad.

Metras Preps Shooting Eyes For Toronto

London, Ont., Jan. 11——University of Western Ontario Mustangs, back on the victory trail, will be seeking their third straight cage triumph Friday night when they take on Tillsonburg Trojans in the London Arena. The following day, the Western team entrains for Ypsilanti, Mich., to play Michigan State Teachers.

Three In Eight

A record of three wins in eight starts, the Purple and White hoopsters have improved considerably in the last few games but still are a long way from their peak performance. Coach Johnny Metras, whip in hand, is hoping that his charges will hit their stride before Jan. 20 when they open their defence of the Intercollegiate crown against Toronto Varsity.

Trojans Strong

The Mustangs are not taking the Tillsonburg game lightly. The Trojans, entered in the strong Canadian - American basketball loop, boast a well-balanced team built around former Assumption stars, Bill Coulthard and Woody Campbell, and Western's great Bob Phibbs, the Mustangs' leading scorer in 1948 and 1949.

Preparing for the two week-end tilts, coach Metras sent the team through heavy scrimmages and fast-break drills at practices this week, as well as stressing various series of offenses.

Thomas Leads

As in previous games so far this year, Paul Thomas paced the Mustang scoring attack in last week-end's two victories. In the home opener Friday, Thomas hit the hoop for 14 points and, back in his home town of Niagara Falls, counted 16 before fouling out. Big Harry Wade, returning to action after a one-month layoff, also played great ball, netting 18 and 12 points respectively.

The Blue and White Society will continue its practice of awarding miniature silver skates to Varsity hockey stars, it was decided at the SAC meeting last night. The three stars of the game are picked by a committee at each home league game played at the arena, and a pair of skates is presented to each after the game. Similar awards were made last year by the society, providing many blues performers with valuable ornamental mementos of their college hockey days. However it is rumored that coach "Ace" Bailey finally wound up with most of the sets as a result of the long and tedious train trips.

Pitching Sportshoes

At the local arena yesterday Architecture and SPS sevenths made good in the only two scheduled encounters. The architects took a 3-2 decision from Forestry Bees in the noon hour set-to as they broke into a single goal lead in the first frame which the tree doctors could not overcome.

The winners divided the scoring evenly between Wilson, Mollard and Helmer with Burchner grabbing their only assist. For the green-shirts Wilson and Masterson netted singles while Kaye added on assist.

Trinity C found themselves on the unpleasant end of a 5-2 total when they met the skule sevenths yesterday afternoon. Cool was the top performer in the goal getting department with a duo to his credit for the winners.

For Trinity it was Gilbert and Malcolm who hit the score sheet, with the latter also picking up an assist along with Cockburn. Cooper, Mowatt and McGeorge added the remaining skule goals.

On the major hoop floor Junior Meds outclassed the Junior Vic quintet by a slim margin as they took yesterday's meeting 16-14. The first third of the game was rather tight, only eight points being scored. Junior Meds broke loose in the middle frame of the contest and hooped up ten points to one for the red and gold basketeers. Although the Vicmen came back strongly in the last stanza they just couldn't make up those last two points.

Goldberg shone for the Meds aggregation with an eleven point effort, while Hirando and Koreny collected two each and Charendoff added the remaining single. Mentlish with five and Rumball and Stevens, who counted three each were the top Vic marksmen.

The wrestling prelims which were slated for last night were postponed in the main. Only a single bout was held in the 145 lb. class. Herbert of Vic was the top man as he pinned Holding, SPS. Further matches will be held tonight at five in the wrestling room.

A new entry into the (happy) family of interfaculty sports is the minor hoop loop squad of the School of Social Work. They made their way to a 36-31 victory over Vic thirteenths yesterday. Smith, Kirk Wipper and Keith Smith leading the way, each turning in fourteen-point efforts. Jack White and Neil Field were top men for Vic with nine and eight markers respectively.

NFCUS Committee Turn Thumbs Down On IUS Affiliation

After an hour-and-a-half long discussion yesterday that demonstrated almost as many points of view as there were speakers, the University of Toronto Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students voted 9-4 against affiliation of NFCUS with the Communist-dominated International Union of Students.

Urges Western Bloc

Immediately after the vote George Morrison, Meds' representative on the Committee, formally announced his intention to introduce a motion that the Committee urge that NFCUS lead the way in organizing a "Western Union" of students.

Yesterday's vote against NFCUS-IUS affiliation will be presented to SAC at its next meeting by NFCUS Committee President Tom Symons. Since the Committee is a sub-committee of SAC, the vote will be considered by SAC as the recommendation of an informed official group. But the final decision whether or not the university supports or opposes NFCUS-IUS affiliation will be made by SAC representatives after receiving instructions from the student bodies of their colleges and faculties.

Campus Leaders Attend

Present at the meeting yesterday in Trinity Boardroom were leaders of various student organizations, and many were allowed to speak after approval by the NFCUS Committee. Among these visitors were: Jack Gray, News Editor of The Varsity, who is now writing a series of articles in The Varsity on NFCUS-IUS relations; SAC President Bob Hetherington, SAC Finance Commissioner Earl Orser, and ISS Publicity Director Jack Tinker.

Hetherington spoke out strongly against affiliation, saying, "I think that if we were to ask NFCUS to affiliate we would be betraying the democratic heritage of Canadian youth." He warned that Communists would maintain control of IUS by their domination of procedure. "They definitely do not follow parliamentary procedure," he said.

He also said NFCUS would suffer impairment of its national program because its time would be taken up with political debates in IUS. "NFCUS is beginning to feel its way in national affairs," he declared. "I would hate to see the financial and mental resources of its members dissipated in an international political struggle."

He said IUS can supply no practical services not already given by the International Student Service.

Worry May Be Good Thing If We Understand Causes

Worry is not necessarily the evil thing we are accustomed to think it is, Dr. A. M. Doyle of the Department of Psychiatry stressed last night at the Mental Health Discussion Group at the Psychiatric Hospital. In showing that we should not always take a purely negative view of it, he pointed out that only when man begins to worry and make plans for the future did he really begin to progress.

Escape Not Good

The same situation appears in the idividual; "we worry about our financial situation, for example, and take various steps to correct it. Many of us choose merely to avoid it, and look with some disapprobation on those who do not do so." Dr. Doyle pointed out that this side-stepping of anxiety is not always such a brave step.

Using students' predicaments as example, since most of the hundred or so who filled the lecture room were students, he noted that a student who found his expenses pressing and simply got a loan to tide him over, or else dropped out of college, was taking an escape which he mght regret later. A much better course would be to strenuously budget and cut down his expences as much as he could.

Getting to the central idea of the talk, the connection between worry and health, Dr. Doyle stated that this emotion, beneficial if viewed in the right perspective, could have far-reaching and injurious effects if its true cause is not discovered.

Vicious Cycle to Worry

Using numerous case histories as illustrations, he showed that worry could begin with seemingly insignificant matters such as family pressure behind a student's studying, or a fear of meeting people, and grow like a rolling snowball into a real mental affliction. Both sometimes cause greater tension in studying, which in turn causes fatigue and lack of ability to concentrate, which in turn causes more worry and confusion, and the whole cycle starts all over again.

Sometimes the victim feels almost sub-consciously convinced that he is in some way abnormal. This causes him to work harder, or go in for sports excessively, to prove that he is normal, and impairs his health. Instead of ascribing his worry to the original cause, he blames his illnes on his working or playing too hard. When the original source is discovered, Dr. Doyle felt, the trouble can be erased.

He cited the case, in closing, of his own little girl who was afraid to go to school after the Christmas holidays were over. She went, and came back the first day with a black eye. Someone had said he was "going to get her".

"It's too bad we couldn't solve all our worries in such a violent way."

Amazon Booze Parties Outlined To Anthrop Club

Mr. S. Dirks dressed up a co-ed in a native garment of striped cotton resembling a sack in order to illustrate his informal talk to the Anthropology Club last night on "The Upper Reaches of the Amazon". The club also heard Rev. G. D. Mellish, recently returned from missionary work in Liberia, speaking on his experiences with the tribes there.

For recreation, a Peruvian tribe of the Amazon jungle stages drinking parties which last several days amid dancing and beating of drums. However, Mr. Dirks pointed out that the men dance together and not with the women who dance only with each other. Come meal time, the women are sent outside to eat. In this culture it is the men, not the women, who wear cotton handbags around their necks, paint their faces and elaborate their dress with feathers down the back.

A-V-R Sundae Hits Spot, Lots Of Goo, Cherry Top

By MORLEY TORGOV

Yesterday we made the rounds of some of the campus-side eating establishments to investigate a new frozen phenomenon called the "All-Varsity Sundae." The only thing we knew about it was that the directors of the All-Varsity Revue had issued orders forbidding choristines to eat it.

"You're already losing your hair," Producer George McGowan said. "Go try the All-Varsity Revue Sundae now. You might as well lose your figure while you're at it."

At one of the student-frequented restaurants we came upon three young ladies huddled admiringly over something on their table.

"Engagement ring?" we queried.

Female Figure Fixer

The girls drew back from something and then we beheld the following: One shell eclair filled with vanilla, topped by chocolate ice cream which in turn was topped by hot fudge sauce sprinkled with white coconut and garnished with blue whipped cream and two — not one — but two cherries.

We should explain that the above was very conveniently sitting in a dish, although for moment it seemed to be headed right for the table top — which incidentally wouldn't be too difficult. In spite of its architectural splendour, the "sundae" remains one of the most difficult culinary concoctions to tackle with an ordinary spoon. Some have recommended the use of a shovel, while other favor a fork. Still others combine the three. One young man was seen desperately attacking it with his bare hands, but he was an engineer and can be forgiven.

We were then informed that this was one version of the "All Varsity Sundae," and that Diana Sweets, Mac's, and the Students Coffee Shop were featuring the calorie-laden sundae special in honor of the coming All-Varsity Revue.

Created With 'Abandon'

Over at Diana's, we interviewed chief fountain man Louis, one of the city's most imaginative sundae architects. "When you're in this business as long as I've been," Louis told us, "you welcome a chance to let yourself go periodically." Whereupon, with that wonderfully articulate abandon that bespeaks the true gourmet, Louis let himself go and before we could say "Two cherries!" we were presented with the All-Varsity ice cream creation.

Louis beamed. And we beamed. And then the sundae was finished.

"Anything else?," Louis asked.

"Yes, Louis" we said, "How about an All-Varsity Revue bromo now!"

Professor Dawson

White-Haired And Fiery

By JIM BRADEN

I didn't know what to expect when I set out to interview Professor R. M. Dawson. I'd heard that he was quite vocal about students who eat their lunch, chew gum, talk (horror of horrors) read The Varsity during his lectures. The office grapevine said that he had an easy sense of humour; a student told me, "Don't let him slip any of that Bluenose propaganda about Upper Canada into the interview".

The office had a worked-in look and was just comfortably cluttered. The man himself suited the office, for he had just that amount of comfortable disorder in his clothes that is the prerogative of professors, and an unruly forelock of white hair.

Hails From Nova Scotia

"Well what do you want to know?"

I couldn't think of anything better, so we began at the beginning.

Professor Dawson was born in Bridgewater, Nova Scotia in 1895, and after the usual schooling entered Dalhousie, leaving that institution with a B.A. and an M.A. Later on came more post-grad work at Harvard and London.

"I don't know why you ask me all this," he said, "you could have got it out of Who's Who."

He'd scored a telling blow, so I thought it best to get in a quick question about his teaching positions.

The list reads like this: Dalhousie, Carnegie Institution of Technology (Pitts.), Rutgers, the University of Saskatchewan, and "about 12 years" at the U of T. "Tell them I went to the States because the field of Political Science in Canada was too new at that time." He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1933.

How to Write a Book

"How does one go about writing a book like your 'Government of Canada'?" I asked him.

"The Government of Canada", I learned, was the result of teaching Political Science course for 18 years, at the end of which time lecture notes, material, and references are right at hand. This is a successful formula, evidently, for the book won the Governor General's Award on publication. You may have noticed that late last year another book, "Democratic Government in Canada," appeared under Professor Dawson's name. It is aimed at high

This picture of 'Food Poety' (an A-V-R Sundae) looks good, but, beware ladies! It could make the difference between 'slim'n slender' and 'pleasingly plump'! And you men—this may mean the difference between financial embarrassment and flat-bustedness. We don't like to point out the obvious, but a word to the wise should be sufficient. Stick to your beer and pretzels, or your coffee and eclairs, unless you feel up to carrying around two or three extra pounds avoirdupois.

Accentuating The Negative

On Wednesday night, the Students' Administrative Council faced the problem of the decline of student participation in "worth-while" activities on the campus. In a vigorous move, backed by unanimous resolutions from two colleges, the Council passed a motion that pep rallies should be restricted in number next fall.

We are not convinced that the decline in student participation in college and Hart House affairs is because of a mis-directed student interest. We are not convinced that there is such a thing extant as student apathy on the Varsity campus.

And we are convinced even less that the cutting-down of the number of pep rallies will persuade students to take a more active part in other less "rah-rah" matters.

As suggested earlier this year, there seems to be a serious decline of interest and participation by students in extra-curricular affairs of cultural bent, like debates, musical offerings, and so forth. That this decline should coincide with the era when the largest mass of student veterans have left the campus has given rise to a wild outcry of "student apathy."

Perhaps the student veteran decrease has some bearing on this sudden "decline" in the more serious extra-curricular activity. But the reason seems to lie more in the fact that campus activities, both of the all-Varsity and Hart House type, and of the college brand, have expanded with the increased post-war enrollment. As long as the swollen enrollment was on hand, there was adequate participation to please the hearts of all campus entrepreneurs and clubbers. Now that the number of students is decreasing annually, there is a surfeit of activities caused by post-war multiplication. The result: the average student is torn between so many choices he finds little time for full participation in any.

Blue and White Society chairman Bill Turner, in defending pep rallies, suggested that the demand for various student functions had been over-estimated considering the decrease in enrollment. We think Mr. Turner is right.

It also seems that pep-rallies are the "scapegoat" (in Mr. Turner's phraseology) in the battle of college activities vs. all-Varsity ones.

Instead of taking the strictly negative approach of putting down on pep rallies, perhaps the SAC would do well to call a conference of all major campus organizations at which to discuss the problem of over-expansion of activities.

The results of such a conference, if guided by considerable diplomacy, should be much more productive than a resolution against pap rallies.

We are none too enthusiastic supporters of pep rallies ourselves. Pep rallies usually demand more physical energy and vocal enthusiasm than we are able to muster on a chilly Friday night in the fall. But picking on pep-rallies is not a constructive remedy for the problem of not-enough participation on student activities that are of intrinsic value.

Let's accentuate the positive, not the negative.

NFCUS-Rep. Report

Editor, The Varsity:

As one of the Canadian representatives to the I.U.S. council meeting in Sophia this summer, I met Russ Hamilton, the N.F.C.U.S. observer to the same meeting. He spoke there along with the other delegates and observers from many student bodies all over the world. Along with them he discussed the problems facing the student youth. I can say that he participated at this meeting as an equal, although representing a group of students which as yet has not made any concrete move to affiliate to the I.U.S.

Before leaving Sophia, Hamilton promised to report back to the Canadian students which he represented, and present to them the recommendations which he as N.F.C.U.S. rep. and the I.U.S. steering committee had agreed upon. This happened last September. It is now the beginning of the new year, and as yet I have not heard of, nor read in the University Press any statement by Russ Hamilton.

Since the N.F.C.U.S. went to so much expense to send an observer to Sophia I feel that Hamilton has an obligation to fulfill, and that is, to report back to his fellow students so that we may discuss fully the report and decide whether or not to accept his recommendations. They were good recommendations and worthy of seeing the light of the press. Right now, in the midst of the discussion concerning the London Conference called by the British N.U.S. at which Canadian students were represented, to discuss affiliation to I.U.S., this report is doubly important.

Right now, we as Canadian students, are not participating as fully as we should be on the international field. Only in strengthening the international ties with other democratic student bodies can we build effectively our own N.F.C.U.S.

I remain sincerely yours,

Reva Steinberg

Will Join Says NFCUS At Conference In 1947 But Rocks Lie Ahead

(This if the fifth in a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of the International Union of Students. The sixth article in this series will be carried in The Varsity on Monday.)

By JACK GRAY

All three Canadian observers from the National Federation of Canadian University Students to the 1947 Prague Council Meeting of The International Union of Students were given to the NFCUS conference held in Winnipeg in December, 1947.

Reports Helped Affiliation

It was the 1947 NFCUS Conference which was to propose a motion of affiliation with IUS, although that motion had certain definite conditions to it. The three reports had much to do with securing from the Canadian Federation this positive move into the international arena.

In 1947 there was still a hope that the western nations' student unions might get together and attempt to change those trends and movements in the IUS to which they so strongly objected. The United States, which was in the process of forming its National Students Association, was still a member of IUS. There was however a need for strong and courageous leadership in the IUS against the communist "bloc," and no doubt in the back of many Canadian students minds was the thought that Canada might help to provide that leadership.

Observers Noted Fault

The three observers NFCUS had sent to Prague in 1947 all saw the many faults and dangers inherent in joining IUS. They realized that it would take a great deal of effort and energy to make an effective contribution to the international organization. But they were enthusiastic about the possibilities which lay in the IUS and they reported the many positive activities which they saw growing out of the work of the new international group.

"By actively participating and constructively working in the IUS we can contribute more, much more, in making IUS a student-serving organization than by a negative and isolationist attitude!" said Bob Rambusch, in the University of Toronto, in his report. "To influence one must make contacts—Canada's influence must be felt on the international plane—contact and active participation is the only medium."

Camille Laurin, of the University of Montreal, said in the concluding remarks of his report:

IUS A "Good Bet"

"The IUS will live in spite of its imperfections, in spite of the suspicions which it justly arouses in a great many countries. It will live because it corresponds to a need, because once firmly established, it will be of precious assistance to all students of the earth, because its constitution is sound at the bottom, because students constitute a homogenous and intelligent class, which, gropingly, it is true, but surely, will reach the syndicate organization which suits it. To bet on the IUS is to bet on the good horse, whether success comes tomorrow or in a few years."

George Robinson, a engineering student at the University of New Brunswick went right to the point: "The political cloud over IUS . . . will, I am afraid, hide its importance when considered from the practical viewpoint of most Canadian students. However, we should not minimize the importance of IUS. The students of the world are potentially powerful and influential groups. This fact most of us in North America have failed to realize. Indeed, (I) travelled 4000 miles to Prague before (I) realized it."

Decide To Affiliate

The 1947 conference, having heard the reports, and after much discussion, finally decided to affiliate with the IUS, conditionally for a period of two years. If, in that time IUS had not made changes in some of the points which NFCUS felt were not in line with the democratic heritage of Canadian students, they decided they would disaffiliate, and actively promote the formation of a "western" international student union.

Still ahead of the Federation before the Canadian delegates were to reach the IUS Council meeting to be held in Paris in the summer of 1948 was the issue which was to provide the final split in the already broken ranks of the IUS: the February events in Czechoslovakia in which the IUS was to refuse to protest what some national unions considered an unfair treatment of a number of Czechoslovakian university students.

The NFCUS conference chose Grant Livingstone to head the Canadian delegation. The final chapter in the NFCUS-IUS relationship was begun, a chapter which doesn't read as well as it might, and which brought out the inexperience and idealism with which Canadian students entered the international field.

Jam-Packed Vitals Vendory

This scene is all too familiar to students who make a habit of eating in Hart House Great Hall. The line in the left background extends all the way back through the Hall, down past the new cloak-room, and sometimes along the hallway outside the common rooms.

The opening of the East door to the hallway would cause more confusion than at present, allowing students to enter at the mid-point of the line. One solution is suggested by the proponents of the Student Memorial Building.

This new building would have a cafeteria, open to both men and women, which would attract many of Hart House patrons. The crowd always follows the fair, and when food and women are mixed in the proper proportions heaven help the architest!

'Archaic Scripts' Today's Talk By Taylor

An illustrated lecture on the Biblical manuscripts recently discovered in a cave near the Dead Sea will be given by Principal Taylor of University College at 4:30 p.m. in Room 4, Trinity College to-day. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Canadian Society of Biblical Studies.

These manuscripts promise to be one of the most important archaeological finds ever made in Palestine.

Six College Unions Holding Meet Here, Discuss Problems

Delegates from six Ontario universities will attend a two-day conference on Student Unions over the weekend at Hart House, Warden Nicholas Ignatieff said yesterday. Representatives from Queen's, Carleton College, McMaster, Ontario Agricultural College, Western and Toronto will attend.

Called by Hart House

The Conference, called at the suggestion of Hart House, will discuss problems relating to the planning, financing, administration, and operation of student unions at the colleges represented.

Of the six, four already have student unions, while McMaster and OAC are in the process of planning and building their unions. Discussions will begin on Saturday morning, and continue through until Wednesday night. University President Sidney Smith will welcome the union representatives at a luncheon in Hart House Saturday.

The three discussion periods will deal with the planning of a union, the control and organization of activities in a union and an investigation of the new demands facing college unions.

Will Discuss Problems

Hart House has called the Ontario unions together to discuss problems which are of interest to them all, in the hope that the discussions will be of assistance to those unions which have unsolved problems. That, acording to the Warden, includes them all. He expects there will be some frank discussion as the union administrative officers and student representatives try to get at the roots of some of their problems.

The Warden is particularly interested in the fact that their will be student representatives at the meeting. "In the past two or three years," he said yesterday, "there has been a notable increase in student participation in the work of

All-Varsity Already Sellout For Friday, Saturday Shows

At three p.m. yesterday afternoon Marv Lipman, All Varsity Revue ticket official, announced the "Sold Out" sign for Friday and Saturday, Feb. 10 and 11, had been put up. In five hours of sale on the opening day of the ticket sales over 1,500 ducats had been purchased by the students.

The problem of exchanging advanced tickets for reserved seats confused many students. The All-Varsity Revue officials announced yesterday that Jan. 30 will be designated as "Exchange Day". It is on this day that the students may receive their advanced color tickets for reserved seats at Hart House Box-office. The box-office is the only place where the students may obtain their reserved seats in exchange for their colored tickets.

There will be a matinee performance Saturday in order to relieve the congestion expected for persons wanting to see the show on the week-end. Tickets for this performance are selling slowly but the officials expect sales to move more quickly in the future.

Ticket Sales Heavy

"The response to the ticket sales has been one of the greatest ever seen on the Toronto campus," said Murray Sussman yesterday. Tickets will remain on sale at the SAC offices, Hart House and Room 64 UC, UC rotunda, VCU office, and the Engineering Society at the times noted in the ads until the "All Sold Out" sign is put up.

"I was wondering, young man, would you please tell me something? Ever since I received one of those dear, dear, college Christmas cards from my niece, you know she's a Trinity girl, I have been in fits trying to analyze its adorable crest."

"Er. . . . Just a minute, and I'll call our heraldic specialist."

Gimme a cigarette Jim this might be long.

"Hello, Heraldic Sxpert here . . . certainly, here's the full story.

As you will have noticed, the coat of arms of Trinity consists of the arms of Bishop Strachan "impaled" with the badge or seal of the Diocese of Toronto. Bishop Strachan the founder of Trinity. On the right half of the shield is a field of gold on a blue field, and on the left a crown indicating its Royal Charter, the Bible and prayer book, the Shepherd's Crook, symbol of the authority of a Bishop, a key, symbol of the Church's authority, and a dove, bearing the olive branch of peace and good will. The stag was part of the arms of Sir John Beverly Robinson, first chancellor of Trinity.

UC Has Burning Lamp

"That's all on Trinity, is there anything else?"

"Oh you dear, dear, boy, how fascinating. Do go on, of course."

"By any chance Miss did you get a Christmas card from a friend in University College."

"No? Oh well, I think you will find this interesting, if only for a contrast."

The U.C. coat of arms is closely linked to that of the University and they are sometimes placed side by side on the one shield, as on the dedicatory tablet at the head of the grand stair in the U.C. tower. The background is of the U.C. colours red and white. Instead of the tree, the U.C. crest is a burning lamp, symbol of intellectual enlightenment, and on the shield itself the open books are placed above the crown.

Wise Owl is For Arts

"Now please tell me about Vic's crest. You know, I'm an old Vic. girl myself."

"Sure, anything to please an old Vic. girl." . . . (Jim hand me another cigarette.)

The coronet surmounting the Vic shield is that of the Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII, who visited Canada in 1860. The cross which appears on the shield is red on silver or white ground.

The [illegible] owl; is a wise old bird, which appears in the first quarter of the shield represents the Faculty of Arts, the lamp of learning, theology, and the sphinx and phoenix respectively Law and Medicine which ceased to exist upon the federation of Vic with the university in 1890.

Another One for Toronto

"Hand me another cigarette," anybody. Now before you leave, Miss, er, let me tell about the University of Toronto crest itself.

The emblem above the "Velut Arbor Aevo" consists, as we heraldic experts say; "Azure, two open books and in ba'ce a Beaver, all proper, upon a Chief Agent the Royal and Imperial crown also proper, and for the crest on the wreath of the colors an oak tree proper stemmed and fructed Or", and in ordinary Canadian:.

"On a blue field, two open books with a beaver below, all in their proper colors; on the chief, or upper part, the Royal and Imperial Crown in proper colors; and for a crest, on a wreath of the colors, an oak tree, with branches and golden acorns."

The oak tree suggests the motto, "Crescit velut arbor aevo." or as we say around the office. "May it grow as a tree through the ages." The crown, the symbol of King's College, is set on a white background, while the open books, which speak for themselves, and the beaver, emblem of Canada, are on a background of royal blue."

"Hello, hello, Well what do you know about that. She hung up."—

McMaster Chancellor Presents Noon Address Topic: "Why Worship"

Chancellor G. P. Gilmour of McMaster will present the first in the series of noon-hour addresses sponsored by the Chapel Committee for the new year on Thursday, January 19. His topic will be "Why Worship," a discussion of the Christian Conception of the nature of God and of the consequent attitude of man toward God.

Mr. Gilmour is a graduate of Varsity, and attended Harbord Collegiate in Toronto before his University career. He received his B.A. and B.Th. here and continued his post-grad work at Oxford and Yale.

His extra-curricular activities include the presidency of the Canadian Council of Churches, and he is vice chairman of the Baptist Hymnary Committee of Canada. He is the author of the Bible and the Christian Religion, and a contributor to other religious publications.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Vanity Fair

At Hart House all this week Trinity College is presenting Thackeray's Vanity Fair. In the words of the Prologue there are "some scenes of high life, and some — well, very middling indeed: some love making for the sentimental, and some light comic business — brilliantly illuminated by the author's own candles." Capably directed by Herbert Whittaker, beautifully costumed by Patricia Card, and remarkably well cast, the show has all the ingredients of good theatre, and provides an excellent evening of first-rate entertainment.

Constance Cox's admirable adaptation of Thackeray's novel combines all the essential elements of dramatic solidarity; to her the play owes much of its appeal. The plot progresses easily and never loses interest, for it is a finely knitted pattern of witty dialogue, humorous situation, light tragedy, and brilliant satire. Lavish and gaudy costuming suggests all the frivolity and gaiety of the "Fair," and is sharply contrasted by simplicity of decor. It is unfortunate that an unauthentic set marred the opening of the first act. Conflicting blues and greens on the walls, poorly blended painting, and a ghastly statue, tended to distract attention and destroy the otherwise perfect unity of the whole. However, this failing was soon modulated, and eventually dispelled by the virtuosity of three performers who unconsciously commanded the stage whenever they appeared.

Rarely do young actors forget themselves and their audience to the extent of completely losing themselves in the character they are portraying; indeed, there are schools of thought on this subject, pro and con. We do not intend to argue the question but merely point out what actually occurred on the part of one actor in Vanity Fair. To call Barry Britton-Foster (Captain Dobbin) an actor is somewhat paradoxical since what came across the footlights might be described as a "living emotion." His intense sincerity, keen sensitivity, and sympathetic understanding of his role combined with a perfect co-ordination of word, gesture, and facial expression, add up to a performance that was absolutely superb.

Murray Belway, making his Hart House debut, was the ideal choice for Joseph Sedley. His brilliant sense of comedy, excellent timing, and clever grimacing, causing his unwitting domination of every sicene in which he appeared, threw the audience into shrieks of laughter.

Diana Fishleigh (Miss Crawley) was the most surprising actress in the show. Her interpretation of the aged spinster was admirable, particularly her very convincing coughing scene.

Kay Hawtrey (Becky Sharp) gave a mature and sustained performance throughout. Her theatrical experience and training is constantly evident, for she moves and speaks with grace and confidence, and is capable of the subtle delineation so essential to the role.

The entire cast and crew deserve high praise for their time and effort. Special mention might be made of Dave Donaldson (Prologue) for his masterful air of nonchalance in a rather thankless role. Wednesday night's audience was appreciative but pitifully small. It is to be hoped that on the remaining two evenings many will avail themselves of the opportunity to see Vanity Fair, a show of the highest calibre.

Bruce Evoy.

AM&D EDITOR'S NOTE

In yesterday's Varsity was a letter of comment on Monday's review of Stage 50. We commend the writers for their judicious, restrained analysis of the Stage 50 play, and on the conspicuous omission of any argumentum ad hominem. Comments such as this are invaluable. Not only are they evidence to the principle of subjective criticism, but they also provoke a healthy spirit of controversy and possibly lead closer to the truth. We therefore urge readers who agree or disagree with us to write.

Hazel Scott

It is always a source of wonder when a musical artist is completely at ease while playing in either the classical genre or the jazz idiom. Amazement increases when the artist combines both these qualities at a single performance. Such a source was present at Eaton Auditorium last night in the effervescent person of Hazel Scott.

In addition to being a clever pianist, Miss Scott is a good psychologist: her classical selections, forming the first half of the programme, began with Rameau's La Joyeuse and the light, humorous Le Coucou by Daquin, and climaxed with Chopin's Sonata in B flat Minor.

Since the very nature of the opening pieces belies effective interpretation, Miss Scott's virtues were not apparent until she had progressed to Debussy's Danse and La plus que Lente. Here her skilful, dynamic control was in evidence as she successfully re-created the delicate, suggestive power of the impressionistic composer. One could feel the sensitive moods and see the vague, fleeting pictures in sound. Then clashing chords shattered the silence to introduce Ernst Dohnanyi's Hungarian-flavored Rhapsody in C Major. Its irregular tone and form were fortunately conveyed with a minimum of the usual pounding.

Chopin's Impromptu in F sharp Major was also played with intense feeling. However, her chords were not as clear-cut as they might have been in emphasizing the composition's solemn sound. Tour de force of the evening was the Sonata with its famous Funeral March. Especially effective were the poetic calm in the midst of this movement and the dramatic approach to a climax in the finale.

Although lacking the mature stature of the acknowledged interpreters of these composers, Miss Scott nevertheless injects into her playing an irrepressible yet subtle sense of rhythm and a broad outlook which are often absent in these great musicians.

The lighter half of the programme proved to be comparatively unsatisfying — the one exception being a pleasant presentation of songs from South Pacific and Kiss Me, Kate. Her "swinging of the classics" was inevitably ingenious but adulterated. Her demonstration of be-bop comprised one-half hiding the melody, one-quarter her inimitable self, and one-quarter occasional bop cliche. At least she chose two tunes whose chords are adaptable to this kind of music, namely, How High the Moon and Tea For Two.

With her informal approach and almost child-like charm, Miss Scott wooed the audience even to the extent of enjoying the rather superficial presentation of equally superficial music, Concert Star Special, her own boogie-woogie.

Six Unions

running student unions, both in the United States and Canada.

"The manner in which students are elected or chosen to their responsible positions on student union governing bodies is also a question which should receive some consideration here."

Trend Towards Selection

In the United States the trend is away from the democratic election of members of committees and governing boards. Instead, American unions are selecting the students on the basis of interest, efficiency and ability. "The ease with which the Americans are doing away with the election system shows a dangerous tendency," the Warden said.

Hart House has what the Warden termed "the most democratic set-up" of elections he has yet seen. Hart House Committees are all elected by the men of the university.

Another problem which may come up for discussion is the very "live issue" of how a student union should be controlled. This is a matter which will have to be decided for the proposed Toronto Students' Memorial Union and will be of particular interest to the Toronto delegates.

NFCUS Committee

Moreover, the political split between Russia and the West would color debates on every issue.

Outlines History

Varsity News Editor Jack Gray spoke first, giving a summary of NFCUS-IUS relations. He emphasized that IUS is definitely Communist controlled, but supported affiliation.

But it was necessary to be prepared to do two things if affiliation was to be sought. First, NFCUS had to be ready to fight "a strong political battle in defence of western democratic ideas. At least two-thirds of the national student unions now not in IUS will also have to join if any effective work is to be done by the West in the organization," he said.

Second, Canadian students would have to be prepared to support their representatives to IUS both morally and financially.

Criticizes Canadians

Among those who spoke most unreservedly in favor of affiliation was Reva Steinberg, III UC. "I think Canadian students have walked around with a chip on their shoulders regarding IUS," she declared. "They want other people to agree with their opinions if they are to sit beside them." She was referring to fears expressed by many speakers that Canadian membership in IUS would only add prestige to Communist propaganda.

In answer to a query by Bob Hetherington she admitted she represented a Labor Progressive Party youth group when she visited the IUS meeting in Sophia last summer.

She said minority groups at the Sophia meeting were allowed full freedom to sipeak and take part in activities.

Much practical work is achieved by IUS, she added. The organization broadcast in 14 foreign languages from Prague. Students visiting the meeting had been given cheap railway rates throughout Europe. Seminars had been arranged for students in professional courses and Polish students had been brought to London for an industrial fair. The organization had consultive status with the United Nations Educational, Social and Cultural Organization.

Need Close Study

ISS Publicity Director Jack Tinker said it will be necessary to discover the exact nature and practice of the IUS constitution before affiliation can be intelligently discussed. It was necessary to discover the powers of the IUS credentials committee and how it decides whether a delegation should be accepted.

To illustrate his fears that the credentials committee uses its power to keep IUS Communist-dominated, Tinker told of what he had heard about Spanish representation in the organization. He had been informed that Spanish Republican students in exile from Franco Spain were allowed seats as representatives of their homeland. Yet Czechoslovak students outside their Communist-ruled homeland were not allowed to represent Czechoslovakia.

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

With two columns behind me and my name still on the masthead, I can breathe a little easier. There have been no letters to the editor voicing complaints, nobody has questioned the accuracy of my statements, and my fellow engineers have withheld the accusation of desertion to the "enemy." I can only assume that (a). everybody reads and approves, or (b) nobody reads and nobody cares. Having actually seen someone reading this column I must discard the latter assumption and put my faith in the former.

However, there may be some among you who find atoms, isotopes and conceptions of the infinite a little difficult to absorb. Today's column therefore is written in an attempt to get back into your good graces. For today we are going to consider pigs. What could be more familiar or easier to understand? Science is all-embracing in its scope and even the lowly hog has come within range of its searching eye.

And Thereby Hangs A Tail

This particular side of the scientific picture came to my attention last summer during an hour of the National Research Council Laboratories. Having just been initiated into the mysteries of such scientific marvels as a betatron, a producer of artificial lightning, the latest in radar equipment, etc., it was a little disconcerting to find oneself, on being ushered into a small laboratory, confronted by slices of bacon of various colours, presided over by an enthusiastic young man in a white lab coat reminiscent of a high-class butcher shop. However, the young man's enthusiasm and the novel nature of his problem soon won us over and today while the rest of the tour remains a somewhat hazy memory, those slices of bacon stand out vividly in my mind. The story went something like this:

For some time the Canadian meat packing industry had been showing grave concern over variations in the quality of their products. Some of the bacon being produced had shown strange characteristics. The meat had a tendency to go bad for no apparent reason. When fried it lost its red colour and turned brown. The brown discolorations also appeared on the cut surface of fresh bacon. This was particularly disturbing because of the importance of Canada's export market and numerous complaints had been received from Britain regarding the quality of the product being delivered.

Science Takes Over

The problem was turned over to the Biology section of the Division of Applied Biology at N.R.C. and a number of experiements and tests were conducted to determine the source of the trouble. Although differences in the physical structure of the bacon was evident from preliminary tests, it was not until the sources of the samples of bacon were taken into account that the reason for variations in quality became apparent. It was found that bacon received from pigs butchered on the farm was entirely free of discoloration, remained fresh for a long time and showed no tendency to turn brown in the frying pan. However, the bacon arriving from the packing houses on the other hand quickly showed the characteristic flaws. What advantage did the farmer have over the meat packing industry? The answer forthcoming was a novel and interesting one. It was all a matter of psychology; apparently pigs had feelings. The farmer butchering his hogs on the farm did the job quickly, efficiently and with no preliminaries. The pig had no premonition of his fate and was dispatched in a more or less happy frame of mind. His abattoir brethren were not quite so fortunate. For weeks perhaps they had been shut up in crowded box cars, moved about the country, marched up and down ramps, their eating habits disturbed, so that even a pig could not help but feel that something was up. By the time he was marched into the slaughterhouse he was a bundle of nerves and neuroses and in no condition to provide bacon to grace a breakfast table.

Blood Differs

This state of "mind" of the hogs apparently resulted in differences in the chemical composition of the blood and we were shown test tube samples of haemoglobin, the substance in the blood forming the chief consituent of the red corpuscles, taken from hogs killed under different conditions. The sample from the farm animals' blood was a bright red colour while that taken from abattoir hogs was a light brownish, almost colourless liquid. A further characteristic of the fatigued animal was a loss of muscle sugar and this was also believed to have a bearing on the source of the brown discoloration.

That's the story, and I'm sure the possibilities and implications have already occurred to you. What a fertile, undeveloped field for the psychologist and the psychoanalyst.

The doctrine of "free will" has always been one of my strongest spiritual props and the thought that my life was governed by associations out of the dim past and prenatal influences or present environment, has always been distasteful. Therefore, to those who have seen fit to attempt to pry into the sanctity of the human mind, I suggest this new field for their efforts with the fervent hope that they may be able to devise a means whereby the lowly pig may go to meet his fate completely adjusted with a smile on his "lips" and a song in his heart.

Until this means is forthcoming I understand the scientists have recommended that feeding of sugar to hogs eight or ten hours before slaughter, as a means of preparing for their ordeal.

I consulted Professor W. A. Ham (no relation), of the Anatomy Department, regarding the reasons for the discoloration in the haemoglobin and possible implications of the problem in relation to human beings. Dr. Ham suggested that the peculiar effect was due to a type of oxidation phenomena accompanied by a loss of glycogen in the blood and a depletion of adrenalin. Work done on various animals, particularly cats, tended to confirm the findings of the N.R.C.

Humans Too

According to Dr. Ham similar changes occur in human beings under conditions of emotional stress, fear, or mental disorder. All intestinal movement ceases, the blood pressure is elevated, the heart beats faster, sweat glands secrete, sugar is poured into the blood, the blood vessels dilate, blood clots more quickly, and relative insensibility to pain develops.

Although these factors all tend to help the individual by temporarily supercharging the body, one cannot help wondering whether one of the main causes for the demise of cannibalistic practices was not a congenital case of indigestion. I hesitate to think of what would happen to a person's haemoglobin, glycogen, blood vessels and glands while sitting in a pot waiting for the main course to be served.

Movie Review

Tell It To The Judge

In this day of escapists the movies that are the lightest attract the largest audiences, most of them seeking a few hours away from the turmoil of the present day world. In the show now at the Odeon Toronto, "Tell It To The Judge" the audience was not disappointed.

In a fast-moving comedy, Rosalind Russell and Robert Cummings turned in a performance that was free of any attempt to present a philosophy of life, any design for better living, and in general anything which would suggest tragedy. It wasn't subtle in its execution, more slapstick than heroic, but it was comedy.

Some scenes could have come straight from Charley Chaplin of the older days, or from Abbot and Costello of more recent times. A novice skier is always good for a belly-laugh when in the proper setting, and no comedy is finished without the introduction of at least one episode of mickey pills. This picture had all this and another added attraction reserved for the top-flight comedies — the marooned - on - an - island sequence.

The plot was fair, with the situation arising from the efforts of a disgruntled politician to make his grand-daughter into a judge. The fact that she was married to a lowly lawyer provided a hitch which would do Damon Runyan proud. No man wants to plead a case for a woman in front of his wife, even if it is legal, and it takes some compromise for a man to plead with a woman, especially if it is his wife.

None of the acting was too inspired, everyone was fair, and this is entirely in keeping with the fact that it was a comedy. Trick photography and stunt men have more to do in this sort of movie than the characters themselves.

However, judging from the way the audience lapped it up, there is a sure box-office hit in this show, "Tell It To The Judge". I may be prejudiced, but I liked it.

State Regulation Of Soviet Clergy Heard By SCM

Religion is permitted in Russia today but must restrict itself from interference in all questions of social import, said Mr. Allen of the Department of Slavic Studies yesterday in his address to the U.C. Student Christian Movement.

His talk, entitled "Russia and Christianity" traced the history of Christianity in Russia from the time of its official adoption until the present day, with special stress on its present status under the Communists.

win spread the scoring around evenly, Tovey, Smith, Prendergast, Zajicek, McFarland and Brown all scoring. Jim Morlock got UC's lone effort.

On the hardwood lanes, Vic fourths took their first victory, edging SPS sixths 23-18. Ridout with six and Williams and Lowery with five each topped the Vic scorers while Allan with four led SPS.

In the other major league basketball game SPS fourths beat out Forestry "A" by a 20-16 count.

The senior interfaculty wrestling tournament went into its second night yesterday with five bouts being decided. The winners of these bouts plus tonight's victors will move on to the finals at Athletic night Saturday. Gerry Sutherland of PHE won a colorful bout in the 175-pound class, gaining a fall over Harold Wein of UC at the 13-second mark of the second.

Results:—

145-Al Hebert, Vic, beat Holding, SPS, 2:15 first.

155—Joe Wright, SPS, beat Barry Reive, decision 9-4.

Mystic Conclave

Alchemists And Sorcerers Hold Mystery Meeting

"This University has entered a state of utter decay, and the time has come for action." Thus spake the Most Worshipful and Omnipotent Grand Master of the Ancient and Mystic Conclave of Alchemists and Sorcerers, on his arrival here last night. He is present in Toronto to take part in the inaugural ceremonies of the Toronto Chapter to-night.

Fighting Apathy

The Conclave, an organization which has had much success in fighting "the student apathy which is the first symptom of decline in a university" at other institutions, has chosen Friday the thirteenth for the commencement of its campaign "because of the exceptionally favorable aspect of the planets," stated the Grand Master.

He continued, "The Conclave has long been eager to form a Chapter in this city because its patron saint, Theophrastus Bombastus von Hohenheim, at present rests in the vaults of the Royal Ontario Museum while being prepared for his forthcoming exhibition. The trustees of the Museum are to act to-day on the Conclave's request for the loan of Theophrastus for the ceremony.

Return to Mediaeval

"The Conclave has a complete program for meeting the problem. It wishes to restore to their former prominence in the education system those subjects and activities which gave the mediaeval universities their strength.

"These were Meditation, Contemplation, and the study of Applied Theology, Heraldry, Alchemy, Logic, Sorcery and Allied Subjects."

No details of the proposed ceremony can be learned, other than they include the formal presentation of the Charter and Patent of Arms.

consonants and four vowels and in which one word represents a whole thought or sentence, presents great difficulties to the Christian missionary. It is very hard to put across the idea of "God" when their only equivalent term stands for a legendary chieftain who now lives in the sun. "One word to describe their culture is simplicity," explained Dirks, a pioneer in his field who reaches this remote area either by canoe or airplane.

The Liberians, described by Mr. Mellish, also have a very complex language. Because they have no word meaning sin, it is difficult to explain Christianity to them. This Independent negro republic of Africa was colonized by liberated American slaves. The speaker said they had trouble with gangs there too. The Razor Society and the Leopard Society, whose members wear leopard skins, terrorize the populace. "Their culture should be studied while they last," Mr. Mellish urged.

The JCR is the Junior Common Room in UC and the time of the event is from four o'clock until six. An admission of 20 cents will be charged, but for that small fee one gets a chance to release all the energy saved up for the hills to tunes from the latest platters.

Actually this is the first time in the history of the club that such a venture has been staged and hopes are high for a success, since all the proceeds will go towards the club house.

There is talk of moving it to a more advantageous place, with more space added. But all this takes money before plans can be carried out and skiers made comfortable.

Jean McEachern, chairing the Program Committee, along with Bud Wood, St. Mike's, and Anne Oakes, Vic, have gone to a lot of work to make the afternoon not only enjoyable, but also interesting. There is to be a sing-song that brings to memory all the old ski songs, as well as a display of equipment.

Colorful posters depicting ski lodges, skiers and that most important item — snow — will grace the walls, while anyone, who wants to grace his ski jacket with a new, shiny 1949-50 ski badge, can buy one at a special booth set up for the occasion.

Announcements of further club activities will be made at the dance and the executive want all the gang to be there, because they still say, "It's your club and it's up to you."

sport one of the best defensive teams in the city. The Intermediates will be strengthened by the release of Andy Andrews from hospital. The Middle-Blue team is star-studded with Al Stephenson, Al Cole and Andy Andrews from last year's team. Some of the new men show definite promise. Bruce Rogers is playing well as are three graduates from last year's Juniors, Ken Brown, Frank Denton and Al Brown. Doug Kettle of PHE, proving to be one of the campus' all-round athletes, is also playing intermediate ball this year.

Test of Strength

Saturday's game will be a test of strength for Barry's team. As he put it: "We should win if the team can improve their passing and shoot as well as on Tuesday." Incidentally, word has it that the Intermediate team to watch this year is McMaster. Varsity will be playing McMaster the last game of the season, March 4th, at Hart House.

"Now I suppose you want to know about my hobbies?" he asked. (The man's a mind reader.) "Well, I go back to Nova Scotia every summer and take care of my flower garden there. Since neither Mr. Dawson nor myself could think of any more questions that might be asked, the interview came to an end.

As I was leaving he remarked, "This type of thing is new to me, but when I was a Carleton College a while ago, about four reporters from their paper were firing questions at me." It seems that I'm doing the work of four men, so I'd better ask for a raise.

A-NIGHT SATURDAY

To-morrow's the night! The first of a long chain of athletic and sports nights gets under way with the feature presentation being the senior basketball game between our own "Ne plus ultra" Blues and the high flying quintet from Assumption College.

Reports have it from the Intramural Office that all the tickets given out to the various colleges and faculties have been grabbed up. However, don't despair; if you haven't got yours yet there is still a chance. Saturday evening at 5:45 p.m. 600 additional tickets that have been held back will be put on sale at the ticket office in Hart House. These tickets will go on sale to the first comers.

Just for novelty this year three basketball games will be played instead of the usual two. The curtain raiser at 5:45 p.m. will be a high school game between Vaughan Road and Riverdale seniors. This game is in line with the policy to get the high students of Toronto interested in our fair university.

The second game will be between the Varsity intermediates and the Central Y intermeds. Obviously this program will be a dandy for the basketball fan. The hosts this week are Wycliffe and Trinity and at half time a quartette from these colleges will no doubt enthral the large crowd, with their vocal abilities.

B-Ball Intermeds In Top Condition For A-Night Test

The first of six Athletic Nights takes place at Hart House this Saturday, featuring three grade A B-Ball games. Barry Lowes' Intermediates are playing Central Y Intermediates in the second of three starting at 7:30 p.m.

Much interest is centering around the Intermediates this year. Tuesday night they played their first exhibition game against Broadview Y. Broadview, the more experienced team, won, 48-23, but the score hardly indicated the play. At half time the Blues were leading by 13 and would have gone on to win but for poor passing, especially in the last half. In the first half the Bluemen dominated the play with terrific displays of shooting. All this was done despite the absence of three key men, Al Stephenson, Don Barber and Al Col.

Strong Opposition

Saturday, the Intermediates will again be up against strong opposition. The Central Y Intermediates ties.

At 7:45 p.m. in the pool a swim meet will be held between Varsity and the U of Syracuse and after that a water-polo exhibition between the host colleges will be played.

For those who are still interested in football, what with this fine the game at Western will be screened, autumn weather and all, films of ed (Adult Entertainment). These films are all in gorgeous technicolor and filmed and directed by A. R. T. Chetwynd. Scripts by that famous comedy team Masterson and Metras.

Senior Blues Blow Lead Bow To Central 'Y' 56-51

By BRUCE MACDONALD

The senior Blues basketball team met some pretty stiff opposition last night in their encounter with Central Y but they did better than hold their own through most of the game. In the first half the Blues' fast-breaking attack had the Y men hanging on the ropes and led 26-18 at the half-time interval. But the score read 56-51 for Central, game over.

However, in the third session Tommy Orr of the Y pulled his team up with his deadly set shot accuracy. This deadly shooting, plus the fact that the Y team had a taller team and could control the backboards better, led to the Blues' defeat. Johnny McManus showed the way for the Varsity squad, hurling in 19 points to lead all scorers.

In the second half Central changed their style of play and, instead of using Doug Tyndall, ex-Blue, at the post position and using pattern passing, they switched to a fast break. A week ago Central met Western and beat them by 15 points so for those who go in for comparative averages, there is something to work with.

Line-ups:—

Varsity: Gray 5, McManus 19, Huycke 5, Braithwaite 5, Carruthers 2, Bell 3, Luck 6, Wigle 4, Gibbs 2, Henderson. Total—51.

Central Y: Orr 14, Scott 8, Junkin 5, Watson 5, Tyndall 5, Thomson 8, Carrick, Wilson 6, Rea, Tolton 2, Marshall 3. Total—56.

SPS fourths ran up another high scoring hockey win yesterday, this time at the expense of Meds thirds, taking the tilt 8-2. Mustard continued his goal getting prowess, sinking no less than half of his team's total. Colquhoun with two and McLaren and Workman with one apiece completed the Skulemen's scoring. Linklater got both Meds' goals.

Raftis, McLaughlin Score Three Each In Seconds' Win

Waterloo, Jan. 12—(Special)—Varsity Intermediates, who have held the intercollegiate hockey crown for the last four years, got off to a really fine start this season when they took their league opener 13-2 from Waterloo College. Waterloo only showed well in the second period when they held the Blues scoreless while sinking two themselves.

Seven In First

The Blues really rolled in the first period rapping in no less than seven goals that had the Waterloos wondering if they were playing in the right league. After being blanked in the second frame the Blues came out foaming in the third and almost equalled their first period outbreak, flashing the light half a dozen more times.

Gary Carl, who has been minding the nets for the seniors in a secondary capacity, played in his first game with the seconds and was brilliant in goal. Coach Life will have to put him on a contract or he is likely to be re-called by Wally Halder.

Conboy Shines

Al Conboy, who played for the Bees last semester turned in a really sound performance of two way hockey. On defence, John Fingland, a veteran from last year, was a big help for Carl, as he consistently took the invaders out of action.

Jack Raftis, former junior, and Pat McLoughlin, veteran intermediate, were the head lamp-lighters with three apiece. Rene Gautier, a newcomer, proved himself with two goals as did Pete Gawinski. Bill Paterson, Joe Wolfe and Wally London were the other Toronto scorers.

Aside from the second period, Varsity played fine pattern hockey and if they keep it up should bid fair to stay up there with the leaders. The game was remarkably cleanly played, there being few penalties. However in the later stages of the game there were a few abortive scuffles, that did not amount to much as far as fistcuffs go. Perhaps the boys were too interested in goals to be bothered fighting.

In the second period Waterloo got their two goals on nice efforts by McDonald and Kalbfleitch.

Sportswoman

Irene Haines came through with the hat-trick plus, yesterday at Varsity Arena when she sank four of Meds five goals in the hockey game against PHE 11. The Fizzedders were completely outclassed failing to score even one goal.

The whole game was fast and quite rough with little or no play in the PHE zone. Joan Somerville played a terrific game in goal for PHE but had little support from the rest of her team.

The most noticeable factor in the game was the new referee (take note boys). This year the male species was brought in for more efficient refereeing. Up to now there has been a complete lack of anything like refereeing. There has not been a single penalty called in any game todate and if this oversight keeps up somebody is going to be hurt. So boys tighten up or we might as well get the girls back again.

B-Ball

Institutional Management completely outclassed School of Nursing drubbing them 54-14. The kids from the Institute certainly show promise for the coming season.

MEET THE H-H STAFF

By BOB DNIEPER

The Maple Leafs (baseball variety) have their "Meet the Ball Club", so we'll have our "Meet the Athletic Office". The office and paperwork section of the Athletic wing of Hart House is quite a place, and its inhabitants are extremely interesting people.

Top man of our University of Toronto Athletic Association is Warren Stevens, Director of Athletics, who holds an official position as an associate professor. Mr. (Steve) Stevens is a smallish medium-sized gentleman with thinning hair and an ever-present shy little smile. His appearance would certainly belie the fact that he was a good football player and one of the best coaches Varsity ever had. It was he who pioneered the use of the forward pass in Canadian Intercollegiate football, and won the Yates Cup with a novel and hot passing attack.

Busy Secretary

His secretary, Miss Phyllis Lea, is an extremely personable and helpful lady who knows just about everything there is to know about Varsity athletics. She is of inestimable help to the plodding sports reporters who haunt her throughout the week. If a member of any University team has a problem, Miss Lea is the one that takes care of him. The office of the Director would be in one heck of a mess without Miss Lea, who spends so much time getting things to run smoothly that she rarely leaves before six in the evening.

Over in the intramural section Mac MacCutcheon holds court as the Supervisor of Intramural Athletics; and it is he who is mainly responsible for the popular Athletic and Sports Nights. When this reporter saw "Mac" yesterday, the gentleman was irked by some comments The Varsity had made re: his girth. To prevent possible future mayhem and maybe a broken nose, we will go on record as saying, quote, The Varsity has erred . . . Mr. MacCutcheon is extremely slim, unquote. Anyhow, Mr. MacCutcheon is one of the jolliest of the staff, as any intramural team-member can tell you.

Miss Kay Boyd, Mr. MacCutcheon's secretary, does the same for the Intramural division as Miss Lea does for the Varsity end . . . keeping track of about 150 teams and seeing that the referees, equipment, floors, and time-tables are kept straight.

Controls Purse Strings

In the office that is besieged far three months of the year during football season (the ticket office) Mr. J. P. Loosemore, the financial secretary of the U.T.A.A., conducts the everyday business of raking in the cash for the Association. The students of Varsity are lucky to have a man like "J. P." in that office because he is as shrewd a man with a buck as any Highlander ever dreamed of being. Greg Gregory is the accountant of the office, and along with Sandy Thorburn, the assistant accountant, keeps a wary eye on the books, so if you think your three buck fee is foolishly spent, they're the men to see. Greg and Mr. MacCutcheon are both on the stoutish side, and have been trying for months to determine who is stouter; maybe a vote should be taken.

Reporter 3-Time Loser

Terry Mullan, the red-headed cashier, and Miss Wilhelmina Boyd complete the ticket office line-up. Miss Boyd is the youngest of the secretarial staff, and in addition to doing the secretarial work for Mr. Loosemore, has to fight off the offers of dates from the young men of Hart House. We don't blame the boys, and Willy has had to fight off three offers from this reporter alone.

Doles Out Credits

The last, and for the first and second year men the most important, man of the athletic office desk set is short, well-built M. G. Griffiths. It is a rare person indeed, who knows what the initials stand for, so around the office it's always "Grif" Griffiths. He's the Assistant Director of Physical Education and in charge of all men's P.T. credits, so if any of you frosh or sophs have trouble come next March or April, remember Grif.

That completes the roster of the Athletic Wing, and you students should know you have one of the most capable staffs of the university looking after the interests of the student body in regard to athletics.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT RESIGNS

SAC Fees Hoist Seen Probable By Moneymen

"It is generally agreed that some increase in the general SAC fee (now $3.00) will be requested." This statement is the basis for a letter that the SAC Finance Committee will soon send out to the colleges and faculties represented on the SAC, requesting recommendations re SAC's finances.

At the committee meeting last Saturday, SAC Finance Commissioner Earl Orser, IV UC, pointed out "Publications are our big difficulty. The other Canadian university councils allocate about 50 percent of their income to publications. The Varsity should have more money, if for no other reason than to have more Varsity and less advertising."

The letter being sent out asks the various councils and societies "to scrutinize in particular the manner in which The Varsity, Torontonensis and the Handbook are at present financed and to search for possible remedies for means now

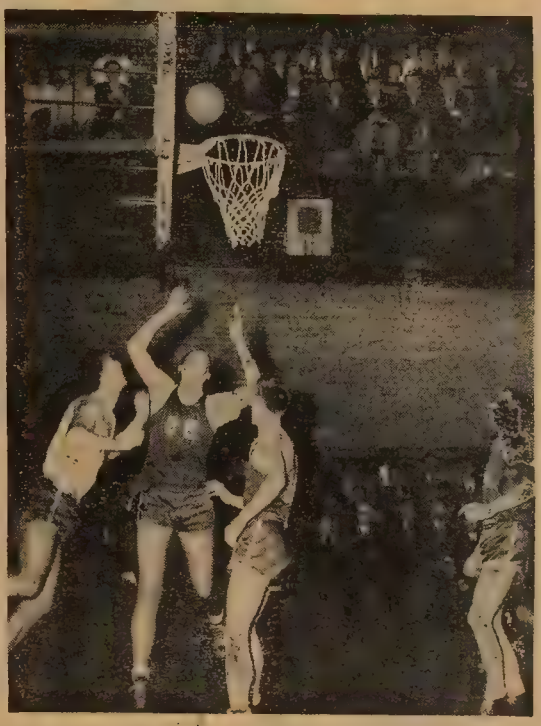
Noted Statistician From Cambridge To Visit Toronto

One of the world's leading statisticians, Professor E. A. Fisher of Cambridge University, has been invited to spend the Easter term as consultant in statistics and genetics at the University of Toronto, Professor B. A. Griffith of the Department of Mathematics said Saturday.

For the past few years, the School of Graduate Studies has been raising money to invite distinguished scholars to the University of Toronto for a visit or a term for the purpose of improving the School and providing assistance to graduate students in their work.



Professor Fisher has published five books and over three hundred research papers. "Probably no one in the world has written so voluminously in his forty years of work," Professor Griffith said. Professor Fisher's duties will be to advise graduate science students on problems on statistics and genetics. He will also be conducting lectures and seminars in these subjects.

Study Of Regional Aims NFCUS Seminar Objective

As an active step toward national unity, a seminar will be conducted this summer by the National Federation of Canadian University Students from August 14 to September 4 at Fort Lennox, near Montreal.

The broad subject of the seminar, entitled "A Survey of Canada", is divided into three main sections, Economics, History and Geography, and Canadian Humanities, each of which is further subdivided.

One hundred students — two for every thousand Canadian university students — will attend the seminar on a scholarship basis. This means that University of Toronto will be able to send approximately 28 representatives.

The faculty will consist of 12 professors and one dean. The latter has already been chosen, Dr. Leon Lortie, professor at the University of Montreal. Three professors will be selected from each of the four NFCUS regions.

NFCUS president, Richey Love, stressed that the ultimate goal of the seminar is to give the students from every part of Canada the op-

Provincial Speaker Prohibits Gifts Act As Debate Subject

By IAN MONTAGNES

The University of Toronto Liberal Association has resigned as government of the Mock Parliament to be held Thursday night, because Speaker Davies of the Ontario Legislature refused the parliament permission to debate repeal of the Charitable Gifts Act in the Legislative Chambers.

Against Policy

Mr. Davies pointed out that it was government policy not to let anyone but the legislature debate controversial provincial issues in the law-making chambers.

He added that one danger of letting outside groups debate live issues in the Chamber would be that people reading reports of the session might believe the real government had taken action and be misled.

Announcing his club's withdrawal, Liberal President Henry Bradley, IV Vic, said, "We disagree with the Speaker's ruling and under these conditions we don't feel we can be the government."

New Government Neede

A meeting to-day of the Mock Parliament will choose a new government and resolution.

The other topic to be debated, that requirements for admission to the bar demanded by the Law Society of Upper Canada are obsolete and should be brought up to date, is still permissable.

Contacted at his home in Windsor, Friday night, Speaker Davies said, "The students will be there to carry on a mock parliament and not to get involved in any provincial issues. They must debate something more or less non-political and there are plenty such subjects."

Parallel to Church

The speaker said he had some responsibility about what was said in the chamber. "If you were granted the use of a church," he said, "you wouldn't discuss something there that affected that church. It is the law-making chamber of the province and must be respected."

As Speaker of the House, Mr. Davies has complete authority over what takes place in the Chamber. It was through him that the students received permission to use the chamber for their mock parliament. Mr. Davies said that he would be present in the chamber Thursday night to make sure that his ruling is adhered to.

There were no restrictions mentioned when permission for use of the chamber was granted several weeks ago. No mention was made of them until the resolutions had been decided on.

Words Embarrass

Commenting on the refusal, Controller Balfour pointed out that "words never can destroy, but they can embarrass." He added that if the students applied for use of the City Hall for their debates, the Montreal (CUP) Jan. 16—A complete reversal of policy was made at the last meeting of the McGill Shudent's Executive Council when full permission was given to the McGill Daily, student newspaper to report all council meetings. Previous policy had been to hold news coverage of the council to a bare minimum with only motions passed being recorded and no reportage of discussion of defeated motions. There had also been a curb placed on the editorial policy of the paper in criticising council actions.

The change in policy came after wide-spread interest in the "ban" situation. Many off-campus publications commented on the state of affairs.

US Policy In Formosa Today's Debate Topic

"Resolved that the United States should defend Formosa" is the topic of today's Victoria Debating Parliament at 4 o'clock in the Coed Common Room at Victoria College.

"We feel that prompt military and economic aid should be given to Nationalist China to defend Formosa and to form a solid wall against Moscow-inspired Communist aggression in the Pacific," said Tom Wells first speaker for the affirmative.

Shirley Endicatt, speaker for the negative, said, "To claim that Formosa is necessary for defence against Communist aggression is to say that the Chinese should defend Vancouver Island against possible atomic attack from Canada and the United States. A policy of friendly trade would better foster world peace."

London — (CUP) — Jan. 15 — The controversial Charitable Gifts Act will be introduced in the U.W.O. mock parliament this week. The act will be introduced by the Conservative Leader and should it be passed, the Liberals, now in control, will be deposed.

"The Charitable Gifts Act was passed by the Ontario P.C. Government in 1948. It was fought by all opposition parties, on moral and legal grounds. Campus politicians promise the same fervent struggle will take place here when the Conservatives introduce the measure," according to the U.W.O. Gazette.

Points West From Vienna

By AILEEN FRITZ

It was just ten years ago last Christmas Eve that Professor Karl F. M. Helleiner and his family landed on Canadian soil. Refugees from Austria, the Helleiners had only managed to escape from Vienna one day before war was to have been declared.

Formerly an archivist and mediaeval historian in his native land, Prof. Helleiner lectures here chiefly on European economic history. He held a fellowship at the Austrian Institute of Historical Research and later the position of archivist at St. Poelten. After the Nazis took over the country, Prof. Helleiner lost this position.

Early in 1939, when it became apparent that the new masters of Austria would make life miserable for his family and himself, Prof. Helleiner took the opportunity of sending his two older boys to Oxford in England. Then he started to contact friends and organizations to see if he could possibly find a way out of Europe. "I wrote dozens of letters," he said.

Acting on a suggestion from a fellow historian in Toronto, he contacted the retired head of the History Department at Toronto, Prof. George M. Wrong, who had been one of the founders of the Canadian Society for the Protection of Science and Learning.

This Society had first been formed in England in 1934, shortly after Hitler began his rise to power in Europe. A branch was soon formed in Canada by a group of interested men, including Mr. Wallace, now head of the University Library.

A personal letter from the late Prof. Wrong cheered him up considerably, even though the outlook did not look too promising. However, he started brushing up on his English, of which he already had a good reading knowledge.

Escape From Vienna

From the English society came a letter urging him to leave Vienna as soon as possible. Prof. Helleiner needed no urging. His English visa arrived on the morning of August 11th, 1939, and he left Vienna by plane that afternoon. As he was liable for military service, he could take no chances and had to leave without his wife and youngest son whose visas had been delayed.

Mrs. Helleiner received her visa on the 24th of August, the very day the English consulate at Vienna closed. She and her son boarded a plane for England, were detained at Rotterdam, Holland, and later taken across the Channel by boat, under cover of darkness. The Helleiners later learned that August 25th had been the date originally set by Hitler for the invasion of Poland, but he had revoked the order at the last minute. Dutch Intelligence had apparently learned of this original plan, and that was the cause of the delay at Rotterdam.

After a stay in England, the family embarked for Canada. But they were not to get away without one last bit of bad luck. After forty-eight hours at sea, their ship developed serious engine trouble and was towed to Glasgow and thence back to Liverpool. Thoughts of German subs were uppermost in the minds of the passengers and they were all glad that the trouble had occurred in the Irish Sea and not in Mid-Atlantic.

Christmas In Toronto

This unexpected return caused the Helleiner family more trouble to get new exit permits but finally, on the twenty-third of December, 1939, they arrived in Saint John, N.B. From

German War Guilt

In these days when our thinking is inclined to be rather one-sided on questions of war-possibilities and Russia, we often fail to take proper cognizance of events concerning our late enemy—the German people.

The German people do not feel any guilt over causing the last war. Presumably if conditions were reasonably favourable, another attempt would be made. "Hitler was a Jew—that's why he led us into disaster," a tot explained to a foreign correspondent.

Observers in Western Germany have come to accept as a matter of due course the renaissance of German nationalism, with an attendant reinstatement of power of many former high Nazis. What has become the policy of 1950 would have been unthinkable in 1945.

But in 1945 the air was filled with strains of "teach the Germans democracy" and "re-education of Germans." We realize that it is not an easy matter to teach the principles of democracy to a people with a heritage of authoritarian leadership. Most educators allowed at least twenty years before any tangible results could be seen. However these educators recommended that re-education would rank high on the Allied program of rehabilitation.

The bare fact is that re-education has bogged down. There is even a feeling in some places that we are the ones who are being educated. And the major cause for this breakdown is that co-operation and understanding have not been given by the powers that control the administration of Germany. With the recent resignation of one of the most able educators, Dr. Alonzo Grace, from the educational set-up in Germany, conditions are not likely to improve.

There has been little attempt made to provide adequate school buildings, textbooks are woefully lacking (hundreds of students still depend solely on lecture notes) and teachers, who could have been pillars of strength, have not been able to ignore the pro-Nazi wind that is blowing.

There were 7,000,000 Hitler Jugend at the end of the war. There may be members of the Allied policy-making board who have forgotten the whipsaw of the 1930s and believe those 7,000,000 are potential anti-Communist soldiers.

But no matter for whom these men fought, they would still have in the back of their minds "The Leader is always right . . . whatever serves the interest of the movement, and through it Germany and the German people, is right."

Lord Wavell, turned a neat phrase in a recent interview. "We must remember the German people have been found guilty of fomenting war twice in one generation. The worst you can say of the Russian is that he is standing about making rude noises, with possible intent to commit a felony."

A Cursory Tale

While trailing a trim pair of ankles down the hall a while ago, I walked right into a story. It might interest the people studying language development or phonetics.

A little old fellow was tacking a sign to the Registrar's Notice board which read:

Seminar in Social Swearing
Lecturer: Prof. Ima Trooper
Room 2 BAD, U.C.

Considering this to be a push course for a person of my not inconsiderable talents along that line, I collared the old boy to get the details. He was quite talkative.

"There are too many big bundles of frustration floating around this place, and it's all due to lack of an outlet for the finer feelings," he said. "For real emotional satisfaction, though, there's nothing like a good, old fashioned swearing session. My father was a blacksmith and I learned the technique from him. Why, he could get those horses to do anything just by telling them what he thought of their antecedents—and that was only the beginning of his vocabulary."

"We've got just as many things to let off steam at, but the expression in the language is all shot to hell. These students stereotype themselves, too, and you can tell their course by listening to their reactions. Stick around and I'll prove it."

So saying, he pushed out his big brogan and deftly tripped the next character that came down the hall.

"By the sacred foot of Pharaoh!" he screamed.

"Now that lad," said the Professor ignoring the noise, "is obviously in Honour English, and reading too much of Jonson."

Out shot the toe again and another victim dusted the floor for the janitor.

"Why you old goat, if I was Jimmy-the-one again I'd have you keel-hauled with the cannon," came the roar.

"A supreme example of frustration," whispered the professor, "an ex-navy type and now a Skule man. He spares my feeling because I'm old and he thinks I'm still taking an Arts course."

The next one the professor tripped said nothing, but only looked quizzically at him. He went back again and tried the same thing three

Americans Walk Out Of IUS In Protest Over Czech Events

(This is the sixth in a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organizaton and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of the International Union of Students. The seventh article in this series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

Having decided to affiliate with the International Union of Students (US), and having chosen the delegation which would carry through its stated desire, there seemed to be nothing in the way of The National Federation of Canadian University Students as they moved out into the international arena.

A Complicated Story

The story of the Canadian delegation which went to Paris in the summer of 1948 seeking affiliation with the IUS is complicated. Led by Grant Livingstone (University of British Columbia), the Canadians tried their best to join the IUS, but their actions before they ever reached the IUS Council made that impossible as far as the IUS was concerned. At this date there seems to have been a certain amount of political naiveté in the manner in which they tried to affiliate.

The first thing that happened was removed from the affairs of NFCUS. In February the communists took over Czechoslovakia. In the confusion that resulted from the coup, certain events concerning the treatment of Czech university students involved in demonstrations during the week of February 22, 1948, aroused the disgust of students in many of the Western democratic nations. The IUS, with its headquarters in Prague, did not protest the treatment accorded the Czech students, although it had before protested the treatment accorded Greek students by their government, Spanish students by their government, and Chinese students by the Nationalist government.

U.S. Walks Out

The most important development of the Czech affair was the resignation of the United States representative on the IUS Executive Committee. He was later backed up by the United States National Students Association, which pulled out of IUS and has not gone back.

In his letter of resignation, Bill Ellis charged the IUS with action and non-action which he could not condone, nor be a party to. He said:

Ellis' Charges

"(1) You have disapproved the nationalistic and fascistic tendencies in textbooks such as those still left in Germany, but you have never spoken against the periodic change of Russian textbooks to conform to Russian foreign policy.

"(2) You have disapproved governmental interference in the field of education, especially restrictions on access to scientific information, but you have never spoken against the diatribes directed at Messrs. Varga, Alexandroff and Shostokovitch by their governments.

"(3) You have protested the illegal treatment of Greek students by their government but you have never objected to the forceable seizure of Greek students and youth by the Markos (communist) forces.

"(4) You have protested the treatment of Spanish students by the Franco government but you do not object to the same injustice against Czech students.

"(5) You have protested the treatment of Chinese students by the Koumintang government, but you have never objected to the seizure and disappearance of students in the Russian zones of Germany and Austria.

"(6) You have attacked the Catholic students as reactionary, but you have never even censured the tactics of Communist students.

"(7) You have attacked the imperialism of Western European countries in the Far East, but you have never even mentioned Russian imperialism in Eastern Europe and in the Far East.

"(8) You have attacked the United States, France and Great Britain, in every possible point, but you have at no time in your history dared to speak again Russia.

"(9) You have assiduously sought information and facts to discredit so-called reactionary groups, but you have never attempted to dis-

N.S.A. Congress 'Great Success' Says President

Poughkeepsie, (Exchange) — Jan. 16—The recently-concluded meeting of the national executive committee of the U. S. National Student Association (NSA) was the "most successful in NSA history," according to NSA president, Robert A. Kelly.

The executive committee passed resolution on student rights, Federal scholarships, human relations, heard a report on a discrimination case during the August NSA Congress, and laid plans for the 1950 Congress which will be held at the University of Michigan.

On student rights, the executive committee condemned a loyalty oath being taken by Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps students at Harvard and the University of North Carolina.

All Varsity staff members who are interested in a Varsity Staff Party to be held this Saturday, Jan. 21, are asked to sign the lists in The Varsity office.

Varsity staff parties are held regularly to enable the overworked undergraduate members of the Varsity staff to have an informal get-together where they can relax and enjoy intellectual conversation.

New NFCUS Brief Asks Federal Aid For More Students

A 31-page brief on federal aid to higher education will be submitted to the Royal Commission on Arts, Science and Letters in Halifax, Friday, January 20, announced Rickey Love, Amherst student at Dalhousie University Law School and president of the National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS) last night.

Summary of Brief

A summation of two years' work by NFCUS committees across Canada, the brief deals with:

1. Federal Scholarships and grants-in-aid to university students with high scholastic standing.

2. Help in the form of loans to university students who do not qualify under section 1.

3. Views and recommendations on national institutions such as the National Film Board, National Museum.

4. Views and recommendations on the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

This brief represents the findings of NFCUS committees and inquiry groups initiated as early as 1947. At the federation's annual conference in Montreal in December, 1948, a student committee was formed to look into the cost of education for the average university student in Canada. This supplemented similar investigation carried out in 1947 by the NFCUS scholarship inquiry committee.

The report of the 1948 committees, operating at the University of British Columbia and the University of Toronto, was presented to the National Conference of Canadian Universities (NCCU) in Halifax in June, 1949, by a committee consisting of Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, Ross Hamilton and Richey Love.

At this meeting it was decided that both groups, NFCUS and NCCU, would present briefs to the Royal Commission. The NCCU brief was presented in Ottawa in July.

Proposals for the major portions of the NFCUS brief were passed at the annual conference held in Ottawa in 1949, and Richey Love was elected to present the brief. Working at Dalhousie during the Christmas recess, he compiled three reports into the brief in its present form. These reports were prepared by Jim MacAulay, Dalhousie, on Scholarships; Jack Madden, University of Toronto, on UNESCO; and T. H. Kenyon who headed a committee at the University of British Columbia on national institutions in Canada.

Making the submission will be Richey Love, Jack Madden of the University of Toronto, a former editor of The Manitoban, student newspaper at the University of Manitoba, and a possible third member, Gilles Bergerons, president of the Student Union of the University of Montreal.

Beanery Gang Loyalty "Good Weapon" For Help

Beanery Gang members' loyalty to their group is a good weapon for making them useful members of society, Rev. Gordon Domm of Bathurst Street United Church told the Trinity Arts and Letters Club Friday.

Mr. Domm, whose church has been turned into a recreation centre for the Beanery Gang, pointed out that the gang members' loyalty to their organization has grown out naturally from their fear, hatred and suspicion of the rest of society. But he said he and others working with the boys at the church believe they are winning some of this loyalty and have thus been able to help some of the gang to get useful jobs and take a different attitude toward life generally.

Throughout his talk Mr. Domm repeatedly referred to the Gang members' unity in deciding what the gang should do and whom should be accepted into membership or trust. He said the boys exhibit a strange kind of intuition in making group decisions. For instance, when they decided to travel somewhere together the votes on the matter were almost always unanimous.

He said the boys especially distrust, fear and hate the police. Yet their trust could be won, for two policemen had been among the first

Hart House Haunted?

Was I Ever Scared?

By ROCKY MARTINO

I awoke with a start. From the blackness about me came weird moaning noises that could come from no earthly source. Before my dilated eyes shadowy shapes having no human counterparts gesticulated fiercely. The logginess of sleep left my mind instantly as I tried to fathom the mystery of my surroundings.

Where was I? What was going on? Was I in a haunted house? Question after question coursed through my mind at express speed only to telescope on meeting the brick wall of no explanation.

The last I could remember was falling asleep in Hart House. It'd been a particularly fatiguing morning and, after dragging myself into the common room, I'd found my favorite chair and let my weary mind lapse into oblivion. And now this!

As the first shock wore off, my eyes became accustomed to the darkness about me. Breathing lightly for fear of disturbing the 'beings' about me, I began investigating my surroundings. I was sitting in some sort of a chair—a lounge chair at that. Say. . . . the thought hit me with sledge-hammer force. . . I was still in the common room. . . . I must have overslept. . . . .

I was now wide awake. With these nerve shattering thoughts came understanding and horror. Hart House was haunted.

Varsity Spiritualist Expose'

Vision of Varsity headlines flashed through my mind. . . "HART HOUSE HAUNTED" . . . "WARDEN EXPOSED AS SPIRITUALIST" . . "VARSITY REPORTER GIVES FIRST-HAND ACCOUNT." That last one brought me back to reality. My flesh began to goosepimple as an icy shiver ran up my spine. Slowly and quietly I sank more and more into the chair. A new sound came to my ears—the chattering of my teeth and the pounding of my heart.

Then it happened! The thing I'd been afraid of—one of the 'beings' came towards me. I shrank back Closer and closer it came, ... I could feel my hair begin to stand on end. Closer and closer . . . my heart stopped beating. Then "it" stopped. Slowly, ever so slowly "it" turned towards me. For an eternity of time I could feel some unseen power looking through me. Then "it" moved on.

It took quite a few minutes for what was left of my nervous system to pull me together. The primeval instinct of self-preservation began flooding my body. I had to pit my wits against whatever forces were about me. The prize of the game—possibly my life.

With my objectives clearly in mind I began taking stock of my surroundings in the hope of finding some avenue of escape. As I looked up I saw a patch of white light towards the front of the room. One of the 'beings' was waving in a animated manner. From the shadowy form came unintelligible noises. The forms about me answered in the same sort of language —a type of chant. I listened carefully in the hope of perhaps overhearing some thing of their plans. But it was to no avail, 'they' must have had a special language of their own. For a moment a strange idea crossed my mind. Perhaps I could learn 'their' language and travel around the world—the only human understanding 'spirit- language'. That thought lasted only as long as it took to formulate.

Sherlock Without His Glasses

Ever so cautiously I began groping in my pockets for my glasses. At least I could see what 'they' looked like before I made my effort at escape. But my probing fingers found nothing. Then I remembered and began cursing under my breath. My glasses were in my coat, and I'd checked my coat.

The realization that I was without my glasses left me shivering in a cold sweat. Now I was lost, I couldn't see a thing. There was nothing for me to do but sit there and hope I wasn't noticed. Salvation would come with the dawn if.

That's as far as my thinking went. Everything suddenly dissolved in a blaze of light.

"Some sing-song eh George."

Alexander Brailowsky

When renowned German pianist Arthur Schnabel devoted his life to intensive study of Beethoven and to exclusive performance of that composer's works, he not only departed from convention, but carved himself a place of eminence and authority that few pianists have since attained.

Twenty-six years ago an ambitious young pianist, born a Russian, pupil of Leschetitsky in Vienna and of Busoni in Switzerland, took the summer off in 1923 to evolve a cycle of the complete works of Frederic Chopin. He repertoired one hundred and seventy-two of the composer's compositions — 51 mazurkas, 27 etudes, 25 preludes, and all the nocturnes, waltzes and polonaises.

Saturday night we saw evident fruits of that undertaking in pianist Alexander Brailowsky's all-Chopin concert, presented by International Artists at Massey Hall. Whimsical and nonchalant as he wandered to the bench, the pianist disappeared, as into a trapdoor, in the galloping chords of Chopin's F Sharp Minor Polonaise. Brailowsky's brilliant, virile rendering was like unto the village blacksmith hammering the anvil amid a burst of sparks. But the pianist's execution aimed entirely at the ear, and never at the listener's eye.

One potent factor in the performance was the artist's complete subservience of the means at his disposal to the task at hand. Neither showman or technician, Brailowsky enters upon his program like an artisan upon his craft, weaving, carving, moulding with bold strokes in the realm of sound — with complete economy of technique.

On the first half the soloist played: Prelude in E Flat Major, Mazurka in B Flat Major, Ballade in A Flat Major, and the B Minor (not B Flat) Sonata, Opus 58.

Best of the four were the Mazurka and the Ballade — not for their apparent familiarity nor for their immediate appeal, but solely as awesome evidence of the pianist craftsmanship. Mr. Brailowsky played the overplayed Mazurka with a crisp, meticulous, dancing touch, true to the Polish dance. He gave it the new look. In reading the dreamy but climactic Ballade the pianist so constructed his delivery of each part as to reinforce the impact of the composition as a whole. He submerged melody to movement in the principal theme (first eight bars), to striking effect.

Other than the closing Andante Spianato et Grande Polonaise, Alexander Brailowsky in the B Minor Sonata achieved a technical tour de force, but avoided an aesthetic one. His sharp Leggero passages, octaves and arpeggi (second movement), his tone — processions in the Largo, and his phenomenal transitions in the Presto all fused to a stellar performance.

On the program's final half were: Tarantella in A Flat Major, Waltz in A Flat Major (opus 34), and Fantasy Impromptu in C Sharp Minor (opus 66). An attempt at analysis of these, part by part, for interpretive approach and technical precision would lead to the same conclusion — that Brailowsky gave a freshness and richness of creation, rhythmic and articulate which held the listener constantly expectant even during the overplayed, namely, the Fantasy and the Waltz.

Pianist Brailowsky exerts a tremendous vitality in almost all that he plays. In lyric pieces: the F Sharp Major Nocturne, the E Flat Major Waltz, and the Fantasy and Impromptu, he strips the music of sentiment and cumbersome rubato, to replace them with a lyric flow of phrase and interplay of theme.

Alexander Brailowsky's performance, apart from his musicianship, exhibited a deep insight into the works of the composer and we can unreservedly conclude that as Schnabel stands an interpreter of Beethoven so stands Brailowsky to Frederic Chopin.

Marion Grudeff

First in a series of eight concerts at Hart House took place last Wednesday afternoon when pianist Marion Grudeff gave a recital consisting of works by Schumann, Poulenc, Debussy, and Chopin.

Schumann's Carnival was a long opening to the program; it was marked in five sections varying from quiet lyric melodies to the stormy chords of its conclusion. In this as in other pieces the pianist seemed more at home with music technically difficult: she did a fine job on the opening and again at the last part, but became slightly unsteady in one of the slower movements.

Francois Poulenc's three Mouvements Perpetuels had a charming atmosphere which could only be described as "French". One imagined the busy streets of Paris, then a quiet shaded park, and finally a touch of gay night life in the city. Each Movement ended with a soft discord: an odd ending, but pleasing to the audience.

L'Isle Joyeuse by Debussy — polished, brilliant, enthusiastic almost to violence — received most applause from the audience. One couldn't help feeling, however, that here was a realist trying to give us a picture of an impressionist; unfortunately realism won out.

Last on the program was Chopin's seldom-heard Sonata in B minor. Miss Grudeff's interpretation was not intellectual in approach; neither was it flamboyant. She seemed most at ease when attacking a technically difficult section, in which she could give full reign to her high-spirited enthusiasm.

Romeo And Juliet

Saturday's production of Romeo and Juliet at Malvern Collegiate bore in part the dedication: "to promote the students' interest in Shakespeare, we dedicate our Romeo and Juliet". Actually the result was reversed and the audience, composed largely of students, witnessed the funniest tragedy ever to disgrace the stage.

The play sounded more like a prolonged recitation of Homeric battles than a deeply moving tragedy of delicate proportions. The fault lay largely with the director who missed innumerable opportunities for improving the situation. Long speeches were delivered to the audience, completely detached from other players in the scene, and the entire play was spoken with staggering rapidity, leaving no time for dramatic effect.

The most unsuccessful scene in the play was the Mercutio death; this was so poorly done as to become positively embarrassing, nor was this the director's fault. The fourteen-year-old Juliet was the right age and attractive enough, but she lacked all the depth necessary to such a demanding role, and Romeo was never in love in this production and therefore expressed no sorrow when he heard of Juliet's death, not even when he beheld her body in the tomb.

The scene following the famous potion speech should have been played before the curtain but for some unknown reason the director had his actors play it by Juliet's bed, a fact so incongruous as to border on the ludicrous. Juliet no sooner downed the drug than it was morning and Old Capulet immediately entered and ordered the nurse to awaken Juliet. To anyone present who had never seen or read the play before, the play must be an incomprehensible series of misinterpreted facts.

Costumes were attributed to Dorothy Wilmot who deserves a great deal of praise. It is a pity that her art was set off to such disadvantage. The tomb scene, impressive as the curtains parted, was marred by speech. At only one point in the play did any actor get the slightest insight into what was expected of him; Doug Butt's (Capulet) insistence that Juliet marry Paris drew deserved applause from the audience.

"(10) You have interpreted the constitution to your own ends.

"(11) You have interpreted democracy not as a majority rule which respects the right of the minority and the individual, but as a dictatorship of the proletariat.

"(13) All this you have done and not done. The non-action in Prague is the final act."

Loss A Serious Blow

The loss of the Americans from IUS was to be a serious blow, for no group of western nations could effectively operate in the IUS without them, and the tremendous support they could give. It was felt by the British National Union of Students that the IUS had done the proper thing in Czechoslovakia and certainly the newspapers accounts of the Czech affair had been exaggerated, but that event drove the Americans out of the IUS, as it was to drive several other national unions from the international group.

Livingstone, charged with gaining admission for NFCUS to the IUS was seriously concerned about the Czech crisis, and before he left for Europe he made sure that Canadian students were still in favour of affiliation.

Narrow Passage

Just how many problems should a play pose? One or many? This was the question left in the minds of the audience at the conclusion of the initial performance of Andrew Allan's play Narrow Passage by the New Play Society on Friday evening at the Museum Theatre. Andrew Allan apparently does not believe there should be only one main problem. In his play he first presents the problem of euthanasia —when the nurse on a case attempts the mercy killing of her patient. The dramatic action of the play revolves chiefly around this problem, but as though he did not consider this significant enough, Andrew Allan introduces several more: the responsibility of slightly talented people to those who have encouraged and made sacrifices for the furthering of the talent.

Finally there is the problem of the bounds to life — are they more confining in small towns or in large cities? Such a profusion of ideas settles none conclusively and leaves the audience in a rather confused state of mind.

The play is built around a nurse who administers what she believes is an overdose of morphine to her paralyzed patient. Her motive for this is to further the musical talents of the patient's son who states he cannot consider his music while his mother is in a state of living death. The nurse believes that the mother confirms her in her action — that she, the mother, would willingly sacrifice herself for her son.

When the son turns to a gay little Irish girl for love, the forsaken nurse confesses what she has done to the doctor in charge of the case. He reassures her that the pills actually had been harmless and then confesses that he had at one time performed a similar deed. The nurse attempts to regain the musician and is only finally convinced of her failure when he denounces her, his mother and all other domineering women who attempt to force and push people with talent into the moulds in which they (the pushers) feel the talented should go. The nurse then turns to the sympathetic understanding of the Doctor who has been in love with her all the time.

The dialogue of the play is pleasant, easy, apt and often very witty. The setting was poor — more adequate sitting facilities could have been provided for the actors. Direction at times was faulty—especially when the stage was left completely empty for an interval that seemed like minutes. This tended to break the action and mood of the play for the audience.

Robert Christie as the sympathetic doctor deserves full acting honours. His presentation was warm, full of understanding and caught all the undertones of the character. Unfortunately, Pegi Brown as the over-emotional nurse gave a performance which tended to be erratic. This was due chiefly to the author's lack of clearly defining the character.

Don Harron as the moody, talented son gave a portrayal which showed his complete understanding of and sympathy with the nervous talented genius. Toby Robins as Maeve Archer, the gay socialite, brought warmth, spontaneity and brightness to the set. Margot Christie, as the family housekeeper was excellent in a part which fitted her like a glove. Alex McKee as the gardener, got all the humour possible from his role. The remainder of the cast, Colin Eaton and Larry McCance were adequate and convincing in their small parts of the minister and the restaurateur.

TSO Pops

The Friday night "Pops" concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan, consisted of selections from the works of Schubert and Tchaikovsky. The evening's performance as a whole was well graded, sloping downward from a competent opening with Schubert's Rosamunde Overture, to meaningless depths just before intermission, and recovering to the "fair performance" level at which it began. The opening overture was followed by the Rosemunde ballet music, delicate and delicately done.

Margaret Anne Ireland was the guest artist and appeared in the first movement of Tchaikovsky's Concerto No. 1 in B Flat Minor. This was the low point in a generally uninspiring evening. The orchestra's opening chords were loud and on pitch, but speaky and uncertain. Throughout, the orchestra tended to submerge the piano. I don't know why Sir Ernest looked back over his shoulder at one point, but I rather think that it was to assure himself of Miss Ireland"s presence. A piece of music as vigorous as the concerto would at any time require a greater degree of purely physical force than Miss Ireland appeared to possess, and its familiarity makes it a work most acceptable when performed either by a great artist or a great showman. Miss Ireland at present qualifies for neither of these titles.

The Valse from Serenade for Strings which followed the concerto was adequately performed, if unimpressively. At this point the program returned to Schubert for the martial finale from the 7th Symphony, and everyone was satisfied.

Following intermission the young Canadian pianist returned to give the evening a good push in the right direction with a group of five piano solos. Appropriately she commenced with the poorest, a Rachmaninoff prelude, which like the concerto demanded more strength than the player could provide.

The last piece on the program, Tchaikovsky's Italian Caprice, constituted the highlight. On the whole the evening was not pleasing. The orchestra brought to the music neither a high degree of precision nor the vitality especially necessary to the presentation of bid "stand-bys". Miss Ireland's performance was proficient but overshadowed, volumetrically at least, by the orchestra, for which Sir Ernest is no doubt as much responsible as anyone.

Casino Review

Larry Adler

Mr. Larry Adler, whose previous appearances in Toronto have been under auspices and in halls of upper middle-brow level, is headlining the current show at the Casino showplace, the mecca of the more low-brow and the more high-brow.

As is well known, Mr. Adler is the supreme artist of the harmonica, and local reviewers have tossed their vari-colored hats into the air about his short stint here. With excellent reason.

After comic Herbie Barris has convulsed the audience with his rowdy and acute satire of the strip-teaser, the curtain parts to find the slight Mr. Adler, soberly dressed in a dark suit, standing in front of an immense grand piano. The virtuoso immediately swings into his famed version of Cole Porter's Begin the Beguine, and from there on the Adler magic casts its spell everywhere. The change of pace is abrupt, but complete.

Two highlights of Mr. Adler's several selections were Ravel's Bolero, and Hora Staccata, the usual showpiece for catgut technique. The usual monotonous exercise of the Bolero is done in an intelligently telescoped and flashily executed manner. It is fun. Hora Staccato becomes evidence of the technique of Adler rather than of Heifetz, and provides the necessary bravado for the closing number.

Hand to Mouth Boogie, Embraceable You (in which Mr. Adler accompanied himself on the piano — revealing technique on the keys that partly explains Mr. Petrillo's preoccupation for getting unemployment benefits for his boys). You're Too Dangereuse, Cherie and When Day is Done were also rendered with the unbelievable skill and control Mr. Adler possesses.

In the pauses between his numbers, Mr. Adler demonstrated what one local reviewer described as a "wry humor" in his introductions. Mr. Adler's wryness would have gone over very well, it was felt, in an Eaton Auditorium concert where politer audiences would be ready to titter at slight and thin comedy. But at the Casino last Thursday, he did much better when he addressed himself to his chromatic harmonica.

The show accompanying Mr. Adler is uniformly good. The LeRoy Brothers manipulate puppets which are modern and technologically marvellous. Their act is attractive because their material is good if their technique is not first-class.

Herbie Barris, the comic, is the other extreme. Barris, who looks like a none-too-distant cousin of Lew Lehr's, is a very funny man. He looks funny, he talks funny, he makes funny sounds. He sings excellently. But his material is not worth the talent wasted upon it.

The Gregory girls appear in two productions, "Shoe Shine Boy," and a Gypsy number. The girls wear more and more clothes every week. Shoe Shine Boy is much more fun.

Pep Rally Ban

Editor, The Varsity:

The editorial in Friday's Varsity expressed considerable doubt as to the wisdom of the SAC in restricting the number of Pep Rallies to be held in the future. The student councils of Trinity College and S.M.C. have given this matter considerable thought. Neither they nor the University SAC would undertake to limit so popular an activity without good reason. (These College Councils and the University Council were elected to serve the students and we feel that we were so doing in making this move.)

In the first place we have nothing against Athletics, student participated, or interest. It is a very healthy thing to see a university the size of Toronto, united, and as a body cheering on their teams. When, however, that spirit becomes such that university life and spirit consists in little more than rah rah spirit, then the time has come to consider whether such spirit has become over-accentuated to an unhealthy level. S.M.C., Students' Council and the Trinity Board of Stewards have no desire to adopt "a negative approach" in passing this motion. Nor did the University SAC.

The decline of cultural activities has not been due primarily to the existence of three Pep Rallies last fall. We feel it was due to three causes. First and most important, the growth in number of such cultural activities has increased at a time when student enrollment has dropped and student finance has become tighter. Secondly, the activities themselves have too often become very dull, repetitious, and far too costly. Thirdly, there has been increase of a spirit which merely seeks activities providing mirth and merriment. The spirit has grown and we do not want to foster it by our activities.

The chief reasons for restricting the number of Pep Rallies, are that it causes a decline in cultural activities and that it breeds excessive rah rah spirit. This latter is of far greater importance. For we have not (and here we agree with The Varsity) sought to insure the success of social and cultural activities, by cutting down on the number of Pep Rallies. But we feel we have taken a step in the right direction. To show our sincerity in this matter we would be very willing to work with any committee of the SAC to seek a reasonable solution to the whole problem of student apathy.

But above all let's be reasonable. IF SACs on the campus are elected to serve the benefit of the students, they should not give the impression that college life is just one roaring fine time for seven months. We had to start somewhere to combat this. And we hope that there will be no distortion of our aim. Next we must work out a program on a campus wide basis of revision and retrenchment so that the students will be given the best in extra-curricular activities at smallest cost; yet, so that no student organization will lose money or be competing with other activities or studies for student interest.

We were elected to serve the students of this University; we feel that we have served that interest by this action.

David J. Quigley,
President, St. Michael's College SAC.

McLean Not NCSV Rep.

Editor, The Varsity:

It has been with the greatest sorrow that I saw the question of affiliation with I.U.S. once more rocking the Canadian University scene. Perhaps I would have been tempted to use this medium to argue against I.U.S. itself if another more important issue had not appeared in today's column by Jack Gray.

While I agree with most of Mr. Gray's article one error appeared which I feel needs to be publicly corrected. In his column Mr. Gray states that Mr. Gordon McLean represented the Canadian Student Veterans Association at the I.U.S. Congress and while representing them voted consistently with the Russian bloc.

The correct name of the veterans' association is and was the National Council of Student Veterans and at no time did Mr. McLean represent officially this organization. Mr. Starkey, the President in 1945 and himself a member of the L.P.P., gave his personal sanction to the representation by McLean but at the first meeting of the Council preceding the annual Conference of Student Veterans, all the remaining members of the Council resigned in protest and, at the opening session of the Conference, Mr. Starkey was forced from the chair by an overwhelming majority after he refused to resign. He was replaced in the chair by Mr. John Schierbeck, who was later elected President. The N.C.S.V. never, as an official body approved their representation at Prague and never paid a cent towards Mr. McLean's expenses. If he represented anyone it was Mr. Starkey and perhaps the other members of the L.P.P. in Canadian universities.

My own politics have always been Conservative and I know that neither Mr. Schierbeck nor Mr. Cole (President of N.C.S.V. in 1949) had leftist views. The fact that all of Mr. Starkey's council resigned in protest against his actions combined with the modern attitude of successive councils and presidents, makes it quite clear that Canadian student veterans were not in any way represented in the votes cast by Mr. McLean at Prague.

W. Douglas McVie,
President N.C.S.V. 1948,

volunteers to help in the church's recreation centre, and the gang had accepted them.

Mr. Domm declared that he "stumbled into this Beanery Gang business. When I first heard about the gang's depredations in Wasaga Beach during the summer of 1948, my reaction was the same as everybody else's," he said. "I was shocked and thought they should be whipped." But after further reflection he decided his attitude was not in accordance with what he believed as a Christian. "Furthermore it did not make sense," he added.

The following December Mr. Domm held a forum discussion on the question of juvenile delinquency and soon afterwards Beanery Gang members were invited to a meeting to see whether they would come to a dance in the church.

Since then the church program has expanded until today there is a lounge for the gang in the church, and a trained social worker directs activities in the church that take up most weekdays and even Sundays.

Last year $13,000 was spent on the program, Mr. Domm said. The church was aided by a $5000 grant from the City Council that met fierce opposition, especially from Controller David Balfour. Mr. Domm said the price is cheap when one considers that the average expense of arresting and keeping a man in Kingston Penitentiary for the average term is $25,000.

Movie-Makers Meeting To Plan Documentaries

Anyone interested in movie-making is invited to the University of Toronto Film Society meeting tomorrow (Tuesday) in Room 151, Economics Building, at 7:45 p.m.

Plans for the two documentaries to be undertaken by the society this year are to be discussed. Two films which won Canadian awards recently will be shown.

The Film Society executive stresses the fact that movie-making experience can be gained through membership in the group. Last year, the Society produced the film, "A Twig Is Bent," on the University Settlement project.

there they took a train to Toronto, arriving here in time for Christmas.

Prof. Helleiner wasted no time in starting to work and gave his first lecture on January 6, 1940. At first he held the position of instructor, helping with Economics groups. He worked out his lectures verbatim, and still does. So instead of having discussion groups as he was supposed to, he gave lectures.

Academic Differences

During his ten years in Canada, Prof. Helleiner has found our university life decidedly different from that in pre-war Europe. One of the chief differences lies in our curriculum. There is no prescribed arts curriculum in European universities, but students are required to take a certain number of hours of lectures every week. Prof. Helleiner recalled taking a course in mediaeval charters in his first year which was entirely too technical for first year students, and then having to repeat the same course in his fourth year. Theses are required for a degree and a set of exams must be passed after the fourth year. Up until the final year, there are no exams, unless the student requests an oral examination from his professor. Since the students are not accustomed to writing exams, it is not uncommon for a person to fail to graduate after his four years' study. So, believe it or not, our system has its advantages.

However the European students' complete freedom of choice regarding subjects has its advantages, too. They do not tend to become too narrowly specialized. Prof. Helleiner admitted that he probably read as much philosophy and poetry as history.

Extra-curricular activities are not so highly organized in Europe and social and academic life are not integrated to the extent that they are on our own campus.

Although he issued several publications in Austria, Prof. Helleiner has not done very much in this field in Canada as yet. However, he has published an introduction to Readings in European Economic History, which his second year students will recall.

fessor Fisher likes Toronto quite well. He was a visitor here once before in 1924 as a delegate to the International Congress of Mathematics. In the week he has been here, he has been acquainting himself with the city and the university once again, and finds much on the campus unchanged.

Information regarding lecture courses and discussion groups to be conducted by Professor Fisher will be advertised by the various departments or may be obtained from Professor B. A. Griffith of the Department of Mathematics.

used to finance such publications,—such means, because of circumstances, are now considered inadequate and inequitable."

In analyzing the SAC's financial position, the committee compared it to those of other Canadian student councils. They found the fee per student of the other councils ranged from $4.50 to $17.00.

A special study was made of the McGill council's budget because they are close to us in size and location and are the only other Canadian campus to publish a daily newspaper. The McGill SEC foresees a possible deficit of over $11,000 on the year's activities. Their finance committee has recommended the fee be increased from $12 to $14.80. With this increase their paper, The McGill Daily, would receive $3.25 per student which is more than double what the Daily now gets.

Mock Parliament

would back them to the hilt.

"I can't see anything against allowing them to speak on anything they want to discuss," he continued. "They should let it be wide open. When we allowed the Boy Mayor and the other young people in City Hall the only restriction we made was that they didn't wreck the joint."

George Drew, federal leader of the Conservative Party, declined to make any comment, pointing out that he could not interfere in provincial matters.

Leaders of all the provincial parties also declined to comment. Minister of Education Dana Porter would only say, "It is entirely for the Speaker to decide."

Silly Restrictions

B. K. Sandwell, Saturday Night editor-in-chief, remarked, "This is a very silly restriction—to lend the chamber and then not let you speak on anything you want.

"I find their reason for refusing (that there was a danger of the public being misled) very humorrous.

"I can't say anything about the actual bill proposed," he added, "but I will say that the Speaker should have let them know from the beginning, and let the students decide from the first whether or not they wanted the chambers with such a restriction."

No comments could be obtained from the publishers of the Daily Star or the Globe and Mail.

Joe Casse, CCF representative to the Mock Parliament Committee, said that he had not been informed officially of the Liberal Club's resignation.

Regret Speaker Decision

"We regret that the Speaker will not allow provincial issues to be discussed," he continued. "Nevertheless we feel that there are enough controversial federal issues on which to hold a debate.

"We suggested federal issues such as housing, health insurance, exports and unemployment to the Liberals but they have refused to debate them. We feel this move on the part of the Liberals to avoid debating the wide, important issues which we have suggested is merely a publicity stunt.

"We will be glad to take over the government and propose some of the CCF policy on these issues which are of the utmost importance to us all."

moral conceptions were formed in another age; (2) introduce students to beer about a year sooner than they would be introduced otherwise; and (4) make the University lose some of the charisma attributed to it by the outside world who see a university as an ivory tower where Frank Merriwells are produced.

With proper supervision and intelligent management, the sale of beer on the campus, in our opinion, would improve the present situation. We ourselves have stomach ulcers and don't drink, so this decision is made without the slightest prejudice or emotion, outside of a heavy sorrow for the Engineers who are now deprived of their forty-a-day.

There is a University law against alcohol, so there can be none until the law is repealed or relaxed. However, laws are always changed as soon as the norms of a society are changed; there is only a time lag. In a university, sheltered as it is, this time lag is much greater, but change in rules is inevitable and unbreakably tied to change in opinion.

Therefore, if students and others keep their views on beer to the fore, regulations will, in time, be changed. It won't happen in our generation, but it will in the next. Efforts of the present student body will have effects (good or bad) not on themselves, but on their sons and daughters. If students feel beer on University property is advisable, they should keep bringing the subject up, and perhaps future generations will appreciate it.

How about it, Engineers?

times, finally gave up scratching his head in wonder.

"Now that is a professor of psychology," said the old boy. "He'd really like to swear, but feels that it would be letting his emotions run away with him, even control him. He tried it again to see if he could figure out my motives."

Along came a pretty little thing that I had somehow missed in my travels, and she got the same treatment. With clenched fists and tears in her eyes, she spluttered, "You. . . . you. . . .you Skuleman!"

"She's obviously a coed from Vic. Deadly serious, too. The worst thing they can call anybody, at Vic, is a Skuleman!"

We started to walk away when suddenly the professor was tripped from behind. As he was giving vent to his emotions in the manner of a Sergeant-Major in his prime, two men were strapping him in a suit with no pockets. One of the white-coated attendants explained that the "professor" often escaped but was not violent.

Evidently the old boy, in his youth, had gone completely bonkers studying for a degree in Honour Philosophy. The end had come through trying to solve the puzzle of whether life was a reality or illusion.

Dogface.

Intermeds Annihilate 'Y' Men

Coach Barry Lowes of the Intermediate basketball Blues walked out of the main gym in Hart House last Saturday night with content written all over his face. His team had just played one of their best games of the season, defeating the Central Y Intermediates 51-18.

The Varsity squad played heads-up ball throughout the whole game to completely out class the visitors in every department. Led by playmakers Al Stevenson, Doug Kettle, and John MacKenzie the Blues controlled rebounds at both ends of the court and pressed the attack continually.

The Blue team started off in high gear right from the opening whistle and had piled up a commanding lead of 20-6 by half time. Blue checking was so effective that the Central Y squad was forced to try all their baskets from long range without much success.

A Fighting Team

The Blue scoring machine opened up in the second half to chalk up 31 more points before the final whistle. Ken Brown and Bruce Rogers were leading scorers in the second stanza for Varsity. However, there were really no individual stars in the Blue lineup as every man was in there fighting to bring the team their well-deserved win.

A new feature at the Athletic Night was the High School hoop game which was played before the Intermediate tilt. Vaughan Road Collegiate defeated Riverdale 27-15 in this game. There will be one of these high school games at every Athletic Night from now on. They get under way at 5:45 p.m. and are designed both to give Varsity coaches a chance to look over prospects and to introduce the players to Varsity and to college ball.

Lineups

Varsity— Rogers (8), Stevenson (8), Denton (2), K. Brown (9), Al Brown, Kettle (7), MacKenzie (6), Cole 4), Wiley (2), Barber (5).

Blues Crush Swansea 10-4 Prep For Queen's Friday

By MAL CRAWFORD

Somebody ought to talk Wally Halder into taking another post-grad course. When Friday night's exhibition game with Swansea came up and defenceman John Addison was found to have an infection in his ear, Wally decided to step into the breach himself. How well he acquitted himself is shown in his record on the score card — one goal and three assists. He played up forward most of the time, allowing his check to get past him quite often, but nevertheless the score would indicate how much of a lift he gave the team. Something must have, anyhow, because Swansea's successes in the Metropolitan League prove them to be no slouches. They stand second, and have the most goals scored and the fewest goals scored against them.

Wally played alongside Joe Kane, who played one of his hardest-bumping games since the first of the season. Swansea forwards had a habit of coming in with their heads down, making them sitting ducks for the hard-hitting Kane and Hayes. Hayes drew quite a cheer from the small crowd when, during a change of players, he came on the ice just as Swansea was carrying the puck across Varsity's blue line with nothing but ice between the puck-carrier and Doug Orr. Bun streaked across in front of the goal and knocked the attacker off his feet as he was getting set for his shot.

Wilf Digby got the first two goals from Howson and Halder. Norm Fox, Rich Howson, and Pete Vernon also got two each, Bazos and Halder potting the others. Digby, Howson and Moore each earned two assists.

Al Scott, Ray Stubbings, Bruce Rich, and Neil Gordon got Swansea's four markers. The shots on goal count was quite a bit closer than the goals scored; Doug Orr made a lot of very nice stops, and has shown an amazing amount of improvement through the season.

Still juggling his lines around, Halder put Bucky Walters between Bell and Bazos, and filled his spot centring the Digby-Vernon line with Rich Howson. The latter line was getting plenty of goals, but Walters was getting only assists, which is odd considering the shot the guy has. Wally figures the new arrangement should be more productive. If they keep on getting ten goals a game, he won't be far wrong.

Bill Allen refereed, and even gave out two or three token penalties.

This Friday—Queen's at Varsity.

Senior Champions Decided Saturday

The senior intramural wrestling champs were crowned at A-night Saturday in the finals held in the upper gym. The bouts featured a great variety in styles and holds but the most colorful match in the tournament was the one between Graham of UC and Davies of Trinity. Graham finally won on points (4-3). He used a three-quarter Nelson to great advantage. Jack Kirkup of SPS decisioned Hebert of Vic 8-4.

Despite rain and foggy weather volleyball, basketball practices, swimming, bowling and hockey are infu ll swing. Even skiing enthusiasts are making the most of their bad luck by having a dance to-morrow afternoon in the JCR.

Volleyball

This week there have been three nights set aside for volleyball in the Lillian Massey gym. To-night the first game is between St. Hilda's II and PHE II at 5:30, while at 6:15 St. Mike's tackles Vic I School of Nursing plays Meds at 7:00.

Swimming

Zi Murray, president of swimming, reports that this term will be devoted to informal swimming with an all-Varsity splash party this Thursday at 7:30 in the LM pool.

Hockey

Vic I came away from Varsity Arena with a 2-1 decision over PHE I last Friday at noon.

The game looked promising for PHE when Alice Jamieson scored in the first minute of play, but Vic broke into the scoring near the end of the first period, and took the lead in the second with Barb Weatherhead scoring both goals.

Both Phoebe Templeton, Vic, and Mary Macpherson, PHE, made some beautiful saves in the net, backed up by good defencewomen among whom Irma Bullock, PHE, deserves a star.

Tripping and roughing were checked up efficiently by the ref, Pat McLoughlin, who handed out five penalties in the game, 4 to PHE, and 1 to Vic.

The coaches juggled their line frequently resulting in a certain amount of turmoil, but making a good game to watch.

Skiing

Jean McEachern, UC, has managed to latch onto Alec Campbell to lead the sing-song at the Ski Dance. Alec is noted for his variety of numerous ditties which he produces from his squeeze-box (accordion) and is well-loved up Collingwood-way.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Now that this column has been somewhat noticed, (radio, newspapers, pictures, The Canadian Press wires) we feel that our position on the subject creating all this furor should be made clear. When we wrote the column advocating beer in Hart House for the purpose of getting a new gym built, we were thinking more of the new gym than of the niceties of either having or not having alky on the campus.

But since so many people have given us their opinions on the matter, we have given it considerable sober and careful thought. It is always a good idea to resolve a bi-lateral question into goods and bads and weigh both sides. The one whose good points outweigh its bad ones by the greatest margin should get the nod.

Campus beer will: (1) provide a source of revenue now lost to the University; (2) give some measure of protection against the worse side of beer-drinking; (3) make it more convenient for those who will drink anyhow; (4) instill an attitude of sane and sensible drinking into those that may get the wrong slant on it in seedy beer-parlors; and (4) conform to the opinions of the almost unanimous opinion of students, traditionally ten years ahead of their elders in the inevitable change of social mores and morals.

Campus beer will also: (1) create great opposition to those favoring it from churches, church groups, "status quo" members of the Board of Governors, and older people whose

Height Proves Aid To Purple Raiders In Win Over Blues

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Exercising a controlling hand in the rebound department and a magic touch for hooping baskets, the Assumption College basketball squad downed the Varsity Blues 60-48 in their tilt at Athletic Night Saturday evening. Paced by the sharp-shooting of Bill Figel with 12 points and Lloyd Pare with 11 points the Assumption team took the lead in the opening minute of play and were never headed by the Blues.

Penalty Ridden

The game was a fast-breaking one with a great many fouls handed out to both sides. Assumption were awarded 30 free throws and made 16 of them good, while Varsity were given 25 and completed 14. Five players, Pare and Fisher of the visiting squad and Jack Gray, Ted Luck, and John Braithwaite of Varsity were forced to leave the game with five personal fouls against them.

Ted Luck played well for Varsity until he was forced to leave the game early in the second half. His shooting eye was badly missed by the Blues in the second stage. Lloyd Pare carried the load for the Purple and White in the early part of the game, scoring some baskets that had the large crowd on its feet. However, the sharp-shooting Pare lost much of his effectiveness when Johnny McManus took over the chore of guarding him in the second half.

The Old Vet

McManus, a guy old enough to be the father of most of the spectators at the game was the best threat that the Blues had to offer. His checking was very effective and he was high scorer in the game with 16 points, his deadly set shots keeping Assumption on their toes right until the final whistle.

Height Tells Tale

In the last half, Assumption's extra height began to tell the tale, and with Ray Ryan feeding the rebounds to teammate Bill Figel, the Purple and White team pulled into a commanding lead of 10 points which Varsity seemed unable to overcome. Bill Huycke, who turned in a 9 point effort for the Blues, did all he could to keep the ball out of Ryan's hands, but simply did not have the necessary height. Even one tall Varsity man in the game would, in our opinion, have made a substantial difference in the score.

ASSUMPTION—Truant (2), Patalak (6), Pare (11), Bruce (4), Carpenter, Ryan (7), Simpson, Bitowski (5), Ryan (7, Simpson, Bitowski (5).

VARSITY—Wigle (5), Carruthers (2), Gray (4), McManus (16), Bell (1), Braithwaite (2), Huycke (9), Henderson, Luck (6, Gibbs (4).

Syracuse 8-Ball Varsity Swimmers In Pool Room

University of Syracuse practically drowned the Varsity swim team in the pool part of the Athletic Night at Hart House Saturday night, edging them out by a score of 53-21. The only bright spots on Toronto's side of the meet were "Gabby" Gibson winning the 100 yard free style and Phil Hosen's capturing the 200 yard breast stroke. Varsity's complete fizzle in the diving was understandable, as their two stars in this field, Ken Tulley, and Roy Wortley, were unable to compete. Tulley, intercollegiate diving champion, turned sick, and Wortley got his eye.

The rest of the losses are not so easily explainable. Second place Toronto men were Gibson, in the 440; Smith, in the 200 yard breast stroke, to get the first two places in this event. Toronto, it would appear, has the best breast-strokers in the league. Gibson came second in the 220.

In the intramural water polo contest after the meet, Trinity beat Wycliffe 10-5.

Two of the top basketball teams in the major league met at noon Saturday and senior UC were extended all the way before edging senior SPS 26-22. Jock Robson and Jerry Freeman were the outstanding players for UC.

Line-ups

UC—Robson 6, Tisdale 4, Kennedy, Johnson 8, Durbin 2, Bochnek, Freeman 6, McFadden, Schipper, Flowers, Wengle. Total 26.

SR. SPS—Braithwaite 6, Pierce 2, Wigle 1, Buchanan 2, Pocontchef 1, Moran, Choresteckl, Gregory 4, Wilson 6, Willsie. Total 22.

The favored St. Mike's "A" hockey team bowed to senior UC 5-4 in a thrilling ice set-to yesterday at the arena. Stucky, Jewson, Fullerton, Cummings and Masters were the opportunists who materially aided the UC cause. For the Mikemen, McNamara, Pat Duffy, Kelly and Milne turned in singles.

The game between Dents "B" and SPS sevenths was a heart breaker as far as the dentists were concerned. After leading throughout the contest on an early goal by Crawford, they were foiled by Gordie Mollenhauer, who came through with tying score late in the game.

On the basketball front, the powerful St. Mike's "B" team took a lopsided decision from Architecture "A" by a 42-20 count. Fuhrmann, with a dozen, led the Mikemen and was helped by O'Hearn with nine and Murname, six. Paterson and Owens were tops for the architects.

Send Note To Davies Repudiating Actions 'Of Some Students'

By DON STEVENSON

Twisting and turning their way through a maze of conflicting interests and convictions in a heated discussion that stretched three hours through the supper hour last night, the University of Toronto Debating Union Mock Parliament Committee finally agreed what to do about the Liberal Club's recent resignation from the government in the Parliament's debate to be held this week.

Liberals Refuse

The Liberals refused to act as the Government this Thursday night because Speaker Davies of the Ontario Legislature refused the Parliament permission to debate repeal of the Charitable Gifts Act in the Legislative Chambers.

The Committee faced two main problems: first, what to do regarding the Liberal Club's action, which it was felt gave the impression the Debating Union itself was criticizing Speaker Davies for his ruling; second, what parties were to form the Government and the Official Opposition in the debate on a topic acceptable to Speaker Davies.

Outlines Policy

Agreement was relatively easily reached on the first problem. SAC Debates Commissioner Dave Quigley emphasized it must be made clear that "certain individuals" and not the University of Toronto Debating Union effected the resignation, which seemed to imply criticism of Speaker Davies.

To do this the following resolution was passed, to be shown to Speaker Davies:

"That the University of Toronto Debating Union Mock Parliament Committee expresses its appreciation to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly for permission to use the Legislative Chamber for debates.

"That the Committee recognizes the Speaker's prerogative to decide the topics for debate, and regrets the independent action by some students outside the Committee.

"It is hoped that the Union's opportunity to use the Legislative Chambers in the future has not been jeopardized."

Order Rules

To prevent future actions that might embarrass the UTDU, the Committee ordered Quigley, who is chairman of the Committee, to draw up a set of rules eliminating such a possibility.

When the Committee then turned to the task of selecting two party clubs to form the Governmen and the Opposition in the debate this Thursday it truly ran into trouble.

The final decision: the CCF Club will be the Government and the Progressive Conservative Club will form the Official Opposition in a debate on a Speech from the Throne. The Speech from the Throne will consist of a simplified version of the national CCF Party's "first term program."

There will be a resolution criticiz-

Vic. Defeats U.S. Defense Of Formosa

The motion "That the US should defend Formosa," was defeated by the Victoria Debating Parliament, yesterday, in a vote of 36-8.

Opposing the motion, Shirley Endicott, II Soc., said that the Communist movement in China was supported by a great majority who would oppose US interference in support of the Nationalists. She cited the "White Paper," released by the US State Department, which said that the corrupt Naionalist government has been the cause of riots on Formosa, in 1947. "I fail to see why a government which has ruined the country economically and financially, and that has so brutally suppressed the people, merits the support of the United States," Miss Endicott said.

Speaking for the affirmative, Tom Wells, I Pass, said that defense of Formosa is necessary to provide a solid wall against the Eastern Communists. He said that US opposition to Communism in Europe should be continued in the East, since the supplies and troops needed would be a small matter to the US.

Dick Bowles, IV History, said that in the United Nations, China has no seat, and the present Chinese delegates have no country. He felt that a solution would be to recognize the Communist government.

Kip Fleming, IV Poli. Sci., in upholding the motion, stated that in 1895, Japan was legally given the rule of Formosa. Since the US now controls Japan, it should also control Formosa. However, if the US aids the Nationalists, Russia will support the Communists, he said.

A discussion from the House followed the last speaker, ne member of the House, a young man from China, said that the Communist movement, the people's movement, had united China for the first time. He stated that many of the Nationalist soldiers had left their army to join the Communist ranks.

Taylor Relates Importance Of Biblical Ms. Discovery

Discovery of ancient Biblical manuscripts in a cave on the Dead Sea less than two years ago was called "the most important discovery in modern times," by Principal W. R. Taylor of University College in his illustrated lecture Friday for the Canadian Society of Biblical Studies.

The manuscripts, eleven in number, were discovered by a group of Bedouins. All are written in Hebrew except one which is in Aramaic.

Secret Group Responsible

The history of the scrolls, according to Dr. Taylor, goes back to the second century B.C. Then a small secret group of Jews had become distressed at the giving-way of fellow Jews to the Greek influence of the Syrian and Egyptian rulers controlling Palestine.

To carry on the defense against foreign cultural influence, this small sectarian band had gathered together as loyal believers of the covenant. All members were required to take an oath of the offensive, Dr. Taylor said. The scrolls were consigned to the cave for protection, together with copies of the oath and hymns and prayers of thanksgiving to be recited when victory against the foreigners had been won. The group had scattered or died out and the hidden treasures had been forgotten.

Many Scrolls Lost

Through the centuries following, the cave had been raided, said Dr. Taylor, and some of the scrolls had been lost. But the discoveries in the cave besides the complete manuscripts included fragments of the books of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Judges and Daniel. Most important discovery was a scroll of the prophecies of Isaiah, written about 200 B.C.

Oldest Known

Importance of these manuscripts, explained Principal Taylor, lies in their antiquity. They are 1100 years older than any other Old Testament scrolls known today, he said.

Accuracy of the Bibles used today has been assured by checking with these ancient manuscripts, Dr. Taylor said. The style and grammatical construction used in these scrolls will lead to certain changes in the study of the Hebrew language, he said.

Through photostatic copies, the world has come to know of the ten scrolls now owned by the Syrian Convent of St. Mark and the Hebrew University, both in Jerusalem, Dr. Taylor said.

Varsity Smash

This Saturday night is the time for the second Varsity staff party. All those coming are asked to sign the lists in the News Office as soon as possible.

This affair is to be a quiet "do" in the usual The Varsity tradition. Refreshments will be abundant, the charge nominal, the spirit of play overwhelming.

Miss Ida Might, well-known friend and advisor to the staff, will deliver her famed lecture: "Alcoholism and the Red Menace."

Scalpers Note A-VR Tickets Selling Fast

Tickets for the Wednesday and Thursday performances of the All-Varsity Revue are now sold out, Revue ticket officials announced today. This leaves tickets for only the Monday and Tuesday night and the Saturday matinee shows.

Some students have attempted to exchange their tickets for reserved seats already, report All-Varsity officials, but the exchange system does not start until Monday, Jan. 30.

Skit production will be underway this Wednesday and Thursday, announce directors Ben Wise and Irwin Pasternak. On these two days, casting for All-Varsity Revue skits will be held in the Zion Church, from 4-6 p.m.

Edmonton Editor Vigorously Backs Student Reporting

Edmonton, Jan. 16—(CUP)—"Newspaper reporting is the greatest all-round training in the world," wrote H. L. Straight, publisher of the Edmonton Bulletin, in a guest column in the "Gateway," University of Alberta undergrad paper.

"A doctor quizzing a patient is a reporter on an interview . . . so is a lawyer cross-examining a witness," continued the publisher. He mentioned several famous men who started out as reporters — Winston Churchill, Mackenzie King and others.

So keen is Mr. Straight that students be allowed to take advantage of the training offered by reporting that he has offered a $100 scholarship to be awarded to the best reporter on the "Gateway."

The Varsity also has a $100 scholarship which is offered annually to the student doing the best job on the paper.

Housing Shortage

Musicians Have Troubles Too

By HERB WOOD

Everybody knows that a guy with a family these days has a tough time finding a place where they can all sleep. But I think the plight of the musician should be made known too.

Kids enrolled in the faculty of Music with a dozen instruments to bone up on, are hard put to find a landlord that will take them in. Gone are the days when a man with musical talent was welcome. In those days, it was the expected thing on Saturday night for the roomers to gather in the landlord's parlour for a nice social evening. The musician entertained and everbody was happy.

But those days have all gone by the board. The other day I was talking to a flautist, you've probably seen him around the campus dozens of times, and what he was telling me . . . why it was amazing. He wouldn't let me use his name. Reprisals, you know.

Stovepipe Hole Useful

Last year, he lived on the second floor of a rather out-modeled house. In one corner of the room was a hole for a stove pipe. The chap upstairs didn't enjoy music in the beginning. The first time our flautist started running up and down a few scales, after supper, the guy upstairs came running down, roaring like a bull.

Well after he had his say he became curious about the flute and ended up by begging our friend to teach him to play. It turned out to be the darndest situation. This fellow upstairs was a laborer and he had an awful time getting his fingers to cover the holes properly. He never did bother to buy a flute. When he wanted to practise, he would holler down the hole and our flautist would pass the flute up the hole. In that way he kept peace in the house.

Washing Machine is Companion

This year, after hunting a long time, he was finally allowed to live in the basement of a house, but he had to share his room with a washing machine. But this was nothing to a true musician, and he quickly lost himself in his homework. This year he is studying woodwinds. Some days, he brings home a saxophone, other days a clarinet or an oboe.

The maiden lady who lived above him usually minded her own business, but one day she was home, sick. Now through some quirk in the heating system, she has to leave her door open in order to keep her room warm. But when our flautist started his practising for the day at the hour of eight, in the morning, she had to close the door.

Notes Exchanged

About an hour later, the musician noticed a note slipped under the door.

Dear Boy:

I'm a sick woman. Please stop. My room is freezing, but if I open the door the noise you're making drives me crazy.

Signed, The Lady Upstairs.

Our flautist stopped long enough to write this little note.

Dear Madam:

I begin my practice at eight in the morning and usually stop at six in the evening. Sometimes I stop for lunch, but I have been known to go right straight through.

Signed, The Boy Downstairs.

He took the note upstairs and slipped it under the door, and returned to his practising. And strangely enough that was all he ever heard from the woman. Fortunately, the weather became milder because she was a stubborn woman.

What Is The Price....

We have been devoting some space in these pages lately to a discussion of the question of the International Union of Students, and whether or not The National Federation of Canadian University Students should affiliate with the IUS.

There is considerable interest in, and some very vocal opposition to, affiliation with the IUS. Affiliation is actively supported by the Labour Progressive Party Club on this campus, which doesn't help matters much. The move is also supported by some highly practical, albeit slightly idealistic, students who believe we should get out into the international field.

The move is opposed by some equally practical students who think we should have nothing to do with communists, and who fear that the amount of effort required to join and work in IUS would seriously weaken the NFCUS.

Those who oppose the move have some good points. They say that we could not hope to change the political orientation of the IUS, that the communists will continue to control the organization and will only "use" the good name of Canada to further their own ends.

They feel that we will be better off if we continue to work in Canada, for Canadian students, and build up the National Federation of Canadian University Students into a strong and vital organization.

There is also a feeling among this group that we should attempt to form an alternative international union of students, based on western democratic principles.

On the other side of the fence are those who would like to enter IUS and battle the question out there. No good can come, they say, of forming an alternative organization, for it could not get at a great number of students behind the "Iron Curtain."

Also, they say, you cannot hope to learn about the world situation by sitting back in the comfortable confines of North America, and hope to understand the problems which the split between the West and East has given the world. It is necessary to fight communism, and it would be a good idea to start on the student level.

There are also the practical activities, the international contacts, and the non-political types of work that might be done in the IUS, but these matters have been shoved into the background. The realistic Canadian student is mature enough to understand that the politics of joining IUS will inevitably come first.

On this campus, students will soon be asked to decide whether we should join the IUS or not. The machinery has already been set in motion to find out what you think about the matter, and to allow you to express your opinion through your elected representatives. The final decision will be made by the Students' Administrative Council, probably in about a month's time.

We favour joining the IUS. Isolation has never paid off, and we are faced with a problem on the student level which is part of a much larger world problem. It is not too early to begin supporting our ideas out in the wide, cruel, wicked world. Aware of the dangers, and firm in our resolve, we can not hope but to make some impression, somewhere.

Understanding our enemies now, and knowing how they think and operate, will stand us in good stead when we take our place in the world as citizens.

"Good citizenship" may be, as one of the breweries keeps reminding us, "a lot of little things." But it is also some very big ones. The price of joining the IUS may be high in cash and pride, but in terms of things learned it might be priceless.

We can never know what it is to live with a tiger until we live with one. The same may be true of communists.

How Well Can You Swim?

Scene: A typical University classroom. Only odd touch is a wide swimming pool at one end of the room.

Characters: One expectant student; one professor; various other people splashing about the pool.

Student: I understand this is the locomotion class, sir. I was told to report to you for instruction.

Professor: Yes, my boy. I'm sure you'll learn a lot about life in this class. But first, you're quite satisfied with walking on ground, I presume?

Student: Well, yes, reasonably. At least I seem to get around all right on it.

Professor: And I further presume that you've never thought that an earthquake might shake your foundations from beneath your feet at any moment . . . that your foundation isn't really secure?

Student: Well, I suppose that could happen, but I seem to have done all right up to now. And none of my friends seems to have suffered from doing the same things I am doing.

Professor: We'll pass on, now. I've managed to put a doubt in your mind and that is sufficient. Next, have you thought about other methods of locomotion? Such as on water perhaps?

Student: Afraid I'm from the prairies, sir. Never bothered with water.

Professor: Then you don't know that locomotion by means of water is better, do you?

Student: Frankly, no.

Professor: Now we come to the real job. The real job of a university is to make you think. And I can see that you haven't been doing that. Let's walk over to this swimming pool.

Professor glances around till he finds the deep end of the pool, and leads the trusting student close.

Professor: Now here we have water. You'll notice other students splashing around up at the shallow end; a few professors enjoying themselves in this deep end.

Student: Looks quite good. How do they do it?

Professor: How do they do it? Come, come, my boy. We can't write your exams for you. All we can do is lead you to the water and then test your ability.

Student: Well, they seem to be doing all right.

Professor: Exactly. They've increased their knowledge of this world's intricacies. Now it is your chance. Just jump right in. Here, I'll help you.

A vigorous shove and the student flies off the edge of the pool and lands flat-bellied in the liquid.

Second professor appears on the scene, attracted by the vigorous thrashings and shouts of the student.

Second professor: Another student, eh? Learning something new, eh? Certainly amazing how little they know when they come here isn't it? Wonder if he'll come through?

First Professor: Well, he didn't look too promising. But of course it isn't our responsibility if he drowns.

Student by now is calling for help, after coming up for the first time.

First professor: Sometimes I wonder, though. I can remember him walking around on the ground, and thinking it was sufficient.

Second Professor: Yes, and it certainly is strange how they seem to enjoy that ignorance. Amazing how they get along despite it, too.

Student has given up hope after coming up for the second time but continues to flail his arms.

First Professor: It always hurts me to see a student drown. I could have given him some instruction in how to swim before I shoved him in, I suppose. But I can't take the chance of being accused of directing my student's thoughts.

Second Professor: No, that would be in direct contradiction to all our teaching methods; and you might get "labelled". I remember advocating one overhand stroke once.

Supports Rallies

Editor, The Varsity:

Regarding the recent SAC proposal to limit pep rallies: Are three Friday evenings allocated to support rugby spirit too much for a sport which, after all, is a major highlight in our school year? While at McGill for the football weekend, many times I heard the remark, "We're trying to start the spirited rallies that we've heard have been such a success on the U. of T. campus."

Debates and other cultural activities have an important and necessary place in our training but pep rallies will be remembered most in post-university years as a prime component in the part of college life that was happy, youthful and carefree.

There are none too many All-Varsity affairs where all faculties get together. And surely we would miss the lively and stimulating skits of the rallies.

I suggest our SAC reps shop about a bit and learn what those who voted for them think of their new proposal.

Student Poll Explained

Editor, The Varsity,

I would like to correct one important detail about the poll on student interest in social and political affairs the U. of T. Peace Council is now conducting on the Campus, which was wrongly reported in last Wednesday's Varsity. The questionnaire will not be given to one student from each faculty but rather to every hundredth student on the whole campus, chosen representatively from all faculties. The selection has already been made from the Student Directory and includes 140 students, or 1 per cent of the total University population.

IUS Refuses NFCUS Following Fumbles In Canadian Policy

(This is the seventh in a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of The International Union of Students. The eighth article in this series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

Following the February events in Czechoslovakia, and the withdrawal of The United States National Students Association from the International Union of Students, Grant Livingstone, head of the Canadian delegation which was to seek affilition with the IUS wrote to all Canadian universities to sound out opinion on the IUS.

Maritimes, Alberta Opposed

In Canada the Maritimes went almost solidly against joining IUS, and Alberta indicated that they would oppose the move if the United States group confirmed their suspension. The proposal was advanced that NFCUS go to the IUS and ask for a motion of censure on the manner in which the IUS had handled the Czech situation. If that motion was not forthcoming, they would then try to form an alternative "international union."

The proposal, as outlined by Livingstone in a letter to the Canadian unions on May 10, 1948, was:

The Canadian Proposal

"(1) We ask all other national unions to join us at the Prague (it was held in Paris) meeting of the IUS Council in a common motion of censure of the executive for their failure to condemn the suppression of students in Czechoslovakia, and in motions of reform along the lines of our conditions, and in a joint declaration that failure to accept this will result in mass withdrawals of all the participating countries and the formation of an alternative union.

"(2) That we immediately ask the Dutch or the Danes to accommodate such an alternative if our attempt fails."

Two thirds of the Canadian universities approved of this move, and it became policy.

It also caused a lot of trouble. It was evident that the Canadian group did not want to join IUS merely to participate in an international student organization, but also to change the political orientation of that international student group. That purpose in itself was neither wrong, nor impossible. It was (and is) necessary that the political orientation of the IUS be changed, or at the very least, modified. But to attempt to do it with a threat of walking out and forming an alternative union was not a very effective way to deal with the problem.

Canadian Vision Needed

It smacks too much of the "if you won't give me any of your candy I'll go and make some of my own, and to hell with you" attitude. Dealing with a large group, the majority of whom don't agree with your basic political way of life and who do not particularly like the manner in which you run your affairs, it was necessary that some vision enter Canadian student thinking at this point. It didn't, and NFCUS, through her representatives, went blindly ahead, slashing out with words and action, so that by the time they got to the IUS Council meeting they were viewed with suspicion and alarm by the members of the IUS.

On June 16 Livingstone wrote to the IUS, outlining the Canadian position, and presenting the NFCUS application for affiliation. On June 17 he sent a letter to 54 national student unions outside the Iron Curtain, stating the NFCUS position, and inviting sympathetic unions to a meeting in Brussels immediately preceding the IUS meeting in Paris. In it he asked other unions to support the Canadian proposals to reform the IUS from within at the Paris Council meeting, and if that was not possible to sever their relations with the IUS and form an alternative union.

NFCUS Not Accepted

The Brussels meeting was not to be a great success. The Canadian Delegation were not really aware of what was going on. And by slapping the IUS hard in the face with the threat of breaking up the international group, Livingstone laid the grounds for the refusal of the IUS to accept NFCUS affiliation until the Canadian students had another talk about it.

By the time NFCUS had a chance to discuss it at their conference in Montreal in December, 1948, the whole Canadian picture had changed. In the main, Canadian students were completely confused about the issue. Politics and Canadian fumbles had done their work, and NFCUS rejected the IUS.

Mr. Sinclair's topic: "The Art of the Radio Play." Following the address, the usual open discussion period will be held.

Witches Burn At Stake, Chorus of Fifty Sings As Ruddigore Produced

Witches being burned at the stake, a walking picture gallery, professional bridesmaids, and a rabidly insane young lady all promise to make the Vic Music Club's forthcoming production of "Ruddigore" interesting, to say the least. Added attraction will be a Chorus of Fifty and a full orchestra.

This is only the second time that this Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, sub-titled "The Witch's Curse", has been produced in Toronto, and is the first time for fifty years that the original finale has been performed.

Student Poll Shows Varied Viewpoints On SAC Fee Rise

Generally speaking, Varsity students are not opposed to an increase in SAC fees if it is necessary, and as long as the increase is not too much—no more than $5.00.

This was the result of a poll conducted by The Varsity, to find student reaction to SAC Financial Commissioner Earl Orser's announcement that some increase in fees would be requested in a letter to the various colleges and faculties represented on the organization.

The Questions

The questions asked the students polled were:

1. Do you know what the SAC fee is?
2. For what uses is this money employed?
3. Have you any suggestion for improved allocation of the present fee?
4. Do you think the proposed increase in fees is warranted?

A surprisingly low per centage—only about 40 per cent—knew that they pay $3.00 to the SAC. Guesses ranged from $2.00 to $18.00.

Most people knew at least a few of the uses to which their fees are put. Those mentioned included publications, the Blue and White Society, the employment agency, book exchange, and the housing service.

Admit Not Informed

On the third question 30 per cent admitted that they were not sufficiently informed to make any judgment. Fifty per cent thought the allocation as of present was satisfactory.

One of the critics of the present allocation was Harold Nelson, II Mining, who said, "There should be more money for All-Varsity functions and less for NFCUS and other things which don't affect the majority of the students. While I don't want to cut them off completely, I can't see sending delegate after delegate to their conventions on my money."

Eighty per cent of the students polled were in favour of a small increase in SAC fees. Maxwell Irwin, I Pre-Meds, summed up the general opinion, saying, "The increase should be no more than $5.00. There seems to be a need for an increase, and we should be willing to pay it."

Gerry Clark, IV UC, stated, "Very pressing arguments have been put up for an increase. I think less money could be spent on Blue and White functions, but even so an increase in fees cannot be avoided."

Want Better Services

Ruthella Roleston, II P&B, said that in her opinion "It is desirable to have better services. The tuition at Toronto is not expensive, and if the increase is not too large I am in favor of it."

Fred Ceresney, II Pre-Meds, sup-

It's easier to indulge in this kind of evening exercise if you have a surplus quota of muscle and brawn. Dave Graham, UC, (man on top) is shown in the process of defeating Bill Davies, Trinity, in the 175-lb. class of Senior Inter-faculty wrestling meet recently.

Skulemen Reveal Grandiose Plans For Annual Ball

The forthcoming Engineers' At-Home on Thursday, Feb. 2, is being publicized by Skulemen with statements like "close to a thousand beans sunk into decorations and special effects," and "an area of well over 30,000 square feet—i.e., the entire convention floor and mezzanine of the Royal York Hotel has been taken over."

A quick adjustment by slide rule gives each of the expected 3,000 souls roughly ten square feet, Barney Warren's publicity release declares.

The theme of the At-Home is being kept a stealthy secret by the coy publicity men. "All that can be suggested is to get a ticket, a spook, a lab report done in advance," concludes the advance publicity.

Audrey Tells All

SAC-ful Of Facts

By ED RASKY

When we heard the words—"Sorry, Wrong Number" from the picture of the same name we knew a tragedy had occurred. When Don Ameche invented the telephone we knew it was really Alexander Graham Bell. When Archie answers the phone—we know it will probably be Duffy from Duffy's Tavern. But when the telephone rings in the Students' Administrative Council Office and one of the girls answers—anything can happen. Here is a mild example:

Mother: My son is in Hart House eating lunch, would you call him to the phone please.

Secretary: But Madam! there may be two or three thousand male students at lunch and Hart House is a big place.

Mother: (feeling insulted—but replies indignantly) Couldn't you find him in one of the rooms? I could tell you what he looks like.

Secretary: (now frothing at the mouth, counts slowly to ten. Her face turning from red to blue at intervals).

Mother: Oh never mind, he just walked in. (a few giggles) I'm sorry.

The telephone isn't the only thing that buzzes around the S.A.C. office. There are three busy girls working there who are only protected from the rampaging herd that trudges in and out of there by a wooden counter. Reading from right to left there's friendly Mrs. Audrey Dickie (she said I could call her Audrey), personal secretary to E. A. Macdonald Sec. Treas. of the S.A.C., Fran and Loretta Stewart who does the bookkeeping. Fran Lightbourne who looks after all the advertising for the Varsity.

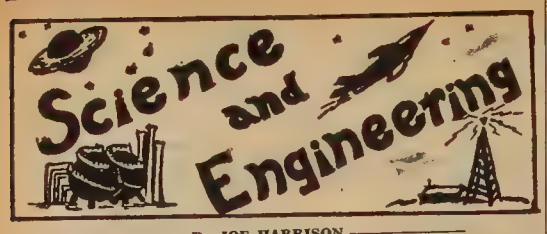
Busy Business

The S.A.C. office is about as long as an elephant and as wide as two tigers. This analogy does not mean the office is as wild as the animals but there is a lot of life there. They sell tickets for campus shows; arrange ski and rugby trips; sell university crests and act as general information booth. In emergencies they have advised about engagement rings, wrapped Christmas parcels and once they repaired a pair of shoes with a staple. "Really", explained Mrs. Dickey, "we all like it here, there's never a dull moment."

"Being on the same exchange as a butcher shop can often prove embarrassing," she continued. "I don't know how many times we've gotten an order for a few pounds of meat. Excuse me a minute," she said. "There's a young man over there with a blank expression on his face and he probably wants something." He asked her for an envelope and she obliged with the envelope and a smile. She returned and replied, "Oh that's nothing they often come in to fill their pens and sharpen their pencils."

More Calls And More

Now to get back to telephone conversations. There was the time a girl called and asked what she should wear that evening. Audrey wittily replied, "Clothes." "But seriously," she continued, "we often get calls about clothes to wear; formal or semi-formal; are corsages in order?" No, no one has asked me to get them a date—not yet anyway.



Audrey said she had a good laugh the time someone called and asked what men wear in the Hart House swimming pool. She can't remember how many times mothers have called asking about campus shows. Whether it was good, clean and wholesome. "Naturally I always answer yes", she said. "Some even go further and ask what time will it be over."

When there's a wedding performed in S.C.M. chapel the office often harbours the bride and groom till they are ready to walk down the aisle. Oh yes—co-eds come into Hart House when they wish to put ads in The Varsity. They tell me they're embarrassed but I think they are thrilled (all those men)."

And Yet Another

"Oh, wait till you hear this one." "Hurry the suspense is killing me," I replied. "Some women called and asked to speak to a dark curly haired boy who comes in here every day. I answered, "who". Then she explained as if to clear matters up, "you know the one with brown eyes". We were at wits end trying to figure out who it was. It turned out to be the orchestra leader at that time, Hans Gruber. There was the time Heintzman's called and I sang the "Blue and White" to them over the telephone.

One of the most occupational hazards in writing a thesis is that in pouring through books of reference and technical journals, your eye is continually caught by titles and subjects which have little bearing on the work under investigation.

In extreme cases the wealth of technical information available inspires one to write a column. The last is a just and fitting reward for lack of willpower and a misdirected curiosity, for the tyranny of time involved in writing a thesis is as nothing to the demands of an editor and the inevitable deadline.

In the August, 1938 issue of "Engineering" I came across one of these same hazards of which I speak. The title, "The Changing Outlook of Engineering Science", sounded intriguing, although the name of the author, Prof. R. V. Southwell, F.R.S., struck no familiar chord in my memory.

The article was "an abridged version of the presidential address delivered before section G of the British Association at Cambridge on Thursday, Aug. 18, 1938," and is much too long to quote in full but some parts are worth noting.

Specialization A Necessity

The problems facing the universities particularly caught my attention since they struck an only too familiar note. Professor Southwell has this to say: "The undergraduate in an honors course in chemistry will use the same techniques he has used in his university laboratory whereas the engineers' lectures and laboratory courses are not so much of practical value in themselves as a means of training him to think. The content of the subject of engineering is determined not only by the growth of knowledge but by the trend of practice . . . The boundaries of natural science have been so extended that no man can hope to comprehend the whole of physics or chemistry or any other field. Specialization has become a necessity, but engineering science embraces all these fields.

Limited Capacities

"A seemingly insoluble problem confronts any scheme of training for industry. What is to be our policy in the face of this continuous accretion of knowledge seeing as there is no corresponding increase in the capacity of undergraduates to absorb. On the one hand more and more specialized knowledge finds application in engineering practice, on the other our industrialists now, with rare exception, well-disposed to the engineering graduate, whom once their predecessors regarded with a blend of amusement and contempt, seem agreed in demanding that students shall come to them not as incipient specialists but as men who have been educated to take wide views, trained to think, and qualified to negotiate and control."

Professor Southwell strongly disagrees with proposed attempts to lengthen the courses or raise standards of entry but feels the remedy should be found in limiting the courses on the lecture list. He decries the fallacy of believing that a lecture delivered is a lecture absorbed. At the age of 20 a student's powers of memorization are uncanny but what concerns the educator is his ability to absorb and this is a far more obstinately constant quality.

All this, remember, before the wartime accelerated courses. Civil and mining engineers at this university with as many as 25 examination subjects in one year will appreciate Prof. Southwell's remarks.

Heavy Timetables

"The problem resolves itself into not what subjects should be included because of value but what can be omitted on the ground that pushed into a mind already taxed, it will push out something still more valuable.

"We must not assume that a full timetable can be met without detriment to the cultural education which industry has become to value; or that we have done our duty by our students when every hour of the working day is absorbed by some lecture or laboratory course and no appreciable time is left which we lump together under the heading of undergraduate activities. It is often these activities, too often forgotten in our planning, which do most to develop the qualities desired in our products."

Wallberg Lecturer

The Rev. R. V. Southwell whose lecture caught my eye has become Sir Richard Vynne Southwell, F.R.S., M.A., LL.D., M.I. Mech. E., F.R.A.S., F.I.A.S., and tonight at 8.30 he will give the third Wallberg Lecture on the subject: "Fifty Years of Engineering Science."

Professor Southwell is one of the world's foremost engineers. He has been Rector of the Imperial College of Science and Technology since 1942. Early in his career he was a Fellow and Lecturer in Mechanical Sciences at Trinity College, Cambridge. After serving in the first world war he became Superintendent of the Aerodynamics Department of the National Physical Laboratory. Subsequently he was University Lecturer in Mathematics at Cambridge and Professor of Engineering Science at Oxford.

Relaxation Method

In the engineering and scientific world he is particularly known for his development of a new system of mathematical analysis, the result of 15 years work, which he calls the "Relaxation Method." This system he describes as "an engineering mathematics adapted to the needs of men whose interest is in results."

He likens the methods of orthodox analysis, methods invented by pure mathematicians, to the intricate process of some vast machine and not adaptable to the demands of engineering work. The engineer going to the mathematician for help in solving his problems usually comes away with a beautiful technique for solving the general equations related to his work but seldom applicable to the actual problem under consideration.

No Exact Solutions

The "Relaxation Method" is divorced from the classical methods of solving equations by directly determining the unknown quantities involved, but approximately a range of values for the quantities to be determined and then proceeds by a series of operations to reduce the errors involved in these approximations. The method is sometimes longer but is apparently much simpler and more useful than the more orthodox approach.

His system has its basis in the belief that there is no such thing as an "exact" solution to an engineering or physical problem since only in examination questions are quantities given exactly. His latest book, "Relaxation Methods in Theoretical Physics," seems to be a direct challenge to the pure mathematician on his home ground.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

To commemorate the mid-century mark The Varsity will present a review of the seventy-year old campus newspaper in pictures and articles. In order that a complete and comprehensive digest could be assembled, a score of enthusiastic research workers, headed by Tsing Hadstah, Malayan translator of the School of Graduate Studies, have busied themselves in The Varsity Files stored in the Stephenson Building.

The Editors of this department feel that these features will constitute an appropriate momento of college days and with this in mind have had prepared a bound scrapbook with allocated space diagrams. This scrapbook will go on sale in the near future in the Tempo Room of the Embassy Hotel.

Valuable assistance in gathering and authenticating the material was rendered to this department by Clement Peabody, OTI. In appreciation of his kindness The Varsity presented Mr. Peabody with a hand-painted, combination collar-stud and can opener.

This project, begun in September, has culminated in the informative series to be inaugurated in the next issue of The Varsity and pooh pooh to you who don't Follow It Faithfully.

Exam Hallucinations

From McGill

By MILTON WINSTON
(In the McGill Daily)

Anything could have done it. The changing Montreal weather, twenty years of delicate living, even reading the Daily. But Percy Withbottom, first year Arts at McGill, had a physics course. Number 11 to be exact. He knew the reason. One day, just after registration, he passed the McGill Cyclotron and thought that he heard it leak. He sensed a strange radioactive feeling racing up and down his spine. After that day his whole career was changed.

Somehow he was able to produce any examination paper the night before it would appear. All he had to do was sleep with the text book and in the morning he would be able to predict what would be on the exam.

It wasn't long before the sagacious Professor began to wonder why the student body was passing their unpassable papers. One of the gentlemen was heard to remark "Quite irregular." Another started giving his English assignments in Latin, just to retain the former status quo of only passing four out of every ten pupils in his class. However, one extraordinary lecturer began to do a little research and came up with the amazing conclusion that some unscrupulous person, unknown up to the present, was giving away the examinations before the exam date. Chaos was heard in the board room.

Meanwhile, Mr. Withbottom, who had relations in commerce — they were the black sheep of the family — opened a small examination shop two blocks from the campus. His marginal curve fluctuated; four lines of anxious students could be seen awaiting their turn. In a few weeks he put up a large neon sign announcing "Exam Papers Sold Here."

The same lecturer who was so bright in predicting that something was wrong started to become suspicious about Percy's business establishment. After all, he lived on the top of the store. It took him about two months to gather enough evidence to bring the matter before the board.

Faced By Inquisition

The white-haired boardmen with deep philosophical frowns sat around a long, round, waxed mahogany table. Percy Withbottom, wearing a black formal suit, forty-cent cigars in his breast pockets, solid diamond rings on his ten fingers, and top hat politely held in his left hand, stood erect and confident before them.

"Mr. Withbottom," said one of the group, "you have been caught selling exam papers not even written by the professors."

Percy smiled cynically, reached into his pocket, and took out a perfumed silk handkerchief and daintily wiped his forehead.

"This charge, sir, is terrible. Unless cause can be brought before the Council soon, we shall have to dismiss you from the university. This, Mr. Withbottom, is the most drastic step that can be taken. Something strange is going on here and a purge, yes I said a purge, of all personnel is imminent. Someone is aiding you in obtaining the examination papers before they are written."

Threat of Expulsion

The accuser sat down heavily in a big awe-inspiring chair. He was sweating profusely.

The other members were pale and a whispering echo could be heard, "Expelled, expelled, expelled, oh dear me."

Percy looked them straight in the eye and said, "Gentlemen, since I have come to your university I have prospered." He pulled out a wad of green dollars and lit them with his platinum cigarette lighter. Expensive smoke pervaded the room. Tears could be seen in the boardmen's eyes.

"But, Sirs, I have done nothing dishonest," and he related how he obtained the exam papers, and his theory of the cyclotron. The hearing was adjourned till a fuller investigation could be arranged.

Radioactive Schizophrenic

The press on the campus ate it up. For the first time in many a year full page sweeps in red ink were given to Percy's story. Get-rich-quick students could be seen walking up and down in front of the cyclotron building trying to have some of the same stuff leak over them. One student went so far as to throw himself into the cyclotron; he came out of it with only a split personality.

Percy became the students' idol. Wherever he went students tried to rip a piece of clothing off him for a souvenir.

Then an unexpected event occurred. One day Percy entered the Union. After awhile he went to the Grill Room, and ordered a strawberry malted. When he had finished the drink, he fainted.

Next morning he awoke in the hospital. Somehow the malted had reacted with his stomach walls causing him to faint. Needless to say, when the ingredients of a Union Strawberry malted are mixed with the effects of the reaction of the Cyclotron, the initial effects of the reaction are nullified. Percy lost his power of "sleeping up" exams.

The poor disillusioned student failed his first year and was asked to retire from college life. He then moved to Toronto to build himself a university.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Ernesto Vinci

It is all too seldom that a group of people gathered together to hear a programme of music have the feeling that they are in the presence of true greatness. This spirit seemed to diffuse itself through the large audience in the Great Hall of Hart House on Sunday evening. Dr. Ernesto Vinci, baritone, and Sir Ernest MacMillan, pianist, performed Franz Schubert's setting of Die schone Mullerin, a group of poems by Wilhelm Muller.

This cycle of twenty songs tells the story of a young man who loved and lost. It is a tale of simplicity and poignancy. While wandering through the countryside, a young apprentice comes upon a beautiful little brook. He begins to walk along its banks, and soon he sees a mill. While working in this mill, the young man falls deeply in love with the miller's daughter. However, a black-bearded stranger, in the person of a hunter, comes out of the woods and into the heart of the lovely young maiden. The broken-hearted lover, realizing that his cause is lost, bids a tender farewell to the maid of the mill, and dies in the stream which first led him to her.

Dr. Vinci and Sir Ernest brought to this performance an insight which did to the music what moonlight does to a swiftly moving stream: transformed it from something beautiful, but common, to something exquisite and memorable. The two artists did far more than sing and play their parts with a high degree of perfection; they did a masterful bit of story telling. The listener never felt that either man was trying to place himself above the music. They changed a large, crowded room into a rolling, green countryside in which a beautiful love story was unfolding.

The City of Toronto is proud to have within its boundaries musicians of the stature of Dr. Vinci and Sir Ernest. On Sunday evening they proved that great music and great talent, when brought together, provide the listener with a memorable experience.

Bartlett and Robertson

Bartlett and Robertson are undoubtedly deserving of the outstanding position which they hold in the musical world. They manage to make one forget about two and think of one.

Their concert last night in Eaton Auditorium was characterized by facility; indeed, it was facile almost to a fault. At times it seemed they, or one of them at least, just didn't care, and in this respect the performance fell below the category of true art, which must always be creative. This could not be said to apply to Les Larmes by Rachmaninoff which reproduced almost visibly the tears it was expressing, certainly reminding one of actual experiences. Likewise the chorale-prelude, Sheep May Safely Graze, the final encore of the evening, was very effective, something to remember.

The works of Johann Christian Bach are seldom heard on the concert stage. It was a treat to hear the Sonata in G major by one of the pioneers in the sonata form. The emerging and receding of the strands of melody were most effective.

Instead of the Brahms Sonata in A minor the artist substituted the Variations on a Theme of Haydn by the same composer. This is one of their recorded works, as were also the two final encores, the Mendelssohn Scherzo and the Bach chorale-prelude mentioned above. It was here in the Variations that the facility of the artists seemed over-ripe, and, to mix a metaphor, that they were leaning on their laurels.

The three Czech Dances by Bohuslav Martinu, dedicated to Bartlett and Robertson, were well suited to the two-piano medium, being showy and rhythmic, full of "strange harmonies," and in the Andante forcing the performers to drop some of the superficiality of their playing.

One can scarcely blame the duo for being somewhat listless; the half-empty Auditorium was far from soul-stirring. Yet it was impossible not to wish for that something extra which it was obvious they could so easily produce upon occasion.

Lloyd Zurbrigg.

The Barretts of Wimpole Street

Rudolph Besier's romantic comedy, The Barretts of Wimpole Street, made stage history in 1931 with Katharine Cornell and Brian Aherne in the title roles of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning. Last night at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Hollywood actress Susan Peters appeared in the same play, but with strangely different results.

The play revolves about Elizabeth Barrett; its entire action takes place in her sitting room at 50 Wimpole Street and the crux of the play's theme rests upon the poetess. In short, Elizabeth Barrett's role is the play's focal point—she is the protagonist.

Miss Peters' performance did not take these factors into full account. From the first scene her part and presence were ever overshadowed by lesser members of the cast.

As for her interpretation of Elizabeth Barrett, one did not readily perceive the pathos so requisite to the invalid that she endeavoured to portray. A prime cause of this omission was the actress' attempt to employ Hollywood technique on a legitimate stage. Without high-powered microphone pick-up and deceptive cameras to validify her portrayal on the sceen, Susan Peters did not evoke the needed emotive response, and her role suffered inmeasurably thereby.

Acting implies not only an outward harmony of appearance and movement, but an inward symbolism in characterization, an other-worldliness of creation that transforms life into imagery. The actor implies rhythm and poise and dignity. He is a visible symbol of an imagined fact. The natural mask that we term technique and the natural movement we call stage presence are only the groundwork of his art. Upon them is imposed his other self, his painted self, which is in true acting the emotional self of a spectator absorbed in the play. This absorption did not occur in last night's production of The Barretts of Wimpole Street.

Robert Browning bounded on stage like a rabbit with little or no sense of the equilibrium or balance intrinsic to the role. Robert Carroll's interpretation was hardly weak in physical action, but it barely scratched the surface of the poet's character and certainly presented a superficial conception of the part. His love scenes with Elizabeth, which ought to have been poignant, consuming and intense, were more like Li'l Abner wooing his Daisy Mae. Essential to the conflict between Elizabeth and her father, Edward Mouldon-Barrett, is the spiritual affinity extant between Browning and Elizabeth. It is a tripod of inter-action in which the latter's course of action pulls constantly from the former, finally to break away in a flight to Italy at the play's end.

Notwithstanding the multiple virtues of the production: Karen Lindgren's Henrietta and Brandon Peters' bristling portrayal of the father, skilful writing, accurate settings, a swiftly moving action, and beautiful costuming. The Barretts of Wimpole Street did not evoke that sine qua non of effective theatre—rapport. Without it the performance lacked creative life.

Stage 50

Last Sunday the C.B.C. presented a revival of Joseph Schull's "The Concert", with Dianne Foster as Ann Richards and Bud Knapp as Dr. Richard Jenning. Anyone who missed it the first time had another chance to hear radio at its best. It is a revealing and poignant tale of a girl blinded by war, struggling to emancipate herself, to become useful and to return to the scene of her tragedy in order to teach blind children and so compensate with service, in some degree, for the hate in the world. Her story is told, by flashbacks, to a young man she meets casually in the garden of their apartment house. They find a mutual passion in their quest to break the barriers which hamper the possible Brotherhood of Man. It is an absorbing drama, showing how her fear, her hopelessness, gave way to her vision of a life's work. You follow her trials, the alienation of her parents, relatives, and friends, due to her determination to be self-sufficient. You are aware of the tragic aspects of her adjustment, as well as being impressed by her resourcefulness. It is a story really complete in itself.

But there is at the end a shocking revelation, adding a new pathetic variable to an already eloquent work. Her new-found friend crudely repulses a minor but personal advance. She never knows the reason; only the audience does. He is a Negro, and refuses to test her hard-won courage. If she failed in this severe test, all her plans would fail. He realized that there was a danger of overtaxing her; he knew well the price most people pay for social disapproval.

Mr. Schull has written a play in which he had something important to say; he says it in half the time it would take most people and at the same time he holds out attention and excites our imagination with dialogue which is forceful, mature, and always effectively adequate. No tear-jerking or embarrassing artificiality. And it is a radio play; its most stunning and stimulating aspect depended on no one's being aware of a main fact. No other medium could have done it. The acting was flawless.

Murray Pashler.

Open NFCUS Library For McGill Students

Montreal—(CUP)—Jan. 16. A new library, offering all-available information on N. F. C. U. S. will be opened on the McGill campus. Students, desirous of knowing just where NFCUS stands on various issues or wishing to check progress on national and local projects, will be able to get the last word from the new library. Among the literature offered is general history and background material, bulletins from national headquarters, newspaper clippings and projects such as student exchange, debating, federal aid brief, scholarship records summer travel and summer study. It is felt that the library will be more effective than the "spasmodic publicity" NFCUS has been receiving.

NOW WHERE WAS OUR CHAMPUS CAT?

The mouse must have been pretty flustered. He (or she) came skittering into the news office of The Varsity last night—just when the room was crowded with makeup personnel and reporters busily getting out today's paper.

Sports editor John Kennedy and movie reviewer Terry Jaeger took immediate steps to deal with the uninvited invader. Armed with ruler and heavy boots they pounded futilely in the general direction of the shelves near which the rodent disappeared.

The female members of the makeup staff withstood this invasion with unexpected phlegm—calmly giving directions as to whereabouts while sitting on top of the desks.

It is definitely asserted by reliable witnesses that the mouse was not shouting "Stop the Presses" as he came in the door. This suggestion was finally traced to the exuberant imagination of Feature Editor Herb Wood.

Audrey Tells All

"Oh excuse me, it's the telephone. What's that—Herb Wood, Feature Editor of The Varsity calling." Audrey called me to the phone.

Herb: "Cut the interview short and bring over a couple of sandwiches, the boys are starving over here."

Me: "But Herb I've got a lecture in five minutes."

Herb: "I'll send you back to the News Staff . . ."

Me: "No, anything but that. I'll be right over . . ."

Bye now.

VIC'S CORNER

The Victoria At-Home is biggest news this week, mainly because tickets go on sale today in Alumni Hall. The dance will be in Hart House, Jan. 27, 9 p.m.

The Assembly voted last week that "no corsages" be advertised. If ticket sales are above the number budgeted, and the surplus is sufficient, the social committee will have posies at the door.

The "Subscription" is $3.00. This gives you Hart House decorated by people (for a change), three orchestras (Niosi, Patton in miniature, and Jack Fowler, and access to "sitting cut rooms". (Grrrr . . .)

The Assembly's "no corsage" vote was almost close to unanimous. A fine step in the right direction. Of course, the unfortunate female that likes to make the flower look inferior may be displeased. But think of the millions of personable young girls who will thank the Assembly for removing the contrasting appendages!

And think of the ambitious young lads who can have an extra 60c to take that "other girl" out on Saturday night!

The invitations, those cards you received in the mail are merely reminders . . . invitations in the plainest sense of the word. The tickets themselves are much nicer and can be distinguished by the College Crest at the top. And they don't have the "subscription $3.00" at the bottom!

The year Executives did a fine job in helping mail the invites out . . . 1,750 of them. And the Bursar generously allowed us the use of the card lists for one noon-hour.

Residence Men will be interested in a Globe item of Jan. 12 re fire-escapes: "Harvard has made mandatory a requirement that freshmen living in non-fireproof dormitories report to the college gymnasium and lower themselves twice down a 12-foot rope to prove they can do it. . . . Each room above the second floor in the buildings affected is furnished with a coil of rope. In case of fire the students attach the rope to a special hook and lower themselves to the ground."

The Vic residences, after years of criticism, are installing rope ladders in the four "corner" rooms of each floor. At least that was the announcement made last term. Due to the added difficulty of a group descending a rope ladder in a hurry, it might be advisable to make similar regulations as they have in Harvard.

Victoria Dramatic Society meets with the U.C. Players' Guild tonight 8 p.m., Women's Union. The various dramatic clubs on the campus have been asked to contribute a one-act play. Vic is obliging with a comedy by John Maddison Morton, "Box and Cox".

The SCM, continuing its able program, will hold four "Commissions" again this week. Refer to last week's "Corner" for times and places.

The Thomson Impromptu Debates are in the semi-finals this Wed and Thurs. (one debate each day). It's getting very close competition very keen, and if there's a good topic they'll be worthwhile attending. Time is 1:30, R. 14 or 18 Vic.

The Scarlet and Gold needs a producer and director for next year. Applications will be received by VCU office and John Finlay.

Gathletics: Our wonderful girls, (referred to in the last lecture as the 8th Wonder of the World), did their usual stuff . . . coming from "behind" so to speak, to trounce PHE 2-1. (Starry goalie, Phoebe Templeton, missed the first shot at her, then settled down to do some fine net minding, while out front Barb Weatherhead scored twice).

Jeff also said to plug the badminton and volleyball. Get those games played off, but quick.

Mathletics: Sr. and Jr. Vic hockey teams have each won 2, lost 1, tied 1. Sr. Vic plays SPS on Thurs., 8 p.m., and Jr. plays Pre-Med Tues., 1 p.m. and Jr. SPS Friday, 4 p.m.

Snoopography: The man of "means", our treasurer is Rob Carruthers. He's No. 3 of four male blondes on the VCU Ex! (Lawson, Birkenshaw & Thomas the others.) Intolerance

"A Pharisee is a man who insists that all activity stop while he plays," runs the caption from a scene in Old Jerusalem, from the picture "Intolerance". It proves that the theme of the picture — shown Sunday, by the University of Toronto Film Society, in the Museum Theatre — is just as timely as when it was filmed.

Four epochs — Babylon, Old Jerusalem, pre-revolutionary France, and the U.S. during Prohibition — are woven together to give a startling realization of the never-ending battle of Intolerance and Hypocrisy against Love and Humanity.

"Intolerance" shows graphically the different masks of goodness the enemy has hidden under.

The scene flashes from one era to another so that all four unfold at the same rate. There is a common connecting theme of thwarted romance. Little people—their loves —their lives—and their liking for their fellow-men—crushed—not by 'fate' but by a movement for their "good" and variously titled "for the best good of all"; "for the public safety"; "in the name of God".

In Babylon, the High Priest of Baal prophesizes ruin when a new goddess, Ishtar (Goddess of Love) is brought into the city. Cyrus, a great Persian conqueror, attacks Babylon and is repulsed. Thanks and sacrifices are made to Ishtar. The High Priest of Baal betrays the city to Cyrus so that the people will realize the folly of the worship of Ishtar; the god, Baal, will be avenged — his priest will regain power.

Cyrus shouts, "Kill! Kill! Kill! For the Glory of God!" Babylon is razed.

In Jerusalem, a woman caught in adultery, is about to be stoned to death in the market-place, according to custom, when Jesus says unto them, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

In France, Catherine de Medici persuaded the French King to sign the order for the St. Bartholemew Day Massacre in the "Interests of Public Safety."

"If we don't destroy them, (Huguenots) they will destroy us."

In the U.S., a group of moral uplifters (female) enlist an industrialist's sister in their prohibition and cleanup campaign. The money comes from a 10 per cent wage cut of his employees.

"They cut our pay to obtain money to spend in gaining the reputation of 'Doing good'," says an irate worker unable to live on a small wage.

With money squeezed from the workers, the "uplifters" set up a kind of watch-and-ward society. They become a power in the community out of all proportion to their worth and support, and spread their idea of "good" like a blight. They exult in the cleanup they have accomplished, but ignore the greater evils they bring about.

"Intolerance" shows both sides. It points out the fact that all people have the same hopes and fears — the same feelings and desires.

It shows that there is no one "right." All ages, civilizations, leaders, and tyrants have hidden their actions or desires for power behind the cries—

"Is it for the Glory of God?" Re, Baal, Ishtar, or whatever — "This is how and what to do — to act otherwise is wrong! — "We are the best judges of what is for your good!"

We have with us ever the pain and destruction of war and massacres, the misery of persecutions, and the gloom and unhappiness spread by "moral uplifters".

Norm Sherman.

East Hall, the University College Library, will have Surrealist wall murals and a bandstand, for Bert Niosi's Octet, in the form of a modern artist's conception of a bar. "The East Hall decorations will provoke some curiosity as to the meaning behind modern art," Ruch said mysteriously.

The committee also is working on a scheme to control lighting by the sound of the orchestra. When the music is loud, the lights brighten. When it is soft, the lights dim. Draw your own conclusions.

In the Junior Common Room, with a background of chequered table cloths and candlelight, there will be cartoons depicting various "Thou shalt not ———!" themes.

Refreshments will be served in the Croft Chapter House, at the south-west corner of the college.

First Professor: Anyway, the thought of all these students at the other end of the pool splashing around, that managed to develop their own methods of swimming buoys me up. Of course, most of them are still making the same mistakes as have been made hundreds of times by people before them. But who knows what genius might develop a better stroke some day?

Original student by now has gone down for the third time to join the many other bodies on the bottom of the pool.

Movie Reviews

Holiday

One of the [illegible] Cary Grant pictures, Holiday, now playing in a double-bill at the Astor theatre, is a pleasant reflection of the Cinema style of the 30's. Hollywood might well take a long look at its more recent products and ponder on the progress they have made in movie-making in the last 15 years.

Holiday is by no means a great picture, it is just an average product, unpretentious, with spots of good acting and spots of bad. Its charm however lies in the fact that it is a very clever study of the question which most people ask of themselves at one time or another, "what price security?"

Cary Grant is a boy from the wrong side of the tracks who works hard and is well on the road to success. He meets a very wealthy young lady, and with the beaming approval of her father, they decide to become married. The fly in the ointment appears when neither the girl nor her father can see any object in life other than making as much money as possible and exhibiting their opulence to the 'right' people. Cary Grant finds it a little hard to stomach this, he can't get it out of his mind that perhaps there may be something else to live for, happiness for instance.

The great god of Wall Street strives mightily with Mr. Grant's "Un-American" idea of retiring when he is young, to think about things, and working when he is old, and knows what he is working for; Wall Street loses. Cast out by his ambitious fiancee and her tycoon father but still pure in soul, Mr. Grant finds balm for his broken heart on a trip to Europe with his ex-love's sister. Katherine Hepburn was excellent as the sister, spoofing her stuffed-shirt family and saying the things that Grant must have been thinking, but was too polite to say.

I enjoyed this picture very much. It had some philosophy behind it, yet it never labored the point, never became "a picture with a message". Made before Hollywood discovered that bad manners has a box office appeal, the scene where two people, obviously unused to society can't quite get their bearings at a very formal dance is handled with taste and much subtle humour. Such a scene in a movie of today fairly makes one squirm with the hero treading on dowager's dresses, or taking off his tight shoes, or tripping waiters, or just generally making an ass of himself. While parts of Holiday are frankly schmaltzy, all in all it is the kind of light humour that can be enjoyed without any mental strain, yet without the feeling that it was made for an audience of intelligent Chimpanzees.

One Night Of Love

One Night of Love, the second film on the Astor double bill is one of the first rehashings of the perennial conflict between love and art. The art was the singing of Grace Moore, cast as an opera singer, and the love was a rather unsatisfactory affair between Miss Moore and her singing teacher.

The blond young singer worked her way into the best opera houses of Europe, and finally with Rome, Paris, Vienna, London, et al at her feet she was given a chance at that holy of holies, the Metropolitan in New York. Her singing teacher who probably had an American grandmother informed her that in spite of having reached the pinnacle of success in Europe, she had still a lot to learn before appearing before the discerning audiences in the New World.

Suspecting the motives of her boy friend with a certain lecherous brunette, the heartbroken singer flew off to New York. Here much against the better advice of her former singing teacher, Miss Moore accepted an engagement at the Met. She couldn't quite seem to follow the American timing — the rehearsals were very unsatisfactory — and a very worried singer was all set to make a big rhubarb of her opening night. All was not yet lost however, for suddenly, dramatically, in the nick of time, her true love arrived. Coaching his pupil through a triumphant program, the singing teacher mouthed the words "I love you", while she, with tears of adoration in her eyes sank to her knees and gazed at him in speechless eloquence. It was a touching scene.

As a vehicle for Miss Moore's singing "One Night of Love" is a good picture. The plot is rather trivial, but it is not missed. One of the opening scenes, the poor singing student in her garret in Rome, overestimates the number of musicians who can be seen at one time practicing in one apartment block, but it turns out that they are just there to accompany Miss Moore when she leans over her balcony to sing, and everything is all right. One cannot but admire the singlemindedness of the director who goes to such heroic lengths to set up one casual scene.

ported an increase, since it would help get a Student Union.

In opposition to this, Sybil Gangbar, II Pass, said, "I don't think there's any grounds for an increase, since there is a larger enrollment than in pre-war days. Also they have increased our fees indirectly by charging us for football tickets and for Torontonensis."

Backing her up was John Carson, I Soc & Phil, who explained his position in these words: "I think that the fees have proved sufficient in past years, and I think that if rising costs and changing needs require more funds, better administration would possibly solve the problem."

ing the present system of legal education in Ontario.

Briefly, these are the various parties' reasons for not wishing to take part in the debate:

Give Reasons

The CCF Club felt it did not have enough time to prepare for a large part in the debate. They agreed quickly to take part.

The Liberals believed they could not find an issue suitable for Speaker Davies' ruling to avoid controversial provincial political issues.

The LPP Club Education Director, Norm Endicott, said his Club could not find enough speakers willing to speak in such a prominent place and risk being "labled Communist" and "thus lay themselves open" to future discrimination.

The Progressive Conservative Club felt it was not prepared to take a major part in a debate and did not wish to destroy their chance to form the Government with the Liberals in opposition. (If accepted the Opposition this Thursday, the Liberals would have to relinquish their turn as Opposition.)

However, they managed to score five goals against Montreal after a rough game with McGill the night before, so they must be a force to be reckoned with.

able for the AA execs. This would hinder the efficient operation of athletic program, with the result that everybody loses.

But then again, it does not seem that an action of the University authorities flatly refusing to give out information about a corporation of which every student is a member is exactly compatible with democratic principle.

The best idea, we think, would be for the AA to get permission from the Board to publish a general statement of revenue, and a little more than general statement of expenditure. In this way, the SAC would be satisfied, and the detrimental aspects of the statement would be side-stepped. Most certainly, if the Board curtly refuses, there will be an out-cry from the student body with all the attendant discussions and screams about the student's right to democussions and screams about the student's right to democracy in the school.

In spite of all the valiant efforts of the SAC and individual students, we are afraid that no financial data on the UTAA will be let out. In fact, we are as certain of this as we are of to-morrow's sunrise.

Determined Ski Fans Running Indoor Meet

Although ski meets are being cancelled right and left because of lack of snow, there is absolutely nothing to affect the Ski Dance that takes place in the JCR today from 4:00-6:00.

Last minute arrangements have been completed and the club executive are hoping that all interested in skiing will be there for the program they have planned definitely compensates for the "No Skiing" sign hanging outside the various centres of that sport.

Alec Campbell, along with his accordion and noted ski songs, is to be master of ceremonies. A little time will be devoted to getting to know Alec and his ditties so that the busses going up to the ski grounds will ring with the posh verses from Collingwood.

Besides dancing to the latest of tunes, served up by a PA man from Vic, a ski equipment display of all the latest boots, skiis, poles, harness and clothes will be shown. Stew Graham, a specialist in this line, is hoping to get up and explain just how things should be done to gain the maximum safety and enjoyment from skiing.

An admission of twenty cents is the cost and the proceeds are going towards re-allocating the old club house in a more advantageous spot for all those concerned

Sports Editor,
The Varsity:

In regard to Mr. Dnieper's splendid idea for raising funds while providing additional recreation, we feel he has not gone quite far enough. In expanding his position might we suggest the installation of coin amusement machines—i.e. one-armed bandits. As we have learned from sporting associates (now wintering in Florida) these machines, while providing innocent fun, also provide a lucrative contribution for any worthy cause. Our suggestion will bring 90% returns, far exceeding Mr. Dnieper's conservative 50% profit on beer sales. We are informed that these devices may be set for any return depending on the need of the proprietors.

If our idea proves as acceptable to the students as it has to the general public, it could be carried even farther to the extent of licensing hand books and renting the craps concession at Athletic Nights.

B & W Society To Run Dance

The Blue and White Society is once again this year sponsoring post hockey game dances at the Drill Hall. At the Blues' second local league appearance this Friday with the Golden Gaels from Queen's, the Society will sell tickets for the dance. The Drill Hall informal will not be the usual run of the mill dance but a super-special Square Dance running until 1 a.m. "Just another service for the students" Modestly said Paul Break, publicity director of the society.

A top notch band of square dance musicians will render the music and a superlative caller has been obtained, Break said. He stressed that the nominal sum charged for tickets (.15 single, .25 per couple) did not nearly meet the costs of these post game dances and that the deficit was made up out of the Blue and White society surplus, accrued in the fall.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

At the last meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, the Council passed a motion requesting the making public of certain information regarding the University of Toronto Athletic Association. More particularly, the information requested was the Financial Statement of the AA. We don't think the University authorities will make that statement public.

The University of Toronto Act of 1947 provides that "The Committee (SAC) shall have the right to make communications through the President of the University to the Board upon any subject in which they are or may deem themselves to be interested." The Council feel that the students want to know how much money the AA received and how much it spent where. And since the SAC is the organ of the students' complaints they have taken tangible steps to alleviate this particular complaint, which action is, in principle, commendable. The students, members of the AA, should certainly know where their three bucks a year are going.

However, there are certain other considerations that must be taken into account before this action of the SAC can be viewed clearly and completely. The University, by law has control over its own students, notwithstanding other provisions of the UT Act, and they do not have to obey any request by the students' representative body. If this request for publication of an AA financial statement is conceded it would bring out some delicate questions. As for instance the tax question. Varsity Stadium does not now pay a city tax, and there is considerable opposition to the situation on the part of some members of the city council. If a complete financial statement is forthcoming, the council (city) may get ideas. In this case it would seem advisable to let sleeping dogs lie.

Another aspect is this——a detailed account of AA expenditures would state the sums spent on each individual sport and each individual group. It is possible, in fact, almost certain, that groups who have had smaller allotment will begin to shout "discrimination", and make life unbear

Varsity Hockey Seniors Win Another Exhibition

By MAL CRAWFORD

Apparently not satisfied with the opposition they got from Swansea, Friday, the Blues yesterday took on Eclipses of the OHA loop, beating them 5-3. Varsity showed a big edge in speed, and missed the post on several scoring opportunities by only a few inches. Eclipses were pretty short on condition, as their season has just started. They're a sort of an ex-football team, with Blair Jarvis, who scored two goals, having played end for Beaches this year, and the Dunlap Brothers, Jake and Frank, who play football for Argos. Paul Hutz is in goal, and was league-leading goalie for Varsity last year. Gord Ecclestone is another ex-blue on the team.

Rich Howson's line, with Pete Vernon on his left wing and Wilf Digby on the right, has been going brilliantly since Howson was put in. They scored six goals Friday, and three of the five yesterday. Richie seems to be able to get through anywhere, in spite of the fact that he almost has to get his face right down on top of the puck to see the thing. He doesn't seem to be going terribly fast; he just keeps pumping his legs, and worms his way through — especially along the boards. "Wally" Campbell has shown more speed, and was really flying on a couple of rushes.

Senior Boxing Starts Wed.

Well fellows, this is it; that Senior Interfaculty Boxing Tournament is here again. The weigh-in takes place today between 12:00 and 2:00, and 4:00 and 5:30. The prelims start tomorrow, and finish Friday, between 4:30 and 6:00. The finals will constitute the feature attraction of the Athletic Night, Saturday next. All Intercollegiate title holders are eligible.

At last boxing and wrestling have met the roads of separation. Formerly these sports, around the university, were spoken of in the same breath. Intramural, and intercollegiate competitions in these sports, always saw them held together, even alternating in the same ring, which proved a great nuisance, in changing mats, etc. Intercollegiate trophies used to be awarded for the sports combined. This year, the Intramural Wrestling is over already, and the Intercollegiate competitions will be held at different locations.

This, actually, is a good thing for both sports; it gives them individual distinction. After all these sports have little in common, apart from the fact that they take place on a mat, and are individualistic efforts. Otherwise, they resemble as closely as basketball, and chinese checkers, played on a gym floor. The science of each is completely different. What is more, there are very few rabid boxing fans who like to see a boxing program interrupted for wrestling, and vice versa. Both sports are marvellous conditioners, and worthy of being considered separately.

Intermed Sextet Face UWO Colts Here Tomorrow

That happy band of warriors, the Varsity intermediates hockey team will be on view at the local arena at 4:30 p.m. to-morrow in their first league home game. At that time they will meet the Western Colts, as rough a bunch of hombres that ever came out of the wilds of Western Ontarion on skates.

As probably everyone knows Varsity have won the championship for the last four consecutive years, and do not seem at all weakened this term as evidenced by their 13-2 conquest of Waterloo last week. Such stars as Gary Carl, Al Conboy, Wally London, Bill Paterson and Pat McLoughlin will be seen in the line-up. These boys play a thrilling brand of hockey and deserve a large turn-out.

Sportswoman

Every so often there is a slip-up in the rules and Miss Parkes, who is well-versed on all that concerns women athletes, would like to make it clear that regulations do not permit a girl to compete on two team sports at the same time.

This means that if a girl is playing volleyball she is ineligible for hockey, or vice versa. Not only is this true of intramural sports, but also intercollegiate ones, with the result that last year because Betsy McFaul was on the basketball team, she had to forfeit a well-earned place on the ski team.

Hockey

Mary Macpherson gained her first shut-out in the Arena yesterday on PHE I's 7-0 win over St. Hilda I.

Early in the first period Jane Thompson, stick-handled from her own blue line to score the first goal, and minutes later scored again from a face-off.

PHE carried the balance of play in the second period too, with Nancy Cannon and Irma Bullock each gaining a point. It was the only period in which there were no penalties.

In the third period, Alma Hatch picked up a loose puck to make the score 5-0. The sixth goal was scored by Ann Sharpe, who stick-handled around the defence beautifully, and the game ended when Hatch scored her second tally on a break-away.

PHE outplayed the Saints all the way, with eighteen shots on goalie Marg Martin. St. Hilda's had only seven shots at the net, but also only one penalty, whereas PHE took three.

Women's Basketball On A-Night Agenda

With one A-Night hardly over, it's time to start thinking about getting tickets for another gala affair next week. With the Blues on the road, meeting Western in their first league game, the senior intramural boxing finals will hold the spotlight. These finals will be the consummation of the tournament that is running for the rest of the week starting tomorrow.

Just for novelty in the basketball field two women's teams will put on an exhibition in the upper gym. That ought to be good for laffs, oops, instruction. For the football minded the films of the Grey Cup final will be shown in the fencing room. To round out the evening the junior interfaculty swimming meet will be run off.

Interfaculty Sport

By JOHN KENNEDY

Junior UC and junior SPS put on one of the best major league basketball games of the embryo season yesterday, battling all the way before UC came out on top of a 31-27 score. The Skulemen were driving at the end of the game and threatened to change the picture but superior ball ragging by the UC'ers plus a basket by diminutive Danny Glick put the game away. Scott played good ball for the engineers hooping 10 points to lead all scorers.

Line-ups:—

UC: Morris 6, Young 5, Glick 7, Garside 3, Sadoff, Thompson, Smith, Margulies, Anco, Nefsky 4, Kuzmochka 6, Tanz. Total—31.

SPS: Clark, Allan, Klesitz 7, Corin 2, Hayman, Seawright 3, Leibowitz, Dobey 5, Scott 10, Atkinson. Total—27.

In the only other scheduled major leaguer, UC fourths scraped by Vic fourths 25-21. Vic pressed right up until the final whistle, Williams leading the scoring parade with 10 large points. Hewak and Tyndall paced the winners with six apiece.

Line-ups:—

UC IV: Cohl 2, Sukmanowski 4, Shields, Hewak 6, Smith 2, Lipman, Philip, Tyndall 6, Goberis, Pearlstein 5. Total—25.

Vic IV: Chambers, Ridout 5, Lowery 4, Philpott 4, Henderson, Tate, James, Williams 8, Montgomery. Total—21.

The minor league saw two one-sided victories for Meds fifths and Vic fourteenths. The Medsmen rolled to a 24-8 victory led by Harry Basian with 10. Moyer counted 8 for the Vicsters.

Vic fourteenths overwhelmed Music quintet 37-9. Big George Miller ran wild hooping 18 points closely followed by teammate Moyer with 15. Baker of Music got eight out of the nine musicians' points.

On the ice lanes UC team won two more games, SPS fifths last the thirds 5-2 while St. Mike's trimmed the fourths 4-1. Jeffs with two led the Skulemen and was helped by Murakamie, McIlvray and Austin. Wallace got both UC goals. McIntyre paced the Mikemen in the two in the 4 p.m. encounter, Richesne and Coles contributing one apiece. Yates was the lone scorer.

The water polo schedule started yesterday and UC thirds won their first game from SPS II by a close count. Johnny Flowers rapped in two counters and Catto notched the other. Hagrima and Strutt countered for the Skulemen.

UC Registrar Gives Guild Drama Award

An annual award to the player who contributes the most to University College Players' Guild activities has been established by Professor W. J. McAndrew, UC registrar.

Originally meant only for those members who had planned to continue in Canadian theatre after graduation, the award has been changed in its terms. This because of (a) the current "nebulous" state of the Canadian theatre, and (b) the wording might limit the choice to final year students.

Award Idea Followed Play

The idea of the award came to Professor McAndrew after seeing a UC Players' Guild Wednesday Workshop production in which Chris Taylor played Pierrot in "Maker of Dreams," the Players' Guild spokesman says.

Commenting on the Players' Guild, Professor McAndrew said, "The work these people are doing is significant in the theatre. To whatever community they go after graduation they will contribute to the culture. If this award is an arrow pointing to a better day in our university theatrical activities, then I am more than pleased."

At the end of the regular year's program of the Players' Guild, the executive will draw up a list of its members eligible for the award. From this list, Professor McAndrew will make the final decision.

To Be Presented In March

Presentation of the award will be made by Professor McAndrew at the last general meeting of the Players' Guild early in March.

Guild President Donald Davis said he believed this award establishes a precedent among campus drama groups. "An award of this type might be the stimulus needed to create a definite active interest in the professional theatre. Our thanks to Professor McAndrew cannot be too strongly expressed," he said.

SOCIAL NOTE

The Varsity will hold a party on Saturday, January 21. A quiet, secluded spot, the kind required for the subdued intellectual discussion that invariably develops at Varsity parties, has been found.

A nasty rumour that Pink Lemonade will be served at the party has been emphatically denied by the Editor.

Staff members are reminded that there are lists to sign in the office.

Not That Way, Stupid!

Just one big happy family? There seems to be a little domestic discord in this moment from the famous Molnar comedy THE GUARDSMAN. Seen here are Audrey Lowrie, James Turnbull, Donald Glen and Robin Taylor in a somewhat heated discussion of the proper way to pack a trunk. Under Robert Gill's direction, the play opens a week's run on Saturday, Jan. 21.

New Series Of Lectures To Interpret East Europe

The Department of Slavic Studies has announced a new series of seven lectures, the first to be held today at five o'clock, Room 8, University College.

"The series is designed to give more expression to East European countries, other than Russia," Professor Shore, Director of Slavic Studies here, stated. "Most of the lectures deal with the modern period, and from several points of view. For example, the lecture today will be on Soviet Relations with the Church. Later on the more recent development in Hungarian culture will be discussed. Still later the two Shakespeares of Poland and Russia will be compared."

Prominent Speakers

On January 25, Prof. E. J. Simmons, Chairman of the Department of Slavic Languages, Columbia University will speak on the problems of control in Soviet literature. He is the greatest authority in Slavic Studies on this continent and has visited the USSR half a dozen times. Professor V. Nabokov of Cornell University will lecture on February 1 on the Triumphs and Tribulations of Russian Writers. He is well-known to the Canadian public through his many articles in the New Yorker.

Russia and the Balkan Slavs will be the topic of Prof. A. Lobanov-Rostovsky of the University of Michigan who, besides being a professor, is also a prince. He comes from a very old Czarist family.

Literary And Cultural

Other future lecture topics will be Czech Literary Developments under the Republic and the Cultural Achievements of Hungary between the World Wars.

In the last lecture of the series on March 1, Prof. M. Karpovich of Harvard University, will speak on two national poets of Poland and Russia, Mickiewicz and Pushkin.

Today's speaker, Prof. M. Spinka of Hartford Theological Seminary, will lecture on The New Soviet Religious Policy Since 1939.

War Responsibility Is Not Engineer's Declares Southwell

Engineers cannot take any responsibility for the past wars or possible future ones, since they are not responsible for the use of their works by the remainder of mankind, declared Sir Richard Southwell in the third Wallberg lecture delivered in Convocation Hall last night. "The Engineer," he said, "is not concerned with ultimate values."

Must Develop Personality

Among his "several inches" of accomplishments, Sir Richard numbers many achievements in the field of engineering education, including a great deal of thought concerning the relations between the engineer and the community in which he lives.

The student must be given time to develop that personality and philosophy of life which will enable him to benefit himself and his fellow man to the greatest degree, Sir Richard believes. He must develop that sense of values without which an engineer is not an engineer, and with which his works will tend toward peace by producing material security for all peoples.

Material security itself, the product of the engineer, cannot be relied upon to maintain the peace of the world if "security" implies faith in armed might, he said. It is the good will of mankind, not the work of engineers, which only can save us from a cataclysm more devastating than ever known.

Takes Home Limited View

Sir Richard here and in many other places differed from his predecessors in the Wallberg series by taking a more limited view of the engineer as a savior of mankind, placing him on the level of the musician or artist who labours to produce only because it is his work, and therefore cannot help himself. The nature of engineering work is construction, however, and only a doctor will appreciate how much this attitude abhors the destruction of war, he said.

Other aspects of the engineering training in which Sir Richard has turned new furrows are the relations between the student and the curriculum and the university organization and the utilizers of research. The increasing depth and scope of scientific knowledge make complete absorption of it all by students impossible, thus making the planner's problem one of paring rather than accumulating.

Political Clubs Are Now Legal On UNB Campus

Fredericton, Jan. 17 — (CUP) — Political clubs, which have been banned for several years on the U. of New Brunswick campus, are finally to be permitted. Recognition has been granted on the understanding that all party lines would be sacrificed to a common political interest. This has resulted in the three major parties being fused to form one party.

Retain Federal Affiliations

The common purpose uniting the three clubs at present is to have political discussions, model parliaments and off-campus speakers on the campus. Members of political clubs, in joining the new joint party, are not required to sacrifice federal political affiliations.

The acceptance of the new group was achieved only after furious debate in the students' council. This controversy has carried on over the last three years. A little less than a year ago the Canadian Commonwealth University Federation bid for recognition was turned down by a slim majority in council.

"Probably the most obvious reason for the establishment of political clubs is the demand", according to the New Brunswickian. This "demand" is calculated to be greater than at any other Canadian university, possibly because the clubs have not been legal on the campus.

Andrew Brewin, CCF Provincial President, who will speak to the UC Unit of the CCF Club today at one p.m. in room four of U.C. on "the CCF and Civil Liberties." One of Canada's leading legal counsellors, Mr. Brewin has acted in numerous civil rights cases, and has also been several times a CCF candidate in St. Paul's riding, in which the University is located. He is speaking to one of three CCF meetings to be held on the Campus today.

Islam Must Be Revaluated Baha'i Student Group Told

"If world unity is to be achieved then it is absolutely necessary that we learn to understand and appreciate the culture and religion of other peoples," stated Marian Woodman, guest speaker at an open meeting of the Baha'i Student Group Monday in University College.

"For 1400 years the Christian world has opposed itself to Islam and what we know of Muhammed stems mainly from the prejudiced accounts of Christian missionaries," she pointed out. "It is now imperative that we should revaluate the religion of Muhammed and its contribution to the world."

The speaker stated that a prophet may be defined as a Divine Physician who comes to a sick society and prescribes through his laws and teachings the remedy on both an individual and social basis. "In this respect no one who contrasts the condition of the Arabs before the advent of Muhammed with the culture of Islam in the centuries that followed could deny that Muhammed was a prophet," she said.

Two Aspects

In evaluating the teachings of Muhammed in relation to the teachings of Christ it is important to recognize that there are two aspects to the teachings of a Prophet. Each prophet teaches the eternal truths of the oneness of God, the oneness of humanity, the love of God for man, and the love of man for God and his neighbor. At Mecca, Muhammed taught these eternal spiritual truths," she said.

"But, in addition," she pointed

Lack Of Control Bankruptcy Faced By Alberta Union

Edmonton, Jan. 17—(CUP)—Student union finances are at a critical stage at the University of Alberta. In a report issued by the Treasurer of the Union it was pointed out that the utmost care must be taken for the remainder of the year or bankruptcy would ensue. "Students have to begin to realize that student unions are not big money", said the Treasurer in explaining the possible deficit. Lack of research and analysis in the preparation of the annual club budgets, dearth of internal control of expenditures, and the want of definition of responsibility were blamed for the present state of finances.

Federal Program Of CCF Party To Be Debated

The CCF Club, who will form the government at the Mock Parliament this Thursday have decided to present for debate the program which the CCF would introduce if they were elected to the Federal House, CCF Club officials said last night.

A Governor-General will be appointed to read the speech from the throne, which will outline CCF policy. The debate will be on points raised in the throne speech, and the final vote will be one of confidence, or no confidence, in the government's program.

Points to be raised in the throne speech include: social security, health, housing, education and the arts, a national labour code, agriculture, socialization, the control of investment, international trade and international affairs.

Because of a ruling of the Speaker of the Provincial assembly which does not allow the Mock Parliament to debate controversial provincial issues in the provincial Legislative Chambers, housing will not be debated by the CCF or by the official opposition, the progressive-Conservative Club

Exchange Plans With US College To Be Discussed

Florida sunshine, Washington ski trails, and a lot of real scholastic work await the Varsity students who participate in the NFCUS exchange plan with American universities next year. Students entering the third year of an honor course or the second year of a pass course may be considered for the exchange.

A meeting of those interested will be held in room 4, Trinity College tomorrow at one P.M. An explanation of the exchange scheme will be given them and calendars from many of the participating American universities will be on hand.

A Varsity student may take the exchange if he can match the courses of his penultimate year with the courses of the particular school which he wishes to attend and if his application is approved by his faculty. Students will pay fees and tuition at their own universities for their exchange partners.

Many of the better American universities and colleges are in the plan at present, among them: Bryn Mawr, U. of Illinois, U. of Miami, U. of Pennsylvania, Stamford, U. of Texas, and U. of Washington.

Parental Delinquency

That form of popular literature known as the Crime Comic has seemed repellent to us after some careful examination of various examples of the breed last summer. The Crime Comic reproduces pictorially the lurid deeds of infamous criminals with loving detail that seems obscene. The fact that the narratives are accompanied by attendant moralizing of "Spirits of Good" are only shallow camouflage to back up the Crime Does Not Pay motif which is negated in almost every panel.

Feeling that the Crime Comic is putrid stuff, the recently-approved Fulton Bill to curb this type of comic book seems like a fine measure in its intent. But on careful weighing of the implications of this measure of government censorship, we have less happy conclusions.

One thought is that if the control of comic books is to be in the hands of the authorities, there may be some danger of injudicious interpretation of the conditions of the Act.

A more serious conclusion is that this ban on Crime Comics is a definite inroad by the government on the freedom of the citizen. In a small way, we are being told what we can and cannot read. When the recently-disclosed arbitrary actions of customs censorship of books entering Canada are considered, the implications may be alarming. This is a question of how much trust can be put into the law-making authorities to act with discretion and understanding.

A third and very dismal thought is that if the government must act as guardian of the morals of the juvenile and the adolescent, parental control and responsibility is falling down on the job. Advocates of the "welfare state" will probably greatly favor the idea that the government must act as the Big Father to the nation's children.

But no one should be able to consider this parental delinquency without shame.

Movie Review

Whirlpool

"Whirlpool" (University, Eglinton) terms itself "the stunning successor to 'Laura'," but the connection is very dim. Gene Tierney is again the heroine suspected of murder and certain scenes have tried to recapture the twilight suspense of "Laura" by repeating its most suggestive set — that in which the murdered woman's portrait and presence hover in the background of a stylish living-room while the knots of the crime begin to come loose. This time, instead of a haunting theme song the sound-track plays a psychiatrist's recital of the victim's hysterical recital of fear, and the symbol of the broken machinery is again the fade-out. The script-writers probably thought that these superficial repeats would make another "Laura"; what they have got is a far cry from that superior little melodrama of a few years back.

With some generally uninspired direction and embarrassingly phoney dialogue, even a good story would have a time of it. This story is about a woman who loves her husband so much she pays a hypnotist fifty dollars a day to hypnotize her because she's a kleptomaniac. But we're just beginning. The hypnotist really hypnotizes her into being fall-girl for a murder, (I won't bother going into who got murdered and why) while he has his gall-bladder removed by way of an alibi. So that's three strikes and this movie is out.

Richard Conte has been substituted for Dana Andrews in the category of rock-jawed investigator in love with his suspect. As a psychiatrist he has all the professional savoir-faire of a gangster. Miss Tierney seemed understandably worried about the whole thing. Jose Ferrer replaces Clifton Webb, whose fans probably wouldn't accept him as a villain now; Mr. Ferrer on the other hand may never be accepted as anything else. As a hypnotist he was so convincing that I felt quite drowsy when he finished hypnotising Miss Tierney. Whatever success the picture has is due to him, and fortunately he is in it a large part of the time.

As for the title, it probably refers to the heroine's state of mind, but it might refer to the state of the plot. I think that inasmuch as Mr. Ferrer spends the last ten minutes of the film bleeding to death a more apt title would have been "Hemorrhage.", out, "the prophet also gives social laws which are required for humanity at a specific time in its evolution. These laws are not eternal; on the contrary they are constantly changing as the conditions of life on this planet change."

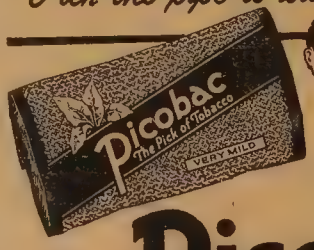
"The Christian people have condemned Muhammed for his social teaching because they feel that they are inferior to those of Christ. In reality, however, they were laws dealing with aspects of life that Christ never mentions." The speaker spoke of the laws concerning treaties, defensive warfare, alcoholic beverages.



"Christ came to a decadent but essentially sophisticated world. His teachings, in a sense, freed the spirit of man from its bondage to that world. Muhammed, on the contrary, came to a very primitive nomadic people. He, unlike Christ, gave them a whole set of social laws to govern Islam, and became, because of the exigencies of the time, their temporal as well as spiritual ruler," she stated.

"To understand the mission of Muhammed we must understand the particular tasks with which he was confronted in primitive Arabia. We must also understand that the eternal truths taught by Christ were also taught by Muhammed. Indeed to be a Moslem one must accept Christ and His teachings," she concluded.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

The early scholars of King's College will remember J. Oppenheim Paphoovnik as somewhat of a curmudgeon. True he was a literary genius but that never excused his wastrel powder room tendency of using two when one would do.

It was J. O. P. who first established the principle of clear, thought - provoking editorials which is still in evidence today. The editorial which appeared in the Christmas issue of 1880 will go down in the archives as an editorial.

"Never in the history of an Institution has there been such a crisis. Those who do not believe will find themselves without, and those who do, will. We must face the issues or digress and let the chips fall where they may. Are we scholars or are we slobs? Is the yellow ribbon we so proudly wear in our hair a symbol, or is it merely to hold down our heads? Does life offer naught but bitter tea and humble pie, and lay on McDuff."

That momentous editorial later became the grounds for a heated S.A.C. debate resulting in the expulsion of J.O.P., although all members were not in agreement; some wished to tar and feather him while others wished to ham-string him. He was finally ejected for his misuse of a comma and a colon.

"Why shouldn't the girls have a referee training system similar to the mere males?" Betty asks ingenuously. "All they need is training. Of course, it's a heck of a job for anyone to tackle and I guess there lies the problem."

Breakfast Flight To Leave Sunday —If Weather Fair

Warden Ignatieff, of Hart House will be the guest of the Flying Club on its breakfast flight to Hamilton next Sunday morning. About thirty members of the Club and their friends will fly from the Island Airport in ten aircraft. The aircraft regularly flown by the Club members will be supplemented by aircraft from Oshawa, Barker Airfield, and Malton airport.

"This will be the largest mass flight by the flying club in its four years of operation," said the Club's Chief Flying Instructor Ron Drinkwater, "and because of a shortage of aircraft we will be unable to take all those who wish to go."

The flight to Hamilton will cover the forty miles each way in about 25 minutes leaving the Island Airport at 8:30 and returning between 10:30 and 11:00. According to Club officials the only worry in the whole plan, "Operation Hamilton", is the weather, the last consecutive thirteen Sundays, except Xmas Day, having been dull and wet!

HH Radio Club To Hear Talk On Electronics

G. J. R. MacLusky of the Chalk River Atomic Energy Project will be guest speaker at the Hart House Amateur Radio Club open meeting on Thursday, January 19, at 8 p.m., in the Hart House Debates Room.

Electronic techniques applied to research in nuclear physics will be the topic of Mr. MacLusky's address. Dean K. F. Tupper of SPS will introduce the speaker.

Mr. MacLusky's visit marks the inauguration of a policy of bringing to the club outside speakers and demonstrations which, it is hoped, will be of interest to operating and unlicensed Radio Amateurs alike. It follows a similar program which was a feature of the Ajax club during the past three years.

As in the past, these meetings are open to all Hart House members.

During the past week there has been quite a to-do, not to say controversy as to whether men or women make the better referees for gals' hockey. Last year as you probably all know, the officiating was left strictly up to the girls, and in many cases the results were "quite painful" to behold.

However this year the girls behind the girls decided to improve the brand of whistle tooting and as a first step went to see Pat McLoughlin, head referee for the men's intramural leagues. Pat obliged and arranged for the officials. After the first game or so under the new system, the men found themselves being criticised just as much as the girls had been. We have heard from two of our staff writers about this problem. Says Jackie Heffron, III St. Mike's:

"I am glad to hear that the boys are tightening up on the refereeing end of the girls' hockey games. They are really able to do a better job than the girls but in the first few games of the schedule they fell rather short of expectations. Last year a few girls suffered serious injuries and it was to prevent further injuries this year that the boys were brought in to referee."

In Thursday's Meds-PHE game there was a great deal of rough play which became worse as the game progressed, for the players and fans took the attitude that the referee would not call a penalty. It is understandable that the refs cannot call everything but rough play must be called or some serious injury may result.

Since Thursday's game the referees have checked up considerably on roughing and tripping. I hope this will continue and then more fun will be had by all.

Betty Aston, II Vic had a few suggestions to offer. Said Betty, "I had a bit of a conflab with Bill Allen, the ref in yesterday's game and this is what he said, in effect: Pat McLoughlin and the intra mural office run a school for refs for all sports; they take applications from any boy who wants to volunteer, and said boy takes a course in the sport he wants to ref; he has to try exams before he is qualified to ref, but he is paid for his services on the ice, floor or wherever it happens to be."

Betty went on to say that "A girl's game is different altogether to referee than a man's mainly because of the rule about body checking."

"There were two girl officials at each game last year, whereas it takes only one boy. Bill himself thinks the girls could do just as good a job, if not better than men in a girl's game and as for not being able to skate fast enough, she

YMHA Defeats Varsity: McManus Leaves Game

By BRUCE MacDONALD

Blues Drop Tilt, Internal Strife Causes Outburst

The Senior basketball Blues dropped a 31-27 decision to the YMHA Seniors when they met last night in Hart House for an exhibition tilt. The few spectators that lined the track along the sides of the main gym were treated to anything but an exhibition of good basketball.

The YMHA squad regarded the whole thing as a caper, but coach Masterson, probably losing a little sleep these nights at the thought of meeting Western next Friday and the three 6'6" players that they have on their team, seemed downright worried about everything in general.

Strained Relations

In fact, Masterson was so annoyed at a few of the weak spots in the Blue defenses that he precipitated a little bad feeling and also hot words between himself and the Varsity players that resulted in Johny McManus refusing to play any longer. Not to be outdone by this slight on his judgement, Masterson promptly ordered John to pack his bag and hit the trail for the shower room.

Just what the eventual outcome of the little tiff will be it is hard to say, but it would be unfortunate if anything should happen to prevent McManus from giving his best effort for the Blues. Johnny has been the outstanding Blue player so far this season, scoring 35 points in the last two games alone. He is not only a tower of strength in the scoring department, but his playmaking ability is actually his most valuable asset to the Blues.

McManus

Johnny McManus, a native of Winnipeg has played an outstanding role in Senior basketball for three years. He is at present in the third year of the P.H.E. course. His summers are spent playing semi-pro hardball in the Manitoba league.

However, Johnny was not the only one that seemed to be a bit at odds with coach Masterson. The whole team regarded the game more as a chore than as a game in which to enjoy themselves a little. The Blues don't seem to be able to get the ball into scoring position before the opposition had a defence completely set up and every man well checked. Perhaps if they can get their family troubles straightened out in time they will be able to devote their attention to such trivial matters as basketball games.

The game as a whole showed little effective teamwork on the part of either squad, with occasional flashes on the part of individual players accounting for most of the scoring. In the final stanza, Miley and Himel of YMHA got together for a bit of playmaking and succeeded in scoring 4 and 14 points respectively to lead the pack in scoring. Leading Blue scorers were Judd Gibbs with 6 and Ted Luck with 8 points.

Alec Lawson of Blue football fame was out with the Blues in their game last night. Probably another candidate drafted in Masterson's search for a tall man to strengthen the Blues in the rebound department.

Lineups:

YMHA — Himel (16), Miley (4), Justice (2), Zigelstein, Mendelson, Layefsky, Goldstein (4), Speisman (5).

Varsity — Gray (2), McManus (2), Braithwaite (2), Bell (2), Gibbs (6), Luck (8), Huycke (2), Wigle, Lawson (2), Henderson (1), Carruthers.

The indoor track artists had their second meet of the term yesterday in Hart House, running off the 600 yard open and the 50 yard dash (open). In the short distance all the competitors posted good times from 5.8 to 6.0 in the first heat and a second heat was forced. Bruce Miles, UC, topped the sprinters with a rapid 5.8 and was closely followed by Bill Davis also of UC. Johnny Hryshko, Gary Garossino, St. Mike's and Frankie Kieczor of Pre Dents all knotted for the third place.

In the 600 yard grind Hryshko displayed his versatility by grabbing a second spot following Murray Gaziuk PHE, to the wire. Winning time 1:18.0. Earl Fee, SPS, placed third with 1:20.

PHE first regained a bit of the form that carried them to the basketball championship last season, as they whipped SPS thirds 29-14. Hadlow, Keegan and Housley all snared five points to pace the winners. Their excellent team play permitted every member of the team to get at least one point.

Line-ups:—

PHE: Strom 1, Gayman 2, Keegan 5, Carr 4, Housley 5, Heath 4, Furlong 1, West 2. Total—29.

SPS III: Austen 5, Rubino, Blackwood 1, Nagata, Lafontaine 3, McFayden, Richardson, McCagherty 1, Tarasick 2, Rootham 2. Total—14.

The Emmanuel major leaguers had to go all out to edge PHE thirds 27-24. Sloan led the theologs with 11 while Elliott was tops for the Phizz Edders with 8.

Line-ups:—

Emm: McLellan, Read 3, Shaw 6, Johnston 5, Sloan 11, Pentland 2, Muir. Total—27.

PHE III: Fisher 6, Rosebrough 3, Kennedy, Washer 2, Haist 2, Barnhill, Higenell 3, Elliott 8. Total—24.

On the minor league front Civil fourths steam-rolled over PHE Tigers 29-19. Neilson with 8 was top scorer of the game while Kelly and Davis with 6 were the chief swishers for PHE.

Dents first year had no difficulty whatever in trampling Vic tenths 32-12 in another minor league affair. Schatz and Hemmerich swished 7 and 6 for the dentists with McGuire throwing in 6 for the scarlet and gold.

Second Mechanical mushed the Huskies by a 24-13 count. Orrell tossed in 8 to lead the winners while Lee managed 7 for the Huskies.

The ice set-to betwixt junior Vic and PreMed proved a thriller for the large noon hour crowd. Vic came out on top of a 3-2 score but the docs had them worried in the second period when they rapped home two important counters. Longo & McDougall scored for Meds while Doner, Henderson and Murray flashed the bulb for Vic.

LIBERALS "PLAYED POLITICS"

Grads In West To Hear Talks By President

A report on the University of Toronto will be given to many of the 100,000 University of Toronto graduates who live in Western Canada, by Dr. Sidney Smith, University President, who will leave next week for a visit to what he calls "Varsity's western share-holders."

Many Toronto graduates will meet for the first time the man who has been president of the University since 1945. He will report to them on their Alma Mater's expansion during the post-war years, the current building and academic program, and plans for the immediate future. An integral part of those plans is the University's reorganized Alumni Association which has increased its membership by 50 per cent in the course of the last year.

A particularly warm welcome is assured the president when he visits Winnipeg, where he spent ten years as president of the University of Manitoba. The president will also be the honour guest at Alumni Association functions in Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Alberta.

Racial Discrimination Increasing In Canada

Racial discrimination is growing steadily worse right under our noses, in Canada, Mr. R. C. A. Clark, who is speaking at Knox College tonight on "Racial Discrimination In Canada," said in an interview last night. Mr. Clark related how he spent several years in Europe before the beginning of the last war, and had seen the continent grow into a state of war. In 1938, he was made a prisoner of the Gestapo where he spent six years. He explained that seeing innocent and respected people being sent to the slaughter houses, many of whom were his friends, made him burn. He returned to Canada determined to carry on a fight against racial intolerance.

Mr. Clark is active in the Association of Civil Liberites, and the Canadian Council for Christians and Jews. He is a particularly ardent campaigner for the Fair Employment Practices Act. University students, he feels, should use their reasoning power to realize and find answers for racial discrimination.

'Only Asked For Clarification' Of Speaker Davies' Ruling Party Head Bradley Retorts

By DON STEVENSON

The UTDU Mock Parliament Committee Chairman, Dave Quigley last night charged the University of Toronto Liberal Association has used "as a political football" the recent ruling of Ontario Legislature Speaker Davies that the debate in the Legislative Chambers today must not deal with controversial Ontario political issues.

The Liberal Association have issued a statement published in The Varsity today, to clarify their views. Liberal Association President Henry Bradley last night also made statements to give the Association's version of what has happened, to be presented with Quigley's description. He said the Liberals could not act as Government when they disagree with the principle of the Speaker's ruling.

Says No Cooperation

Mock Parliament Committee Chairman Quigley said: "We feel the Liberals are not playing ball with the UTDU. The Committee got the use of the Chamber and were willing to accept the conditions of Speaker Davies.

"The Liberals had not got the Chamber and they had not the right to go over the head of the Committee. They have thus endangered future use of the Chamber.

"The Committee apologized for the Liberals because they are members of the Committee and their action might be confused with action of the Committee."

Liberal leader Bradley said his group does not feel they can be rigidly bound by the Mock Parliament Committee's decisions. It was necessary for them to decide whether they could act as Government in the debate under the restrictions of the Speaker's ruling.

Sought Clarification

They had not gone over the Committee's head but had merely sought clarification of the Speaker's ruling. "We are abiding by the ruling since we are going to take part in the debate (as minor opposition party)," Bradley declared. "We disagree with the soundness of the Speaker's ruling, but we are not disputing his right to make it."

Mock Parliament Committee Chairman Quigley said permission to use the Legislative Chamber for two UTDU-sponsored debates was got by John Medcof, acting as representative of the Committee. Medcof is the Liberal representative on the Committee.

The Committee had agreed the Liberals should form the Government and the CCF the Official Opposition. Medcof had come to the next Committee meeting with five suggested Government bills for debate. One had been the Charitable Gifts and it had been rejected by the Committee after CCF representative Joe Casse had said his party could not oppose such a bill. The Committee had finally agreed with Liberal representative John Medcof that the debate should be on Health Insurance.

Party Decides

The Liberal Association in a party meeting had rejected Health Insurance and decided only Charitable Gifts Act would be suitable.

(Liberal leader Bradley said last night his party decided they could not debate any social security bill, since they have done that so often before.)

Mock Parliament Committee Chairman Quigley last night then described a meeting of himself, five Liberals and CCF rep Joe Casse.

Ed. Note: The following statement was submitted to The Varsity by the Liberal Association committee appointed to contact the Speaker of the Ontario Legislature regarding his ruling on debate topics for the UTDU Mock Parliament. The Committee was composed of campus Liberal president Henry Bradley, Donald Inch and Jim Service.

Reports in The Varsity have been rather misleading and we feel that it is time the Liberal Association's position be made clear. The Association did not resign solely because they were not allowed to bring in a bill concerning the Charitable Gifts Act.

We do not feel that the UTDU Mock Parliament Committee has any right to apologize for something done by another body. Further, there has been nothing done necessitating an apology. The Liberal Association merely sought a clarification of the Speaker's ruling and at no time misrepresented themselves at the Mock Parliament committee.

No wonder the speaker was confused when the chairman of the UTDU sent a representative of the Mock Parliament committee to secure the Legislative Chamber for the Mock Parliament and ALSO FOR ANOTHER SEPARATE BODY. The appeasement policy of the committee has been initiated for the purpose of assisting the other body in the securing of the Chamber for a non-political debate.

The Liberal government resigned because: (1) Speaker ruled the debate must be on "more or less non-political issues." (2) Speaker ruled out all provincial issues excepting legal education and health insurance.

The Liberal Association feels (1) the essence of any Mock Parliament is the debating of some controversial issue and if this condition is ruled out, the Mock Parliament is non-existent.

(2) The ruling of the Speaker on provincial issues was arbitrary and contrary to freedom of speech; arbitrary because the restrictions imposed by the Speaker were not imposed until one week after arrangements for the Legislative Chamber had been made; contrary to freedom of speech because both legal education and health insur-

Hart House Sing Songs

Seeking A Musical Heir

By ED RASKY

Nothing looks more insignificant than an empty piano stool. The piano is there; the sheet music is there; but there is certainly something missing. That something can bring life, cheerful music and singing faces to a dismal quiet room. That stool almost became empty this year because of an incident that happened last summer.

It was one of those hot sultry evenings and Jim decided to see his sister. He had the night off and didn't have to be back till the following day. They chatted over an ice cold cup of tea and before they knew it, it was almost twelve. His sister persuaded him to stay overnight and to go back to his ship in the morning. The rest of the story strikes a familiar note. The morning papers ran the following black headline—"NORONIC BURNS IN TORONTO HARBOUR."

Luck Was With Him

"Boy, that was a close one," he said. Jim Johnson, who fills the empty piano stool twice a week at the Hart House sing-songs was the Cruise Director aboard the Noronic. This job was a combination of master of ceremonies, pianist for nightly sing songs, and supervising the entertainment. He knew most of the crew but didn't get to know very many of the passengers for the cruise had just begun. "I sure am glad I stayed at my sister's that night", he said happily.

Jim who also attends lecture at the university ahs been the pianist for Sing Songs for the last five years. Jim's voice swelled with enthusiasm when he said, "I sure get a big kick out of it." When he first started taking lessons at the Toronto Conservatory of Music he had classical music in mind. But he found he could do modern music much better so he changed accordingly. Originally the sing song was only once a week but with a greater demand it was changed to twice a week.

Likes Sing Songs

Of course he is not alone. There is Ross Workman who is famous for his finger shadow on the screen. Ross has been leader of the Hart House Sing Songs for the past twenty five years. There is also Pat McClory who operates the lantern slides. Helping arrange social functions in Hart House keeps him busy but he looks forward to the Sing Songs. Pat likes them because they're so informal—anybody that can open his mouth and let out a sound may attend.

They all agreed that the Sing Song Room should be larger and suggested using the Hart House Theatre. There was a lot of talk about it when the Student Memorial Union was in the news but gradually died out they explained. There is also the tradition of the house to contend with.

Students Favor Operettas

When asked what the favourite songs were, Johnson replied: "Stephen Foster's numbers always seem to make a great hit with the boys. The trend seems to be changing—they seem to like light operetta music and things like the 'On the Road to Mandalay'. The hit of the season is the Rowia, Bowia number—which they never seem to get tired of."

Jim Johnson, who is taking post graduate work in English will be leaving at the end of the year. His great ambition is to teach English and Music and we wish him the best of luck—but that empty piano stool must be filled next year. If anyone is interested in playing the piano at the Sing Songs please contact Pat McClory at the Comptroller's office. All the students who attended the Sing Songs are going to miss a great guy and a great piano player.

Dust Throwing

The U. of T. Liberal Association seems to have been fairly successful lately in throwing dust into everybody's eyes. Having thus blinded the mob, who must therefore be guided by hearing, the young Liberals set up a great hue and cry against their victim, which the crowd followed and echoed. Even the august and Conservative Globe and Mail was blinded, and editorially censured Speaker Davies of the Provincial Legislature.

The details and chain of events behind the whole Mock Parliament affair are quite complicated, and more than one principle is involved. If it were only a case of a Progressive-Conservative attempting to protect his party from possible embarrassment by suppressing the young Liberals' right of free speech, the Liberals would have our sympathy and support. Indeed, we condemn most forcibly the anti-democratic tendency implicit in the Speaker's action. But to condemn the Conservatives is not to absolve the Liberals. Whether or not the Liberals wanted to be suppressed so that they could yell "Help! We are being unjustly trodden upon!" may not be conclusively proved, but the facts indicate that such is the case.

Some little knowledge of the workings of the Mock Parliament is necessary to understand what went on behind the scenes. Each of the four political clubs on the campus has its turn at being the Government, and also at being the Opposition. The Government submits a number of resolutions for debate to the Mock Parliament Committee, which chooses one of the resolutions submitted, and informs the Opposition of its choice. If the Opposition agrees with the resolution and so cannot in conscience debate the subject, or does not wish for other reasons to accept the topic, it notifies the Committee and another resolution which is acceptable for debate by both parties is chosen. This is purely routine. It is the way the Mock Parliament operates.

In tonight's Mock Parliament debate the Liberals were to have been the Government, and the CCF was to have been the Opposition. The Liberal representative brought five resolutions to the Mock Parliament Committee, of which one was chosen. The resolution concerning the Charitable Gifts Act was one of the five proposed by the Liberals, but was not the one chosen by the Mock Parliament Committee. It chose one that the Liberals submitted—on Housing. Even if the Committee had sent the Charitable Gifts Act resolution to the Opposition, it would have been refused because the CCF takes a stand very much like that of the Liberals on the subject, and the CCF would have had no grounds for debating the question. In the meantime the UTDU, of which the Mock Parliament forms a part, secured the use of the Provincial Parliament Chambers for the debate from Speaker Davies. No mention was made at this time of any restrictions.

A little later the Liberals held a meeting and decided that they wanted to debate the Charitable Gifts Act resolution and no other. Before they communicated this intention to the Mock Parliament Committee, the Committee received word from Speaker Davies that it was not the policy of the Provincial Government to allow debates on subjects which were being currently debated in the House. The Committee had no objection to this restriction, because it had already decided that the topic should be on Housing, which is at present a Federal issue. When the Liberals came to the Committee and said that they would only debate the Charitable Gifts Act, the Committee told the Liberals again that that particular topic was definitely out. The Liberals asked what would happen if they sent a delegation to Speaker Davies asking permission to debate this topic. The Committee opposed this suggestion forcefully. The Liberals went ahead anyway. When Speaker Davies denied them the permission which they requested, they withdrew and refused to be the Government on the ground that their rights of free speech were being infringed upon. During this campaign most of the publicity releases on the Mock Parliament were issued from the Liberal Association, not through the Mock Parliament Committee. In addition to this, a Councillor of the U. of T. Liberal Association was the correspondent to the Globe and Mail and it was through him that that newspaper was informed, or misinformed, as the case may be, of the events leading up to and following the withdrawal of the Liberals from the Mock Parliament debate.

We think no more need be said. The facts speak for themselves.

No Guts?

Editor, The Varsity:

What's the matter with our Mock Parliament? I mean, after all, Sir, are we students to take an attempt at gagging us lying down?

If the government of this province is so terrified of 'controversial' issues, why did they offer us the use of the legislative chambers? Students with their long and honorable tradition for speaking out when governments pass unpopular laws disagree themselves with the meek apology offered Speaker Davies by the UTDU. Is it not rather the Honourable Gentleman who owes us an apology for this high-handed and dictatorial procedure?

Student Apathy? Just another symptom of a bunch of sheep totally lacking the least vestige of guts.

Ed. Note:

During the summer of 1949, the Canadian International Student Service (ISS) was held in Southern Holland at Kasteel Bouvigne. It was an opportunity for Canadian and European students to study together.

The Varsity has carried previously accounts from some of the Canadian students who attended the Seminar. Here is a letter from one of the German students at the Seminar. The writer is a medical student from Hamburg.

Editor, The Varsity:

Last August I had the opportunity to meet some Canadian students on the occasion of the Second Canadian Seminar. I will try to give some of my impressions.

You cannot compare a Canadian with a German student, because each of them has an environment and history of his own, and each is entirely different. It is therefore useless to make value judgments. Such a comparison would only result in getting a better knowledge of yourself and in realizing your own characteristics. Meeting with foreigners makes you aware of things you didn't know before. The first thing which becomes evident after a few weeks' stay abroad, is your affection for your native town, your home and your country. You learn to love them in another way.

On the first evening of my stay at the Seminar, I got the impres-

Canadian Students Can Take No Credit For NFCUS' IUS Stand

(This is the eighth in a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of the International Union of Students. The ninth article in the series will be carried in The Varsity tomorrow.)

By JACK GRAY

As the situation now stands between the National Federation of Canadian University Students and the International Union of Students, NFCUS is not a member of IUS, and has taken no steps to become a member. This is the culmination of three years investigation of the IUS, much of it fraught with misunderstanding, and most of it not prompted with a sufficient desire on the part of Canadian students to really take part in the international student world.

Canadians Not Alone

It would not, however, be fair to say that Canadian students have been alone in their decision to stay out of the IUS nor that the full blame for not taking positive, intelligent action with regard to IUS should fall on the shoulders of NFCUS. The thinking of the western nation student unions has been much the same on this matter, and they are almost all non-members of the IUS.

Grant Livingstone, whose activity for NFCUS was sincere and well done as he understood the situation, went to the IUS as an idealist, seeking co-operation and convinced that the 1948 meeting of the IUS Council was an important one, with an issue before it that he called "the foremost . . . facing the present world today."

In an article written in Hamilton, Ont., on July 25, 1948, he said:

Main Issue In IUS

"That issue is whether democracy and communism can find a 'modus vivendi' by which they can live together in peace without either one continually threatening the other's existence and whether, while living in separate security, men of both systems can work together for necessary and desirable common aims without their common effort being disrupted or sterilized by ideological differences and mutual fear."

The fact that the western nation students have allowed the communist students of the world, who form a large block of the world's present student population, to gain control of what is ostensibly a "world" student organization does not stand to our credit.

Students, Livingstone thought when he wrote that article in Hamilton over two years ago, are a special class. "If one world is not possible on the student level," he wrote, "then assuredly it is not on the political level."

Recognizing the split in the world's political forces, Livingstone saw in the IUS a possibility to test whether "service to common, non-political human causes" on the student level was feasible in the IUS. He felt that power-politics were the cause of failure in many international ventures.

Student Idealists

"Although it is a much abused and trite observation, it is nonetheless true that students tend to be idealists; they tend to think more in terms of right or wrong, than do politicians and administrators who perforce think in terms of practical vs. impractical, and who are therefore more conservative and less liable to show the 'courage of their convictions.'

". . . This is not to say that students are either impractical or completely divorced from considerations of their national interests. But it is to claim that students are more likely to subordinate these considerations to moral and ideological considerations than are other 'classes' (perhaps excepting scientists, teachers and theologians, who are only professional students at that). That is why on the one hand students have played leading roles in all the great movements of history and on the other why the communists, fascists and other pseudo-popular movements have been so anxious to gain and demonstrate the support of students in their causes. For the Cominform to have the IUS organized in this role would be of great value to its objectives. . . ."

"NFCUS Should Enter IUS"

In Paris in September, 1948, Livingstone saw the communists in action, and was considerably disillusioned by his experience there. But he still felt we should enter the IUS. In his interim report on the 1948 Council meeting in Paris he said: "I believe NFCUS must and should undertake a political function in the international world. . . . Humanity today is afflicted with two overwhelming fears — (1) the fear of communist control and (2) the fear of war. The only way we can meet these two fears and reassert our confidence and faith in democracy and peace is to show our willingness to stand up and work for both."

In that interim report (which he later changed his mind about, for reasons which remain obscure), Livingstone advocated a strong NFCUS, a "positive, progressive, Christian approach to international democracy and the rejection of the authority and denunciation of the methods and propaganda of communists in the IUS."

Although there may have been "frustration, failure, defeat, regret, humiliation and confusion" in Paris, nevertheless a broad, strong proposal had come out of it. It is not to the credit of NFCUS or the Canadian students it represents that they rejected the opportunity to enter the IUS and actively fight for what they maintain they believe, in order that they might get on to the business of building a realistic world student community in which it would be possible to "work together for necessary and desirable common aims."

Find "Relaxation Methods" Nothing But Mathematics

By BOB ROOKS

We were abruptly disillusioned yesterday evening when we attended Sir Richard Southwell's lecture in the Mechanical Building on his "Relaxation Methods". Apparently "Relaxation" has nothing to do with "wine, women and song" but is a highly skilled method of solving complex mathematical equations.

It is essentially a trial and error method giving answers to a degree of accuracy which is more than sufficient for the engineer's requirements, while saving much of the time and labour involved in purely mathematical methods of solution.

Sir Richard emphasised, however, that experience was necessary in using his method.

He showed that even a solution reduced on a basis of pure mathematics alone could not hope to be absolutely accurate, since the measurement of weights and forces from which the original equation was formulated could never be perfectly exact.

Examination papers in which examiners stated weights as 4 tons or 8 tons evidenced remarkable inspirational powers on their part, Sir Richard said, comparable to that of Moses when he tabulated the 10 commandments. The striking difference between the commandments and the exam papers is the absence of a footnote to the former: "Candidates should not attempt more than seven of the above".

Fight For Freedom, Workers' Rights Says Party Leader

The extinction of workers' rights in Fascist Germany and Communist Russia has greatly accentuated the CCF's emphasis on civil liberties, said Andrew Brewin, Ontario CCF Provincial President, at a meeting of the UC unit of that party yesterday.

To Fight For Liberty

"The CCF has and will fight for the extension and preservation of civil liberties as well as for economic planning," he said, "since both are essential to the party's aims."

Mr. Brewin described the Socialists as standing mid-way between the two bodies of opinion: the conservatives and the radicals. The conservatives declaimed against changing the economic organization of the country, because it would mean a loss of personal freedom. The radicals, on the other hand, felt that we must temporarily abandon these civil liberties (which, they say, are only hypocritical notions of the capitalists anyway), and subject ourselves to dictatorship until the economy has progressed to the proper stage of development.

Must Have Progressive Economy

The CCF maintains that you can't reject or maintain civil liberties unless you have a progressive economy, but if individual liberty is sacrificed for economic security, that economic security is likely to be lost.

At the Vienna Conference of 1948, he pointed out, a resolution pledged the Socialist parties of the world to oppose a one-party state and to support individual freedom.

The conservative bodies discussed these liberties in an abstract fashion; but it had always been the CCF which received the most enthusiasm when a struggle developed. This was because one of the basic CCF principles was individual liberty.

Socialism May Curtail

Mr. Brewin admitted that certain aspects of socialism might curtail some of the civil liberties, but not the traditional liberties of the Bill of Rights. The socialists had to be careful not to minimize the value of free consumer choice, and also to maintain freedom in the choice of jobs.

It was a good idea to have a Bill of Rights to define civil liberties. First reason for this was to educate the people in the liberties which are guaranteed them only by tradition under the present situation, and therefore can be easily whittled away.

The second advantage of a written Bill of Rights was as a check for use in the courts, to be used in cases infringing the freedom of the individual.

Caledon Farm Under Way Begin Operation Saturday

The first meeting of the club formed in conjunction with the Caledon Hills Farm property was held in Hart House yesterday. Matters connected with the operation of the club were discussed and a constitution adopted.

Staff adviser to the club, Mr. R. H. Perry outlined recent developments to the property, and said he expected the farm would be open for its first week-end on Jan. 21. Since this is the first week-end the farm will be in operation only members of the club will go to the property. They will be in a position to care for any unforeseen difficulties in week-end operation.

Those eligible for membership will include all undergrads who are members of Hart House, graduate members of Hart House and members of the faculty of the University.

Limited Accommodation

Owing to the limited overnight accommodation (about 26 at present), all members intending to use the club must signify their intention by signing the reserve sheet before Thursday noon of the week-end they intend to visit the club. Reservations will be on a first come, first served basis. The reserve sheet will be in Room B, Hart House.

The main house at the farm has been completely wired, and electricity will be brought to the property in about three weeks. The small frame house will be completely wired before the hydro is brought in.

Gals Join, Too

Membership fees in the club will run from $1.50 for undergrad members of Hart House, $2.50 for undergrads not members of Hart House, and $3.00 for graduate and faculty members. The memberships, which will normally run from September to June, will be valid until September, 1950.

Exposition of Theories Behind Co-op Movement Is Study Group's Aim

A study group is being formed for those students who are interested in the co-operative movement or in becoming members of the co-op. Robert Hirst, Director of Education, has announced. Speakers, discussions and movies are being planned for the series of programmes, the object of which will be to expose the theories behind the co-op. movement.

"This is the first time in many years that a study group of this kind has been formed on the co-op. An application form has been printed in to-day's Varsity which interested parties are asked to fill out," Hirst explained.

The co-op. runs three houses on the campus, two for men and one for women with a mutual dining room serving 65 people. The houses are completely student managed and have a set room and board fee, surpluses from which are turned back equally to the students. The co-op system has proved a great boon to students, Hirst added.

Canada's Neglect of Universities

Probably most Canadians are not aware that opportunities for the higher education of their children are less generous now than five years ago. Yet Dr. F. Cyril James makes this fact clear in his annual report as principal of McGill University. He points out that the attendance at a university costs the student much more than formerly —twice as much as in 1939, according to one estimate. Though enrolments have risen, expansion of educational facilities has not kept pace. Dr. James described the circumstances as, "a national problem which all Canadians must face." To solve it, a greater proportion of the national income must be spent on higher education.

The problem is a national one because the universities serve all Canada. They and their graduates are expecting to contribute increasingly to the expansion of Canada's research activities, industry, trade, and social welfare. Britain has recognized the importance of universities in its struggle for post-war recovery and a brighter future. Its grants to these institutions have been large, and public funds are aiding 70 per cent of their students.

Since the war, average university expenditure per student has increased 33 per cent in Britain and 22 per cent in the United States. But in Canada it has dropped 16 per cent.

The case of McGill is constructive. Academic admission requirements have been raised, the proportion of veterans in attendance has dropped. Yet an enrolment figure that was 3,429 in 1939-40 is now a record-breaking 8,240. For three sessions McGill has resorted to deficit financing to cope with this overcrowding and develop several scientific projects of importance to all Canada. But as Dr. James says, to continue this policy would be suicidal.

Only 5 per cent of McGill's income is derived from government grants. All universities are faced with the need for greater public assistance. A responsibility rests upon the federal government to help solve this national problem.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Corot

J. B. C. Carot, 1796-1875, was one of a group of French landscape painters known as the Barbison School. A careful selections of Carot's works taken from the best of the American collections, is hanging in the Art Gallery of Toronto for January and February. Corot spent his entire life in painting what ever he desired, in only one style of painting, the silvery Landscapes has Corot's artistic integrity been questioned. It is maintained that he painted these highly popular, romantic pictures, of which "The Lake at the Ville D'Avary" is an excellent example, in order to make money to help his destitute fellow painters.

No one would question Corot's greatness, but it is much more difficult to put one's finger on the key to that greatness. The genius of Corot seems, to me, to lie in his easy relations with his subjects. No effect is ever strained. Not one picture looks hurried or badly conceived. Corot's colours are limpid and strong.

When painting a landscape, Corot never allows himself to be tempted down the path leading to an idealized, pastoral countryside, but keeps his eye firmly fixed on his chosen scene. Corot has a clear eye for the necessary detail, he discarded all else. He handles his landscape subjects, with such respect, as in such pictures as "The Bridge of Nerni" or "The Inn of Montigny - Les - Cormeilles", that nature seems to be active in his support.

Corot's uncanny control over his subjects is best shown in his handling of his figure studies. The subjects for the most part were very common people, who happened to be hagning around when Corot wanted to paint a picture. But his eye is sharp enough to cut through the commonness and to lay bare the individuality. Such studies as "Old man in Corot's Studio", and "La Blonde Gasconne" well show this peculiar and pleasing ability.

The Speaker suggested to the Liberal Association the discussion of (1) nationalization of railways—we have never advocated this.

(2) Health insurance—in one manner or other the Liberal Association has proposed health insurance for the past three years.

Further, the Liberal Association has been and intends to continue concentrating on provincial issues this year.

Under these conditions the Liberal Association could not assume the position of government.

Mid-Century Highlights

Anton le Clair

or

The Aesthete With Two Left Feet

The most widely covered campus event of 1931 was the visit of Anton le Clair, principal of Sorebaum Academy of Classical and Interpretive Dancing.

On a beautiful April afternoon, before the lilac banked entrance to Tiffany Hall, a turquoise limousine drew up. A lackey in lime livery held open the car door and from its boudoir-rose velvet interior Monsieur Le Clair descended, resplendent in his flowing mauve chemise, contrasting ascot of burnt orange, pink tights and bronzed ballerina slippers. Ah it was such a day! Having executed several intricate Pirouettes, he daintily ejected his Fatima from its three-foot long, water-cooled and sandle wood holder and stepped into the hall, his ringlets wafting their exotic scent behind him. The Master was welcomed by Mrs. Agatha Van Cleeve, alumni of St. Clarissas' and past-president of the Bloor Street Bird watchers, who assumed a slightly imperfect second having previously consummated a perfect fifth.

Moniseur le Clair's first performance, as reported by The Varsity was to consist of interludes from Debussy's "Afternoon of a Fun" but wasn't much. The audience was also treated to a spirited Charaltan, a shoddy Schottische, a tempestuous Tarantella, a bemused beguine, a taciturn tango, a meticulous minuet, a hot gavotte and a revolting rhumba.

The highlight of the program was the Master's own interpretation of "The Birth of a Two-Headed Moose", complete with sound effects. At the climax of the panel, Monsieur Le Clair executed a faultless arabesque ending in a supine position not unlike that of a ruptured mongoose.

We note with regret that the afternoon performance ended disastrously when the Master was distracted for the nonce by a group of engineers on their way to the squash courts, and inadvertently backed into a ventilator. The Master was in due time ejected from the steeple outlet and so disseminated culture and purple shmog about the campus.

Movie Review

Madness of The Heart

Seldom has a movie started out with as many strikes against it as "Madness of the Heart" and yet lived to tell the tale, if you'll excuse the hashed metaphors. In the first place it is saddled with a foolish title. Secondly its dialogue is packed full of cliches and aphorisms. At first I optimistically believed this was super-realism instilled by a writer who knew that normal people really talk that way. (Not that there are many normal people involved in this one.) I gave this over-estimate up when the cliches started appearing in the plot, which has more than the average number of ins and outs. Here you can see nearly all of them coming, but they're still interesting.

The movie begins with an organ-playing novitiate nun being called to see the Mother Superior. Walking as if she's afraid her veil will fall off, she comes to a door and waits outside. There's nothing like a quiet sit in the cloister to bring on a flashback, as any smart director knows, so here we go. We find out she was a doctor's secretary who fell in love with a Frenchman, went blind on a bus, and fled to the convent where she was brought up. The Mother Superior sends her back to society where, through the handwork of her doctor-boss-Cupid, she is reunited with her Frenchman who promptly whisks her off to his aristocratic family's sunny Provencal estate, which is teeming with sinister characters who want to get rid of our Lydia — the father, the jealous girl-friend and her helper, the smiling sleepy-eyed butler.

There are high French doors to fall out of and treacherous currents to swim into but Lydia survives these and various other inconveniences to go through The Operation and finally return to trick her tormentors into confession. Is that all? Now don't get excited! One isn't such a bad sort after all and the two homicidal types meet their prescribed bloody end.

This movie is billed as "Margaret Lockwood's Best Since 'The Wicked Lady'," and Margaret is much better as a nice girl than a bad one. In fact in this picture she really acts. Paul Dupuis giggles nervously from time to time as if he realized his lines put him behind the 8-Ball. Stealing top honours from Miss Lockwood, however, is Kathleen Byron, as the jealous would-be-murderess. She and director Charles Bennett keep the goings-on tense enough to justify this movie's production.

NEW USE FOR R.A. IODINE FIRST TIME IN CANADA

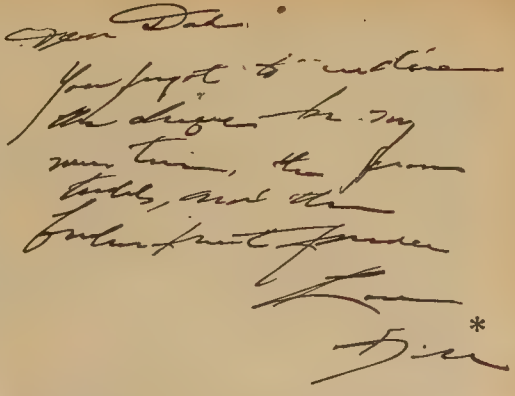
Distaff Side

By Margot Murray and Anne Burton

Making conversation under any circumstances is an art in itself. The only time that its easy is at a cocktail party (or under similar circumstances) when the way has been well oiled (if you'll pardon the expression). Normally, however, making conversation is a strain, even on the most talkative of talkative talkers. The gift of gab, far from being a women's prerogative (as is commonly believed by fifty percent of the population) is actually a gift from the Gods. Frankly, we're usually stumped.

Conversation at afternoon teas requires very special talent. It involves both chatting with and about your acquaintances, yet also urbanely passing the time of day with people you've never seen before. Most ghastly of all conversational experiences is being button holed in a corner by someone who knows you and your complete life history, but whose name you just can't quite recall. Her face may even look familiar but where did you meet her?

The best tea-going types are those who have just had a dreadful, dreadful experience which they enthusiastically describe ("and would you believe it? I had 56 stitches!"). 'Conversation pieces' also make wonderful topics of conversation: some people delight in wearing huge plumed hats and peek-a-boo necklines, giving themselves and the whole room something to talk about. Others are content to appear with unmatching earrings or with shaved heads or else tattooed (like the Lady in the song).



A dance is a different situation and requires a different technique. Talking to the superior male demands an intuitive knowledge of when to talk romantically about the soft music in the midst of his explanation of steam engines, and when to say "please explain it again! I'm so dumb about engines," when the soft music begins to occupy his mind!

We knew a girl once who before the dance made out a list of possible topics of conversation to bolster up lagging moments. She used to tuck the list in her dress, and when the lapses came, was always able to come up with some bright quip: "Isn't it thrilling that the Toronto Maple Leafs are in fifth place?" she would query; or "Did you hear that Mr. Abbott is going to reduce taxes by 15 billion dollars next year?"

We can't wholeheartedly recommend this method of making conversation though. You see, the last time she tried it, someone spilt coffee down her front. The ink ran and she was at sea, literally and figuratively all evening.

Fortunately, lady luck has been on our side this winter. If you can't think of anything else without being trite, you can always talk about the weather.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Wed. 5 O'Clock

Soloist on yesterday's concert in the Royal Conservatory's Wednesday Five O'clock series was Toronto's talented harpsichordist, Greta Kraus. Ettore Mazzoleni conducted the eleven piece Conservatory string orchestra. An audience of about 200 listeners packed the small concert hall, many being forced to stand at the back.

The program consisted of works of three early eighteenth century composers, Schiassi, Rameau, and Bach.

The feature work was Bach's Concerto in E major. The work is a picture of one of Bach's more cheerful moments; though it lacks the profundity of Bach's more famous works, its tender melodies are pleasing if not lastingly impressive. This, of course, is the ideal modicum for the gracefulness that the harpsichord is most renowned for, and Miss Kraus' even technique in bringing this out was outstanding in the mind of the listener. The soloist was most effective in taking the melody in the gayer Allegro movements (the first and last) and similar parts of the second movement, but seemed incongruous trying to supply background chording in this movement while the orchestra took the main part. The orchestra, or perhaps rather the orchestration, did not seem to have all the balance desirable in the parts of the movement in which it accompanied the harpsichord.

The other work in which Miss Kraus participated was Jean-Philippe Rameau's Concerto in G major. It is a representative of the dignified levity of the French court music of which Rameau was one of the most memorable writers. Particularly in the graceful second movement (La Boucan), there is a refreshing calmness about it.

The opening work was solely orchestral, a Pastoral Symphony in D major by Schiassi, one of Spain's contributions to eighteenth century court music. It is written in Concerto Gross form, the orchestra taking the two parts instead of the later soloist-and-orchestra combination.

Miss Kraus is one of the two or three proficient harpsichordists in Canada, and is well known to radio audiences across Canada.

Ettore Mazzoleni's subdued style of conducting seemed well in keeping with the music played.

R. Ellsasser

When I reviewed Mr. Ellsasser in a recital here a year ago, I recall that my review took more the form of a eulogy than a criticism, containing such descriptive terms as "phenomenal . . . exceptional . . . wizardry". After hearing and seeing this young American organist perform at Eaton Auditorium last night before a large audience, I remain perfectly convinced that these words were no understatement, and also that concert-goers are going to hear a lot more of one of America's greatest contributions to the organ concert.

To begin his recital Mr. Ellsasser chose Joseph Bonnet's famous Concert Variations, a pleasantly brilliant composition obviously designed to reveal the versatility of a large organ. As a welcome relief to its crashing coda, The Fifer of Dandrieu came skipping lightly into the air and just as lightly skipped away.

Possibly the greatest source of interest on the program was Mr. Ellsasser's rendering of Bach's magnificent Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor, a much-maligned work whose performance never fails to evoke a series of good and bad afterthoughts in the listener. Although technically well mastered, perhaps the artist took a little too many liberties with the Fantasie, subjecting it to exaggerated vacillations in tempo and registration. With the Fugue he chose to sacrifice both taste and tone for a break-neck speed which too often undermines the thought behind a work of this sort.

Karg-Elert's Soul of the Lake is one of those compositions that paints a picture, but Mr. Ellsasser went a step further and brought it to life. Yes, the birds and animals and the gentle lapping of the waves on the shore of Lake Constance in Switzerland, even the details of the storm, were all seen and heard in this astounding number. Of his own compositions, Mr. Ellsasser played his Concert Study in D Minor (over 3,000 pedal notes in three minutes!), and, as one of his encores, a comic piece written early last year. Also as an encore he played "with" Bela Bartok's In the Boat, a highly unusual composition portraying the confused vomitings of the composer.

But never did Mr. Ellsasser forsake clarity, no matter what the speed or the piece; in this respect the effluent Andante of Karl Stamitz and the mad, rushing Rondo in G of John Bull were common. If I should criticize him to any degree, I should say that he tends too frequently to be visible rather than audible. Yet he seems justified in dramatic execution, for one might expect as much from an artist of such extremely cultured calibre.

Assisting Mr. Ellsasser were the Earle Terry Singers of London, conducted by Mr. Terry. Consisting of about 30 girls, the choir seemed to sing best in unison when they were clearest, as in Handel's "Come Unto Him", for too often it suffered from the noticeable flattening in tone of the second altos. But under the steady direction of Mr. Terry, they soon gained the general favour of the audience.

For the benefit of those interested, Mr. Ellsasser will again present a recital this evening at 8:15 on the organ of Grace Church-on-the-Hill, Toronto.

sion that the Canadian students thought themselves to be something special. I disliked this attitude very much. Now I know it was my fault. I guess this impression is due to the Canadian mentality, which I didn't understand at first. They were frank in their discussions, and when I interrupted a conversation in order to probe some question or other, it always annoyed them. I often felt like pondering about a new aspect of the problem which turned up in the course of our conversation. For the Canadian this was a sign of trying to change the subject, because he thought I didn't care to speak about it any more.

This was not only a misunderstanding; I think it is entangled with another observation I made. It is rather hard, I believe, for a Canadian student not to find a reason and a conclusion for every difficult problem, even where a conclusion is impossible. This is especially true in the case of philosophic subjects. He tries to have "facts and more facts"—that is to say figures, which often really don't tell him anything. And if they got some "facts" they enjoyed them so much that they didn't think it worthwhile to worry any more about it. This line of thinking is very profitable, for you can solve any problem in that way. However, it can be overdone, and in my opinion the Canadian students sometimes overdid it.

Thirdly, the Canadians tried to stimulate a kind of "social life" even when I would have preferred some peace and meditation. The human being is not a machine. You cannot get impressions without taking time to digest them.

Those were some rather critical remarks, but I would be telling only half the truth if I did not speak of the great advantages of the Canadian. They don't have to carry the burden of a tragic history, which is always hindering our ways of thinking. Their feelings are more natural and spontaneous. It is much easier for them to enjoy insignificant things. They are in short, open-minded. They have more energy, but I venture to say that they must be careful not to devote all their energies to sports and social life only.

I must add that I was struck by their sound knowledge of their studies. On the whole, I was surprised and delighted with the mutual understanding we reached, and which I had thought to be impossible after such a war.

Rolf Schroder,
Hamburg, Germany.

Against Dnieper

Editor, The Varsity:

In reply to Mr. Dnieper's economic theory as to the raising of funds for more gymnasium floor space, I agree that University of Toronto needs additional recreation-space. However, I ask, does the end justify the means?

We have always regarded Hart House as a very venerable and high-respected institution of recreation, learning and relaxation. Do you think it should be adulterated with a lowly pub?

I am not a tee-totaller myself; but I think there are other outlets of baser dignity in which to indulge.

Mr. Dnieper puts such emphasis on the "student bodies", then perhaps he should bear in mind the obligations to which they are responsible and the decorum which is expected of them. It would be better to have no gymnasiums at all rather than to build them by such degraded methods.

Bennie Demers,
III Arts, St. Michael's.

Condemns Thinking

Editor, The Varsity:

I have been interested to read the views of Mr. Dnieper on the selling of beer in Hart House. Mr. Dnieper evidently feels that such sale would bring great benefits to the university, not the least of these being a large increase in revenue for athletic purposes. In his discussion, however, he accepted the drinking of beer as morally right.

There can be no doubt that the drinking of alcohol is both ancient and widespread. It is also generally agreed that in any population of drinkers there are three main types: the light social drinker, the heavy social drinker, and the alcoholic. The first type get drunk rarely, and the second type regularly; but the third type is rarely sober. Now alcoholism is a disease, but it is a disease that must be predisposed by social drinking.

Now there have been two theories advanced to deal with this evil. One theory was to suppress the manufacture and sale of alcohol by law. This has been proven a failure. The second theory was to convert all drinkers to moderation by making alcohol freely available. The rapid rise in drinking, drunkenness, and alcoholism in the past few years disproves this theory also.

We are constantly in the presence of hate, mistrust, selfishness and greed yet we do not approve of these things just because they are common and cannot be done away with. The moderate drinker is taking his pleasure at the cost of condoning and encouraging a custom of potential evil. There is no more eloquent approval of a custom than to practise it.

Total abstinence is, I think, the only Christian attitude toward drinking. If a man is his brother's keeper it is certainly his duty not to set an example by which some of his brothers will suffer.

All of this may seem to have very little to do with the selling of beer in Hart House. Beer is, however, an alcoholic drink by which people manage to get drunk. As such it is an inseparable part of the drinking problem. The fact that beer is not sold there does not decisively affect the life of any student. On the other hand the selling of beer in Hart House would mean that the members approved and encouraged the custom.

May I remind Mr. Dnieper that the evil of drink is not merely a Victorian myth. Poverty, disease and degradation, caused by alcohol, are just as poignant now as fifty years ago. In addition we now have automobile accidents.

Leonard G. Wilson,
Grad Studies.

VIC FRENCH CLUB

A meeting, Swiss in character, with Swiss songs and refreshments, will be held by the Victoria College French Club on Monday, Jan. 23, 8 p.m. at Wymilwood.

'Played Politics'

Before the meeting it had been learned the Speaker required a limitation on the kind of debate. No decision was reached as to the topic of the debate and the Liberals asked for and got time to meet their Association. Quigley said last night he ruled at the meeting that the Speaker's ruling must be adhered to. The Liberals had not indicated they would take any action outside the Committee.

Liberal head Bradley stated last night his party could find no topic fitting the Speaker's ruling, nor could they find a federal topic which both they and the CCF could agree upon.

Bradley said the Liberal Association decided they should ask Speaker Davies to clarify his views and they could hot waste time referring back to the Committee. Moreover they had not been challenging the ruling but had only wanted clarification of it. Upon being told no controversial Ontario political issue could be debated they had decided they must notify Committee Chairman Quigley that they must resign.

The whole Mock Parliament Committee met this Monday and voted a motion admitting Speaker Davies' right to limit the topics for debate in the Legislative Chamber. In effect this motion apologized for the action of the Liberals, and it was the report of this in The Varsity that caused the Liberals to request the right to clarify their views in today's issue.

Referring to the votes of other political clubs that put through this motion in the Committee, Liberal leader Bradley stated last night: "We feel this is an issue between us and the UTDU Mock Parliament Committee, and not between us and the Committee plus all the other political clubs."

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Something happened at the game between the basketball Blues and YMHA Tuesday night that made the headlines in yesterday's Varsity. It seems that John McManus, star of the Blues, refused to play and was sent to the showers by Coach Masterson. According to The Varsity's story, Masterson had been giving the boys the verbal business for fouling up their plays and generally giving a very poor account of themselves against the YMHA'ers; so much so, in fact, that McManus got fed up with it all and refused to play for his coach. The story goes on to say that the team is full of dissension, and implies that they are ready to quit anytime.

The Varsity is in error. The reporter neglected to get the full account from either Masterson or McManus, and depended on his eyes for information. It is more unfortunate that many people have made such a big thing out of an argument like this — — it happens on almost any team, and especially on a losing team.

The University of Western Ontario will be gratified to hear that story, but it is not true. McManus did not walk out.

What really happened was this: Masterson scheduled this game with YMHA not to beat them, but to give the boys some practice in defensive formations. Neither he nor the team cared very much about whether they won or not. At the beginning of the game, Masterson explained a system to the boys to make the game, or rather, the practice, more effective and interesting. The coach wanted to get the players check conscious, so told them that every time a man's check scored, that man was to come off the floor and be substituted.

That worked fine for the first three quarters, and everybody was happy. Naturally, the coach was shouting orders, and with the score as tight as it was, everybody was slightly excited. Loud words were exchanged during the game of course, but the words were much more quiet and gentle than in the practices. It's the same in every game.

Anyhow, in the fourth, there was a substitution, and Charlie Justice went in for YMHA. Masterson noticed that Justice was not being checked, and was romping all over the floor. Three minutes later, he was still unchecked, and he managed to score an easy field goal. Masterson immediately called time-out, and asked the boys on the floor whose check Justice was supposed to be. It turned out that two players were checking YMHA's number 13, and Justice (5) was loose. Ted Luck was checking (correctly) 13, and Jimmy Bell was also checking him (incorrectly). It seems that McManus had taken Bell's check, leaving Justice (McManus's check) alone. Bell had taken the nearest man to him, which turned out to be Luck's 13.

But before this, Masterson told the players on the bench and on the floor, that the goal-and-you're-off system would not be used for the rest of the game. McManus had not heard the coach. When Justice had scored, McManus came off the floor, assuming he was benched under the pre-game rule, and sat down. Bob Masterson assumed that McManus had heard his repealing order, that McManus was sore because of Masterson's criticisms, and that John refused to play in protest against the said criticisms. Now Masterson is a man who believes that if you let a player get away with anything, the rest of the players are adversely affected, and that no matter how good a player is, he must listen to the coach.

The result was that Masterson lit into McManus, and John, not knowing what the score was, retaliated with several words of his own. This made matters worse, and the coach figured McManus just refused to play, so he ordered McManus to the showers.

This all happened in the space of a time-out, very quickly. It was nothing but a misunderstanding on both sides. Masterson no more wanted McManus out of the game than John wanted to leave.

Masterson says that if anybody was in the wrong, it was himself, for assuming something that wasn't so. But this department does not blame the coach very much; in a game where decisions must be made every split-second, it's pretty hard not to make mistakes.

Buy Athletic Nite Tickets They're So Easy To Find

It's about time that you started thinking about this week's big Athletic Nite to be held as usual on Saturday night in Hart House. The senior interfaculty boxing show will headline a sporting presentation which lists the junior interfaculty swimming finals and a women's basketball encounter.

You all know where to pick up your tickets. Most faculties just have to see their Athletic presidents or representatives. If you go to Skule you can pick yours up at the Engineering stores or PHE students can get theirs from their respective year presidents. Forestry and Trinity types should watch their bulletin boards for announcements as should Social Work students and School of Law. Vic tickets are on sale at the V.C.U. office and UC's quota go on the block at the Jr. Common Room.

If you don't make out at home there is still hope as 600 rush tickets go on sale on Saturdays at the ticket office starting at 5:30 p.m.

Netminders Star Paterson Gets Two As Lifemen Click

By JOHN DUGAN

A hard fighting Western hockey team went down to a 5-3 defeat at the hands of Varsity intermediates, perennial league champs, yesterday in Varsity Arena. Attired in brand-new uniforms for their first league start of the season, the Westerners nevertheless proved no match for the seasoned Blues who have one league victory under their belts. Despite predictions of a rosy season ending in the championship by the Western "Gazette". The Purple and White just don't have enough of that all-important finesse around the nets to cop a championship, especially in the same league with Varsity.

The two teams were hard at it from the first whistle; but, though both sides tried valiantly, neither could score until ten full minutes had elapsed when a hard drive by Wally London on a pass from Pat McLoughlin was apparently stopped by the Western goalie, only to trickle between his skates for a score. The period was filled with hard play by both teams and the hot seat was occupied by six different jousters, one taking two cracks at it. The Londoners had a definite edge on the play in this stanza, but just couldn't put the puck back of Gary Carl, Blue netminder. The few Varsity attacks which threatened the Western Citadel were repulsed by some very fine goaltending by Bill Hainsworth, son of ex-NHL goalie George Hainsworth, who was one of the best. Bill is not far behind his famous father in skill or courage.

His performance was by far the outstanding feature of an otherwise ragged contest.

In the second frame, the Blues' experience began to overshadow the Purple's eagerness and well-organized rushes paid off in four Varsity scores. Little Al Conboy notched one unassisted at 5:13 to be followed by Bill Paterson, Pete Gawinski, and Paterson again. Lickley was the man on the spot twice as he assisted twice. Phillips scored for Western in this period after Black had outskated the Blue Defense to lay a pretty pass right on his stick in the goal mouth. The play remained hard but was cleaner with only two penalties being awarded.

The beginning of the third period saw the two teams at it hot and heavy again. Varsity seemed to relax a little in this canto and two Western goals in 61 seconds threw a scare into the Blue supporters. Steady defense work by Varsity's Fingland, who worked most of the game, and good goaltending by Carl minimized the threat, however, and the Blue team skated off the victors.

The brothers Gawinski, Jack Raftis, Al Conboy, Fingland, Hyde, and Bill Paterson were best for the Intermediates, while Western's brother act of John and Don Avery, along with bouncing Milt Cork, a Toronto boy, led the way for the Purple and White. The Avery-Avery-Bibbings line was best for UWO and Cork and his mate Riddell were like rocks on the backline.

A large crowd (for intermediate hockey) turned out to cheer Varsity on to victory, and judging from the past two games the little Blues should be a cinch for the honors in their loop.

Line-ups:—

Western: Goal, Hainsworth; defense, Cork, Riddell; centre, J. Avery; wings, D. Avery, Bibbings. Spares: Phillips (Capt.), Fewster, Bartlett, Shiller, Carson, Black, Gabor, Gussage, Riggin (sub-goal).

ALL-VARSITY SWIM

All last term the constructive and competitive side of swimming was stressed. This term the more enjoyable sides will receive the emphasis, and the object will be more fun for the girls.

Tonight at 7:30 there will be the All-Varsity Splash Party — with fun for all. It is being held in the L.M. pool, at Avenue Rd. and Bloor.

Special mention goes to Di Jacob, Marg Fleming and Cathy Logan for all the work they have done to make the Splash a huge splash!

Something new for the girls at Varsity who want to get their strokes smoothed out — a coach period where you can learn to coach, to improve your ornamental tricks, and if you need it, your diving. When? January 26, starting at 7:00 p.m. in the UTS pool. Miss Baxter, the intercollegiate swim team coach will be on hand for those interested.

The more that turn out, the more coaching will be available, as the continuation of this special instruction depends on the success of the first night.

Girls will want to get those reluctant draggers in action for Saturday night, when Hart House Athletic wing is opened to women —for the next Athletic Night. The special attraction?—your sisters on the basketball team who will be playing the first of a home-and-home series with the McMaster Senior Intercollegiate team.

Girls on skates, always remind me of ducks on land it's fun to watch but makes me feel like liniment was made for more than drinking.

HOCKEY

With a last period spurt UC I raced to a 3-0 count over PHE II yesterday afternoon at Varsity Arena.

UC had the edge on play throughout the game but PHE held them to a scoreless tie in the first two periods. Joan Somerville, PHE goalie, made many sensational saves when Jean Gillen and Marg McGuiness, UC ganged up on her time and time again. UC went to town in the last period with Jean Holmes and Jean Gillis sneaking a three goal effort past the PHE goalie.

Squash Racquets Hoping To Form New Competition

Talk is revived concerning the possible forthcoming organization of an intercollegiate squash league with the approach of the annual Toronto-McGill tourney this year. Squash is not yet recognized as a field of intercollegiate competition but this popular pastime has a very numerous following around the Canadian universities and pressure is being applied for its recognition.

This year's Varsity representatives list Ernie Howard, (Capt), and Jim Bidell who will perform at McGill on Friday and Saturday. Royal Military College will compete this year largely due to the efforts of Varsity manager Bob Hague.

Interfaculty Sport

The senior interfaculty boxing matches start tonight at five in Hart House. These are the prelim bouts to be run off for the Athletic Nite finals. Anyone who has watched these fistic affairs in the past will tell you that they are well worth your time. The main attraction here is good old intestinal fortitude otherwise known as sheer fight; one of those rare commodities that even the much vaunted pro cards can't always guarantee.

Only one hockey game scheduled at the Arena yesterday and it developed into one of those things that don't happen every day, around here anyways. This time both goalies got a shutout. The Skule fifths and Forestry Bees battled it out to a full time nothing all deadlock with Cridland for SPS and Beverley of Forestry gaining the twin shutouts. The interfaculty league record doesn't show any of these rareties for at least two years back.

On the major b-ball floor the double blue hoopsters pulled a close one out of the fire with seconds to go yesterday to defeat a fighting Sr. U.C. quintet 23-20. Both squads played nip and tuck ball throughout, that is until the last minute when mikeman Tom Warne took off on a fast breakaway and hooped in the deciding counter.

Bags McKeown and Walt Farrell were top marksmen for the winners each bucketing six points. Freeman was tops for the red and white cagers with a like number. Robson and McFadden got four with Johnson and Wengle adding two to the UC total. Warne contributed four, Carr got three and Murphy and Fuhrman were good for two each of the collegians total.

Wycliffe A's handed the SPS fifths a 25-22 loss in the other major tilt as they put on last period drive to come from behind ten point deficit. The A's hooped in fourteen points in the last stanza while holding the Skule aggregation to only one.

Mainprize of SPS turned in a stellar thirteen point performance to spark the Skule squad while for the theologs, Harpur led with ten points to his credit. Baker with six and Hendra who added five were among other Wycliffe scorers.

The upstairs league game at noon was forfeited to the PHE eighths by SPS sevenths. In an afternoon tilt the IIIMechanicals handed the UC Falcons a 36-14 drubbing. Sullivan pointed the way for the winners with eleven while Kaivuski threw in eight and Hersh got six. For the Falcons it was Goldstein with seven and Landau who tallied four who bore the brunt of the scoring.

Meds VIII took a decisive 38-20 decision from the UC Hurricanes last night as Silverman payed with nineteen point effort for the winners. Next in line was Pace with eight while Gorfinel got six. Brudner and Goldman four each for U.C.

EVERYBODY LOSES AT DEBATE

Reject Move, Western Bloc Replace IUS

A move on the University of Toronto campus to have the National Federation of Canadian University Students lead the way in organizing an anti-Communist "Western Union" of national university student organizations has been stopped almost as soon as it got into motion.

University of Toronto NFCUS Committee Chairman informed the Committee last night that George Morrison, Meds representative on the Committee, has dropped his sponsorship of the idea because his fellow Meds students opposed it.

At last Thursday's meeting the Committee voted disapproval of the suggestion that NFCUS affiliate with the Communist-dominated International Union of Students. It was after this vote that Morrison announced his intention to introduce a motion urging formation of a western bloc of students. His announcement was greeted with cries of approval from several of the Committee members.

No One Commented

Yesterday, no Committee members made any comment when President Symons announced Morrison's decision not to introduce such a motion.

Social work representative Len Dolgoy complained yesterday about the "undemocratic" nature of last week's vote on NFCUS-IUS affiliation. Under directions from the Students' Administrative Council, the Committee voted last week as representatives of their colleges. The SAC representatives were to receive official instructions from their colleges and faculties before they voted to decide whether the University of Toronto supports affiliation.

Wants More Discussion

Dolgoy charged yesterday the vote of the Committee members would influence the college and faculty votes. Moreover, the debate last week had been dominated by outside speakers and the Committee should discuss affiliation further, now that they were better acquainted with the subject.

Chairman Symons replied that the final decision will be democratic, since it will be made by the elected SAC representatives after instruction from their colleges and faculties.

Forestry representative Dave Irwin pointed out that any Committee member had the opportunity to speak last week, and that a suggestion that the Committee should delay its vote until further consideration was voted down last week.

Uniting Students Goal Of NFCUS In Student Week

"National Student Week" will be celebrated next week, January 23 to 29, in twenty-one of Canada's Universities and Colleges. Sponsored by the National Federation of Canadian University Students, the week's celebrations are planned to bring about a greater understanding and closer relationship between Canadian students from Halifax to Vancouver.

At Quebec, students from the University of Laval, Bishop's College, MacDonald College, and the University of McGill for special activities which include a mock conference, a debate, and discussion of inter-university student exchanges.

At many other universities, a full week of athletic and cultural events has been planned.

Classical Rules For Radio Join In Building Suspense

"A good radio play must be first a good play" said Lister Sinclair, noted Canadian radio dramatist speaking on "The Art of the Radio Drama" in the Graduate Students Lounge last night. Although not frequently practiced, there is a definite art to writing a good radio play, he insisted.

Borrow From Past

The broadcast play, claims Mr. Sinclair, has great kinship with classical Greek Drama, and many of the rules of Sophocles and Aeschylus are literally musts for the radio author. In a Greek play a rather large audience had most of its members seated so far from the stage that they relied mainly on what they could hear. The Greek rule of having no more than three characters on stage at a time prevented confusion between the voices of different characters. The same rule goes for radio.

The great success of the two Greek efforts of the C.B.C., Antigone and Oedipus Rex points up the value of their strong, clear, powerful construction, designed for the ear, which required practically no adaptation.

As Shakespeare Did It

More important lessons come from Elizabethan drama which had to deal with an inattentive audience, just like that of today which can obliterate a play with a twist of the dial. Shakespeare grabbed attention immediately. After the eleven lines in the first scene of MacBeth, it would have taken dynamite to get an audience out of the theatre before they learned what the three witches were up to, "and," commented Mr Sinclair, "the audience never does find out." The radio play should aim at this immediate capture of interest through an intriguing atmosphere.

Use Suspense

A vital factor is allowing the audience to use its imagination, Mr.

'Downunder' Vote Mock Parliament Discussion Topic

The resolution that "the recent defeat of the Socialist Government in Australia and New Zealand indicates a popular movement away from socialism was defeated in the UC Mock Parliament yesterday afternoon by a vote of 39-9.

B. W. Creedman, II Pass, first speaker for the government, said the Liberals in both countries had run on a strictly anti-socialist platform and won by a large majority. C. Cohen, III Pass, 1st Opposition speaker, declared the Liberals "down under" had promised a continuation of the socialist reforms and the vote was simply a rejection of collectivism.

Government speaker B. Bloom, II Honor Science, said socialism is more than simply social reform, which may be carried out by any party. P. Watson, III Eng. Lang. & Lit., Opposition, asserted that socialism had not suffered a defeat, but only a slight setback, and compared it with the situation in England in the 1930's.

Resolution "Silly"

Speakers from the floor maintained the resolution was "silly", the term "movement" was illegitimate, and socialism was a minority rather than a popular movement at any time. One said the popular trend was away from socialism to communism. An Opposition speaker from the floor contended that communism and socialism have a common base, and pointed to the socialist government in Sweden as a negation of the Government argument.

Crusading Pacifist To Speak Monday On World Peace

Fr. Clarence Duffy, an Irish Roman Catholic priest from New York will speak on the University campus on Monday afternoon, as part of a Tour for Peace he is conducting in Ontario and Quebec during this coming week, under the auspices of the Canadian Peace Congress. Father Duffy has become a controversial figure since making a public proclamation in New York that he will work for peace with any group, regardless of their political color.

In spite of opposition of various kinds, he is going to go through with his mission in Canada, and the U. of T. Peace Council, who are sponsoring him on the campus, feel that he has a message which students should hear.

84-94 Is CCF Score As PC's Win 109-80 Yet Debate Success

The Mock Parliament opened in the Ontario Legislative Chambers last night with a record crowd in attendance. The concern over the stand the Liberal Party had taken proved to be the torch that set off the liveliest debate in the history of this traditional set-to between the various political organizations on the campus.

Nobody Wins

In the debate that followed the introduction of a radically socialist bill, the CCF lost the position of the party in power, but they did manage to defeat the amendment offered by the Progressive Conservatives, the official opposition for the evening.

The vote on the speech from the throne was 80 to 109 against, with the Labour Progressive Party abstaining. This party had voted moments earlier against the opposition's amendment, to bring the count to 94 to 84 against the amendment.

The main features of the legislation introduced by the CCF party concerned the nationalization of the principle industry in Canada, as well as the chartered banks, and the formation of a foreign policy similar to that of the present federal (Liberal) government.

Nobody Loses

In outline, the speech contained the following items: Social Security; Health; National Labour Code; Agriculture; Socialization; Control of Investment; International Trade; Foreign Policy and some specific immediate measures.

The opposition was divided into three factions: the PC's, the Liberals, and the LPP'ers. The opposition to the introduced legislation was also divisible into three parts, with the Liberals pointing out that the CCF outline included many points, especially on the Foreign Policy, that were already integral parts of the Liberal program, and indeed many things that the CCF national party had opposed in the federal house.

In the Foreign policy debate, the North Atlantic Security Pact was taken as a test case, wherein the Liberals stressed that the CCF had taken the opposition against this bill originally, claiming that it was

Fair Employment System Needed To End Prejudice

"The most vicious form of racial intolerance and discrimination today is in the field of employment," said Mr. Charles Grant last night speaking on Racial Discrimination in Canada.

"Figures are not available for Canada but in the United States there is more widespread exclusion of Jews from clubs, schools, resorts and jobs than there was in Germany in 1930," the speaker said.

Much Prejudice in Canada

Mr. Grant said he was horrified at the amount of prejudice in Canada, which is a denial of Christian principles and the Atlantic Charter. Many firms, banks and factories, he contended, make it a practice to to refuse employment of Catholics, Jews and Negroes. Instead the employers should hire people on the basis of ability and training.

An example of the existing intolerance was a Jewish student who asked a U of T engineering professor's advice about entering that course. The professor suggested that the student reconsider, because there were very few job openings for graduates of his faith.

Must Not Allow Prejudice

The speaker claimed that racial prejudice must not be allowed. The organized prejudice on the part of employers means that they are shirking their moral responsibility to the community and themselves. These people don't see the implications in limiting the freedom of certain groups, Mr. Grant declared.

NFCUS Regional Exchange Offers Year In Maritimes

Do you know the difference between a Bluenose and a Herring-choker? Why not go East and find out? The NFCUS regional exchange scholarships give you the chance to spend a year at one of the Maritime universities, and to learn, besides the three "Rs" something about your fellow Canadians down east.

Need Arts Course

There's a saying that the Maritimes chiefly export brains! Sounds odd, but it's true! Ask any Maritimer. The reasons for the exodus are largely economic, but the credit for the high quality of those forced to leave is due in great measure to the Maritime universities. They are justly famous for the courses they offer. The excellence of Dalhousie's law school is a byword; U.N.B. is a forestryman's delight with 3,600 acres of woodland at the back door; St. Francis Xavier has won world wide recognition by the work done there with co-operatives and adult education. However, since the exchange scholarships are open only to Arts students, the fact that all have a good Arts course is more to the point.

Small But Attractive

"Down East" you find the patriarchs of the Canadian universities. Kings (now part of Dalhousie in Halifax) received its charter in 1789, the University of New Brunswick, theirs in 1800, and the others followed in rapid succession. The Maritime provinces which together make up about one-tenth of the population of Canada, have more than a dozen universities. Obviously by Toronto standards they are small, yet in that very smallness lies one of the chief attractions for the Varsity student. What a larger university must sacrifice for convenience sake, those in the Maritimes have kept. A Toronto student would find an air of comparative informality, a wider participation in campus activities, a certain compactness among staff and students, both novel and pleasant.

Why not try it for a year?

By the way, there will be an announcement in The Varsity next week telling the date and place of a meeting of those interested in spending a year at a Maritime university.

Lucky Us, Eh?

Twenty-thousand years ago, Cro-magnon man roamed about the earth on his own two feet. He was trying to find a place to live; he was trying to find enough roots and berries and wild animals to eat; he was trying to destroy his fellow Cro-magnon men.

During the twenty thousand years that have elapsed since Cro-magnon's time, man's brain size has dwindled. He has become a less hairy creature. And only occasionally does he go after his neighbor with an axe.

For twenty thousand years, man has steadily progressed. He has been able to build beautiful buildings in which to live, buildings which are warm and comfortable. He has built himself planes and trains and ships in which he can go quickly and safely and comfortably from place to place. He has raised agriculture to a fine art, and put the beasts of the field into folds where they remain until man wants to use them. His axes are now made of fine steel, and are used almost entirely for chopping down trees. Only occasionally does he go after his neighbor with an axe.

Man has, in twenty thousand years, improved immeasurably over the primitive methods of house-building, and getting from place to place, and growing grain that his Cro-magnon ancestor used.

But man's basic desires are still about the same. He still wants a comfortable place to sleep. He still wants to get about a bit. He still wants enough to eat. And, it seems, he still wants to destroy his fellow men.

Man hasn't yet solved the problem of housing himself, though; millions of people all over the world still live in miserable hovels little removed from Cro-magnon's huts. Even with his super-sonic planes and lightning-quick trains and awfully fast ships, man hasn't yet solved the problem of transportation; ox-carts are still used in some parts of a country as progressive as Canada. Man hasn't yet solved the problem of getting enough to eat; from eight to sixteen million people will die of starvation in China this winter.

But the picture isn't entirely black. There is one problem man has definitely solved. Not only has he solved it, he has solved it to an astonishing, not to say needless, degree. Man is now definitely able to destroy his fellow men. There is no longer any question about it.

After twenty thousand years, man has risen above the beast-like simplicity of Cro-magnon, who had to be content with destroying only one of his fellow men at time with a crude axe of stone and wood. Man has progressed through successive stages where he could destroy his fellow men with better and better weapons. Arrows, swords and spears of bronze, steel swords and spears, stone-throwing machines, vats of molton metal, crude iron cannons, flint-lock pistols, polished steel cannons with rifled bores, repeating rifles, the atom bomb. The atom bomb seemed to be the culmination of man's efforts. It seemed as if the atom bomb was destructive enough to satisfy even man's passion for killing his fellow men.

But, no. From the atomic fission bomb, man has progressed to the hydogen fusion bomb. The principle of the hydrogen fusion bomb is a little different. Instead of smashing atoms up to liberate energy, one takes four atoms of hydrogen and fuses them into one atom of helium. One also liberates 100 to 1000 times more energy than is liberated by an atomic bomb.

And those eight to sixteen million Chinese who will starve this winter. While they are starving, more and more food will be piling up in a hollow mountain in Kansas.

No, man no longer needs an axe to kill his neighbor.

Muddying The Waters

Ed. Note: The facts surrounding the Liberal Association's resignation as the Government in last night's Mock Parliament are as much confused as seems possible.

In an editorial yesterday The Varsity tried to clarify the issue by a presentation of the facts as we had determined them. That presentation was unsatisfactory to the Liberal Association. In the statement below the Association presents its side of the case.

While doubting that this statement will contribute anything to the clarity of the situation, we are printing it in an effort to be fair to all parties.

* * * *

The University of Toronto Liberal Association regrets the fact that certain people on this campus have seen fit to muddy the waters because of our decision to resign as government in last night's Mock Parliament.

Our position is clear.

We refuse to compromise our principles. We refuse to be "gagged" by the Speaker of the Ontario Legislature.

Liberalism means freedom.

These are strong terms. They are meant to be. We are not a small group of rabid emotionalists. We are the largest political organization on the campus. We stand ready to turn back any invasion, however small it may seem, of our rights.

We suggest with all due respect that Mr. Davies' ruling does not stand up to reason. If the Frost Government is sincere it need not fear criticism.

That is our position. But see how some would seek to degenerate our resignation into the time-worn political football. These are the facts:

The Association's policy for the year 1949-50 is one aimed at bringing home to the people of this province the existing inadequacies of the present Ontario administration.

The executive felt that the Mock Parliament would afford an excellent testing ground for any of the several questionable Tory measures. And accordingly we picked several such topics for this Mock Parliament.

The Legislature was obtained and the skies were clear. One week later we learn that provincial issues are not to be discussed. A Mock Parliament indeed! More mock than parliament! Health insurance would be permissible, however, apparently indicating that "certain" provincial issues only were not to be discussed.

The CCF seem to feel that we consented to debate housing; we can state categorically that the executive did not at any time sanction discussion of this topic. In any event, contrary to socialist reasoning, Mr. Davies' ruling is that housing, too, is a provincial issue and therefore not debatable.

A closed meeting of our Association unanimously endorsed the executive's stand.

We will leave our case to the students of this University. Should we have resigned or apathetically accepted the Speaker's ruling?

Surely we have all learned two things from this tempest in a teapot. (1) The Mock Parliament rules are in dire need of revision with a view towards clarity. (2) And more important, we would urge that the SAC would appoint henceforth as Debates Commissioner of this University someone who in comparatively non-partisan, not as it happened this year, an executive member of the campus CCF.

Just who is playing politics!

We will debate any subject, any time, any place, conditional upon freedom of speech.

Editor, The Varsity:

I wish to correct certain errors which appeared in Thursday's The Varsity. Since I have now tendered my resignation as Liberal Representative to the Mock Parliament Committee, I feel free to clarify certain facts.

I take upon myself full responsibility for obtaining the Legislature for last night's Mock Parliament. Assuming that the Liberals were to form the government, I undertook to provide a hall. This was in keeping with the standard procedure that the representative of the forthcoming government provide a hall for debate.

On Wednesday, Jan. 4th, I inquired at the Speaker's office concerning the possibility of obtaining the Chamber. I was told to act through the SAC, and received authorization to do so from Mr. Macdonald of the SAC. On Thursday, Jan. 5th, the Speaker granted to me, as representative of the SAC, the use of the Chamber. The Debate's Commissioner first heard of this eight hours after the final arrangements had been made. The responsibility was mine, as representative of the SAC, and not as

Sees Refusal To Enter International Field "A Narrow View"

(This is the ninth in a series of articles designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations with the National Federation of Canadian University Students of the International Union of Students. The tenth, and final article in this series will be carried in The Varsity on Monday.)

By JACK GRAY

A serious question that Canadian students will have to consider in any further discussion of the feasibility of joining the International Union of Students, is, "Have we left it until too late." The latest report from an observer of the National Federation of Canadian University Students who attended the IUS Council meeting in Sofia last fall seems to indicate that we may have.

West Significant By Absence

Ross Hamilton, of the University of New Brunswick, in his report which has just been released, says: "It was very evident this year that the minority within the IUS with whom we could generally side is very small. Let us look at this list and briefly summarize the stand of the significant groups. Those whom we could . . . support included Scotland, Britain, Denmark, Norway, the NUS Hollander, the United States National Student Association observer (not a member of the IUS), part of the French delegation, one Australian observer (Australia is not a member of IUS); out of 54 nations listed, we could support generally these few people.

". . . With the Danes and the French National Union gone from the IUS the number will be yet smaller. It is a simple fact that since all 'Western' unions are for the greater part significant by their absence, those who dominate IUS will be of a different political color than ourselves."

The 'western' nations are out, Hamilton noticed that there is a serious tendency in the IUS now to accept "splinter" groups from countries where the representative national student union is not a member, and in some cases even when the representative union is a member. When they take in a splinter group then, the IUS claims to speak for the entire student body of that country. It is interesting to note one of his observations on NFCUS in connection with the matter of "splinter" groups:

LPP Could Represent Canada

"Should NFCUS not go into IUS there is a strong possibility that the LPP (Labour Progressive Party, i.e. communist) student group would represent Canadian students. That this is undesirable seems manifest as such a group cannot hope to represent the desires of Canadian students on the International level. The desire for contact should not expose NFCUS to the charge of being 'communist'. It is a curious thing for Canadian students to be called fascists in the IUS and communists at home! If Canadian students are to be represented in the international field then it must be by NFCUS, which is the only official organ for the voice of Canadian students."

Hamilton believes that to go into the IUS as it is now, with practically all the other western unions out of the IUS, would be "hopeless". He thinks that unless at least two-thirds of those western nations go in with us we would not have a chance.

He then goes on in the report to say that at the London meeting of the western nation student unions we will have an opportunity to find out whether the other western nations will go back, and recommends that we should act in roughly the same manner that they do.

Somebody Boobed

This report has just been received by The Varsity. The London meeting occured just before Christmas. As far as we can ascertain, Canada's representative to that meeting, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, had no authority to strongly support this view, nor indeed, was he even aware of it. Hamilton's report was obviously written well before the London meeting, and Canadian students across the country should have had an opportunity to decide what policy they wanted presented at the London meeting. But Canadian students didn't even know what their observer to the Sofia meeting had recommended, nor the reasons he had given for his recommendation.

It seems that once more NFCUS has missed a golden opportunity to assume a strong, positive role in the international field. Not only did we not send anyone from Canada to the London meeting, because the universities didn't really know what it was all about and wouldn't vote the funds, but we failed to give the Canadian graduate who represented us in London a strong, positive directive to follow.

There is a paragraph of Ross Hamilton's report on the IUS Council meeting at Sofia in 1949 that seems particularly pertinent at this time. He writes:

"Refusal . . . A Narrow View"

"The line up of nations at Sofia indicates to Canadian students that there is a missionary effort at work in the world to sell the communist idea. This effort is solid and strong; the question for Canadian students to seriously consider is whether or not we are willing to defend our ideas of studnet government, our ideas of political government; whether or not we are willing to take the initiative at International Conferences such as this and set those who criticize us back from their buoyant position. There are voices in Canada who cry to us to keep away from these students; who are completely unwilling to see Canadian students take part in these International student matters because they feel that we might in some way become tainted with communism.

"It may be correct for us to stay at home and acquaint ourselves solely with domestic matters; Canadian students at any rate should have the courage to decide which way they will have it, and have sufficient reasons for any stand they may take. I myself believe that the refusal to take an interest in the fate of world students is a narrow view. Communists believe that they have the truth; this belief gives them vitality and force; it seems that we too must have the spark of vitality and force, especially if we feel that we have the elements of truth on our side."

With that kind of thinking as our standard, we might yet be in time.

Vic Debaters' Semi-Finals Taking Place

Semi-finals in the Thomson Impromptu Debates will be held in Victoria College this afternoon. The contestants will be: George Slater, Ruth Nicholson, Kip Fleming, Roy Neehall, Ruth Bray, Stan Kurisko, Don Spratt and Harry Green.

These eight students have been selected from over eighty contestants, who were eliminated in either the first, second or third round. The contestants were given subjects and five minutes to prepare their talk. They were judged on the basis of content and delivery by staff members.

The four students who win today will represent Victoria in an inter-college debating contest at McMaster University next month.

At the Senators Debate in the Spring the four finalists will compete for the Thomson Trophy, of which two will be chosen as winners.

To Award Silver Skates At Hockey Game Tonight

Do-si-do and a-la-main left will resound up and down St. George Street tonight from 10:00 p.m. on, as the first post-hockey game dance of the new year, sponsored by the Blue and White Society is held in the Drill Hall after the Queen's-Varsity hockey game tonight. As can be gathered from the above, the emphasis will be on square dancing, for which sport the Drill Hall is best suited.

Now that the hockey team is playing on home ice again, the favourite, familiar and cheap way to spend a Friday evening is with us again. The hockey game at the Arena, and the square and round dancing at the Drill Hall after, make for a full evening's entertainment.

Blue and White Society chairman Bill Turner has announced that the silver skates award, missing at the last home game, will be resumed for the rest of the series. As usual, three stars will be picked, and the winners announced after the game is over. The players so honoured will receive the silver skates (miniature) as a token award.

It is hoped that the band, which did such a good job in making the last game so enjoyable, will be out in full force again tonight.

Since the dance in the Drill Hall is going to be a combination square and round dance, an orchestra has been hired by the Blue and White Society, as well as one of the best square-dance callers in the city to call the turns. Dancing will continue until one o'clock, and refreshments will be available at the Hall. Tickets will be sold at the hockey game, and at the door of the Drill Hall. Turner stressed the fact that the low cost of this dance is made possible by the surplus fund of the Blue and White Society, which is being turned back to the students in services such as this.

HBC Experiment On Fur Raising Is Lecture Topic

"Helping nature raise fur coats," a lecture describing experiments in beaver conservation by the Hudson's Bay Company, will be delivered by Dr. Leonard Butler, a University of Toronto professor, to an open meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute Saturday night at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall.

Born in England, Dr. Butler graduated from the Ontario Agricultural College in 1925 and from 1932 to 1939 he was Research Assistant at the University of Toronto. He received his MSA degree in 1937 and his Ph.D. in 1939. Appointed Biological Advisor of the Fur Trade department of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1946, he is now Assistant Professor of Genetics here.

Warn Against Human Rights Complacency

Canada should support and implement the proposals embodied in the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights, agreed the three speakers at a forum meeting of the United Nations Association last night in the Economics building.

Mr. V. Evan Gray gave a general outline of what the proposals entail. The Declaration affirms basic rights and freedoms which should belong to every world citizen. Gray stressed the significance of the term "human rights," pointing out that it is only recently that individuals have been recognized as having international rights as opposed to strictly national ones.

Gray also reviewed the position of the Canadian government on the proposals: he felt the government had sidestepped the issue in the General Assembly. Canada could not afford to be complacent in regard to the freedoms of citizens, he said; she had a responsibility to the rest of the world too.

American born Rev. R. D. Jones, director of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, opened the forum with a caution against premature satisfaction with conditions in Canada. "The student in Canada is good, but it is still not perfect," he said.

Jones suggested the educational approach as the best method of implementing the Declaration. Every citizen should watch constantly for evidences of prejudice in the home, the church and the school, he felt. The aim should be to have all people accept in their own minds the proposals, and thus to give them final safeguard, he stated.

Dr. Hugo W. Walter, replacing B. K. Sandwell, one of the scheduled speakers who was unable to appear, discussed the legislative implementation of the Declaration. Reviewing the advances Canada has made in the physical sciences, he questioned whether there have been parallel advances in the human sciences. There is need for a more specific guarantee of basic rights, he thought. Walter cited such examples as restrictive real estate and Toronto police violations of private rights to show that there is still not sufficient guarantee in Canadian law for the average man's freedom.

Writer Meets Actress

Goldfish Bowl Exclusive

Yesterday, we had occasion to visit the "goldfish bowl" of St. Hilda's College. Of course, not literally, but that's what the girls call their common room. For those who have never been there, let me tell you that you're missing something. I'm sure it could be arranged even if you had to resort to the personal column of The Varsity.

Feature Latest Books

Anyway, they have all kinds of interesting books to read. I'm not sure whether this is unusual for ladies' colleges, but it is thoughtful. They have the latest New Yorker, Life, and scads of others that I didn't have time to read. And in the afternoon, the sunlight streams in, infusing a sense of hospitality and real warmth.

Common rooms are arranged to meet people, and so what was more likely under the circumstances and more enjoyable than an interview with Miss Robin Taylor, star of The Guardsman.

Excuse me, Robin, er, Miss Taylor, but before we interrupt a beautiful conversation let me put this plug in.

The Guardsman is the latest Robert Gill directed show, opening tomorrow evening at that well-known mecca of student drama activities, Hart House. It is a translation of Ferenc Molnar's famous comedy of the same name . . . namely, The Guardsman. The show will run from January 21 to 28. Oh yes, the curtain will go up at 8:30 sharp! Promptness of arrival on the part of the audience will be appreciated by the actors.

Now where were we, Robin . . . ? ? "Where shall we start?" she asked.

The Story

Well, what's this thing all about? I've got my tickets, but it would help if I knew what the story is — just in a nutshell, mind you.

The story is simple and the humour lies in the situation that is conceived. The husband after six months of marriage, believes his wife is unfaithful. To test her he goes away and returns dressed as a Guardsman. They become friends. As time passes it poses a problem whether the wife recognizes her husband and is just leading him on? But, on the other hand, does the husband really deceive the wife . . . ?

Say, Robin, do you think, since you're playing the wife, that she could be deceived?

"Well, I have my own idea. I think that you had better wait to see for yourself."

Incidentally, Robin, who is playing the part of the Guardsman?

Don Glenn is cast in the role, and we'll leave it up to the audience tomorrow night as to who is doing the deceiving.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

TSO Menuhin

Tall, flaxen-haired, world famed violinist Yehudi Menuhin appeared this week in Toronto with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in Sir Edward Elgar's Concerto in B Minor for Violin and Orchestra, Sir Ernest MacMillan conducting, at Massey Hall.

Beethoven's Overture to Egmont was the opener and Sir Ernest's reading set the standard of performance that prevailed throughout the night. Egmont is a short theatre piece composed as part of incidental music to Goethe's play. It demands a oneness of precision and of spirit from both orchestra and conductor to ensure that the tense evocation of suspense may not be lost. Without a doubt the TSO's response to the baton achieved that tense precision from the glowering chords of the opening theme to the exultant song of triumph in the closing bars.

It was a step down into the Elgar work where the guest soloist made his bow. Not in performance nor in interpretation but rather in intrinsic value as music, the B Minor Concerto falls far below the preceding overture, and we can honestly attribute the inferent value that remained entirely to the soloist's skill.

Like Beethoven, Elgar begins the Concerto with a lengthy orchestral introduction to state in three distinct parts the motifs heard later in the development. The music seemed to be headed in all directions, was corrupt on melodic lines, and loose if not promiscuous in theme.

Yehudi Menuhin's entrance remained the one redeeming force in the Elgar work. Without his magic bow the rendering would have died a long wandering death. Apart from its apparent worth or absence thereof, Menuhin's translation of the Concerto was unquestionably a masterpiece. With amazing calm and finesse, economy of bowing, subtle modulations and a phenomenal finger dexterity and flawless technical command and through all a quivering intonation, the virtuoso infused beauty into a work possessing little of its own.

The Menuhin violin vents an earthy husky tone that coloured the Andante in strokes of langorous melody that conjured Tennyson's Lotus Eaters in counterpoint and built an eery haze of melody against the pizzicato-tremulo in the strings.

In their performance of the Second Symphony (D Major Opus 73), the Toronto Symphony Orchestra made a strong case for the composer's work. Recently it has been fashionable for conductors to subvert the cheerful parts of the Second Symphony to sombre lugubrity and the sombre sections of the First to cheerful ends. Like the minister reading the joyful Psalm many a conductor never hesitates to turn the title Invitation to the Dance into an Invitation to the Tomb. But they have a strong antagonist in the bracing vitality of the D Major Symphony of Brahms. The T.S.O. performance fell somewhere in between the two spheres of heat and cold and the result was lukewarm. Sir Earnest did not entirely avoid vitality but his emphasis of the Brahmsian rhythms was certainly not vividly pronounced.

Robert Haven Schauffler in The Unknown Brahms states the case for the symphony's opening charm, clarity of theme, and transparency of orchestration, (which the T.S.O. endeavored strenuously to avoid), in a short piece of verse:

Often within my mind's front parlor door
I find a most unwelcome visitor,
It is Dame Worry in her best black mitts;
Her rakish bonnet, heaving pinafore,
And hunted eyes tell me the ancient bore
Is working up one of her famous fits.

Now, when the dame appears, I coldly laugh,
And start, upon my mental phonograph,
Brahms' Symphony D Major, Movement One.
When that begins she knows that she is done.
No longer, by effrontery or stealth,
Within my house will she enjoy poor health!

The horns and fiddles cause the dame to squirm.
The cellos make her wriggle like a worm.
When pearly light from flute and oboe pours
Over my mind, she scuttles out of doors.
There is not room enough within the same
Four walls for music, me, and that old dame.

Wednesday night's performance, although sharp and proficient in its execution of the Brahms Symphony, left us nevertheless too often in the company of that old dame.

One-Acts

The U.C. Players Guild, Victoria and St. Michael's Colleges presented a very mixed bag of one act plays on Jan. 17 in the Women's Union Theatre. It seems a pity that such excellent acting as St. Michael's displayed should only be seen by such a limited group.

The St. Michael's Presentation, "Heaven on Earth" by Phillip Johnston, was the hit of the evening. The play is a roaring burlesque of the conventionality of the conscious rebels from society. Well directed by George Tetzel, the action of the play is smooth throughout.

Gene Eckert as Adrian Illidge, the "natural man," was amusingly uninhibited. Helen Armestro gave a diverting display as Jill Hubbard, the young half-baked social rebel dismayed by the seeming destruction of her personal conventions. Bob Keene as Ernest Hubbard, the father, carried his part well although hampered by a too youthful look. Laura Hubbard, the rose arranging mother was excellently played by Carol Kelly. Heaven on Earth is one of the best college comedy productions I have seen on the campus in years. The presentation had vitality and real sparkle.

The U.C. Players Guild bit off rather more than it could chew, in W. B. Yeats' "Land of Heart's Desires." While the set and particularly the lighting were both effective, the production was lamentable. The director, Martin Greenwood never seems to have been able to work clearly just what Yeats' idea was. There was very little of the Irish in the presentation; one or two of the actors tried a brogue but soon gave it up. The atmosphere of the play was ruined by the amnesia which bothered all the actors with the exception of Marjorie Banks, the Fairy Child. Ailla Phillpula played the tormented Mary well. Betty Harwood was a sour Bridget. John Ruch as Father Hart was successfully simple and sincere.

Victoria College gave scene five, on board the Titanic, from Cavalcade by Noel Coward, and also a monologue by "Torchy" Macdonald. Scene five is difficult even in the context of the play, but without the surrounding material it is extremely difficult to catch the distinctive flavor of modern hardness and Victorian sentimentality which is Cavalcade. Director Jean Scroggie and Liz Lane and John Rutherford, who played Edith and Edward, made quite a successful attempt.

"Torchy" Macdonald, after going through several minutes of chilling wind from the audience, finally got some well earned mirth for her impressions of Samson and Delilah.

H. H. Gallery

Some changes have been made in the Nova Scotia Exhibition in the Hart House Art Gallery. Of the earlier exhibits, we are glad to report that Lucy Jordan's canvases have been retained, and that we still find them growing on us.

Among the additions are a group of eye-catchers, circles, triangles and squares in brilliant and clear colour. These compositions are most attractive, although their names may be partly responsible for that. Lawren P. Harris has called them Blue Triangles, Project, Circles and Planes and Equilibrium, and there is no difficulty in understanding what he means.

There are still no scenes of sharp action, yet the tranquility of the show is gone. Alex Colville, who is concentrating on scenes of stillness, manages nevertheless to obtain a sharp, dramatic effect with his contrasts of foreground and background. But his canvases are set pieces and one feels that the curtain has gone up before the players have taken position onstage.

Julia Crawford's Wind and Underbrush is a disturbing canvas that becomes clearer as one concentrates on it. Certainly, it is full of movement and pattern which never quite manages to control the whole.

Triangles and planes aside, Lawren P. Harris contributes two excellent studies. Old Man and Coloured Girl are sensitive, intimate portraits, the work of a capable and careful artist. They are both polished and distinctive.

But we took another look at Miss Jordan's Children and Ducks before leaving.

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

To a layman the distinction between "hot" and "cold" is very real and determined by his sensory perceptions. To tell him there are no such things as "hot" and "cold" and that everything is "hot" to a varying degree would only introduce confusion to a simple and convenient concept. The science of thermodynamics does not recognize the existence of the word "cold". Things are never "cold", merely less hot.

The principle that heat may exist as high temperature heat or low temperature heat is the basis of a relatively new form of heating plant known as a heat pump. The refusal to recognize the word "cold" is further illustrated by the fact that the heat pump is just another form of the domestic refrigerator.

Much Heat Energy Beneath Earth

For many years scientists and engineers have cast covetous eyes on the limitless store of heat energy existing beneath the earth's surface. Most of this heat is stored in the earth's core and is evidenced by volcanic eruptions and similar manifestations but an unlimited supply exists in the form of low energy heat just beneath the earth's surface. The temperature of the earth just below the frost line remains constant the year round and even in northern climates is as high as 50 degrees F.

Although a method of tapping this limitless source of heat has existed for a long time it was not until the development of cheap electrical power that the method became practical.

Heat Pump Transfers Heat

Unlike conventional heating units which produce heat from the combustion of fuel, the heat pump only transfers heat from a source to a place where it can be used.

Powered by an electric motor it works on the same principle as a home refrigerator. Just as a refrigerator takes heat from the food and air inside it and deposits it in the kitchen, the heat pump when heating a house takes heat from the earth and deposits it in the house as required.

Pipes Laid In Ground

Pipes are laid in the ground, and water circulating through them enters a bank containing pipes of a cold refrigerant such as Freon. The Freon being colder than the water picks up some of its heat, then it goes through a compressor. Compression raises the temperature of the Freon and the resulting hot vapour is used to heat the house. The Freon is then allowed to expand suddenly and as a result again becomes a cold liquid. It passes back to the water tank, picking up the heat from the ground-warmed water and repeating the cycle.

In this process the heat given off to the room is equal to the heat pumped out of the ground.

Process Has A Great Advantage

Thermodynamically this process has a great advantage. In the conventional methods of heating, a quantity of fuel when burned and put through a heating plant can only give off the amount of heat energy produced in combusion and then the process must be 100 percent efficient. In the case of a heat pump, however, all of the electric energy put into the pump is available as heat in addition to the heat that is pumped out of the earth. If one considers the amount of heat in the earth as infinite the process involves getting more heat out than is put in.

The larger the difference between the temperature of water entering th ground and the ground itself, the more heat each pound of water can carry off. After that it is merely a question of pumping enough water through to obtain the degree of heat required.

Cost Is Prohibitive

Although at present the cost of these units is somewhat prohibitive due to the pipe system which has to be laid, rapid improvements in technique will allow them to compete successfully with the conventional forms of heating. Perhaps the greatest advantage of the new system lies in the fact that it produces no ashes, soot or smoke and needs no chimney. A turn of a valve or a switch in electric leads, turns the heat pump into an efficient air-conditioning unit by a reversal of the heat transfer process and heat is pumped from the house into the ground in the summer.

In areas where pipes sunk into the ground are impractical the heat pump can draw heat from wells, stream lakes or in warmer areas from the air itself. Units on the market at present may be installed for about $3,000 and come in a compact form occupying only six square feet of floor space.

A number of heat units are in operation in Canada. There are two in Vancouver and three in the Toronto area and organizations such as the National Research Council, the Defense Research Board and the University of Toronto are vitally interested in the process and are conducting investigations.

If you own an oil well, a coal mine or a hot water bottle firm, don't start selling your stock, but if you're considering building a house, the heat pump deserves some consideration.

One week later I was summoned to the Speaker's office and informed that controversial Provincial issues were barred from discussion in the Mock Parliament.

At no time did I consent to Housing as a suggestion from the Liberal Association to the Mock Parliament, as stated in Thursday's The Varsity's editorial.

Following the statements in Thursday's The Varsity, I felt that I should resign until such time as the entire matter has been cleared up.

Movie Review

Mrs. Mike

This film is somewhat reminiscent of what John Barrymore once referred to as "that catechism of clinical woes", the Book of Job. Indeed, Mrs. Mike (Evelyn Keyes) might have been Mrs. Job herself were it not for the fact that she is already the Boston-bred wife of an R.C.M.P. sergeant (Dick Powell) posted to a cold white beat in the far north during Canada's horseless carriage period. Detailing a grim account of the social and physical problems of life in the dog country, Mrs. Mike moralizes at the conclusion that despite its ice and snow, the Northwest Territories isn't such a bad place after all because a Mountie's wife could slip and fall just as easily on the staid Boston Common.

For once, Hollywood has given us a story about the domestic side of a mounted policeman's life, conspiciously devoid of the usual travel-poster glamor. A mountie may always get his man, but in this movie there just isn't any man to get. There is never so much as a shot fired. Not even a good healthy blizzard or an Indian uprising. Rather than action "Mrs. Mike" features inter-action, attempting to explore the subtleties of frontier society with its loneliness and its rugged and ragged individualism. But in striving for his own peculiar brand of stark reality, Director Louis King has turned many of his wilderness-dwellers into psychopaths with tense dilated eyes; has exploited pain almost to the point of sadism. The extraction of an Indian's tooth without anaesthetic, a crude amputation of a boy's crushed arm, and above all, Mrs. Mike's final and unattended period of labor before the birth of her child—such scenes constitute neither entertainment nor education, and their justification is questionable.

Evidently "Mrs. Mike's" producers aimed this one for the Canadian market. The backgrounds are authentic. Occasionally somebody mentions "Calgary" or "Edmonton," and there is even a chorus of "The Maple Leaf" (interrupted by an announcement of a diphtheria epidemic). That it will have have an appeal here, is certain. Those of us who live in cities will flock to see it, if only to strengthen our resolve to stay in the cities!

an aggression pact, siding with the large capitalistic country to our south.

Nobody Satisfied

The LPP'ers found that the CCF did not go far enough with their controls, and Canadian produce could go unwanted while a co-signer to the European Recovery Program unloaded excess goods at a loss, destroying former Canadian markets under their policy.

The amendment added by the PC's was as follows: "That this House regrets that the Government has advanced such a costly program of social and economic change without first providing for a Dominion-Provincial agreement on Constitutional reform to enable a redistribution of powers, in particular powers of taxation." This subject was then dropped and, as far as the debate went, was never referred to again.

But Everyone Happy

Credit for best speech of the night goes to Harvey Hays of the CCF, who made a five-minute talk last for half an hour, and in spite of several interruptions on points of order, and information, and personal privilege, got in many telling points. His rebuttal was keen and amusing, as he handled all comers with the aplomb of a veteran parliamentarian.

H. N. Politsky of the Liberal party called nationalization the Panacea of the CCF party, but recalled the events when hydro power was nationalized in an unnamed province, which he said "led to darkness in the home, and in my life."

The Speaker did a good job of handling what could have been an unruly scene when the fire was raised as one of the CCF party became the target for several jibes, but, to the immense satisfaction of the spectators of the House, handled them in a way that was a credit to his ingenuity and good taste.

Student Apathy

Editor, The Varsity:

Of late there has been much discussion of student apathy and the decline of their interest in cultural activities. A corrective measure has been taken by banning Pep Rallies.

In our time one has only to attempt something in the cultural field to have some junior Don Quixote tilting at him.

In Monday's Varsity there was a criticism of Romeo and Juliet as presented at Malvern Collegiate by a group of students with an average age of fifteen (only one of whom had any real theatrical experience). The director was directing his first full length play and had the grand sum of fifty dollars to spend on his entire production.

The Varsity critic says a thirteen-year old (not fourteen) Juliet lacked depth. Does he expect the blase performance of a multi-married Hollywood actress? As for a death scene played by high-school students—what does he want? Blood?

May I suggest that Evoy and his kind look beyond their obviously limited horizons. Instead of trying to show their superiority by stepping on the weak, endeavor to lift themselves to a higher level (if no higher level than that shown by the critic of the Globe and Mail, who found much to praise).

Classical Rules

Sinclair gave the following example of how to write a love scene for radio.

Man: Darling!

(15 seconds silence)

Woman: Oh don't.

This leaves everything to the audience. Less extreme cases exist.

Finally Mr. Sinclair commented on the efect of good radio drama (which he admitted is rare) on the stage. "Death of a Salesman and A Streetcar Named Desire are two excellent examples of a growing and vital influence," he said.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

A browse through the files of The Varsity reveals the campus scene as an ever-changing panorama of progressive architecture. New buildings have supplanted old ruins, and paved highways cover familiar paths of yesteryear.

Early editions of The Varsity depict the campus as situated in a more northerly region. Present-day business establishments were once University landmarks. The Elaine Rubinoff Beauty Salon of Bloor Street was once the Animal Husbandry Building. There have been extensive alterations in the facade, less in the atmosphere, and still less in the clientel.

Conservatory Once Saloon

The site now occupied by the Conservatory of Music was formerly the location of a dearly beloved waterhole, McGonigal's Saloon. This establishment was presided over by a brother of a boy who was famed for his ability in driving spigots into beer barrels with his head. The only remnant of these glorious days is an ancient piano which Mr. McGonigal had imported from the Barbary Coast as fitting accompaniment to the heart-rending harmonies of his patrons. This relic is now the sole property of E. McMullin, who occasionally wheels it out and tinkles out a sonata or two, much to the delight of his Friday evening Bop fans. However, it is now termed a spinet. (Spinet, my clavichord.) A few old-timers contend that McGonigal provided better entertainment than can now be enjoyed at the same location, but it is rumoured that they miss the free lunch.

Place Your Bets at Simcoe Hall

Another innovation to the Varsity campus is Simcoe Hall. This once served as the main entrance to a race track which later became the back campus. Shortly after the occupancy of the building by the University, several members of the administrative staff were alleged to have augmented their income by accepting the occasional wager; at track odds, of course. University College then served as a comfort station for both fans and competitors.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Odds, ends, and publicity stuff——

Big Hockey Game on tonight . . . Varsity let loose their senior team on the poor defenceless Golden Gaels. The Gaels certainly must be defenceless, judging from the mountainous scores the rest of the loop have scored against them; 9-3, 5-0, etc. The Queen's hockey team is the perennial doormat of the CIAU league, and Varsity has little trouble with them. The last time the trophy went to Kingston was away back before the First World War, in 1914, and since 1903 they have won it only five times.

Varsity, on the other hand, has copped the senior honours nineteen times; and there was a whole decade (1919-1930) when the Blue took it without a break. McGill have won thirteen times and have a record which includes a seven-year win streak. But the University of Toronto are still the most feared club in the league, and the way things are going this year, it looks like they have a fair chance to make it twenty. We certainly hope they do . . . . it will mean two packages of cigarettes from the Globe and Mail Varsity expert.

Joe Kane, rough-tough rearguard for the Blues, broke his nose again (or should we say "still") in an exhibition game with the Swansea's. Poor battered old Joe has had that nose smashed more times than most people get headaches. When the doctor looked at it he put it back into place and pronounced him fit to play Friday; no bandages, no nothing.

From what we saw of the preliminary bouts of the Senior Interfaculty Boxing Competition (we were judging them) the Saturday fights should produce some real action. If you fight fans are tired of professional waltzing exhibitions, A-Night this week is the thing for you. For a half-a-buck you'll get eight slug-fests and a good dance.

Most of the teams play away this week-end, senior B-ball at Western and Windsor; intermediate basketball ditto; the wrestling team goes to Rochester . . . wonder how Varsity'll make out? If the B-ball Blues take Western like our INTERMEDIATES took their SENIOR hockey club, this department will rest happily.

Queen's At Varsity Blues To Western In Weekend Tilts

HOCKEY

By MAL CRAWFORD

Varsity hockey fans will have their first chance in over a month to see the Blues in a league game tomorrow night, when the Golden Gaels from Kingston come to Varsity Arena in search of their second win this season. Coach Wally Halder said he thought the Blues should win, but they would certainly have to play hockey. Queen's, though perennial doormats, have been high scorers every time out this year.

Contrary to reports in one of this city's daily newspapers, the Varsity team is at about full strength, and not riddled with injuries. Phil Arrowsmith has been sidelined with a cold this week and having missed the practices, his wing on the Bell-Walters-line will be taken by Bob Bazos.

Johnny Addison, who missed last week's exhibition game due to an ear infection, is in top shape, as are Joe Kane and Wes Moore, who collided in Monday's practice match with Eclipses. Wes (135 pounds) tumbled to the ice and was unconscious for a minute or two, but Krusher (180 pounds-solid) didn't seem to be rocked too much. Just a broken nose—nothing new for Joe. "The last time I broke it", he said, "they shoved my head in a cast and put up two antenna out in front to keep the schnozz from falling off". Wes was feeling a little low from the bump on his head, and wasn't able to eat his meal. Not so Joe. Gulping his fourth dessert, he chided, "That ought to teach him to stay on his own wing."

Ernie Frey, who has been out since the first game of the season with a broken leg, turned up at the practice last night, and thinks he'll be able to skate in a couple of weeks. Ernie had had a goal and an assist in that game before he was carried off, and was counted on to do a lot of the work at right wing. His return will be very heartily welcomed.

BASKETBALL

By BRUCE MacDONALD

The Senior basketball Blues are on their way to London this morning accompanied by the Intermediates for their first Inter-collegiate league games of the season against University of Western Ontario squads.

With the misunderstanding between Coach Masterson and Captain John McManus of the Seniors completely straightened out, the Blues will be at full strength for the tilt with Western. The Purple and White squad, who are the present titleholders, have come up with a tall, powerful team again this season. They have a record of 4 wins and 6 losses in exhibition games so far this winter, while the Blues have only one victory in their seven exhibition games played this season.

Snappy Practice

In their practice session last night, the Blues had the best workout they have had for several days, with things in general going just about as the Coach likes to see them. In a scrimmage with the Intermediates it was obvious that practices in the last week have rounded off many of the corners that caused the Varsity loss to Assumption last Saturday. The Blues are out for a win in this first league game.

Ints. Face Colts

The Intermediates will come up against the Western Colts tonight at London in what will also be their first league game of the season. Although the Colts are last year's champs, the Intermediate Blues have shown a great deal of promise this year and coach Barry Lowes feels that they will give a good account of themselves in the Intermediate loop this year.

Assumption Saturday

After meeting the Mustangs tonight, the Blues will travel to Windsor for an exhibition bout with Assumption College, a return engagement after last Saturday's visit from the Purple Raiders. Varsity hopes to avenge the 60-48 defeat suffered at Assumption's hands last week.

Slugfests To Be Featured At Coming Athletic Night

By BILL ROSS

Victoria and Emmanuel Colleges are the twin hosts this week as they present the third Athletic Nite of the year. A tailored to please program has been prepared to suit the tastes of the multitudes which headline the final bouts of the senior interfaculty boxing tourney. Both gyms, the fencing room, the boxing room and the pool will all be open for entertainment with the first event, an inter-host basketball game skedded for 7 p.m.

The interfaculty office announces that the 600 rush tickets will go on sale at 6:30 instead of the regular 5:30 p.m. because there will be no intercollegiate basketball game and the events get underway a little later than usual.

In the main gym there will be the senior boxers to display their wares from eight till ten o'clock with a special half time Judo exhibition by one of the art's foremost practitioners. A novel twist is promised the spectators as they are about to hear all about the philosophy of Judo. (You figure it out.) From ten till midnight there will be dancing to records.

McMaster girls will face the Varsity female blue basketeers at eight in the upper gym which will be followed by one of those good old battles of the sexes on the hoop floor which excite interest from so many viewpoints. Vic male seniors will face the corresponding women hoopsters in a tilt which will feature the latest in uniforms and inter-sex (basketball) rules. For the ruralists there will be old tyme dancing after the game.

Two intermural water polo teams will perform in the pool during the evening as well as the final heats of the junior interfaculty swimming meet will take up the time of the more aquatic minded and we don't mean water-brained, of the patrons. And if you missed that Grey Cup final you'd better catch the films of that snowbound classic of the year which will be screened in the fencing room from eight till twelve continuous. Ed Note: It's dark in there.

Interfaculty Sports

Forestry A's turned in a real co-operative effort yesterday at the Bloor street puck palladium as they blanked the UC thirds by a 5-0 score. Co-operating for the win were the corresponding number of green-shirted players as twineteender Cleavly annexed his shutout.

The scoring list included Clarke, Cunningham, Banks, Poole and Humes. Only one of the total was scored in the first period, but the second half produced four, as the woodchoppers hit their scoring stride.

SPS sixths were the victims of like treatment at the hands of the ice representatives from Knox College. The Knoxians put the skuleboys away behind a 4-0 blankout as Allum took the bow in the Knox nets. The winners netted two goals in each period to take the decision. Putnam and Miles were the payoff men with two goals each.

Senior SPS took another major hoop decision yesterday as they scored a 29-19 win over Sr. Meds A's. Buchanan and Wigle paced the SPS team with six each while Torz and Lindzon did the same for Meds. Casey Latinovitch with five, Willsie and Wilson with three each and Pierce and Gregory with deuces were among the other blue and gold scorers.

The UC fourths forged a five point lead in the first stanza of their major meeting with Institutional Management yesterday which they never relinquished as they went on to win by a 27-18 margin. Pearlstein led the way for the winners with an eleven point performance.

For the purple and white (shades of Western) clad cagers Salter was tops with eight while Syanchuck netted four and Howard three. Henak contributed eight to the UC cause, Smith added six and Cohi two to round out the total.

Engineering Business were keen with Keen as they rolled to a lopsided 51-20 victory over the Vic ninths on the upstairs floor. Keen was tops for the Engbussers with thirteen closely followed by Campbell who got twelve, Cole with ten and Philips who got eight. For Vic it was Wortman, Angus and Sheridan with sixes to their credit who bore the brunt of the scoring.

Vic Daisies scored a 21-13 win over Architecture C's with Prethe and Eaton proving the main producers with seven and six respectively. McCullogh and Crang were good for five each for the builders.

Sportswoman

Vic II scored their first goal in two seasons yesterday when they played St. Hilda's II. The game ended in a 1-1 tie.

Vic carried the balance of play in the first period but Joan Beattie, St. Hilda's goalie, held them scoreless till near the end of the period when a screened shot by Anne Carnwath made the score 1-0 for Vic.

Helen Wilson tied it up for the Saints in the second period, and from then on both teams battled in vain to break the tie.

Fans are taking an avid interest in the girls hockey games, and every faculty seems to be represented in the crowd. The girls take the razzing in their stride, and the shouts of praise lead them on with a fighting spirit. The number of spectators seems to increase every day, so there must be something worthwhile in a girl's hockey game.

Basketball

Two games last night at Lil's Place saw the OC. Therapists drop a 54-23 decision to the PHE seconds while Inst. Mgt. ladies edged the School of Nursing 43-40.

Senior Sluggers Hold Three Bouts Finals At A-Night

By BETZ

The only three preliminaries of the Senior boxing were held last night at Hart House. At 155-lbs. southpaw Norm Green, S.P.S., scored a close decision over Sam Toye, of the same little school house. Toye used a fast right hand to advantage but Norm's reply was a stinging left hook. Pete Petcoff another 155-lb. Skuleman copped a decision over H. Wells, OCE. Pete's hard right proved the deciding factor. In the 133-lb. class, Mike Wright's looping left hook earned him the nod over a willing G. Coggins of Vic. Mike sported the Trinity colours.

The finals, Saturday night, will feature some good bouts. Hank Henshall, OCE, perennial 125-lb., Senior Intercollegiate champ will spot Dave Geary, 133-lb. champ, a few pounds in an exhibition match. M. Wright, Trin., meets Glen Williams, Vic., at 133-lbs. Nick Betz, UC., will step up a weight class to try out Frank Corner, Vic., for the 140-lb. title. Roberto Couceirro SPS., the flashy Cuban, will trade punches with Dick Priestman, PHE., at 147-lbs. Petcoff, and

Quebec Meet Votes 35-25 For Union

Montreal, Jan. 21—(CUP) — At the NFCUS conference here on Saturday, representatives from Laval, University of Montreal, Bishops College and McGill voted 35-25 in favor of affiliation with the International Union of Students, (IUS.)

Laval and Montreal delegates voted for the union, with McGill voting against.

Last night, Toronto NFCUS chairman, Tom Simons, said that no Toronto delegate has been invited to this regional meeting, and that the vote might well be indicative of the reaction of students on this campus.

"The fact that these French-speaking students have voted in favor of joining the IUS seems to show that party lines have been discarded in favor of the greater advantage to be had in this allifiation," Symons said.

"IUS is the only organized functioning student body, and claims to represent the students of the world. People respect student opinion, and I feel that we should enter their union, with the object of reshaping the opinion so that it is the opinion of world students rather than those of students from behind the Iron Curtain.

"At the present time there is no body presenting the Canadian student case to the rest of the world students. The union or affiliation should not be approached on lines of party or national politics. If anything it is a disadvantage to have any political group strongly for or against the IUS," Symons continued.

Symons stressed that the matter must be looked at as being to the advantage or disadvantage of Canadian students rather than from narrow and biased view-points.

"The idea of an alternative union such as the British Commonwealth Union of Students (BCUS) is better than nothing, but it is a negative step," the Toronto chair-

German Students' Union Open To All Zones

Hamburg, Germany—(U-Press)—A German students' association, V.D.S., corresponding to the National Union of Students (the British student union) has been founded as the result of a recent conference in Marburg, Germany.

Voluntary membership in this organization is open to all student councils representing undergraduates of any university in all the zones of Germany. A committee of four students has been elected to represent this association, which has a secretariat at Bonn. The foreign relations of the German universities are in the hands of a special committee, the secretary of which is a member of the representative committee.

The main task of the association is to promote the exchange of views and experiences on current problems. It will also bring the wishes and suggestions of the students to the attention of the occupation authorities.

Church Silent At Duffy Arrival On Montreal Ban

Father Clarence Duffy, a figure of controversy because of his stand on political questions, will speak at a meeting sponsored by the University of Toronto Peace Council this afternoon at 4 p.m., in Room 138, Medical Building.

A priest from New York, Father Duffy was educated in Ireland and Spain. He has been in North America since 1937 with permission of his bishop in Ireland. Father Duffy is an active member of the American Progressive Party.

While no official comment has yet been made on Father Duffy's appearance here in Montreal the Church urged all members to boycott his speaking appearance there.

Move To Replace Pass And General With 3-Yr. Course

A proposal to replace the present Pass and General Courses in arts with a new General course of three years duration is included in the President's Report, June 1949, just released.

Masthead

All members of the masthead of The Varsity are asked to be present at a masthead meeting this Friday afternoon in the Editor's Office at 5 p.m.

Concentrated Study Needed

The proposal was passed by a joint committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts and the committee appointed by the Faculty Council to survey the curricula in the Pass and General Courses and their inter-relation with the system of the Honor Courses.

In brief, the committee proposes to replace the present Pass and General Courses by a new General Course of three years' duration, which will combine a measure of specialization with a broad general program in the more important fields of human culture. It will demand from the student a considerably higher level of academic achievement than that which has hitherto been obtained in the Pass Course.

Language Necessary

In the first year of the new course, the student must study one of the natural sciences, a foreign language, one of the social sciences and one of the humanistic disciplines. In the second and third years, the student will specialize in one subject to the extent of taking two courses each year in that subject, but the framework of general education established in the first year will be, with some modifications, retained.

See page three for further details of the President's Report.

The President believes the new course will provide "those elements that are most conspicuously lacking in the Pass Course: a coherent pattern and a genuine intellectual discipline". In some ways, he continues, the new course should overcome the extreme specialization that sometimes is the result of the splintering of fields of study. "The student in the new course will no longer feel that he is a lesser breed denied the personal direction that is so necessary in any scheme of liberal education. Like the member of any honour course he too will have an 'academic home'".

The President admitted the existence of "several practical problems" that lie between the shaping of this plan and its implementation. The devising of a time-table for a course that serves such a large percentage of the entire student body (60% of the Faculty of Arts) will not be easy, he said. The whole program will depend for its success, the President concluded, "on the recruiting of additional staff who, as teachers and scholars, will be worthy of a place in our academic community."

House Ec

With No Bathtub Ring

By MARG WORLD

Why do they have engineers or medsmen on the Campus at all? They are certainly not necessary. Why? Because of the Household Economics and Household Science course—that's why! They take Botany, Zoology, Psysiology, Biochemistry, Organic Chemistry, Textile Chemistry, Food Chemistry,—to name only a few.

First year House Ec. is almost the same as first year Pre-Meds. except that medsmen don't sew aprons, and the girls don't eat at Hart House. The engineers constantly talk of all the work they do. Well here is an Arts course which calls up to 33 hours a week plus lab reports, projects and essays.

Use Imported China

Have you ever wondered about that big white stone building on the south-east corner of Avenue Road and Bloor Street? It's been there since 1900, built with money donated to the university by Lillian Massey. The floors are tiled and the walls are marble. The linen tablecloths and china were imported from Europe. The stained glass windows were brought from England. Even the stone on the outside of the building was shipped to Toronto from Indiana.

Graduates from this beautiful building are in great demand. Some join hospital staffs as dieticians, or else become demonstrators for meat-packing firms, stove manufacturers, or large department stores. Not all girls specialize in dietetics. Many become textile designers, or join cloth-testing laboratories for soap and detergent manufacturers. Then, of course, many become teachers or take specialized graduate work elsewhere.

Make Good Wives

Fourth year girls are really prepared for wifehood. Each student must for three days keep house and cook on the second and third floors of the House Ec. building, made up like small bungalows. Students must even clean the bath tub. But there is a catch to it. Each girl must attend every lecture and be on time. It appears there are many tales about flat meringues, fallen cakes, unwhippable cream, and many nervous wrecks at the end of the three days.

There is a very important organization connected with these courses called the House Ec. Club. It acts as social outlet for the girls by arranging dances and the Freshie Tea, by which first year students meet the staff and become acquainted with the building. Bev Bryan, fourth year rep and treasurer of the club has asked especially for a "plug" for the formal dance to be held at Casa Loma on February 22.

The girls will supply all their own entertainment and if it will be anything like the flip-flapping pancakes and sighty clotheslines of the Varsity homecoming parade, it should be very good. Which reminds one, that it probably would be a good idea to see if there are any pancakes (with lots of maple syrup) in the House Ec. building right now.

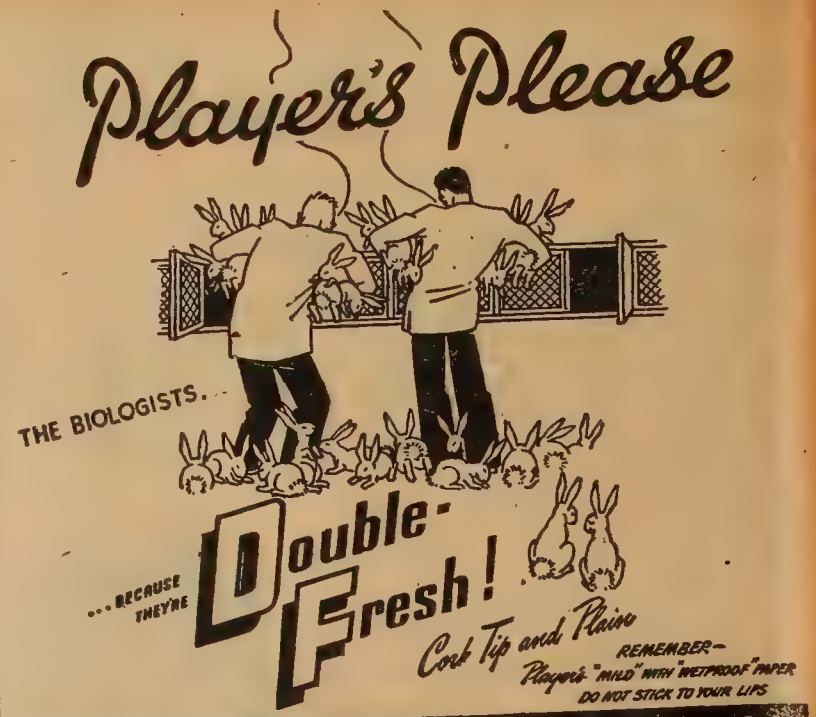
A Step Toward Peace



A student press agency for the international exchange of student news was established at the ISS Summer Seminar in Germany in August, 1948. Its purpose is to acquaint students everywhere with news reports of significant and interesting student activities on a world wide scale. It is the hope of the founders of U-Press, as the organization is now called, that a broader exchange of ideas, a closer affiliation of European and North American students, and a better understanding of each individual country's problems will be effected.

At the last CUP conference held in Montreal, December 28-31, 1949, the responsibility for the handling of the North American bureau of U-Press was given to The Varsity. Previously the work had been done by the ISS Committee of l'Universite de Montreal, which asked to be relieved of the responsibility largely because of the expense. At the conference CUP took over all the debts and other responsibilities.

The plan at present is for The Varsity to send to the Amsterdam office a monthly bulletin of pertinent Canadian news, and to incorporate material received from Amsterdam covering European activities with CUP material into mimeographed monthly bulletins for distribution to Canadian university newspapers. If the plan works well distribution on a bi-monthly basis is anticipated for next year.

So far about a dozen European nations are represented and served by U-Press. The organization hopes to expand to include as many more nations as possible. It is through such work as this that a basis for world peace may sooner be found. The political and cultural pattern on the European continent is influenced by geographic, economic and psychological conditions which differ both in degree and content from that found in North America. Any agency which conduces to the mutual understanding and clarification of people's problems on an international level cannot but broaden the outlook of those whom it reaches.

The Varsity is proud of its role in this enterprise.

Noggin-Foggin' Egg-Nogg, Ugh!

J. J. (Jolly Jack) Hooligan, President of the U. C Snit, announced last night that the Snit will shortly introduce the "Centennial egg-Nogg" in honor of the U. C. Arts Ball.

"This Egg-Nogg will put you to sleep for 100 years," Hooligan said.

A panel of experts, including representatives from Bordens, Bray's Hatcheries, the Snit and Gooderham and Worts drew up the formula for the Centennial Egg-Nogg Petitions for membership on the board from Alcoholics Anonymous and the W. C. T. U. were refused.

The Coraba Rum Co.'s application was referred to a committee being set up to devise an "All-Varsity Toddy for Post-Hockey Game Celebrations."

Ingredients of the Egg-Nogg, approved by Good Housekeeping and the Engineering Society, include one egg, half a cup of cream, a pinch of salt and four cups of an undisclosed substance described by the committee as "just the thing for an egg-nogg." A dash of sugar may be added.

It is permissible, the committee stated, to dispense with the egg, cream and salt when these ingredients are not on hand. In this case, they added, the Centennial Egg-Nogg should be called "Egg-Nogg Concentrate" or "Essence of Egg-Nogg".

Directions are as follows: Separate white from yoke of egg and beat yoke; add cream, sugar and essence of egg-nogg; beat well and fold in stiffly beaten egg white; chug-a-lug!

Comments on the announcement of the Centennial Egg-Nogg were mixed. Bob Diaper, Varsity Sports Columnist—"Just what I've been fighting for."

Simcoe Hall—"Send us a sample".

Skuleman—"Why the egg?"

"Two chaps have tested the Egg-Nogg," Hooligan said. "We are waiting for them to wake up to see if they enjoyed it."

"Efforts are being made by the Snit to serve Centennial Egg-Noggs at the Arts Ball.

Should We Join IUS? Here Are The Views For And Against

(This is the final article in a series designed to furnish Canadian students with the history, organization, and relations of the National Federation of Canadian University Students with the International Union of Students.)

By JACK GRAY

Should we join the International Union of Students? This is the question which Canadian students will be called on to answer again. In 1947 we decided we should join IUS. In 1948 we decided we should not. And now in 1950 we are to be asked again.

This observer thinks we should join the IUS. Many Canadian students do not. Since there are two very positive sides to the argument, we present them both, with some comments.

FOR

We should join the IUS because:

—It will provide us with an opportunity to participate in the positive program of the IUS. In the past this program has produced several series of international student games, both winter and summer, a tuberculosis sanitorium in Czechoslovakia, world student news gathered and disseminated by the IUS, conferences of groups such as medical students and architectural students, an investigation of problems which students all over the world are facing.

—It will provide us with an opportunity to meet and work with students whose situation, both educational and political, is far different from ours. It will give us information about students from other parts of the world, and most important, will allow us to give to world students information about ourselves, our institutions, and our way of life.

—It will provide us with an opportunity to defend our democratic system in an organization that has constantly maintained that it is undemocratic, but has interpreted the meaning of "democracy" to their own ends until it has no relation to what we understand by the term.

—It will get us out of our almost isolation position with regard to the international student world, a position which can hardly be regarded as realistic in view of the world picture today.

—It will, in the long run, strengten NFCUS, because it will bring Canadian students together on an issue on which we can all agree, and in the fight for an ideal which we all desire. Students of Canadian universities have enough faith in their democratic system to support a majority decision once that decision is made.

AGAINST

We should not join the IUS because:

—The positive program of the IUS has been too partisan. It has constantly, and more strongly in recent months, mirrored the communist political line, and has concerned itself too much with activities of a purely political nature. We should have nothing to do with an organization that is communist, because they will use our good name and we will not be able to have any say in what is going on.

—We can meet students from other parts of the world through other organizations, such as the International Student Service. True, this does not give us contact with students from behind the Iron Curtain, but they are communists, and we can't get along with them in any case. We should form a "western" union of students to meet our own kind.

—The communists have complete control of the IUS, and they will not let us defend our way of life in that organization, or even allow us to be heard as a minority. We cannot possibly have any effect on what has become a highly organized propaganda machine.

—Canadian students have no place getting mixed up in international politics. We should leave that kind of thing for the United Nations and stick to co-operation wherever possible on a non-partisan, student level.

—It will break NFCUS in two. Since all Canadian students can't agree on this matter, and since some parts of the country are particularly opposed, it will split NFCUS down the centre, and seriously weaken the work of the Federation in Canada. It is better to have a strong NFCUS than to get out into the international world.

Some Comments . . .

These are roughly the arguments which are presented for and against joining the IUS. They can be greatly expanded, and a great deal of time can be spent on details. But in essence it boils down to this: Those who are for joining are interested in seeing Canadian students take a mature place among the world student community, strong in their resolve to have their point of view heard. Those who are against don't want to have anything to do with communism, think joining IUS will seriously weaken NFCUS, and want to see us stay in our own back yard.

The arguments for joining strike us as more mature and more realistic than the arguments against. We would suggest the following program for NFCUS with regard to the IUS:

(1) Initiate immediately, on all Canadian campuses, a program of education about the IUS, what it is, and what it could be.

(2) Take a vote on each campus to find out whether Canadian students think we should join the IUS.

(3) If that vote is in favour of affiliation, take immediate steps to appoint at least three Canadian students to attend the IUS Congress in Europe this summer as observers. Make sure that these students are the best informed, the best prepared, and the strongest Canadian student leaders available, and give them full support, both financially and morally.

(4) At the same time, prepare a campaign to convince the other western student unions to rejoin or join the IUS, since we cannot hope to make any impression in that organization without at least two-thirds of these sympathetic unions to work with us.

(5) Prepare to affiliate with IUS next year, following the NFCUS conference in September. By that time we should have been able to ascertain the feeling of the other western unions, and better prepare ourselves to take our place in the IUS, as a militant opposition.

(6) Prepare a program of publicity for Canadian students so that they will be constantly, and fully, informed of what is going on, who is acting for them, and what success or failure our efforts are having.

A strong and positive program from NFCUS on the IUS question at this time can do much to further our understanding and appreciation of the student world so far removed from us. Perhaps the next Canadian student leader who goes out to meet the "communist menace" will not have to report "frustration, failure, defeat, regret, humiliation and confusion". It is to be hoped that it will be so.

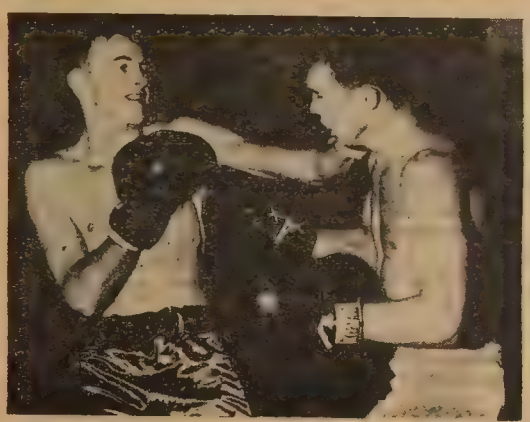
More Scholarships, Improved Teachers Suggests President

The scholarship plan of the Department of Veterans Affairs should be revised to afford educational opportunities to those qualified to continue their formal education, said President Smith in his Report for the year ending June, 1949.



Questions Policies

While advocating this increase in scholarships, the president questioned whether the present practices and policies with respect to the admitting and guiding of adolescents in the new freedom of the University are good enough. Withdrawl of students after the first year to the extent of 30% is too high, he said. Wastage, particularly in the first and second years of university work, has been estimated in the University of Toronto at 30 to 40 per cent of the entering class, the report stated. Some of those who dropped out were not equipped for further study and should not have been admitted.

But the president did not lay the blame for this wastage entirely upon the students. The blame was ascribed to the teaching method as well. "Even a gifted teacher cannot inspire students in the mass," he stated. The impact of mind upon mind cannot take place day after day in a class of two or three hundred. The president suggested the Socratic method of question and answer and of discussion as a remedy. He pointed out that the ratio of students to instructors in the university is 1 to 10.8, but said it must be kept in mind that most of the demonstrators give only a few hours a week to instructional duties. "I am not satisfied that qualitatively the proportion is satisfactory," he said.

Unions' Power Debaters' Topic; Forsey Visitor

Dr. Eugene Forsey, Director of Research, Canadian Congress of Labor, will be present as Honorary Visitor at the Hart House Debate Wednesday evening. The Resolution for debate is "Resolved that the power of trade unions has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished."

Born in Grand Bank, Newfoundland, in 1904, Dr. Forsey received his early schooling in Ottawa. He graduated from McGill University in 1925, received his M.A. in 1926, and his Ph.D. in 1941.

He served as lecturer at McGill from 1929 to 1941.

Dr. Forsey has had a distinguished career in the CCF party. He was President of the Quebec organization 1936-1937 and 1940-1941, and a member of the CCF National Council 1937-1938 and 1945-1946.

He has had many articles published, and is one of the authors of "Social Planning for Canada."

Motets To Canticles

By A. W. LEWIS

It was once said of Dr. Willan that you might imagine him to have a rugby ball tucked under his arm. Well, today, in his sixty-ninth year we still see that rugby ball attitude. Besides being on the staff at the Royal Conservatory, the "doc", as his friends affectionately call him, is university organist giving four recitals a term in Convocation Hall. His position as organist and choir master at St. Mary Magdalene's has been the seed-bed of a fine choir and many of his best compositions.

From an early age Dr. Willan has been trained in music, starting as he emphasises, in an English church choir. Here he received a sound basis in music. In London, England, he studied organ under Dr. Sabgster and became thoroughly acquainted with the Anglican Service. Thus in 1913 when the late Dr. Vogt invited Dr. Willan to be head of the theory department of the oCnservatory of Music he was already a composer, organist and a teacher of theory of renown.

Since that time there is evidence to show much work for the furtherance of Canadian music, by Canadians. Not only by his own example does Dr. Willan lead the way but by a personal interest in each composer who shows signs of good sound work. While he never discourages the smallest attempt, there is no one more derisive of poor or shoddy material than Dr. Willan.

He is notorious for the fact that he never is too deeply immersed in "intellectual gyrations" to stop and chat about this or that for a few moments. A professor of mathematics from Stockholm University, here at a convention in 1947, met Dr. Willan and his choir and was so impressed that he still sends a card at Christmas. One of Dr. Willan's favourite pastimes is his dog, Trixy. Besides being his alarm clock, she loves to sit on his knee and "get her chest rubbed."

For the past two years Los Angeles has had the pleasure during the summer months of Dr. Willan's company. During this time he has been working on his second symphony which may be performed this season. A recent listing of his works shows over two hundred com-

The Guardsman

The Guardsman at Hart House Theatre, directed by Robert Gill, wears very well; probably because it is all such hokum. Filled with stock characters and with an absurd Gilbertian situation it is as frothy as Pogo and even more entertaining. Mind you, it has been a notorious flop, and only skilful exploitation can save it. But we had skill, freshness and enthusiasm to spare last Saturday; hence its rescue from limbo is one of the season's treats and, unless the creeping lethargy has stricken theatre goers, one of its hits. Its lines are not Wildian epigrams, rather their joy lies in their implications within the story. The plot is a field day for double meanings and paradox since it traces an actor's attempt to test his wife's fidelity by disguising himself as a virile Russian guardsman. Before going on to the explicit pleasures I want to contribute a few carping criticisms. The play is light, the lines are flowery, the acting flamboyant. This is all necessary. But there came a time when one wanted something a little more solid, a little masculine. It ought to have been provided by the creditor and critic. It wasn't. The maid ought to have been more slovenly and less flighty. The general idea I suggest is that the minor characters offer a contrast of mediocrity and saneness to the spectacular exaggeration of Mr. Donald Glen as the actor and the playful coquetishness of Miss Robin Taylor as the actress.

Mr. Glen scored a personal triumph and received an ovation as the Actor. As the Guardsman and as the Actor he created two believable, consistent characters; he lived their inner consistency, displayed a genius for timing, a dancer's control over his body and gestures, a singer's mastery of his voice, pointing up the humor without making it blatant. The above may suggest that the over-emphasis of his actor may be contagious. Nevertheless, to calm down, it was a delight to watch. Miss Taylor was roguish or violent as the case demanded, but since her part lacked the wilder aspects of Mr. Glens, she seemed somewhat pale by contrast. Audrey Lowrie as Mama was excellent, loud and coarse.

Everyone seemed dressed just right; Miss Taylor's ugly and ill-fitting green creation of the first act serving to stress her metamorphosis into a seductive sophisticate in a magnificant formal in the second act. Every one's movements were magnificent and witty; the important voices arrived strongly; the whole production ran along at great speed and without flaw; and the professional smoothness of the actors was abetted by appearing before two colorful sets, a cluttered living room (which wasn't) and an opulent opera box.

My note to the debating club if harassed for topics, "Did the actress know it was her husband and lead him on, or did she not, leaving the husband proven as an actor but cuckold?" My note to all others: don't miss it.

Jan Rubes

Fresh from winning top honours at the International Music Festival in Geneva, 29 year-old Czech bass Jan Rubes came to Canada as a Displaced Person in 1948. Since arrival, basso Rubes has sung in CBC Opera Company, and has the leading role in Forbidden Journey recently filmed in Montreal.

With Leo Barkin at the piano, Mr. Rubes will make his Canadian debut, Monday, January 30th at Eaton Auditorium. Featured on his programme will be songs of Strauss and Rachmaninoff and arias from The Creation and The Magic Flute. Varsity students are offered tickets at one half the regular price.

Wymilwood Concert

Edmund Hockridge
Leo Barkin

The keynote of the Sunday Night Concert at Wymilwood this week was enthusiasm on all sides. Mr. Hockridge stimulated Mr. Barkin and vice versa, while a warmly receptive audience stimulated them both. The informal atmosphere of the room was in perfect harmony with the nature of the concert. In short, "all was right as right could be".

In his opening group, Mr. Hockridge displayed a fine resonant voice with a wide range of expression and an almost flawless technique, used so effortlessly that it gives an ingenuous quality to the most difficult pieces. "The Hills of Gruzia" (Mednikoff) showed careful shading in the sudden changes of intensity, and established the sensitivity of the accompanist, which never faltered during the performance. In "Lord Randall" (Cyril Scott) Mr. Hockridge handled the dialogue with the vivid dramatic effects at which he is especially adept. A tranquil lyric fluidity characterized "Deep in a Quiet Forest", by Peter Henley, the first work of the composer, which was introduced by Mr. Hockridge in England during the war. The group of spirituals showed a perfect combination of voice and piano, in which the solid rhythm and dynamic force gave an impression of improvisation. The last group of the programme contained several specialties of Mr. Hockridge, of which "All Day on the Prairie" (Guion) and the Diack parody of Handel "Sing a Song of Sixpence" were the best.

The highlight of the programme was the "Largo al factotum" from the "Barber of Seville". Mr. Hockridge will sing again at the Opera Festival at the Royal Alex beginning Feb. 4. A vital, vigorous performance, it was a far better advertisement than a page in the Globe. If you haven't your tickets yet, now is the time.

TSO Pops

The magic word "Gilbertandsullivan" possesses the rare power of conjuring up a capacity audience whenever it is pronounced. Friday night's Pop Concert at Massey Hall was a practical demonstration of this power. Devotees of the two Victorian collaborators flocked to the Hall, and departed satisfied. The synchronization of chorus, soloists, and orchestra was as perfect as could be desired, although the chorus often sacrificed clarity of diction in the required oral acrobatics to speed. Much of the success of the performance was due to conductor Geoffrey Waddington's keen sense of the dramatic, and his restraint in passages where the orchestra might tend to become overly self-assertive.

The choice of soloists was a particularly happy one. Nellie Smith's warm contralto voice is well known to CBC listeners. The meticulously clear lilting soprano of Doreen Hulme was shown to advantage in Poor Wandering One. Edmund Hockridge in I Am the Very Model of a Modern Major-General displayed a pellucidity of enunciation remarkable in the combination of the verbal gymnastics and almost impossible rapidity of the aria. Somehow William Morton seemed uncomfortable in his role in The Pirates of Penzance; he entered more fully into the spirit of the music when he sang A Wandering Minstrel, I from The Mikado. Of the five soloists baritone Eric Tredwell infused into his singing an infectious sense of delight in nonsense which he effectively transmitted to his audience. Prhaps this was because his role was comic rather than romantic. His showmanship was particularly evident in A Policeman's Lot is not a Happy One and in the trio When You had left our Pirate Fold. Highlights among the choruses were When the Foeman Bares his Steel and the finale of Act Two of the Pirates.

There have been many dreary presentations of excerpts from the comic operas, in which ladies and gentlemen in full evening dress have unimaginatively struggled through arias and choruses forgetting that what they are singing is not great dramatic art but light and amusing nonsense; Friday night, however, soloists and chorus romped through the programme joyfully, often sweeping the audience into the land of delightful impossibilities which is the exclusive realm of Gilbert and Sullivan.

Movie Review

Maytime In Mayfair

Austerity apparently hasn't dampened the enthusiasm of the British movie indutry one jot. In Maytime in Mayfair, playing at Shea's, they took a crack at producing a technicolor comedy on the plush American style.

The set had the requisite glitter, the heroine's little apartment had just the right touch of improbable opulence, and the gowns of course were exquisite. The only thing missing was the music.

Last year when Oklahoma played in London, an English critic lamented the fact that one thing the British cannot do is write the catchy tunes demanded for a good musical. I agree with him. The lavish scenery and the brilliant footwork fall completely flat if the songs aren't there.

The dancing, too, was more reminiscent of a small time music hall than an expensive technicolour movie. There was one dream sequence, however, (it reminded me very much of something I saw Ginger Rogers do once) in which a quartette of sweet little things with pink uniformly chubby legs danced away with the scene. Unfortunately they didn't stay around long enough. The fault with the rest of the dancing seemed to be the choreography rather than the technique. Anna Neagle, famed as a dancer par excellence, suffered for lack of an adequate partner. Michael Wilding, while an excellent actor, is certainly no Fred Astaire when it comes to dancing.

Maytime was a rather schizophrenic picture, for the scenes were alternately musical and comedy. Where the music limped, the comedy boiled right along. Here Michael Wilding, as a fortunate young man named Gore-Brown who inherited a swish woman's dress shop, turns in a very engaging piece of acting. Gore-Brown's cousin, Sir Henry Hazelrigg, has a small black moustache, no chin, and didn't smile once during the picture, bue he provided several scenes of the most entertaining and subtle humour. Anna Neagle as the managress of the Dress Shop induces in Wilding and, I must confess, in myself too, a great interest in her business.

With a little more comedy and a little more plot, Maytime could have been a very successful picture. The cast was more than adequate, Anna Neagle and Michael Wilding being particularly good. Unfortunately, however, it tried too hard to be a musical comedy and just limped along to the nearest happy ending.

Jolson Sings Again

Let's start out by admitting that Jolson Sings Again, currently featured at the University and Eglinton theatres, is not as good movie fare as its predecessor The Jolson Story. And having admitted that, let's go on and say that this second picture in the Jolson series is lots of good fun.

The plot is loose and ambling and serves as little more than a thread tying together the numerous songs done in the accepted Jolson style.

Picking up the Jolson tale where the first picture left off, Jolson Sings Again recounts the return of the singer's popularity via the United Service organization and the first film in the Jolson saga.

An intriguing bit of movie business is used here when the aging Jolson (Larry Parks with grey hair) meets the young actor (Larry Parks with dark hair) who is to play the Jolson in the movie. One of the neatest tricks, we have seen in a long time is used in the scene where Parks (dark) practices with gestures with Parks (grey) in front of a mirror.

The "play within a play" technique crops up in this picture too. Here we see Jolson watching the premiere performance of the Jolson Story from the back of a theatre while the screen Jolson gives out with snatches of most of the songs that hit the peak of their popularity after the picture was released. While probably serving the useful purpose of getting the picture on the market in less time than if entirely new scenes were filmed, this trick is still acceptable because it brings back, in brief, all the best scenes of the earlier film.

Also back from the first picture are Poppa Jolson (still sparkling and watching pretty ankles), Steve Martin and Momma Jolson. One of the most welcome additions to the cast is Barbara Hale who plays the part of Jolson's second wife. Miss Hale is one of the reasons Hollywood can expect a continued audience for its pictures. She is lovely, she sports a southern drawl that makes your hair curl, and she can carry a picture without the use of a plot.

Jolson Sings Again is best summed up by a remark made by one of the characters in the picture: "It may be corny but when Jolson opens his mouth and starts singing those old songs—well you just let yourself go and enjoy it."

Outlines Qualities

On the subject of teaching in general, the president said first-class teaching is required to "develop and strengthen a talented and balanced intellect" in a young person. The teacher, he said, must be more than a retailer of the findings of others; to be dynamic and inspiring he must always be pushing forward and outward in his study. University teaching should not be mainly didactic in character; it should be directed to arousing curiosity and impelling the student to find answers by himself.

While the president did not admit the case for uniformity in university teaching, he said that many a young university instructor has failed as a teacher because he has not had the benefit of the advice and counsel of successful professors in his field. The hit or miss, sink or swim attitude of some senior professors towards the teaching of the juniors has been responsible for failure and frustration on the part of the lecturer and also on the part of his students, he said. There would, however, be a deadening uniformity, he said, if the departmental head should endeavour to make over his young instructors in his own teaching ways.

Deploring the loaded time-tables of some faculties whose students have from 30 to 35 hours of lectures and laboratory classes per week, the president stated, "such a treadmill of formal instruction does not develop in the students the capacity to think by and for themselves, to form the habit of self-reliance, to strengthen a talent for independent judgment and to correlate their various studies. It may be a program for a trade school or technical institute: it is not worthy of a university, he said.

man said. "We now have all the contact we could desire with British students and the opinions of these. We would have as much need of this move as joining with the US."

"Not only this, but I fear that any move to join the BUCS would have an alienating effect upon the students in Quebec who have done so much to foster NFCUS since its reinstatement after the war. They are known to be against the joining with any English organization," he concluded.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

The criticism of student readers in the form of letters to the Editor has always been an important factor in the shaping of Varsity policy. Suggestions made by the students in this manner have often become the guideposts of journalistic thought. In the following two articles significant letters from Varsitys of other years will be reprinted.

Dear Editor,

My name is Buster, I live at 231 Park Drive. I have a cat. Its name is Tabby. It is three years old. I am two.

Pray do not consider me presumptuous, for although I have been reading The Varsity for the short period of one year and a half (my father considers me a backward child), I would like to humbly submit a few critical suggestions.

Firstly may I commend your paper for its many excellent features. I have particularly enjoyed your recent series on "Sex Freedom through Education."

However it is to be deplored that in general your publication lacks cultural tone. Prof. Ogelthrope Slatterside's illuminating lecture, last Thursday afternoon, on the effect of the Elizabethan drama on 18th Century Bulgarian culture was completely ignored. I beg to protest, Mr. Editor.

Furthermore a journal which professes to report the latest scientific discoveries should surely allocate more than a mere eleven pages to Thaddeus Clapsaddel's recent report on nuclear fission. No, do not insult our intelligence, Mr. Editor; the details were conspicuously omitted.

Also absent from your pages lately are art photographs which are source of great enjoyment to many of us. Whaddya tryin' t'do? Dja think an Esquire calendar lasts a year, or that we can all afford trips to Paris?

And, sir, please print the words to "Teady Bear's Picnic" soon.

Another criticism, if you will bear it, is in regard to the quality of paper on which The Varsity is printed. It does not make good hats. It does not make good boats. Also my mother says it is inferior to Eaton's catalogue as it is not absorbent and the ink comes off.

In conclusion I have a request. Would you kindly enquire of your science editor if he can provide me with a simple chlorine derivative formula which might bleach and render sterile certain articles of clothing I seem to shed regularly. If this formula be alimentary I could compound it between my piccolo lessons and my afternoon nap.

Thanking you for your kind indulgence

I remain precociously yours

Buster

Institute of Child Study.

P.S. Would you kindly have your lovelorn editor consider this perplexing problem and submit to me under plain cover his advice to the above address. Three days ago at the Poets and Peasants Club I met an engaging young lady and fell madly in love with her. Unfortunately she is but 19 months, five months my junior. This disparity in our ages seems to be an insurmountable barrier. Do you think love can overcome such an obstacle or should I demand the return of my teething ring?

Chariot Race

Editor, The Varsity:

In view of the depressing sights of hordes of frustrated wenches from other colleges descending upon the Engineering stores, begging tickets to the ONLY WORTHWHILE campus dance, The Engineers' Skule At-Home, it seems worthwhile to indicate that the boys of the other faculties lack the necessary masculine appeal to satisfy the demand of female counterparts.

Skulemen have already many times proved their superiority in all fields of endeavour and can truthfully see no justification for continuing the annual Garry P. Potts Memorial Skule Chariot Races other than continuing the ancient tradition. Thus this will be the 86th and last opportunity for the boys in Arts to prove their manliness and regain a few of the cast-off wall-flowers.

"In the eventuality that there may be at least one contesting entry, Skule will take four of their youngest and smallest freshmen from their beer and train them on a hard liquor diet for the event."

The Skule Charioteers.

Not A Priest

Editor, The Varsity:

In The Varsity of Friday, Jan. 20, there is a paragraph which states that "Fr. Clarence Duffy, an Irish Roman Catholic priest from New York will speak on the University campus on Monday afternoon . . . under the auspices of the Canadian Peace Congress."

For the benefit of readers who may be thinking of attending this meeting in order to hear the viewpoint of a practising Catholic priest, may I point out that not only has the Ordinary of the local diocere not given Fr. Duffy permission to address this meeting, (which is according to the constitution of the Catholic Church), but also that his Archdiocese, that of New York, U.S.A., has deprived him of his "faculties" to celebrate mass, hear confessions, or administer sacraments. In other words, Fr. Duffy is no longer a practising Catholic priest.

Frank Price,
III Pass Arts,
St. Michael's College.

Doesn't Follow Rules

Editor, The Varsity:

A recent article in The Varsity announced the apearance on this campus of a reputed priest coming to speak to meetings sponsored by an organization supported by campus Communists.

It might as well have stated that the ordinary rules followed by priests in good standing when visiting a diocese to which they do not belong—"To address a public meeting in diocese not his own, a priest is required to obtain the permission of the Ordinary of the diocese."

This permission has not been granted.

Claude Macdonald,
President, Newman Club.

ED. NOTE: Father Duffy claims he requires no permission from the local diocese to address a public meeting. "I wouldn't waste my time presenting my credentials," he says.

Father Duffy's original diocese is Kilmore, Ireland, not New York, although as reader Price points out, diocese facilities in New York have been denied him. Father Duffy insists he is still "a practising priest" until his bishop or the Pope rules otherwise. His bishop died three years after Father Duffy was ordained and no new one has been appointed.

According to Cardinal McGuigan's office, under canon law a priest must obtain permission of the Ordinary of the local diocese to address a public meeting. In Toronto, the Ordinary is the archbishop. Toronto church officials say Father Duffy has not been granted permission to speak on this side of the ocean.

In Montreal, action was taken to the effect of refusing him the use of any church buildings. While no permission has been granted Father Duffy here, no action has been taken yet to prevent him from speaking.

Romeo and Juliet

Editor, The Varsity:

As regards R. E. Rogers objections to my critique of Malvern's "Romeo and Juliet," my "obviously limited horizons" include producing and directing the play, acting in three different productions of it, and reading it more than twenty times.

I have witnessed many professional and amateur productions and have seen quite creditable jobs from collegiates in small towns where resources were far less than Malvern's. Nor did I expect "the blase performance of a multi-married Hollywood actress" but merely a performance, not a rapid-fire recitation.

It is no pleasure to write an unfavourable review, and under the circumstances I wouldn't have written anything at all if it were not so apparent that Malvern's production could easily have been much better.

Any of the younger swains on the campus who would like to correspond with a pretty teen-age lass in exotic far-off Hongkong have their chance right here.

A letter dated Dec. 27, 1949 and addressed to the President of Student Council, University of Toronto, from an "ex-Toronto Varsity man," J. Y. Demers, expressed the following appeal:

PEN PALS WANTED ! !

"A pretty, young Miss—Portuguese—in the Far East, but with a New World outlook, is pining for pen pals, males exclusively. Age limits: 18 to 21.

"Her interests: softball, dancing, music (light—def). Has travelled up and down the Asiatic coastline and can supply the griff on mysterious China. Age: 18 . . we-e-ll, almost.

"Address: Miss Thelma Coehle, PO Box 496, Hongkong."

It would seem that Miss Coehle would be able to supply the "griff" not only on "mysterious China," but also on the latest slanguage prevalent in that distant land.

The Post Office Department advises that postage rates to Hongkong are: Ordinary mail —regular first class rates, 4 cents for the first ounce, 2 cents for each additional ounce; Air Mail—25 cents for each quarter ounce.

Good luck, kids!

If silver skates were awarded for women's hockey, first prize should go to Inica Janacek, goalie for UC II. Inica put on a stellar performance in the scoreless deadlock that resulted in the game between Physio and UC seconds Friday noon at Varsity Arena.

The first period was slap-happy with both teams making several fruitless breaks. The play calmed down in the last two frames with the majority of action in the UC area.

Wilma Booty, Marg McGuiness and Joyce Prentice displayed some fast skating and good stick-handling while Phyll Wilks, Lil Betanoff and Betty Coo were outstanding for Physio.

positions revealing a wide range of expression.

This list shows the varied degree of work turned out by Dr. Willan since 1906. Two symphonies and a group of incidental music for plays in Hart House are only some of his instrumental compositions. Vocal composition holds a prominent place in this list such as songs, motets, masses and settings of the canticles.

Although Dr. Willan is relatively unknown to the greater part of the Canadian people, I firmly contend that if and when Canada breaks into the world of musical compositions Dr. Healy Willan will be unanimously acclaimed as its progenitor.

by forever giving up that right. We cannot have this dangerous power in foreign hands, make them close it themselves!

King Hiram: Suppose that these sneaky enemies close it off and do not re-open our Plaza, ever?

Sir Lampcelot: They are not like us; of such politics and intrigues they know little. My son shall not be defeated!

Four-Bells: Our land is a hot-bed of communists; Communists! COMMUNISTS! Ya-ha-ha-a-a! (Four-Bells is dragged out, screaming, and waving six arms.)

King Hiram: And yet, Sir Allan, if the students of that University persuade their parents to side against us on this issue at the next Electoral Wars, we shall be hard pressed for swords in our fight against Stalwart Smith. The students could turn thirty thousand votes against us, and if you remember, Sir Allan, it was only a thousand-odd blades of the Ward Five Hussars that won your battle for you last New Year's Day. Perhaps we'd better close the Plaza ourselves. I have heard it said that these Varsity-ites care not for the Grey Cup Tournament, but only for their own tournaments, so I think. . . .

Sir Lampcelot: Lies! LIES! They aim to defeat my son! My little boy, my little baby.

King Hiram: We'll leave the matter till next Monday's meeting; meanwhile, let us get down to unimportant and trivial matters which this august body must consider . . . the tax rates.

Editor, The Varsity:

An answer to the Poems and Columns in The Varsity:

We've heard your jokes, we've seen your poems,
We've read your columns too,
Of "how girls come to Varsity
For the purpose of catching you".

If this is your opinion, boys,
you'd better change it quick,
As we have come for finer things
Besides this well known trick.

If you conceited thus may be to think we only dream of you,
Believe us, there are many things,
More worthier of thought than you.

If you think girls would waste four years to get themselves a diamond ring,
When in an office they'd get paid
And still achieve the same old thing,
Then you are so mistaken boys, as this is not the case,
The most of us will end up hitched
But the game is not a race.

There's a time to work and play, and a time to go to College,
There's a time to go and get your man
And a time to pursue knowledge!

But seriously I'd like to laud those girls combining two in one,
For they gain wisdom and besides
Are having lots of fun.

So please don't judge us harshly boys,
We are the weaker sex.
In spit of this we're out to get,
Docs, Engineers, and Architects!

Blue Cagers Drop Two In Weekend Hoop Tilts To Western, Assumption

LONDON

London, Jan. 20. Special—Althongh they played one of their best games of the season, the Senior basketball Blues were downed 57-48 by a powerful Western University squad in London last Friday night. Paced by gigantic captain George Wearring, the Mustangs romped to an early lead and managed to stay just out of danger all through the game.

Almost 4,000 fans saw the uncanny shooting accuracy of the Mustangs pull them into the lead. Then, relying on greater height to give them control of rebounds, the Western team held onto the advantage throughout the rest of the game. Top scorers for the Mustangs were Wearring with 17 points and Paul Thomas and Harry Wade, each with 11 points.

The Mustangs lived up to pre-season predictions in their performance against the Blues in the league opener for this year. Last year's champs, the Western squad have come up with a tall, powerful squad that will be a big hurdle for any team with Intercollegiate title aspirations.

Johnny McManus was again the top scorer for the Blues, netting 12 points. Teammate Jack Gray hooped 10 points and turned in a fine defensive effort for Varsity.

WINDSOR

Windsor, Jan. 21, Special—To make a clean sweep of both exhibition tilts against the Blue hoopsters, the Assumption Purple Raiders downed the Varsity Seniors 56-42 in Windsor last Saturday night. It was the fourth straight home victory for the Assumption squad.

Using the same tactics against the Blues that brought them a 60-48 victory on their last visit to Toronto, the Raiders piled up a commanding 15 point lead by the third quarter. Only one player on the two squads failed to hoop at least one point, Jimmy Bell of Varsity.

Personal fouls were an influential factor in the Blue defeat, as they received 21 of the 36 fouls awarded by referees during the game.

The Purple and White squad made good use of the advantage and made a high percentage of their free throws good for the single point. Ray Ryan with 9, Bill Fisher with 7, and Don Pataky with 8 were top point-getters for Assumption.

Ted Luck and Bill Wigle with 7 points each led Blue scoring, and turned in a good all-round effort for the Blues.

Next Saturday, the Blues meet the McGill Redmen here in Toronto for another league tilt. The Redmen have been strengthened this season by the addition of several new men. Jim Mitchener and Harry Irving, both of football fame, are two of the additions.

Five Pointer

Scoring two goals himself and setting his teammates up for three more, Rich Howson, winger on the victorious Blue hockey squad, proved a real asset to his squad in last Friday's game against the Golden Gaels. Howson was a threat defensively as well, checking many a Queen's rush by travelling fast in both directions.

Blues Dazzle Gaels By Speedy Attack Orr Gets Shut-out

By MAL CRAWFORD

After getting off to a slow start, the Blues turned on a full head of steam Friday night at the arena to finish the game with a 7-0 whitewashing of Queen's senior puck-pushers. The brightest figure in the game was centre, Rich Howson, who figured in five of Varsity's seven goals, scoring two of them himself, and setting up his linemates on defencemen on three others.

Howson Big Cog

Howson was one of the three stars picked for the Blue and White Society's silver skate award after the game. The other two were John McDougall, who scored a goal and an assist in the last period, and Joe Kane, who scored two goals and raised his league-leading penalty-getting record to 22 minutes. McDougall was the outstanding defenceman of the game, checking faultlessly and carrying the puck with more speed than most of Queen's forwards. Just how much Pork has speeded up is amazing when you consider that the only man on the team he could outskate at the first part of the season was the goalie, with pads on. He must have been foiled on more shots on than any other player, and really deserved his goal when he finally got it.

Lack Stick Handlers

Queen's didn't seem to have a qualified stick-handler on the team. There were plenty of guys that could skate, and a few who could check, but they lacked the weight and organization to be contenders. With Len Robertson on the injured list, Queen's had only three defencemen. Lou Battachio played nearly the whole game on defence, and rated for honorable mention in the star-selecting. Tim Harley's catching a puck on his forehead early in the first period didn't help matters for the Gaels either.

Varsity's first line was broken up for the first half of the initial period when Norm Fox got a ten minute misconduct penalty for throwing his broken stick into the stands. In practices, the players toss their sticks into the empty stands to get rid of them fast and to get them out of the way, as there are no referees to pick up after them. Norm just forgot that this wasn't a practice (grounds for this mistake became more obvious as the game progressed).

Different players were used in his place, but the line simply ceased to click, even after Norm returned. However, the Digby-Howson-Ver-

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

As John Dryden once wrote (in effect) . . . . the true end of satire is correction through admonition.

A One Act Play . . . in fact, a one scene play. . . .

Scene——A dirty sandstone castle at the junction of Bay Road and Queen Highway—the King's council chambers. King Hiram speaks. . . .

King Hiram: You, my advisors and councillors, must take before your consideration this proposal. 'Tis proposed to this august body, that we give our gracious permission to have closed up, shut off, and made impassable to the general issue of this fair land, that part of the King's Thoroughfare known as Devonshire Plaza.

Polonius Four-Bells, Senior Advisor: 'Twas the communists, I say! The communists! The six-armed Handy Andy was sent by the communists! Treason, I say! Treason!

Sir Allan Lampcelot, Crusador: I do believe, do mine ears not deceive me, 'tis the seat of learning that asketh this of the august council. I'll have none of this, none! Their hats have grown too big for their heads, indeed, much too big. I heareth they are to pit their own champion in the annual Tournament for the prize, which is the holding of the Grey Cup Final, against mine own son, Sir Civic Grandstand.

Their own champion, Baron Varsity Stadium Ph. D., the folk tell me, is to be fed so that his stature will be, by this fall, a total of 29,000 cubits. At this size, Baron Varsity will doubtless defeat my son, Sir Civic, in the coming competitions. It cannot be tolerated.

Councillor Salamanders: Hear! Hear! We'll have no unfair competition in this land! If we keep the Plaza open the Educationists will have no where to pile the food for Baron Varsity: Ha! keep it open.

Four-Bells: Perchance we had better accede to their requests; they do us no harm, they help us in . . . .

Sir Lampcelot: Keep thy tongue silent, old man! Look out for they communist dragons, and leave the council matters to us.

Four-Bells: A six armed idol indeed! It was the communists; it is just the kind of knavery they'd commit.

Councillor Outis, Squire of Ward Ten: If we do not close the Plaza, the Fact-smiths can do it themselves, there-

A-Nite Bouts Decide Senior Ring Champs

The senior intramural boxing champions for this year were declared at Athletic Night Saturday after a card of eight action bouts was run off. Heading the card was the heavyweight contest between Tim Turner of Trinity and Rod MacLennan of SPS, who put on a hard, fast four-round slugfest. Turner was given the nod and the championship on a unanimous decision. His great left-hand jabbing and longer reach enabled him to win over the harder punching MacLennan, but Turner had plenty of trouble. As he said after the bout, "Rod really was rocking me, and I had plenty of trouble with him."

In the 125 class, Hank Henshall boxed a no-decision exhibition with D. Geary of SPS, who outweighed Henshall by at least 15 pounds. In another exhibition, Nick Betz (125) took on Frank Corner (145), but, because of Corner's greater weight and longer reach, the judges gave the decision to Corner. Even though he lost, Betz put on a smart exhibition of plain and fancy boxing, and had his bigger opponent plenty worried.

In the 147 class Bob Couciero of SPS lost to an aggressive adversary, R. Priestman of PHE, on another unanimous decision. N. Green, a shifty boxer from SPS, beat Pete Petkoff (SPS) in the 155 division. Petkoff was the harder puncher, but Green parried and counter-punched effectively. In the semi-final, a pair of 175-pounders put on a good bout when J. Folinsbee of Skule took a decision over Don Hogarth, a less experienced boy from the same faculty.

Master of Ceremonies was Dick "Murdering" Mitchell, the Mountain Mauler, a noted boxer from the West Coast. Judges were Johnny Palmer and John Curney. The referees were Bobby Laurence and Chuck Murphy. The Varsity boxing coach, Tony Canzano, was present, and watched carefully for intercollegiate material.

The 1950 intercollegiate basketball team won their first game of the season at Saturday night's Athletic Night, defeating McMaster 30-7.

Marg Doyle took top scoring honors, bagging 9 points, with Cay Schenk close behind with 7. Thelma Henderson and Eleanor Lever were the outstarding guards of the game.

It was the first time the complete team has played and from the looks of things there's a successful season ahead for the girls.

McGill Cops Squash At Montreal Tourney

Montreal, Jan. 21, (Special to The Varsity):—McGill University took the Canadian Intercollegiate Squash Championship Saturday when they beat both the University of Toronto and the Royal Military College. The McGillians took RMC by a handy 5-0 shutout, but managed to only squeeze out a close 3-2 win against Toronto.

Varsity's representatives at this one-day turney were Ernie Howard (captain) and Jim Bidell. The championship is actually an unofficial one, since squash is not recognized by the CIAU as an intercollegiate competitive sport, but great pressure is being put on the Union for its recognition. These annual turneys do much to publicize the sport as an organized competitive one.

Whitney Line Exposed

The roving Varsity staff photographer came upon this scene of frantic activity during an interesting and exclusive-type trip through the heart of Whitney Hall, women's residence at University College. the photographer was accompanied, of course, by Miss Ferguson, Dean of Women, who found it necessary to tidy up the line a bit before this revealing picture could be taken. (See story on this page for full details.)

University Upheld By City Councillors In Reverse Move

By DON WILSON

In a surprise move, the City Council yesterday unanimously passed the recommendation of the Works Committee to close off part of Devonshire place in accordance with a request made by the University of Toronto.

University Credit

Controllers Balfour and Lamport, and Aldermen Phillips and Fishleigh discussed the University, and expressed the opinion that it was a credit to the city as well as a material asset. In view of these considerations, they continued, the recommendation should be passed.

There was no opposition in the discussion, but one or two questions were asked about the legal position of the City in the matter.

At a previous Board of Control meeting the Board voted against the recommendation, with Controller Balfour casting the only vote in favour of acceding to the University's request. The matter went to a Works committee meeting, who recommended to the Council that the city comply with the request. It was this recommendation that was passed yesterday by the council.

Balfour Moves Acceptance

The motion of acceptance was proposed by Controller Balfour, who first explained the situation of the request. After explaining this, he moved that the Board's previous decision be deleted, and the motion passed. Robert Baird, legal advisor to the council, was called to present the legal aspects of the case. Mr. Baird told the council that although the University had the right to close the street for any purpose, they were loath to do so in this case because it meant giving up their right to close it at any time in the future. This was legal under an agreement made many years ago between the city and the University.

Alderman Gould asked why the Governors of the University did not want to give up this right, and for what purpose they would shut the street themselves. Mr. Baird replied that he did not himself know, but asked Mr. Hamilton Cassells, University legal counsellor, for the information. Mr. Cassells replied that the University had no immediate plans, but that they were thinking of the distant future when they might need that right for still more expansion.

Lamport Changes Horses

Controller Lamport, who in the first meeting voted against the recommendation, told the council that he had changed his mind, and was willing to support the University. He expressed his desire for a larger

Carabins Invade Varsity Campus Coming Weekend

The Carabins are coming. A mixed group of forty students will arrive this Friday afternoon from the University of Montreal, to spend a cultural weekend as guests of the students of this university. Upon arrival they will be taken to a reception at Trinity College, and later disperse to various frat houses for dinner.

Saturday they will be taken on a tour of Hart House by the Warden, and then proceed on to the newer University buildings. After the tour they will be received by President Sidney Smith in the University Senate Chambers. There will be dinner in Hart House for the men and in the U.C. Women's Union for the women; then they will see the final performance of "The Guardsman" at Hart House Theatre.

Sunday morning will start with Mass and a breakfast at the Newman Club, where Father McHenry will act as host. In the afternoon they will be the guests at a tea in Wymilwood at two o'clock. This tea is open to all students of the University for the nominal sum of twenty-five cents, and may afford your only chance to meet the Carabins.

After the tea, the Montrealers will entrain for their home city so as not to miss their Monday morning lectures.

Exploration Club To Hear Speech By Anthropologist

This evening, Ted Carpenter of the Anthropology Department, is giving a talk before the members of the Hart House Exploration Society on his work and experiences among the natives of Micronesia.

Mr. Carpenter, after a stint during the war as a machine gunner in the Marines, became government anthropologist. After the war, the natives were left in a pitiable condition. They had no incentive to rebuild their villages or interest in their own welfare.

Revival of Culture

A plan to reconstruct the natives' past culture through excavation had the desired effect of stimulating in the natives, an interest in their own welfare. "It was amazing to see those natives literally come back to life, when we showed an interest in them and their culture," said Mr. Carpenter.

"You know," said Mr. Carpenter looking outside, "This weather and even our way of life is the antithesis of that in the Islands. When you see a water buffalo ambling down a jungle trail at about one-fifth an hour, you just want to relax and take things easy."

Student Veteran Delegates Fold UP NCSV Completely

Final act of disbanding of the National Council of Student Veterans took place at the annual conference in Montreal on Dec. 29.

The conference, which was attended by only five of the nineteen member Canadian Universities, wrote "finis" to what once was the official gazette of twenty thousand students veterans. J. P. Kohl, NCSV president, a McGill undergraduate vote, reported that the council had served a useful purpose in the past as intermediary between student veterans and government.

Before declaring the Council officially disbanded, the representatives agreed a resolution of thanks should be forwarded to D.V.A. officials in Ottawa. A letter, expressing the appreciation of student veterans for the co-operation and interest of all those concerned with the smooth running of the D.V.A. rehabilitation and educational scheme was drafted, and will be given national publication in February.

"Veterans' problems can now be met at a local level", said John Gwynne-Timothy, graduate student at Toronto, and National Secretary of NCSV.

"Any national body would be on too tenuous a scale to be thoroughly effective. Most veterans are now concentrated in those courses, such as Medicine, which are at least of five years' duration, and many Canadian universities do not have such courses."

H. R. Rowsell, Meds representative, felt there could still be some clarification on the question of interne pay for veterans, but felt this could be handled at the local level.

The Council, which has now bowed gracefully from the national picture, has not always had such a serene complexion. Two years of its history were spent in fighting for increased allotments for married veterans. At one time it gained the name of being Red-dominated. The Toronto branch held several hot

Just Poor Luck For McGill Gals Says Local Coed

"McGill girls have nothing to complain about, it's just bad luck if they haven't got what it takes," commented one Toronto coed on the squabble this week on the Montreal campus about the bachelors' ball queen.

Last weekend, the 700 men students at Dawson College, a McGill affiliate, chose blonde Lois Fulton of St. Thomas, Ont., as the queen. The thing that bothered the McGill females was that la Fulton is a cheerleader at the University of Western Ontario.

Peggy Knowles, McGill Daily women's editor, led off the irate attack: "What's she got that McGill girls haven't got? Good-will between universities is desirable but McGill girls are going to wonder why they were by-passed."

Another Toronto coed suggested, "McGill girls don't seem to be good sports."

While a third remarked, "The Dawson boys' choice either shows that they are broadminded or far-seeing."

With Miss Ferguson Yet

Men Invade Whitney Sanctity

By PETER WADE

"I'm bringing two men into your bedrooms. Is all clear?" called Miss Ferguson as she opened the door to one of the long corridors of Whitney Hall. There was a moment of stunned silence followed by a period of violent activity.

Now, as a photographer, I have had the privilege of entering many girls' fraternities but like other men the waiting-room is about all I have ever seen of the inside of girls' residence. When it was suggested then that a photo story of Whitney Hall be made for Torontonensis, I jumped at the opportunity. As photo editor, I had rather a head-start on the scores of other keen photographers who applied for the assignment.

Dean Co-operative

When I spoke to Miss Ferguson, the Dean of Women, about the idea, she was very co-operative and agreed to chaperone me about its extensive interior on Friday.

So, that's how it happened that I, and my assistant, Alan Ford, stood, somewhat breathless, with Miss Ferguson on the threshold of an intriguing adventure. (Alan is my room-mate, and an engineer. I had to bring him along so that our congenial relationship would not be ruptured.)

Bold Step

After the bustle on the other side had ceased, we stepped boldly into an unknown world, the private lives of our women. Just past the door we came upon a girl excitedly showing her left hand to two of her friends. Evidently in her enthusiasm she had failed to hear word of our coming. "That's wonderful, my dear. When is it going to be?" Miss Ferguson asked.

"Oh, in about a year and a half," she breathed happily. Then, realizing there were strangers present, she said no more, but retired somewhat confused. Some matters are only between girls, you know.

Target: Bedroom

Our objective was any typical bedroom, and this necessitated many scouts sent in advance who spread word of the invasion, and prepared the girls for our sudden appearance. As our little party moved through the corridors, we were the objects of much attention. Girls stared unbelieving from their doorways. "Men in Whitney Hall, and with Miss Ferguson yet!"

The shock had various effects. One could see that if this was to be a general practice, there were some girls not opposed to the idea. But their gleams were quickly squelched as someone whispered, "They're only photographers!" However, a few girls were obviously relieved when they heard this—for who would be able to study with a bunch of noisy men in the house?

After getting a couple of shots (to use a vernacular) in a comfortable and very inviting room, we left the three charming occupants, in search of other interesting material. One of the many kitchenettes was our next photograph. Here, the coffee cups used were shaped, curiously enough, like beer mugs.

The laundry downstairs had possibilities, so we proceeded there after a stop at the library, where we had to send out a call for a number of girls to give it that "lived-in" look. On our way, we noticed a rather scantily-clad miss who ducked into a convenient telephone booth, to hide her confusion. The sole occupant of the laundry was rather dismayed to find two males walking in just when she was ironing one of those filmy things. Well, we got some of the other girls to pose at the washtubs and were all ready when we were interrupted for a moment while Miss Ferguson removed certain inappropriate garments from the lines which criss-crossed the room.

Wanted: Individualism

(Reprinted from The Manitoban)

"No work is ever done collectively, by a majority decision."
—Ayn Rand

Once again the editors of The Manitoban have been called upon to defend the paper's unorthodox policy of having no policy. This time the Canadian University Press conference in Montreal was the occasion of a debate which, although all in good spirits, brought out in its long and serious passages basic differences in opinion as to the function of a student newspaper. It may not be too untimely to draw from this discussion conclusions which students may well seriously consider.

Sparking a two-hour open forum, Clyde Kennedy of the McGill Daily contended that our practice of allowing every interested student to have his material published unaltered and unadorned led to a wishy-washy editorial page in which no opinion could be pointed to as that of the abstract entity known as "the paper". Jack Gray of the Toronto Varsity joined in by claiming that editorials should be written under consultation and that the final product should be a boiled down version of the consensus of opinion. He felt that by such a system, the prestige and tradition of The Varsity's sixty years' publishing could be thrown behind whatever is in the lead column.

Red Lampert of the Dalhousie Gazette resolved the question whether the paper should lead or follow student opinion, and seemed to feel that under a wide-open policy the leadership was lost in the effort to mirror the campus. Ray DuPlessis of Ottawa's Fulcrum stated that there was a right and wrong to every question and that the editors were in a position to point out the right side. The majority of the delegates joined in the friendly massacre, but the salient points are outlined above. Although the opinions were well considered and extremely interesting, we remain unmoved, save for a slinking fear that all campi are not as democratic as ours.

We do not believe that there exists or should exist an entity designed as The Manitoban which will take a position on any current topic and defend it to the death. We do not believe in organizing campus opinion along certain lines, for we do not believe that the editors have either the right or the duty, much less the ability to perform this function. We believe that the editors are individuals, who should wield no more thought-molding power than is the right of every student on the campus. To deny anyone that right by either assertion or assumption would be a flagrant violation of our responsibility.

We do not believe in collective thought, because there can exist no collective mind. Any opinion possessed of integrity and conviction can be best expressed only by one particular person and only in his particular way. Statements which are the result of compromise or coalition can be neither respected nor understood. We believe that a student newspaper is not the voice of one man or the collective voice of a group, but the sum of as many individual voices as wish to be heard. The sum is vastly different from the common denominator determined by collaboration, for the sum allows the existence of the parts while co-operation destroys the parts to establish a consensus.

We do not believe in absolute right or wrong, for as a confessed relativist, we contend that there exists no final statement on political or social problems. We believe that the basic questions of human life remain unsolved and that only by free and open discussion will we make progress towards understanding and appreciation. Let it be realized that this attitude does not prevent the holding of convictions, but despite being willing to defend them rather strenuously, we cannot conceive of forcing our convictions upon someone else. We demand for others the same psychological and moral freedom that has been granted us.

We believe that The Manitoban provides leadership more adequately than do many other papers because its pages are open to the persuasive powers of any student. We contindе to hope that those who are incompetent will bow to public scorn and leave those who say important things to provide the stimulation and leadership.

We believe that this position provides the best assurance that the social and political rights of the students will be safeguarded, for the beliefs upon which it is based are those which help perpetuate democratic powers. It is based upon a faith in the ability of the students to read, think and decide for themselves. Other systems are limited by natural boundaries, for the calibre of writing can never exceed the abilities of the journalistic clique. If The Manitoban writers fail to satisfy, it is not their fault alone, but that of a society which is failing to provide individual initiative and conviction.

Let us not be ridiculed as idealistic, for progress is based upon idealism and sometimes dreaming can lead to creation. Those who criticize reveal only too little faith in basic democratic processes.

Our Readers Write

Critics Criticized

Editor, The Varsity,

I write you concerning the subject of artistic criticism. There seems to be a tendency amongst writers, particularly university critics, to interpret the word "criticize" as meaning "point out the faults." In my dictionary, "criticism" is defined as "examination of the merits of an artistic work."

I quote from Friday's Varsity "It was a step down into the Elgar work—Not in the performance nor interpretation, but rather intrinsic value as music, the B Minor Concerto falls far below the preceding overture, and we can honestly attribute the inherent value that remained, entirely to the soloist's skill.

—The music seemed to be headed in all directions, was corrupt on melodic lines, and loose, if not promiscuous in theme.

—Without his magic bow, the rendering would have died a long wandering death," etc.

Unlike many critics, I do not believe that the arts are absolute in the sense that they can be weighed by us, and classified as better or worse. I do not say that no absolute basis exists. There may be super-human standards. On the other hand, art may be quite independent of any comparative standards.

If a man sees beauty in a work, he konws that beauty is there. If he doesn't see beauty, I suggest that he is not sure of its absence. For this reason, I think that it is wise for critics to confine their examinations to art which they feel, and say nothing about that which they do not. How can they examine its artistic merit?

Pro Affiliation

Editor, The Varsity.

It seems to me that the most cogent argument in favor of affiliation with IUS has been scarcely mentioned.

Our ultimate goal, which overshadows all particular and local aims, is the eventual attainment of a comprehensive international relationship in the field of student affairs. A schism in the Union can never, by its very nature, lead to anything but the further alienation of East from West. The establishment of a Western bloc would almost annihilate prospects of reconciliation. What we might accomplish among ourselves would pale into insignificance beside the calamity of an irreparable breach in the student world.

Regardless how exasperating it may be to work with IUS, we must doggedly and patiently pursue the aim of eventual harmony between the two opposing camps.

In the United Nations for instance, little of substantial value has been accomplished and yet the West has no intention of withdrawing, for they know that the result would completely negate any advantages that might be gained.

Similarly in our own case, we must operate within the established framework. No other choice is possible because no other body exists which will satisfy the overriding demand for international unity.

Duel But Not Pogo

Editor, The Varsity.

While reading my favorite morning paper yesterday I noticed in the "Letters to the Editor" section a missive from some attendants at that institution at the southern end of the campus. Their blissful palaverings bring to mind another letter carried last November.

This letter, by Bernie Bernstein, challenged me to a duel. Never one to cry 'hold' I accepted with relish. When I arrived at the appointed place (The Varsity Newsroom) I was besieged by editors who conducted me to the room of distinction it to load my weapon. My gun was supplied by Mr. Bernstein so naturally it did not work. His did. This gross unfairness had slipped my mind in the happy thoughts of sharpening my new razor for use in front of the Hart House Coke machine.

But now the newness of my Christmas gifts has worn off. Again I feel the injustice of the duel. Therefore, my dear Benny, I challenge you to a duel. This time I supply weapons.

served for the part. Many of his wisecracks sounded flat because of this. It is not always the main roles that are best. Lloyd Bockner had a small part but gave an excellent performance of nervous Julian. Special mention should go to Billie Mae Richards who did a grand job of Sammy as a boy.

On the whole the production was effective, with music suiting the tempo of the action. It is only disappointing insofar as it could have been much better. We realize the proper accent is hard to achieve for it is often overdone. But for the fact that few actors were miscast—the team of Producer Andrew Allan and Musical Director Luciao Agostini have come through with another first class production.

Next week the Stage Series begins its seventh year with The Trojan War Will Not Take Place.

To Achieve Peace Start On Individual Says Father Duffy

To achieve peace, we must start with the individual. When the individual has peace and practices the Christian virtues, we will achieve a peaceful world. In these words, Father Clarence Duffy expressed his formula for peace yesterday before a student gathering sponsored by the University of Toronto Peace Council.

Well-Attended Meeting

Father Duffy proved such a strong attraction that the medical board room which was to have been used for the speech proved inadequate and the crowd overflowed into the hall. Finally the meeting was conducted in a lecture room of the Anatomy Building so that all could hear him.

Must Think Peace

"We all have to think of the world you are going to live in, in the future. We all want a secure world to develop as human beings. Peace is a serious problem for us all. We must think about things that achieve peace," Father Duffy began.

Peace is inherent in justice and there can be no justice without peace, and justice is the product of Christian charity. Patience, kindness and 'do unto others as you would have them do unto you.' All these are the basis for his feelings about how it is necessary to achieve peace that are part of both Christian and Jewish teaching.

Nations too must practice justice, he stressed. Taking examples from past history, Father Duffy noted that down through history, nations had exploited their possessions under the theory of legally getting all you can get. Even today America is pushing her commercial interests all over the world under the hypocritical excuse of helping other nations.

Gaels Spread Democracy

However, early in history, a group of people settled in Syria, who were descended from Hebrew man and the daughter of the Pharaoh of Egypt. These people had as the basis of their culture, the belief in justice and the rights of the individual and the belief in the common good for all. These Gaels spread through the whole of Europe and left traces wherever they went of their beliefs, that were the basis for the Western democratic idals although they were almost obliterated.

"We need to go back in history and return to the principles of the Gaels. We haven't got them today. We must control lust for power, pride and envy. If they cannot be controlled voluntarily, they must be controlled by law."

No Belief in Communism

Father Duffy does not believe in in Marxian Communism as a solution for peace for it denies the rights of the individual, but in the type of co-operative socialism set forth by the Gaels. He explained that the ownership of land is an important factor in society. But no person or group of men should own more land than is necessary for their subsistence. Free co-operatives developed by the people for their own needs is the ideal that should be

Peace Councils Begun At UBC Also At Manitoba

Winnipeg, Jan 23 — (CUP — Declaring its purpose as "to foster discussion and investigation of national and international questions related to peace", the Student Peace Council of the U. of Manitoba finally got its program under way. Adoption of the above motion means that the Peace Council will function as a student group and not as a pressure group, according to Murray Smith, Rhodes scholar and editor of the Manitoban.

\+ \+ \+

Vancouver, Jan 23—(CUP — A UBC Peace Council has been allowed to submit a constitution to the Student's Council of the University of British Columbia. This step is the prelude to possible permission being given to form such a group on the campus. The initial impetus was given to the group over a year ago by Dr. J. C. Endicott. Since then there has been considerable debate on the campus as to whether permission should be given to form a group. At one meeting last year, over five thousand students denied assent.

Wilson Woodside To Address IRC On Tito's Policy

Wilson Woodside will turn the spotlight on Yugoslavia and Titoism on Wednesday afternoon when he addresses the Internation-Relations Club tomorrow. Mr. Woodside, who is foreign editor of Saturday Night, will consider the impact of Titoism on the Soviet Union.

The meeting will be held in the Museum Theatre at 4:00 p.m. Wednesday. Mr. Woodside is well-known in Canada as a sound analyst of foreign affairs and has access to pertinent information. Non-members who are interested in the implications of these trends in world affairs will be welcomed.

Visits from the High Commissioners of Australia and New Zealand are expected in February. They will probably speak on aspects of Canada's relation in the Pacific and the Commonwealth.

SPS Challenge Challenged By Champion Charioteers

The challenge flung to the rest of the university in a letter to the Editor of The Varsity in yesterday's issue has provoked a rush of applicants, including the character above who was discovered wandering around the campus in search of the starting point for entries.

To ensure fairness in this matter, The Varsity has offered to accept the position of entry scrutineer, already the Medsmen have entered, followed closely by Vic, the Blue and White Society, and the Occupational Therapy Old Girls Association.

Treated Skulemen Harshly

In comment upon the Race, Stan Jurisko, president of the VCU proclaimed that the "hordes of frustrated wenches descending upon the engineering stores" undoubtedly refers to those unfortunate females who are unable to get tickets for the Vic-At-Home.

"We regret that we were so harsh in treating the Skulemen in the Mulock Cup finals, but we promise that we will be easier on them this time. This of course, providing the Skulemen can find six men," said Jurisko.

Offers Free Medicals

Blue-and-White Society publicity director Doug Thomas implied that it was all a cheap publicity stunt to sell tickets to the At-Home. "We will mention the time, Feb. 2, and so keep them happy."

The Medical Society has offered free medical examinations for all entrants, providing they are human — thus eliminating the necessity of handling the bodies of engineers — but lament the fact that it is all in vain.

Developing Special Breed

"We really have it in the bag right now," said Sid Wax, Medical Society publicity director, "for we have been developing a special breed of men for this race, to defend our championship. They are all Endocrinologists, known as the Tetesterone Specials. How can they lose?"

\+ \+ \+

Overheard in the Hart House Tuck Shop:

"Chariot Races are wonderful; I'm in favour of them. I also approve of babies having rattles, infants having teething rings, men having books, and women having men. These are sound principles, and I will stand by them."

Godfrey Award Plays Presented By UC Players

The Robin Godfrey Prize Plays written by Hugh Shaw, II UC, and Ken Jarvis, IV UC, will be presented by the UC Players' Guild on Thursday, February 16. The award was established by Mrs. J. H. Godfrey in honor of her son Robin who was killed in action in 1942.

Many campus plays, including those presented by the U.C. Players' Guild, are student directed and acted, but the Robin Godfrey plays are the only completely undergraduate productions.

Hugh Shaw, who won second prize last year, has taken the first prize this year with a comedy called, "Money For Jam". Shaw has shown to advantage in this play his talent for witty dialogue. This play will be directed by Al Shaw and casting is taking place on Tuesday, Jan. 24.

Second prize winner Ken Jarvis will direct his own play, entitled, "It's No Trouble". Casting for this will take place laster this week. Time and place for these castings are listed on the Players' Guild notice board in U.C. Rotunda.

Mrs. Mike Reaction

Reporter Gets Screen Test

By MORLEY TORGOV

The other night we dropped around to Warner Brothers' local offices to witness a "special" screening of a movie entitled "Mrs. Mike." There we were met by a Mrs. Harriet McMillan Smith, an executive-looking woman, who told us she was presently engaged on a tour of audience research for United Artists, the producers of "Mrs. Mike."

She covered St. Louis, Chicago, and other United States centres in connection with the picture,' Mrs. Smith explained, "but although such surveys of audience reaction are a regular practice among movie companies in the states, this is the first such effort for an adult audience in Canada."

Act as Guinea Pigs

In the small screening room, crowded to over-crowding with a noticeably young and supposedly typical group of movie-goers, Miss Smith apologized for the absence of popcorn and confectionery. "Perhaps it will be a consolation to you to know that you are sort of guinea pigs in a very serious experiment," she said, "and I want to assure you that the statements you give us following the showing will be very carefully considered."

Following a warm-up "Bugs Bunny" cartoon, we settled back in our seat to watch the main feature, and to watch others who were watching the main feature. For a typical audience, we were behaving well. Some people slouched in their chairs, some whispered to each other or held hands. Those who smoked, dragged on their cigarettes and exhaled smoke just like average people do. So far, the experiment was working successfully.

Objects to Labor

During one particularly difficult scene, however, as Mrs. Mike lies alone and painfully in labor in a remote cabin, we noticed one woman starting to leave. "That's awful," she complained audibly and indignantly to her companion, "they don't have to make it that horrible." The companion whispered something, and the lady sat down again and remained until the end of the film.

At the conclusion of "Mrs. Mike," Miss Smith again appeared before her "control group" with a bundle of questionnaires. "Please answer these questions as quickly as you can," she requested. "In that way we can learn what your immediate impressions are."

Wanted Frank Comments

"Above all," she added, "be frank and don't hesitate to include any extra comments you may have. I should probably tell you before you begin that 'Mrs. Mike' is primarily a story of psychological inter-relationships among people, but let me explain that we in Hollywood are interested in entertainment, and not so much in education. So let's have your opinions centred mainly around the entertainment aspects of the picture."

The questionnaire opened with the routine queries about the subject's age, sex, schooling. Someone asked "What do they mean, 'Do you attend movies regularly'?"

Torontonensis Orders Wednesday Last Date Editor Raymond Warns

Those wishing to order Torontonensis 1950 must do so by Wednesday, Jan. 25, Bill Raymond, editor of the yearbook, said today. No orders will be taken after Wednesday.

Only the number ordered by Wednesday can be printed, Raymond said. Last year, many graduates left their orders until past the deadline and were unable to get a copy of Torontonensis, he said.

So far, support has been weak, with only 50 per cent of the graduates putting in orders. "We will try to put out an edition that will be worth many times the price paid," Raymond declared.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

A Streetcar Named Desire

Sir Laurence Olivier was saddened recently in New York because many people in England had misinterpreted the leading role of Blanche in A Streetcar Named Desire, currently being played in London by his wife, Vivien Leigh. She is not a prostitute, explained Sir Laurence: "After the initial tragedy that affected her life, in her subsequent, misguided search for beauty and romance, she came to lead an immoral life — but there was no intention to suggest that it was in any way professional."

Last night the Elia Kazan production of Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire opened at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, direct from New York.

Uta Hagen (Desdemona in Paul Robeson's Othello) played the part of Blanche Dubois, a well-bred southern girl whose initial love-experience with a youth shakes her moral equilibrium and she becomes a nymphomaniac, to fly from man to man and to drink of the bitter cup of empty love. The play begins and remains in a two-roomed flat below the level of a sloping street, significantly called Elysian Fields, in the Old Quarter of New Orleans. It is the home of Stanley (Anthony Quinn) and Stella (Mary Welch) Kowalski. Blanche arrives at her sister's flat as her last hope in refuge from a Hotel Flamingo, the social life of whose guests went unquestioned by the management. But Blanche prospered beyond expectation and she was requested to leave town.

Blanche arrives on stage in search of Elysian Fields via a streetcar named Desire, and the conflict begins to snap. The heroine is faced with her sister, Stella, married to a degenerate who whacks her about at will and whose life exists in poker-squalor and free-flowing rye. Dramatic irony was rampant in this opening scene, and reared its head throughout the play.

Uta Hagen's delicate, ethereal, ringing performance made the play great. From the pungent, ironic lines of scene one through to the shattering climax of Mitch's absence at the birthday cake where the thin line of reality is snapped in two and Blanche's mind receives its final blow, to culminate in rape at the hands of Stanley while his wife is in hospital having her first child.

Anthony Quinn's Stanley bordered on the line 'twixt man and beast. He moved and breathed and spoke in bestial terms. His skilful characterization punched across the low ebb of life to which Blanche's sister had become a wilful part.

Conflict in the play emerges in the antipathetic 'desire' of Stella to that of Blanche. Stella rests content with nocturnal ecstasy and bliss — but Blanche aspires to a higher plane of poetry and intellectual felicity. The essence of the tragedy lies in the shattering of that aspiration, and the triumph of Desire as a way of life as Blanche is led away and the curtain falls. Elia Kazan's production of A Streetcar Named Desire was in last night's purging performance a masterful achievement in tragic art.

Radio: Stage 50

With the Stage 50 production of What Makes Sammy Run, the Sunday Evening Stages Series completed its sixth year on the air. Unfortunately this production is not as good as some of its predecessors but this is largely due to miscasting. The process of adapting Budd Shulberg's famous novel by George Robertson is a credit well worth mentioning.

When the novel first came out it swept the U.S.A. like a gust of wind. At first copies were as scarce as tickets to the All-Varsity Revue. Even today the pocket book edition is reprinted twice a year. Those of you who read the book probably developed a picture in your mind of what the different characters looked like and would sound over the air.

Those of you who heard the title for the first time may have thought it was the story of a racehorse. It is not the story of a horse but it is the story of a race. The world was a race to Sammy Glick, a kid from the East Side who had his eyes on money and power. He was willing to lie, cheat and step on anyone that got in his way. He began as a copy boy but proclaimed he wouldn't be one long. He was right. Al Manheim, the Drama Editor of the Record, watched Sammy run past his desk and go all the way to Hollywood with a stolen story written by timid Julian. Al, who is always trying to hate Sammy, also gets a job in Hollywood where he watched him accelerate from Screen Writer to Assistant Producer and marry the boss' daughter as a finishing touch.

Al, the closest thing to a friend Sammy had, was constantly bothered by a recurring question, "What Makes Sammy Run?" Kit, another writer in Hollywood, helps clear things up when she explained that Hollywood was full of Sammy Glicks. She admitted he was an unusual model with a hepped-up motor. It wasn't until Al dug up the early life of Sammy that he received the completed answer. He philosophized by saying, we only hate the results of people.

John Brainie as Sammy was not good and not bad. With only rare exceptions did one feel Sammy was running but seemed to be moving at a trot. Besides mispronouncing words he lost his accent at times. Bud Knapp as Al did a straight role but his voice sounded too re-

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

The Fosdick Affair

It was an alert Varsity reporter, Ersle Q. Herschel, who first realized that Exchange Professor, George Washington Fosdick, Vassar School of Sarong Painting, would be the source of new vitality on the campus. Reporter Herschel detected a certain sly tilt to Professor Fosdick's mortar board, a certain rye humor in the use of his sheepskin as a lunch wrapper, a certain air of freedom in his open-toed sandals.

The faculty first became aware of Professor Fosdick's unconventional attitude when he insisted on wearing his coon skin hat. He further perplexed them by his motion to have Gypsy Rose Lee accepted as chancellor. The strongest opposition to this move came from the French Department's Dr. Belanger who wished to sponsor Lili St. Cyr for this post.

Professor Fosdick's relaxed approach to higher education was, to say the least, fresh, as the coeds of his class would vouch. A disarming smile and a well-placed pat was the reward reaped by students who pleased him.

Professor Fosdick was the first on the campus to introduce cross-indexing of students. He would categorize them as Blondes, Brunettes or Redheads as well as average, capable, and WOW. There is no truth in the rumour that one particularly anxious young lady passed the final examination in Professor Fosdick's subject the night before the test.

Although Professor Fosdick never received an invitation to tea with the Provost he did have several compensating divertisements. He was accustomed to wine and dine in the company of soulmates from the Queen Street Knowledge of Anatomical Knowledge. His tete-a-tetes with visiting lady wrestlers were the source of much envy on the part of green-eyed freshmen. He also served in an advisory capacity to the art departments of the local periodicals, Suspania, Double Take and Streets of Paris where his practiced eye and infallible sense of symmetry were valuable assets.

Professor Fosdicks afternoon strolls on the campus were the signal for The Varsity's Fashion Editor to be on the alert. He was the epitome of sartorial elegance. He was wont to attire himself in Roquefort open-at-the-throat shirts, drop-loop slacks, alligator belt, saddle oxfords and pork pie hats complete with ostrich plume. Only the most blustery weather caused the Professor to don his mink ear muffs.

The inevitable happened. Professor Fosdick finally done it. He was caught dunking at Di's, and immediately discharged.

LEARN SHORTHAND

. . . this fascinating-way

This nine-page shorthand brochure is specially prepared for university students so that they may learn shorthand NOW and at very little cost—only ten dollars, in fact—for the complete theory course leading to certificate.
University students who know shorthand have wider and more interesting career opportunities. They can use it in lecture periods, too. Shorthand is often very definitely a Key Subject to a desirable position.
The notes, arranged by Harold Russell, M.R.S.T., can be learned in a matter of only TEN DAYS, in your own study or with us in spare half-day or evening attendance. We show you also how to write in shorthand legal, technical and medical words, and modern languages.
You are invited, absolutely without obligation, to call at our offices for a

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

It is a far cry from the crude compass of Columbus' day to the precision instruments used in navigation to-day. The extent of the improvements, however, bears no relation to the time elapsed. Fifty years ago the means of navigation were essentially the same as those which had prevailed for centuries. Since time was relatively unimportant the only demands made on a navigation instrument were that eventually it would lead one to one's destination.

Flying as a means of travel introduced a set of conditions which were much more stringent. The straight line between two points became not only the shortest distance, but in many cases the cheapest and the safest. To the old stipulation that a compass must insure arrival at a destination was added the demand that the journey be made along a certain path.

The fields of radio and electronics have contributed to the fulfillment of this demand, and the devices developed for operational flying during the last war make modern flying from the standpoint of navigation automatic to a high degree.

Long Way From Perfection

However, in spite of these advances, there are limitations to the instruments in common use. The ranges of radar and wireless are still limited, and their efficient use is confined to those areas in range of existing installations. Astro-navigation although extremely useful over large distances is unsuited to short flights and precision flying. In the far north the proximity of the magnetic pole makes the compass needle perform wild gyrations, and even the most precise compass made is of little use in these areas.

All these limitations are combined when applied to the type of flying required in Photographic Survey Work in the Canadian Arctic. The period of good flying weather is extremely limited, and therefore, a maximum coverage requires a minimum of overlapping. A minimum area overlapped calls for the maximum in precision flying, and the track followed is literally a straight line drawn on a sheet of paper, very often representing hundreds of miles of straight-line flight. A deviation of a hundred yards from a height of twenty thousand feet involves considerable territory.

Solar Navigator

That these surveys are being one, and done in a highly efficient manner speaks volumes for the skill of the R.C.A.F. pilots and crews engaged in the work, and for the performance of the aircraft used, but the skill would be wasted were it not for an ingenious devise known as the Solar Navigator which enables the pilot to fly these extremely accurate lines.

An American-designed instrument, it has been adopted by the R.C.A.F., and its use has been developed to a degree unmatched by its original designers. The instrument itself is an adaptation of the wartime Astro-compass used to obtain position lines by sighting on the sun, moon, and stars, the principal innovation being an automatic timing mechanism which allows for the earth's rotation by winding in the appropriate Greenwich Mean Time. The instrument is set up at the start of the flight for the latitude, longitude, declination of the sun, G.M.T. (plus or minus the variation between the true sun and the mean sun), for the point and time of start, and for the track desired to fly.

The sun's rays (only a trace of sun is necessary) are directed onto a photronic cell, generating a weak current. This current is amplified, and activates a galvanometer or voltmeter operating a zero-reading instrument. There are two photronic cells separated by a baffle plate. If the sun's rays strike the right hand cell, the instrument needle moves to the right, and if the left hand cell, the needle moves to the left. As long as the aircraft is on track the sun's rays fall directly on the baffle plate, and the needle remains motionless at zero.

Drift and Wind Correction

To make allowances for drift and changes in wind direction, the instrument is connected to a drift meter which in manually operated continually during the flight. The slightest change in drift is transmitted into a rotation of the photronic cell head, and results in the corrected measure by the pilot.

So accurate is this method of navigation that it has been found possible to produce photographs which are the result of a full day's flying, involving numerous flights back and forth on parallel tracks, which do not require the slightest correction for error, the strips being perfectly matched.

Not only does the Solar Navigator enable the pilot to fly lines with pinpoint accuracy, but in the far north it is the only reliable means of determining direction accurately. The almost vertical lines of magnetic force which exist in the region of the poles do not give enough directional reference to a compass for it to operate satisfactorily. The closer you fly to the magnetic pole, the smaller is the horizontal force component which activates the compass needle. Compared to the magnetic properties of the aircraft, radio equipment, etc., this horizontal component is negligible, and no reliance can be placed on the motion of the compass needle.

Another phase of the work being done in the north by the R.C.A.F. is concerned with Magnetic Surveys to determine the direction and strength of the lines of magnetic force. Although an instrument known as the Universal Airborne Magnetometer was available to measure the strength of the lines from the air, there was no reliable datum for determining their direction.

To fulfill requirements for a true heading indicator (independent of the influence of magnetic variations), Wing Commander D. A. MacLulich, Chief Project Engineer of the Experimental and Proving Establishment at Ottawa drew up the specifications and design for an instrument now called the Semi-Automatic Sun Compass. The instrument is designed to provide continuous true heading indication during periods when the sun is visible or slightly obscured. It is an adaptation of the Solar Navigator and incorporates most of its features. In the Sun Compass an autosyn motor picks up the angular position of the detector head and transmits it to a true heading indicator so that in addition to having "off" and "on" course instrument, there is a continuous numerical indication of the true heading of the aircraft, against which the magnetometer can be calibrated.

Stars May Be Used

At the moment the changes in latitude and longitude have to be adjusted manually in the instrument, but the R.C.A.F. has improvements in mind which will enable this to be done automatically. Plans are also afoot to use the stars in addition to the sun as activating sources for the photronic cells, thus making navigation completely independent of the magnetic properties of the poles.

It is comforting to know that when the time arrives for man-carrying rockets to be launched through inter-stellar space, the devices required for navigation will be ready to hand. Truly, "Man is not lost."

Movie Review

Major Barbara

Sudden replacement for the too-short-lived "Devil in the Flesh", at the Tpo Towne George Bernard Shaw Comedy Major Barbara. Following close upon their 1941 hit Pygmalion this movie was made by the same unbeatable team, writer Shaw, Director Gabriel Pascal and Actress Wendy Hiller.

Whether or not he ever goes to the movies, G.B.S. certainly knows how to write a screen play, and again has succeeded in obliterating the play's limited scenic scope and three-act construction. The play was "a discussion" and what was a meaty plot a variety of realistic characters voicing thought-provoking views in racy Shavian dialogue, and a beautiful job of cutting which points up the dramatic implications of every line, the movie demands an emotional flexibility and intellectual alertness in the audience which may make you occasionally wish you had the missing intermission in which to gather your thoughts. High point is what was the second act in which, in the midst of an emotional spray seldom surpassed on film, Barbara's faith gets kicked full of holes, although some attempt has been made to strengthen the play's ending. Meanwhile, William Walton has wisely kept score well out of the way except where necessary.

Barbara is the soul-saving Major in the Salvation Army who, after losing her religion and all hope for the world, finally finds quite a different belief to live by. When her cannon-manufacturing father and a beer baron provide the money without which her shelter will cease to exist, she realizes the Army depends on the support of its worst enemies, who "Buy us and go on being as wicked as ever". Instead of converting her afther she ends up being converted by him. Instead of a religion based on bribes of Goodness for its own sake, starting bread or of heaven she will teach with her own monied society friends. As for the poor, Poverty is in itself not a virtue; the poor should be taught rebellion rather than pity.

Miss Hiller is perfect as Barbara. Without benefit of back-lighting she acts rings around such highly-lauded actresses as Ingrid Bergman and it lives up to Rex Harrison's definition of "loveliness". Harrison is even better than usual as Cusins, a professor of Greek who joins the army and beats a drum, not through conversion to her religion, which he has long since swallowed along with about twenty others, but because he is "hopelessly in love and unscrupulously determined to have her". He is particularly good in a frenzy of ironic ecstasy following the General's acceptance of the "painted" money. At that he is lucky to be noticed however since two other actors nearly steal the show: Robert Morley as the father, confident and free in the certainty of his own belief, and Robert Newton as a stubborn bully who is converted in spite of himself, although not the way in which Barbara first intends. The rest of an excellent cast includes Deborah Kerr as a young army worker; Sybil T. Thorndyke as the General, and Emlyn Williams typed as the deceitful parasite.

VIC'S CORNER

Pik, our little amphibious friend with the armour-plated upper deck has submerged himself in the upper reaches of Owen Sound, so it has become our arduous duty to inform you of the goings on around Vic this week.

The biggest and best social event of the season The Vic at Home this Friday — with regard to the dance it's formal for the gals and optional for the men only: that is the men can come in tails or their best Sunday suit (veh Sam Hisey). There will be three bands and the decorations, so George tells me, are terrific. Tickets are still on sale in the V.C.U. from 10-2 all this week—better hurry and get yours for there is only a limited supply.

Bert Sutcliffe informs us that tickets for Ruddigore go on sale at Hart House, Jan. 23 — evenings $1.25, matinee 75 cents — there is still the odd single and couple left for Wed., Thurs., Fri. and Sat. and some for Tues. and the Saturday matinee. Musical men take note — the first Glee Club rehearsal for the trip to Hamilton will be Jan. 25 in the chapel.

On Feb. 10, all you lucky men, comes off the Annesley at Home. It's to be semi-formal per usual.

Speaking of women reminds me of talking. Bouquets to Stan Kurisko, Roy Neehall, George Slater and Harry Greene on getting into the finals of the Thompson Debates. The lucky quartet go to McMaster to debate.

The S.C.M. is carrying on its weekly commission. The Victoria Church Students Union is planning a programme for Feb. 12, 13 and 14. It will commence with an evening service in the Chapel — Dr. Leslie will preach, and will continue on the Monday and Tuesday with Dr. Brewing speaking in Alumni Hall. Evening discussions are planned to take place in Wymilwood.

Attention all you Thespians—Wed., Feb. 1, St. Mike's are holding a guest night in Brennan Hall. Vic will be putting on one of the afena type one act plays that are to be presented.

Next to the muscle department, Senior Vic lost their last basketball game but in hockey the Seniors took Senior Skule 2-1 — Stu Howard shooting the winning tally with less than 2 minutes to go. This puts them on top of the heap in group one. It was Vic's night at Hart House last Sat. where a battle royal (whoops) basketball game took place — the Senior Boys vs the Senior Girls. The Girls won, of course, and the judges' unanimous decisions were as follows: (1) Most original costume — Jack Milne and Bev. Shoemaker (tie). (2) Most biased referee ever seen in Hart House — Irv Pasternak. (3) Closest checking — Allison Jeffries and John Devereaux. (4) Most explosive player on the floor — Bob MacIntosh. (5) At the dance later — the most useless gift ever given in Hart House, a bag of potatoes, (thank you Bob Ralph and Bev Johnson). Congratulations to Williams and Corner for copping a win in their respective fisticuffs, and to the water polo team — looks as if we are going to have a strong contender in the splash men this year.

Anyone interested in producing next year's Scarlet and Gold please contact John Findlay — KI. 0318 Middle House — as soon as possible.

Now is the time to start thinking what positions on the various societies and the V.C.U. you are going to try for on the coming elections in March — it is a very wise policy to give it some careful consideration.

While Pik's away we are going to turn turtle and do a little snoopography on the snoopographer, Kip Christopher for short, (that's priceless) Fleming is our publicity director. Stop the press news — the soapiest part of our social directorate puts in a plea for help on the decorations on the At-Home. If you can possibly manage it come out and help, especially on Friday.

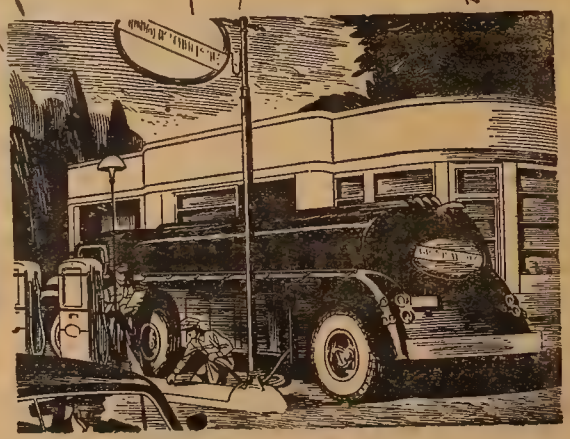
"Me use Nickel?"



The oil and gas he sells would cost more were it not for Nickel. Tough, hard Nickel Steel bits bite through rock to reach the oil. Drilling equipment is made of Nickel Steel to stand terrific stresses and corrosion.

Much oil refinery equipment is made of Nickel alloys to stand up under intense heat, under sub-zero cold, and to resist corrosion by acids. The modern refinery contains hundreds of tons of Nickel alloys.

In the tankers at sea, in the tank cars which transport oil products, in the tank trucks which bring oil and gasoline to the service station, Nickel alloys are used in many ways.

Forty-three years of research have uncovered hundreds of uses for Nickel in the United States and other countries. Now Nickel exports bring in millions of U.S. dollars yearly. These dollars help pay the 14,000 Nickel employees and also help pay railwaymen, lumbermen, steel and iron workers and other men and women making supplies for the Nickel mines, smelters and refineries.

meetings in which the names of Joe Potts, Fred Umansky and Will Acker figured.

The Council gained many considerations for veterans such as concessions for good students whose benefits had run out during the year. One of the latest jobs was the presentation to Ottawa of a comprehensive survey of all veterans problems, with an urgent plea for a rapid adjustment.

University Upheld

stadium, which, he said, "would help intercollegiate sport—and build a better University, which was already Canada's best and a credit to the city of Toronto."

The whole argument was about an area eighteen feet wide and some seven hundred long, stretching along the west side of Varsity Stadium. In the plans for the forthcoming expansion there is need to extend the grandstand to a position overhanging the present sidewalk. This will call for supporting columns ascending from immediately beside the walk. This will also necessitate relocation of a watermain for which the University will have to assume full responsibility, along with maintaining the sidewalk. According to the agreement the University will, in addition, have to provide satisfactory lighting for this area, and also grant easements for maintaining any existing public utilities.

By this vote of the Council the city will "close" the street, in other words, assume full legal control over the property. This does not apply to preventing pedestrians or vehicles from using it. Thus the University will still retain its right to close the street at a future date, since the city is carrying out the closing itself.

Reporter Gets

"Well, if you attend movies once a year, that's not considered 'regularly,'" Miss Smith replied.

Other questions concerned favorite scenes, favorite performances, general comments on film making, and one very blunt question, "Did you like 'Mrs. Mike'??"

Audience Approves

Regarding this last question, we noticed, as we thumbed through the questionnaires after they were called in, that most of the audience said yes, they liked Mrs. Mike. Other questions, though, were answered with a great deal more variety.

Although many of the audience were university students, some among these listed their occupations as "booker," "wrestler," and just plain "Mrs." Gregory Peck and Humphrey Bogart were popular in the category of favorite male stars while favorite actresses ranged from Bette Davis to Betty Grable.

We were last to file out of the Warner screening room. At the door Miss Smith, with Mr. Bert Wilkes, United Artists' Canadian publicity director, shook our hand and said how happy she was that we had co-operated in the survey.

"How're you going to headline your story?" Wilkes asked.

We explained that it really wasn't up to us but up to the feature editor, and quietly slipped away.

Achieve Peace

striven for. Industry should be owned by the people who work there as well as the owners who supply the capital.

"We must have a form of society where the rights of the individual and the striving for the common good of all are recognized. Only in this way can we have economic and political security.

"We must not give up our freedom. God gave man freedom as long as he doesn't force his views on other people. Peace has nothing to do with Communism. It is a sad state of affairs when a person who starts talking about peace is called a Communist." He noted that in Britain, people take freedom for granted for it has a traditional place in their lives. But, he said, in America they have individual rights written in the constitution, but would gladly give them up tomorrow, it seems. Canada is in a position to lead for she is more alert than the United States and cannot be so intimidated, having inherited her freedom from British tradition.

In conclusion, Father Duffy noted that freedom and peace must spring from ourselves and our own groups. It requires effort, for only by effort and struggle can we achieve these aims. If we strive for a society in which the individual practices charity, is allowed to pursue his own life in his own way and to say and do as he pleases, as long as he does not interfere with or exploit the rights of other people, the ideals of peace will transcend to the national and international levels. We must set our own house in order before we start complaining of other countries like Russia. "It is all a question of example," he concluded.

Men Invade

By this time the surroundings began to take their insidious effect on me. Since Alan was an engineer, I expected him to break down early, so I was hurrying to get him out you know engineers!

Now I've had a lot to do with chorus lines and things, but all the excitement went to my head. So, to prevent any untoward incident, I hurriedly thanked Miss Ferguson and guided a very unwilling Alan to the door. The frosty air soon cleared our heads and we rudely awakened to find it was only 8:15 p.m., Friday evening, and we had no women. Cursing our illfortune, we made our way back to our room—there to settle down with a new magazine. . . .

Loan Rangers To Ride Again Into Toronto

The basketball Blues will have t chance to gain a measure of revenge from the McGill Redmen for the defeats inflicted on the Blues footballers last fall this coming Saturday when the Blue Cagers will play hosts to the McGillain villains at the local basketball loop opener. The game will be the feature attraction at the term's third Athletic Night. Tickets go on sale all this week at the various colleges and faculties.

The A-nights so far have been tremendous successes and interest will no doubt be high to see how the Blues stack up against the Redmen, who will feature in their line-up a couple of the footballers who gained such deserved fame under the name of the Loan Rangers.

Contrary to misleading reports from the rumour mongers there will be a post game dance in the inspiring, if pungent, atmosphere of the Big Gym. Instead of laying out a large sum of money for some American name band for the dance, the Athletic Night officials have compromised and promise to have the best phonograph recordings available.

Pogo Fans Book Review

Early this fall a great new comic-strip called Pogo began gathering unto itself an army of avid fans, an army which now rejoices at the appearance on the stands of a full-colour comic-book: Albert the Alligator and Pogo Possum. (Dell, 10c.) This is definitely the greatest literary-artistic bombshell since Winnie-the-Pooh! The little hero of this hilarious masterpiece is as bouncy as the well-known stick that bears his name and about ten times as lovable as the average stuffed Panda. He and his numerous pals both insect and animal who inhabit the Okeefenokee Swamp speak a charming version of the English language which seems to be an original creation of ex-Disneyman Walt Kelly who draws the strip.

The amazing thing about Kelly's stuff is that each of the characters that appear, no matter how minor they may be, has a distinguishable personality all his own; he really lives. The characterization is achieved with a subtle skill that rivals Sterne and puts all other strippers to shame; excepting maybe Al Capp. The most important of these other characters is Pogo's foil and perpetual side-kick, Albert the Alligator, but important as he is, we fail to see why he gets top billing over Pogo hisself in the book's title. Missing from the book are our favorites of the supporting cast, Porky Pine and Gopher Yerguns. Perhaps they will appear in future issues. They'd better! Present and more or less correct are Capt Churchy La Femme the turtle, and Howland Owl. Best bit of satire in the book pokes fun at the Atom craze. This involves Howland Owl, who meets a family of water-bugs surnamed Adams. Later when he hears about Adam-Bombs and their tremendous value he decides to make a few and sell them to the government for a million dollars. The procedure obviously is to capture a few Adams and stick them in a box with a fuse. To see the rest tune in on your own issue.

Best single line in the book is Pogo to Albert: "Funny thing, the only time we has an earthquake is when you is behind in a game of skill!"

Orchids to creator Kelly. Swamp Orchids.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

We attended the City Council meeting yesterday, and from the sportsman's angle, we were quite impressed. Deacon Allen should look into the amateur standings of some of the controllers. The decision on the closing of Devonshire Place was carried unanimously 22-0, and during the preamble and discussion two verbal fights broke out, one of which almost led to blows. We wonder what would happen with a contentious issue.

As a matter of fact, the University's attitude and method of presentation was not all it should have been, and the council showed a generosity towards the U. of T. in their remarks and comments that surprised us, to say the least. We satirized the council yesterday, but the way they handled this affair yesterday, we are inclined to offer apologies. Several of the councillors changed their attitudes, and in doing so, have changed ours.

As a reward for the council's meritorious services, each student of the University should make a point of convincing two people to vote for them in the next elections. We feel sure the council would appreciate fifteen or twenty thousand votes.

FOUL! FOUL! DOUBLECROSS! The Varsity wrestling team got a quick double-shuffle on their recent road trip to Rochester when they took on the Rochester pachyderms in a dual meet. It seems that when Varsity got there, the weight classes had been shuffled up, with the result that the wrong guys got to fight in the right classes, with the result that Varsity lost 28-13, with the added result that this column thinks the Rochester hosts should read Emily Post. (Sports Ed. Note: Who's she? A Looker?)

In their 121 class they had entered a state champion, which Varsity couldn't beat; but fortunately, Varsity would have had to default that class anyhow, since Canadian rules start with 125'ers. Our 128 pounder at 124 was invited to wrestle the 121 pounder of Rochester, who said that their 128'er was sick. Varsity magnanimously agreed, without knowing that the guy was a state champion. Our boy lost. Furthermore, Rochester brought out their 128 lb. man who really wasn't sick at all, but since the Blue man had already wrestled, Varsity had to default, instead of Rochester.

These two things made a difference of twenty points, which would have enabled Varsity to win. Kirk Wipper, Intercollegiate champ, couldn't wrestle because of a torn shoulder, so that Varsity lost another five default points. Actually, the score should have read 28-13 for Varsity.

The University of Toronto has again showed its superiority over those peasants from Queen's in the matter of Senior Hockey. Funny thing happened with Joe Kane, star of Friday's game . . . . we told him three days before the game that we were going to put his name in the paper, and that he had better score two goals against Queen's. Well, we did, and he did. One reason Joe is such a good defence man is that he can stand in front of the goal, shake his head from side to side, and sweep the incoming forwards off their feet with his shnozz.

1 Arm Boxer Wins Division At Guelph

While the Varsity senior interfaculty boxing finals were being held at Hart House Saturday, a similar tournament was being displayed at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. But the bouts at Toronto revealed nothing so amazing as the 155 pound fights at Guelph in which Lloyd Deane of Ridgetown won two decisions over his opponents and walked off with the laurels for that class.

So what's amazing about winning two fights in one day? Well nothing maybe unless you take into consideration the fact that Lloyd has only one arm. Deane, 22-year-old student is one of the most versatile and accomplished students in the college and entered the boxing competition as a lark, for he had never done any ring boxing before.

Deane modestly denied any reports that he had intercollegiate aspirations, by saying: "I just went out for my year; I'm not good enough for intercollegiate." Boxing is one of his lesser known athletic accomplishments as he is a basketball, soccer, volleyball, bowling and hockey participant. Deane also plays a fair game of snooker. After graduation he plans to enter the field of athletics in a teaching capacity.

Scramball Scrambles To Thrilling Finish

The interfaculty scramball championship thundered to a thrilling close last night in the South playing room with Slam (Slugger) Whitby coming out on the long end of a 98-97 score over Phil Waterby. Waterby, who looked a cinch to win in the first five periods, faded miserably in the sixth and made no points at all in the seventh and final period. Whitby was hard pressed all the way to the fifth, however, but in the sixth he finally began to get his powerful left mar-shot working effectively and it was this difficult and spectacular shot that dazzled and defeated the hard-fighting Waaterby. Attendance was good at the match and the evening closed with refreshments and plans for starting an early tourney next year.

Amerk Colleges To Tackle Blues 4 Straight Weeks

In an ambitious plan to supply the University of Toronto basketball fans with exhibitions of really hot cage-lore, the Athletic Office has made arrangements with four colleges from upper New York State, that hot bed of basketball, to visit Toronto on four consecutive Wednesday nights for games with the Blues. Tomorrow night the first of these Sports Nights will feature a game between Varsity and Oswego State. As preliminaries to this game the Seconds and the Juniors will also be in action.

A limited number of tickets will go on sale each week for this event in a move to ensure everyone having good seats. At 5.30 p.m. on the day of the Sports night 600 tickets will go on sale at the door for .50c each.

There should be lots of tickets this week, being the first time this year that such a show has been presented. These triple headers are beamed at the really dyed-in-the wool b-ball fan and should provide lots of really top notch competition. Contrary to the ever present rumours, there will be no dancing, although the girls will be welcomed to the hallowed halls of Hart House (if you'll pardon the alliteration).

Yesterday's fast and furious hockey game in the arena ended in a 1-1 deadlock between Vic I and St. Hilda's I.

The play went from end to end all through the game with the defence getting more than their usual share of work. Both goalies had to be on their toes for the whole three periods.

St. Hilda's scored the first goal in the first period, Olga Snorr making the count. Vic didn't tie it up until the third, when Baro Weatherhead pushed the rebound off Alison Jeffries' shot past the goalie.

Par for the major league basketball scores this year seems to be about 25-23. Junior SPS and Junior Vic shot the course in par yesterday noon with the Vicsters coming out on the right end of the above-mentioned score. The longer these low and close scores continue the lower the odds will fall on the possibility of the numerous onlookers getting ulcers. The games make for a lot of tense excitement. Cheap too!

CHARIOT RACE TROPHY SWIPED

"Need Women – Definitely" States Long

Women are definitely necessary declared Dr. Marcus Long speaking to the Engineering Institute of Canada, junior section's annual dinner meeting last night. Asked to speak on this subject because he is a self-styled expert, Dr. Long added "I only regret that my teachers did not tell me until too late that there were other ways of getting this knowledge besides reading books."

He would prefer to marry a woman any day, he said. However he quoted from many sources to show that man was unnecessarily contemptuous of women. The only reason why men walk on the outside of the street is that people used to throw their garbage on the inside.

Dr. Long said that the democratic people govern their lives by the sentimental feminine virtues of tolerance, charity and kindliness. To the fascists and communists it seems a pathetic sign of weakness that we should spend large sums on hospitals to keep alive people who seem marked for death. For it is not enough to develop men who are strong physically; it is also necessary to develop these virtues of tolerance, kindliness, and love, he said.

These opponents say that, like women, we think that we can solve our problems by talking about them. Much of our governmental activity is taken up with senseless discussion, but we need not take a back seat to anyone in the field of economic prosperity. But even if it didn't we should remember that man does not live by bread alone. Freedom once lost is not easily replaced and with the loss of freedom the other substitutes are less than worthless.

Dr. Eugene Forsey, Director of Research, Canadian Congress of Labor, will be present as Honorary Visitor at the Hart House Debate this evening. The resolution for debate is "that the power of trade unions has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished."

The motion will be moved by R. F. Stackhouse, Graduate Studies, and seconded by J. C. Medcof, II UC. Opposing it will be Wally Fram, IV UC, and Ben Shek, IV UC. Speaker of the House will be R. G. Neeball, IV Vic.

Carmen Guild, Hart House Graduate Secretary has suggested that debaters going to run in the annual election had better get their second speaking credit in at this debate.

Medsmen Lift Cup Try To Effect Coup Making Race 'Fair'

Did YOU sign up for the Chariot Race on Friday yet? If you did, do you know who will be running the race? If you do, will you please let us know down in The Varsity office, for we now have information which leads us to suspect that perhaps the Engineers won't be the official runners after all.

LEFT: That's no baby, but the Jerry P. Potts Memorial Trophy that an unidentified member of the Newly Formed Charioteering Undergraduate Society of Impartial University Students (or NFCUS-IUS for short) is cuddling in his arms. Swiped from the Engineering Society Trophy Case sometime Monday night in one of the cleverest snatches on the campus in years, the trophy will still be presented to the winner of the 1950 World's Championship Chariot Race, to be run Friday, NFCUS-IUS spokesmen said last night.

Trophy Stolen

Yesterday morning some unauthorized person or persons entered the sanctity of the Little Red Skulehouse, and stole the Jerry P. Potts Memorial Trophy. Since then the Medical Society have officially proclaimed that they have formed the Newly Formed Charioteering Undergraduate Society of Impartial University Students (for brevity NFCUS-IUS).

The way it looks, there will be one race, with two sets of judges. This fool-proof scheme offers many possibilities. For instance, if you win in the eyes of the NFCUS-IUS, you receive one king-sized Potts' pot. If you win the race with the sanction of the Chariot Race Committee of Three you receive a large free box of Pablum.

To make clear their position, the Medical Committee have issued a release declaring that they have done what they have done in the interest of the University as a hole. "Our slogan is 'Your In', and although there may be some who will take this to indicate that this is to signify that we are trying to rig this Ben Hurrish epic to our own ends, it is not true."

"The trophy is removed to safe custody until we can form a university wide organization to look after the race, and we firmly deny that it is in use in Hospital for Old Women. After all, they might catch a cold, or something."

In reply to a charge that the Chariot Race is a publicity stunt for the Skule-At-Home, Barney Warren, Eng. Soc. publicity director says "This is not true—it is a publicity stunt for the Dating Bureau that we are running for freshmen for the Skule-At-Home."

In spite of the turmoil, entries are still pouring into The Varsity office. Already more than two-thirds of the campus have replied, and in view of the fact that there are 14,000 students present, this adds up to an impressive total.

Although we hesitate to kill a good thing, the staff of this paper would like to point out that they won the trophy last year, and are likely to do so again. It's in the bag.

If you are still interested in spite of this little warning, then the Medical Society would like to draw to your attention that they are going to throw the NFCUS-IUS open to the public. They will allow one duly-accredited representative

A Pigeon On The Grass, Alas!

A black and white Rock Dove, commonly known as "one of them pigeons", was seen recently strutting about on the front lawn of the Forestry Building. At first sight, it appeared to be wearing a graduate's cloak complete with white fur collar.

Closer inspection revealed that the bird had eaten itself through the centre of a full piece of bread, which had become wedged among the ruff feathers of the neck and breast. When last seen the bird was heading for Knox College, still maintaining its scholastic dignity despite its laboured flight.

ASSES Club Announces Ajax Commemoration

According to a recent release from the Engineering Society, this week is to be known as Ajax Commemoration week. The Chariot Race is to be the culmination of the week's activities, and the release states that the Gérry P. Potts Trophy will undoubtedly remain in the hands of the Engineers (see elsewhere on this page).

Referring to the present decline in student participation in cultural activities, the release goes on to state that "it is to the engineers that the students must look for initiative and leadership in the matter of the introduction of some cultural activity which will catch, and hold, student interest."

The Ajax Survivors Student & Engineers 'Sociation (ASSES) enumerate among the cultural advantages of such a period (1) the growing of beards which will "attract women and help produce a strong, healthy Canadian race", (2) the Chariot Race, "good for the physical, moral and spiritual well-being of all concerned", (3), (4), and (5) other advantages.

These include: a "Chawin' tobacco spittin' contest" scheduled for 12:30, to be judged on the basis of range, velocity and splatter; a Stogy Smoking Contest; a Roll Your Own Contest (Artsmen can use two hands and left foot); a Tug-of-War Contest (Skule vs Campus) and a Bring Your Own Refreshments.

Law Technicalities Out "Loopholeless" Code In

London, Jan. 23 —(CUP)— Suspension from classes and a possible fine of $10 is in store for student parking regulation offenders when a guaranteed "loopholeless" ironfanged amendment to the Code of Student Discipline becomes effective on the U.W.O. campus.

Last month fourteen parking infractions were dismissed by the Student's Court on the basis of legal technicalities. Legal summonses have now been procured from the London City Police.

$100,000 Bequest For Scholarships Honors Schoolgirl

The memory of a schoolgirl whose dream of entering University College was ended by death will be perpetuated by the Ann Shepard Memorial Scholarships in Biology, President Sidney Smith announced this week.

The scholarship will be established with a $100,000 bequest given to the University through the estate of Mrs. Helen Shepard.

Dr. Smith said Mrs. Shepard's daughter, Ann, had been attracted to the natural sciences while attending Parkdale Collegiate. Winning high standing in her senior matriculation exams in 1928, Ann Shepard was to enter University College the next autumn when she died through illness.

The will of the girl's mother, who died 18 years later, left the income of the estate to a dependent brother until his death, after which the residue would be used for scholarships open to University College students.

Medieval Custom Of "Kissing Post" Revived for Ball

Revival of "an old medieval custom", the Kissing Post, will take place at the University College Centennial Arts Ball, February 3, the decoration Committee announced last night.

"In the bustle of the modern world, we are apt to forget the great traditions and common heritage handed down to us by our forefathers," committee-man John Ruch said.

The quaint custom is believed to have been originated by a group of 16th century maidens out for a bit of fun. A Committee on Procedure at the Post will bring down a set of rules, Ruch said.

Wilful Neglect

We think the NFCUS Committee on this campus deserves a "blast" for its wilful neglect of National Student Week.

The National Federation of Canadian University Students is potentially a useful organization for bringing direct benefits to Canadian students.

Effort expended to organize and unify students on a national scale, to lower text-book costs and increase financial support to students, to provide for lower student transportation rates and so forth must necessarily find its outlet through administrative channels. As a result the large majority of the collective national student body knows little about NFCUS and what it does.

Without the support of a majority of students, NFCUS, with all its potentialities, is in actuality hardly more effective than an imaginative day-dream. It is a castle in the air.

The National Executive recognized this fact, and so instituted a National Student Week, from Jan. 23 to 29, 1950, for the purpose of bringing NFCUS to the people, so to speak. The intent was also to bring the "people"—students—closer to each other.

McGill students are hosts to four other colleges and universities at activities including a mock conference, a debate and a discussion of NFCUS affairs. At the U. of Manitoba a week of cultural and athletic events is being presented; publications from other universities are displayed. McMaster is giving a display showing Canadian campus life; and UNB is celebrating National Student Week with a series of special events.

At Toronto, the largest university in Canada, which in past years has provided the leadership in nearly all NFCUS' fields of endeavor, The Varsity ran a short news story telling what other universities are doing.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Luboshutz And Nemenoff

On Monday night at Massey Hall Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff gave the eighth in the current International Artists series of concerts to a very appreciative audience. It is rarely that we feel so unhappy in our calling, for so enchanting an evening is hard to discuss except in gaudy superlatives. Naturally, we do not conceive of our task in terms of fault finding and the detection of erring minutiae but we do feel that a gush of sticky-sweet intensives is a less than intelligent critique of any performance, no matter how good.

Perhaps the most interesting thing about the concert was the tonal range from the cold mathematical lucidity of "Now comes the gentle Saviour" (Bach, arranged by Luboshutz) to the lively South American rhythms of "Saudades of Brasil." Here is a virtuosity which surprised one, not by its intensity or its consummate skill, although these were manifestly present but by its range, its breadth of vision.

After the Bach the team played Mozart's fascinating Sonata in D Major which we believe to be the only one which he wrote for two pianos; Grove, however, dismisses it with a nod as a lively sonata. It is, of course, in the usual Mozart sonata form, three movements; Allegro conspirito, Andante and Allegro molto. We felt particularly happy about the third movement as it was at this juncture that we first felt the responsiveness of the artist to the enthusiasm of the audience. Here we had our first spiritual confrontation. nor did the exaltation leave us until we had trundled forth into the bleakness of mid-winter.

Saint Saens' Variations on a Theme by Beethoven followed the Mozart, and this too had a special interest for us as it seemed in a surreal way to be the interpenetration of the rose (Beethoven) and the trellis-work (Saint Saens); by the end of the end of the variations one could see neither rose nor trellis-work but a new substance concocted of the two.

After the intermission Luboshutz and Nemenoff gave the first Canadian composer, Rieti. Somehow this reminded us of the Saint Seans' variations in its modernistic treatment of the old dance rhythms: Bourree (allegro), Aria and Ecossiase (Andante Cantabile) and Gigue (allegro vivace). Orthodox in treatment, it was in fact a sonata drawn upon the spirit of sixteenth century Europe. However we could not but sense a distinctly Czech quality in the Ecossiase which seemed nearly as humorous as "God Save the King" sung in Ukrainian.

The Chopin Rondo which concluded the program was the overexpression of lyricism; swans sailing on rippling waters, grace abounding; moreover the duo team managed to arrive at a mean between too much overflow of the spirit and the tonelessness cultivated by certain pianists nowadays.

The three encores were in the "popular" category and vastly titilated the audience.

Mid-Century Highlights

The Mating Flounder

The Varsity throughout the years has been subject to all the common ills of mature newspapers. The least of these afflictions is the use of the small blank spaces which creep in at the bottom of even the best planned page. Various past editors have contrived methods whereby these spaces serve a useful function. Their efforts were spurred on by the more exacting members of the SAC Financial Committee. In today's article a review of the best space fillers gleaned from The Varsity files will be presented.

The Varsity's first Editor, J. Oppenhiem Phaphoonik, utilized these conspicuous spaces by printing assorted punctuation marks from which the reader could make selections according to his own literary tastes. This reduced the work of the night editor who at the time was breaking in a new set of dentures for his grandmother. At the end of the publication term, J. O. P found he was left with a surplus of three hypertrophied hyphens, one aposterous prepostrophy and two sigmoid colons. Many claimed that the material devoid of punctuation made more lucid reading. Another Editor used these spaces to provide broad "a's" for the particular convenience of Trinity students.

Two conflicting schools of thought occurred on the mastheads of the 1920 and 1921 Varsity. In 1920, Reuben Shorthorne asserted his editorial privileges by filling these small vacant spaces with current egg and poultry prices. Regret O'Toole, The Varsity Editor of 1921, believed these spaces could best be utilized in holding his own choices for daily double selections at local tracks. His early success so convinced Regret of the power of his system that he risked the total budget allotted him by the SAC on Sweet Prunella in the fifth at Dufferin one balmy Saturday afternoon, and so prematurely concluded the publication of The Varsity for that year. Such an unfortunate experience would have driven a less ardent enthusiast to better ways but Regret had caught the bug. Regret may be seen any afternoon at the Whispering Hope Mission.

The 1948 Varsity Editor tormented his readers by filling the little spaces with unfinished enticing tidbits from Dr. Kinsock's reports. Little gems such as the following appeared regularly:

"The average American woman's."

"The Australian aborigines consummated."

"The Foundation Garment Research Board revealed."

Most Editors of The Varsity resorted to the more conventional type of spacefillers, the odd facts or Did You Know variety.

Our Readers Write

Advertising and The Varsity

Editor, The Varsity:

In a recent issue of Saturday Night appeared a few comments on the papers submitted for the CUP annual contest. Among a lengthy list of faults which are (quite justly) found with our feeble effort I find advertising foremost.

There is no denying that we go too far. Even those rather miserable U.S. radio stations which play a record every fifteen minutes while the announcer reaches for a fresh pile of commercials do not sink as far as this so-called newspaper. Let us face facts. This campus is the far-from-proud possessor of an advertising circular with a sports department.

Seriously something should be done. What? Well, just as a start why not:

Raise the Student Fee. It's ridiculously low. The Varsity receives about 90c a year per student and has a policy of paying as much as possible of expenses from revenue. Compare this with the McGill Daily, which, until the last minute was tied for CUP trophy honours and received high praise from the judges for general excellence. The Daily receives a grant of $1.50 per student out of the $12 annual fee, as its starting grant, and gets extra sums from the Students Executive Council general budget.

Eliminate those ridiculous publicity blurbs run under titles such as UC It's This Way, Skulespots, etc. The occasional bit of news they contain should be in the news columns, the rest is just a bunch of tripe pandering to the journalistic urges of college and faculty publicity agents.

Eliminate the waste and duplication of effort involved in Toike Oike. One GOOD campus paper would be better than a dozen like the present feeble wrecks.

I have more suggestions, but this is quite enough heresy for today.

Orchids to Dnieper

Editor, The Varsity:

We are amazed to find that Robert Dnieper has acquired some wit and satire.

If he keeps on with this good work and passes this year's undisciplined study, we shall almost feel him worthy to enter SPS I.

Talk Rhythm, Sing Rhythm, Paint Rhythm

By ED RASKY

"Perhaps it is coincidental yet the rhythm of the spoken language is often the rhythm of music of the nationality," said Boris Berlin of the Royal Conservatory of Music. "Similarly," he went on, "paintings seem to catch the same moods as music." On this basis Mr. Berlin is going to use the following method when he speaks on "Contemporary Russian Music" to the Russian Circle and music lovers on Wednesday night at the Women's Union.

First he shows slides of the composers and pictures of the style they represent. At the same time his commentary describes the history of the composer and the type of music he is known for.

Russian musicians have different schools of music which they are associated with—modern, romantic, descriptive, folk songs, and historical. "For example", Mr. Berlin explained, "Shostakovitch's 5th symphony in the slow movements represents a picture of Leningrad at twilight. Rimsky Korsakov always followed themes of fantasy or historical Russian history."

Mr. Boris Berlin, as well as teaching piano is an examiner and adjudicator. Born in Kharkov, Russia, he studied the piano early in life and attended the Geneva Conservatory of Music. Among his teachers were men like Mark Hambourg and Leonid Kreutzer.

Although he hasn't done any radio or concert work for six years, he is just as happy to concentrate on the composition of piano works. He is the originator of the progressive method of teaching piano to young children. At the present time he has two proteges of five years (no less) who are already playing Bach and Beethoven.

As Walt Disney made a great contribution to revive interest in classical music when he produced Fantasia, Mr. Berlin feels that his method, which is in a way similar, will give those who attend his talk an insight on such composers as Tchaikovsky and Prokofieff and what their music represents.

Hoop Tripleheader For First Sports Nite

Oswego State, St. Kitts, YHMA Quintets On Card

Varsity's intercollegiate senior basketball blues, led by mentor Bob Masterson, ran through their paces last night in the main gym in preparation for their engagement tonight with the Oswego State Teachers' quintet. The big blues were sharpening up on a new style of play and displayed the skill and spirit of a club that was out to break their present slump. The Oswego affair will be the headline attraction of tonight's Sports Nite which will also include two other hoop exhibitions.

Saint Catharines Collegiate Seniors will be on hand to lead off the proceedings as they tackle the Varsity Juniors. Barry Lowes Intermediates will face the YMHA Ints in the second encounter. The Junior-St. Kitts game will get under way at 5.45 p.m. with the Oswego-Blues game scheduled for 8.45. As previously announced there will be no dancing after the games but women are cordially invited. The usual six hundred ducats will be on sale at the door.

Wade's Bees Lead Over Baymen 4-0 In Third Period

By DAVE BUTTERS

The return of Phil Arrowsmith to the Junior Bees lineup has acted like a tonic to the Junior O.H.A. hockey squad from the University of Toronto. Last Friday night the Juniors fought to a 4-2 victory over the second-place Corner Boys. Last night it was the line of Kent, Arrowsmith and Yeo which put the Bees in front of the St. Michael sextet to the tune of 4-0 at the end of the second period.

In the first period of good clean hockey there was only one goal scored. Yeo sank a pass from Dave Kent to put Varsity ahead 1-0. Twenty-five seconds after the second stanza had started Don Fullerton got the puck at his own blueline, tore up the ice, evaded the two Mikemen waiting for him and deposited the puck in the net behind Gerry Young, the St. Mike's goalie.

This goal was the first of three sunk by the Varsity players. That alone is not indicative of the style of play of the Bees but it is significant that each of the goals was scored unassisted. One, the last of the period, was made by Phil Arrowsmith when his team was short-handed. The other sharpshooter for the Bees was Dave Kent.

LINEUPS:... ... .

Varsity: goal, Milne; defense, Prendergast (P), Prendergast (D); centre, Fullerton; wings, Brown, Wardrop; alternates, Arrowsmith, Kent, Yeo, Lady, Sinclair, Nichols, Machim, Moore.

St. Mike's: goal, Young; defense, MacNamara, Clune; centre, Clark; wings, Ratchford, Mihlison, alternates, Scanlon, Lee, Peart, Harrison, O'Hearne, Bourke, McDonald.

Attention all you would-be Robin Hoods!

Claire Kelleher, president of The University of Toronto Women's Archery Club, has announced that starting today, 4-6, the club will hold their practices at the Drill Hall. Up to now practices have been held at the Margaret Eaton gym and the Drill Hall will be a decided improvement as it offers a greater range for the archers.

The "do" today will consist of a friendly contest with maybe even a small prize for the winner.

There have been ten or twelve faithful attendants all season but they would appreciate a little more competition. Many signed up for archery in September and Claire would like to see some of these girls turn up today.

The Hart House Archery Club holds "shoots" at intervals through the year and the girl's club is always invited to participate. The club is also planning to ask McMaster University to come here for a friendly tournament late in February.

At present the membership consists mostly of UC with a few representatives from St. Mike's, Vic and Trinity, and one engineerette. If they can get enough girls from every college, the club members would like to hold an interfaculty tournament.

Bernice Muir, last year's Varsity champ and winner of the first Senior T for archery has kindly made a donation to the club for the purchase of additional supplies.

So Come on Kids, pick up your bows and arrows at the door and have some fun from 4-6 at The Drill Hall.

Chariot Race Controversy Gets Hot

THE VARSITY

VOL. LXIX, NO. 72 — THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO — Thursday, January 26, 1950

SPS Ignores NFCUS-IUS As Unofficial

Track clear, weather cool, and the race is just twenty-four hours away. Skulemen have issued a bulletin replying to the Medical Society's announcement that they will form a new organization for the 'fair and unbiased conduct of the Jerry P. Potts Memorial Chariot Race.'

The situation hasn't changed much since yesterday at this time, except that the start of the epic event which has stirred up so much controversy has drawn implacably nearer.

At an emergency meeting of the NFCUS-IUS today at 1 p.m. in The Varsity news office, the rules of the race will be drawn up in democratic fashion, with one representative from each faculty. "This means a duly-accredited representative, mind you, not just any member of a faculty," said a spokesman for the NFCUS-IUS last night.

An official statement from Skule last night warned Skulemen that the best course is to ignore this 'miserable imitation of an efficiently organized and established charioteering body, namely the Jerry P. Potts Memorial Trophy Chariot Race.'

With regard to the loss of the highly valued and dearly cherished 'Potts' pot, the statement said "Skule has been so often called on to supply objets d'art for other less richly endowed faculties to pilfer, that henceforth we advise such bodies to reserve positions on an already long list of those who wish to cash in on cheap publicity at our gracious expense."

In justification of the drastic measure used in handling the situation, the NFCUS-IUS exclaimed that it was in the interest of the whole student body. "The debasement of the true nature of the event has led to a distressing decline in attendance at Hart House, Art Saloons, and Sunday School. In face of this we would like to start a movement that will correct this deplorable situation."

To date there have been applications from Vic, U.C., Skule, Meds, O.T., The Varsity staff, the Blue and White Society, The Ancient and Mystic Conclave of Alchemists and Sorcerers, and of course, the Trinity Old Girls Association.

With each entry comes a slight

Few Tickets Left For AVR As Plans Near Completion

Everything is in readiness at the Hart House Box Office to handle the exchange of tickets for the All Varsity Revue, and all seats will be reserved, said Murray Sussman, the Revue's Publicity director yesterday. He also announced that usherettes will be chosen next week, and a system is being devised for having different usherettes at every performance.

Only tickets for the Saturday Matinee are now available at the SAC offices; returned tickets have been taken as soon as turned in.

Most of the skits in the Revue will be take-offs on University life. John Northmore is being featured in "The Teddy Bear Number", and Bob Cringan has worked up an orchestration for a "Hoe Down Production Number" that stresses the fiddlers.

Mr. Sussman has offered an All Varsity Revue Sundae, of which restaurateurs report that about 2,000 have been sold, to the winners of the Chariot Race — provided that they win "in a fair way."

Text Costs Force Action By Students In Greece

Salonika, Jan. 26 —(UPRESS)— Copyright owners are gnashing their teeth in Greece these days. Students of the University of Thessaloniki are doing something about the high cost of text books. They are going to mimeograph texts and sell them cheaply to students who can't afford the present enormous cost of books. Equipment and writing materials are being supplied to the "publishers" by the I.S.S.

SAC Committee

ANNOUNCES NEW PLANS FOR UNION BUILDING

Snow, Singsongs, Shows, St. Sauveur Awaits Skiers

The first of four special ski trains will chug out of Toronto Union Station on Friday night at 8:50. One hundred and twenty skiers (including forty girls) will be on board the "Special" which will arrive at its destination, St. Sauveur, before breakfast on Saturday morning.

The "Special," which will proceed directly from Toronto to St. Sauveur, will consist principally of coach cars which make down into upper and lower berths. Skiers are advised to bring along a blanket or even better, an air mattress as the berths are just a bit hard. But, with noise, sing-songs, and other disturbances, who expects to sleep?

Nymark's, Hillside Guest House, Larose Inn, Au Tout Petit, and Pension Laurentide, are among the list of resorts which the skiers will call "home" for one night at least.

Free dancing at Nymark's and Nadeau's and a Saturday-night show should keep things lively. The favourite hang-out for tired skiers, however, is located at the corners of Station and Main Sts. — The Pub — famous for Saturday night sing-songs.

To those who may still be doubting that Quebec has snow while mild weather prevails in Toronto, the following ski-report received yesterday morning will be reassuring — excellent skiing, snow still falling. If the weather here discouraged you from subscribing or if you had cancelled, there are still chances to join the ski-bound throng on February 3rd, 10th, 17th. These are the dates of three more Ski - Weekends at St Sauveur, Quebec.

Scheme Gets Okay From Varsity Head 'Fine Show'—SAC

Existing plans for the Student Memorial Union have been scrapped. Student Union Committee Chairman Ian Maclennan told the SAC meeting last night that the high cost of land and the possibility of duplicating existing services had necessitated complete scrapping of existing plans.

"Finest Report"

The report on the Union, to have been built at Philosopher's Walk and Hoskin Ave., which Maclennan called "the finest report I have ever seen", was totally inadequate now.

Instead, plans for a new Union Building, tentatively planned to stand in the area south of Hart House and east of the observatory, will have to be drafted.

Hints Money Available

Maclennan intimated that the money for the new union may be forthcoming if the plans were satisfactory when completed. Accordingly, a new report would have to be submitted for a union which will duplicate none of the facilities now available in Hart House.

When told of the new plans, the Council, which had expected the Student Union to be shelved indefinitely, gave Maclennan a unanimous round of applause. The announcement was a complete surprise to Council members, who crowded around Maclennan to congratulate him at the close of the meeting.

Has Modern Lines

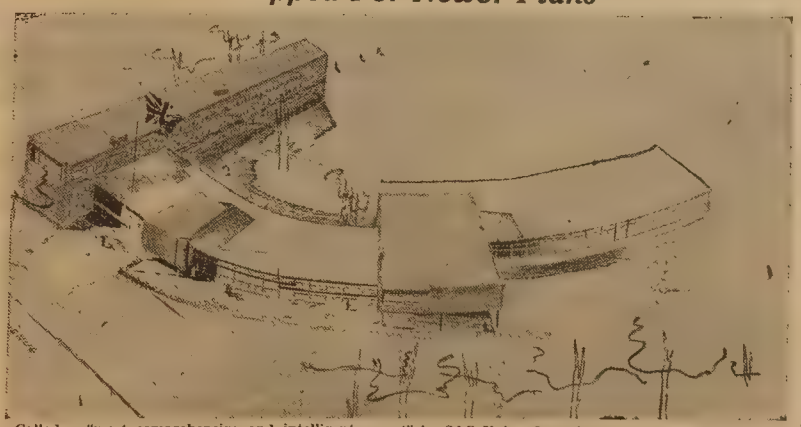
A tentative drawing of a new union showed an L-shaped building in simple modern lines. A more detailed drawing of the proposed building will be available for publication soon.

Maclennan stated that the committee had cut down on expenses by cutting out the broadcasting studio, expected to cost around $100,000 and by reducing floor space in the cafeterias.

Will Revise Report

The surprise announcement came following a couple of anxious weeks for the committee responsible for the union, who had feared that plans for the union would have to go by the board for lack of funds. The committee has studied the existing report fully, and will take immediate steps to revise it and bring plans carefully, and has suggested several tentative measures to cut down the requirements. In view of more recent information there will also be a serious survey made of all existing extra-curricular facilities on the university, and all proposed facilities in new buildings, in order to avoid unnecessary duplication.

Rearrangement Necessary



Maclennan stressed that there will be no cut in the scope or the planned activities of the union but that it will be more a rearrangement of space, and an elimination of some of the larger units. Two units that will definitely be shelved are the radio studio and the theatre, which may be included in the planning, but will not be built in the initial stage.

The committee will get to work at once Maclennan said last night, in order to have a new proposal ready for the consideration of the President and Board of Governors "as soon as possible."

Scrapped For Newer Plans

Called a "most comprehensive and intelligent report" by SAC Union Committee chairman Ian MacLennan, last year's report on the Student Memorial bull uilding is being scrapped in favor of a new report to be drawn up by the SAC Committee. Shown above is a plan of the Union as it was presented in a thesis by Stan White. The new plans for the building call for its construction to the south of Hart House. (See story on this page.)

Outside College Is Battleground For Men's Minds

Montreal, Jan. 26—(CUP)—"Too many universities are nothing but an uneasy no-man's-land between the opposing citadels of two rival ideologies," Dr. C. Frederick Frazer said yesterday in an address at McGill University. "And in a world divided . . . the defence of Western democracy depends on other than material armaments," continued the director of the Institute of Public Affairs at Dalhousie, and editor of the Canadian Quarterly "Public Affairs."

"Canada must battle for men's minds. Cultural relations must be established between countries and education must be made more plentiful at home." All this should be done on a popular plane, that is by the people and not by governments, according to Dr. Frazer. The Soviet Union has done it on a government plane, with the result the intellectual resources of the Russiaan people have been mobilized in only one direction — to Communism.

Titoism Forces Seizure Of Satellites By Russians

"Titoism" shook Russian policy. It caused withdrawal of the Berlin blockade and of the 'forward policy'—to take risks in Germany in order to draw Germany, France and Italy into the Communist orbit, Wilson Woodside, foreign editor for Saturday Night noted in an address before the International Relations Club at the Museum Theatre yesterday. "Now Titoism has called a halt to the obtaining of Germany."

Woodside advanced that Titoism, an expression of national determination in Yugoslavia, is no fake. "There is a strong national feeling which supports Tito. People in Yugoslavia who don't approve of him as a man, approve of his stand against Russia."

Because of Tito's new policy, it is Mr. Woodside's belief that Russia will now try to integrate the satelite countries into the U.S.S.R. proper. Already Stalin's moves against Jugoslavia have been the denunciation of Tito by the Cominform, economic pressure and cut of supplies. There were mobilization moves last fall that led to a military scare and might even lead to an offensive in the spring.

Communism—An Offence Debate Topic In West

Winnipeg, Jan. 25—(CUP)—"That Communist activity should be made a criminal offence in Canada" is to be the subject of the biggest University debate of the western Canadian student year. The debate, for the McGoun Cup, will be held at the University of Manitoba.

The host college will take the negative, while the U. of Alberta will uphold the affirmative. The debate, which is the prelude to the national debating contest, will end the current celebrations of National Student Week, being held at the U. of Manitoba.

Encouraging News....

The announcement made at last night's Students' Administrative Council meeting by Students' Memorial Union Committee chairman Ian Maclennan to the effect that President Sidney Smith has indicated that the administration of the University will give concrete support to the proposed students' union, is encouraging.

A considerable air of gloom has floated around the activities of the committee during the past two weeks when it seemed that the Union plans might have to be scuttled. The big problem has been money, and while no definite statement as to where the money will come from is possible at this time, it seems that the money may be forthcoming. The entire project, including the loan of the money, must be approved by the Board of Governors of the University.

Maclennan, who talked with the President Wednesday morning, indicated that as far as the Union Committee could see, there seemed little point in going ahead with plans for the Union unless there was some reasonable hope that the money could be obtained. Too much time and effort were being poured into the project to have it end up in a pigeon hole.

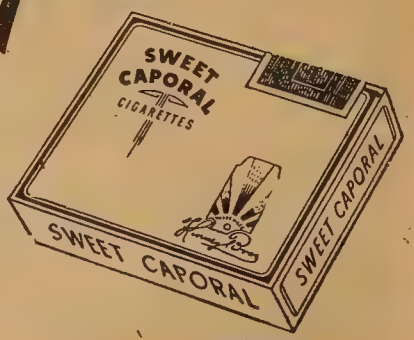
With administrative support the Union becomes more of a reality than it has ever been before on this campus. The next step is to present to President Smith, for presentation to the Board of Governors, a complete, concrete plan and proposal for the Union. This must be a comprehensive survey of all the existing and proposed facilities envisaged for the Union, especially things like eating facilities. There is every hope that this can be done before too long. Most of the groundwork on the Union has already been done, and the big problems that remain can be ironed out easily and satisfactorily with a little vision on all sides.

The newly suggested site for the Union along Queen's Park, and adjacent to Hart House, has already solved two problems. One was the cost of land: this land is owned by the university and will not entail a new expenditure. The second was the problem of Hart House. Many competent observers felt that a new union built some distance from Hart House would seriously jeopardize the program and activities of the House. The new location for the Union will make it possible to co-ordinate the activities of the Union and of Hart House, possibly under one administration.

There are other big problems to be considered. One is an agreement between the arts colleges and the University on whether or not the arts colleges will build unions of their own. There have been some indications that Victoria and University College might build large unions for their own use. Intelligent thinking, and co-operation of all interested parties will solve this problem.

Another big problem is an avoidance of duplication of services. Intelligent planning, and careful survey work of the requirements of the whole University, and the planned and existing facilities will overcome this barrier.

It will be necessary for the students to curtail somewhat the ambitious union they planned last year, but this need not lead to a lessening of the scope or usefulness of the Union. It will also be necessary for the SAC to include in its fees brief next year a scheme for students to start paying for their Union. This will probably be done by a straight fee added to the SAC fee for a period of twenty or thirty years.



There is one thing to be kept in mind. It takes a long time to plan and build a project of this kind. Soon examinations will be upon us and then it will be too late to do anything about the Union. A full plan should be ready for presentation to the President well before the end of this term.

There is a great deal of work to be done. The support of all students, and the continued co-operation between students and the administration will ensure the success of the Students' Memorial Union.

Russian Arts May Thrive Despite Gag

"There are strong reasons to believes strict control of writers in the Soviet Union will not prevent the creation of virile literature of real quality," Prof. E. J. Simmons of Columbia University indicated yesterday in a lecture in University College. He was speaking on "Problems of Control in Soviet Literature."

State control of authors in Russia has now become so absolute for a Soviet writer, "There remains only a choice betweerf degrees of acquiescence. There is no choice between acquiesence and opposition."

Yet, despite this control, for 30 years Soviet writers had poured out a vast amount of creative work "by any fair appraisal of the very highest standards."

How was this to be explained? "The answer to this seems to require an answer to the question of where controls end and convictions begin," he said.

Russians Discontented

Common experience indicates that we tend to gradually accept controls maintained for a long period of time and turn them into convictions if they eventually seem to be necessary and good, he said.

If it was true that the Russian Communists were succeeding in turning their controls over writers into convictions of those writers, this fact had wide implications. "The whole foreign policy of the United States is based on the assumption that the Russian people are discontented and will become more discontented because of the strict controls they live under," he pointed out.

If the people of the Communist countries gradually came to convert the controls forced upon them into convictions, then there could be no discontent.

Soviet and Christian Arts

Prof. Simmons compared the authoritarian beliefs being used by Communism to the religious faith of medieval society. "There is hardly any more complete control over art and literature in the Soviet Union today than there was over Christian art in the Middle Ages," he declared. "But look at Notre Dame Cathedral."

At first in Russia there were many complaints about the restrictions forced upon writers, he said. But since then the general tendency to change controls into convictions, aided by other factors, such as habit, constant propaganda and the appearance of a new generation of writers who had never known the absence of such controls had destroyed most of the opposition.

Moreover authors had been given

Use Science And Religion In Search For Truth Baha'i

"Religion and science are the two wings that support man in his progressive flight to truth," Arthur Irwin, M.A. Sc., told a student group at an open meeting of the Bah'i World Faith on Monday in University College. "When a man tries to fly with the wings of religion alone he quickly falls into the quagmire of superstition. On the wing of science alone, however, he falls into the despairing slough of materialism."

"According to the Bah'i teachings man has developed from a unicellular form, through the animal stages until he finally reached the form of man. However, while man has developed from this single cell, he has through all the stages differed from all other animals in that he is destined to become man. In this sense, the evolution of man may be compared to the development of the foetus in the womb of the mother," he pointed out.

"Man's intellectual development, as compared with his physical development is comparatively recent. In terms of ratio we may say that the earth is 2,000 years old, ancient man was born one year ago, modern man came into being a month ago, metals were first used two days ago, the industrial revolution was started one hour ago and the first world war twenty minutes ago. This analogy shows that man has tremendously accelerated during the last century," he stated.

Drew Ranks Freedom Fifth In Future Deadlines

Hamilton, Jan. 26.—(CUP)— "As we enter the last half of the twentieth century, public officials must consider, first, peace and maintenance of international security which was the reason for fighting this last war, second, the mastering of science and technology, third, the management of physical resources, fourth, domestic stability and security, and fifth, the preservation of freedom in the things we do," said George Drew, leader of the Conservative party, in a recent address at McMaster.

"In this nation there is no room for jealousy between political parties. I ask each individual to find the way that our opportunities can best be developed for our people so that the best degree of happiness may result for our people."

All Pitch In As Clubmen Decorate Hall

Members of the Newman Club are now in the midst of a redecorating job on the basement of their Hall. Previously almost useless rooms are being turned into a lounge and informal mecca. All the work is being done by the members themselves under the direction of professional assistants where required.

The walls are being completely covered with donnaconna boards, the floors with mastic tile and a complete new modern bar. Most novel feature of the redecoration is the cove lighting that is being placed along all the wall beams and the window frames. These lights will be in different colours to give added effect and false beams will be erected to enclose the ceiling pipes and into these lights will also be placed.

The radiators will be covered with lattice boxes and the floor pipes with a loung seat that will stretch all the way around the room.

Petition To NFCUS For IUS Affiliation Tabled By Council

In a debate that brought out many sides of the NFCUS—IUS argument, SAC last night tabled a motion that would have urged NFCUS to seriously consider affiliation with the international body.

Motion Tabled

Finance Commissioner Earl Orser's motion that the SAC recommend the National Federation of Canadian University Students should affiliate with the International Union of Students, and if the motion were carried, observer delegates be appointed to attend the IUS Congress in Europe in 1950, was tabled for the next meeting of the Council when representatives would be able to vote according to the feelings of their faculties and colleges.

Orser urged that NFCUS join IUS "unconditionally." He was referring to the autonomy clause in the IUS constitution stating that all member unions must abide by the motions passed by the IUS, which NFCUS objected to in its first attempt at affiliation with IUS. We must abide by this clause as well as all others, he said.

Outline Advantages

Committee Chairmen Harris McPhail and Ian Maclennan included as advantages from affiliation:

—The fact that we would be able to present Canadian ideas and principles, and with these possibly change those of the Eastern Students' Unions.

—We can take part in debates on world student opinion, and possibly modify IUS' anti-democratic outlook.

—We can obtain first-hand knowledge of the life of eastern students by speaking directly to them. "The knowledge gained by both sides in such an exchange is, in itself, a danger to Communism," Maclennan said.

"Our attitude towards IUS affiliation has been a defeatist one," said McPhail, "and there can be no peace in the world without an exchange of ideas. Such an exchange is possible in IUS."

Opposes Affiliation

SAC President Bob Hetherington said that affiliation now "would only dissipate the resources of NFCUS," which is just now getting on its feet in Canada. "NFCUS resources should be concentrated at home," he said.

Taking into account the "illogical argument" used by the Eastern students, and the fact that IUS is "packed" with politically indoctrinated students, Hetherington said, "it is naive to believe that our

Communist Theory Of Crystal-Balling Best By Far: LPP

"The Communist theory of prediction of history is best because we work for it," said LPP Education Director Norm Endicott, IV Vic, at an LPP forum held Monday. "Marx predicted that a large part of the world would turn to Communism; we did that." The subject of the forum was, "Can Communists Predict History?"

Shirley Endicott, II Vic, illustrated Communist superiority in the field of prediction by pointing out that throughout the "Roaring Twenties" it was only the Communists under Tim Buck who warned of the coming depression. When the depression had struck, the Communists once again had been the only ones to show workers that the way to better the conditions was to strike.

Miss Endicott continued by quoting Stalin to say that while Marxism does not deny the importance of people in the making of history, man cannot try to change his environment without finding himself in a quixotic position.

Predict Only Near Future

In the discussion period, Chuck Cohen, III UC, asked how to reconcile the present state of affairs with Marx's prediction that the petty bourgeois was slowly sinking into the workers' class, as the gulf between capitalist and worker widened.

Miss Endicott replied that changing conditions had prevented the fulfillment of this prediction, and for that reason predictions could be made only for the near future.

Another speaker pointed out that "while small predictions had not come true, the important thing was that a large part of the world had turned to Communism, exactly as foretold."

Marx's Views Changed

Endicott pointed out that in his

Do Not Cut Power Of Unions Say Hart House Debaters—67 to 22

Led by Dr. Eugene Forsey, Canadian Congress of Labor Research Director, the opposition at last night's Hart House Debate in the Debates Room voted down a motion censuring the increased power of trade unions, 67-22.

Dr. Forsey headed the opposition to the resolution, "Resolved: that the power of trade unions has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished."

Condemns Unemployment

R. F. Slackhouse, first speaker for the affirmative, contended that the point of the debate lay in the last phrase, and stated that a few union leaders abuse their power that should be held for the community benefit, and as a result very minor groups have the power to tie up the national economy. He contended that industry exists to serve the nation, and that neither labor nor management should have the power to do the community disservice.

He offered as the only methods to circumvent this either the organization of all groups, with a resultant mad rush for power by all, or the limiting of current union power.

Cites Labor Codes

W. M. Fram, opposing, pointed out that only one-quarter of the Canadian labor force is unionized, and that under the varying Dominion and Provincial labor codes industry-wide strikes, the most powerful weapons of labor, were almost impossible. He pointed out that unions are under the law and obey it and stated that their power should be increased, not diminished.

J. C. Medcoff replied that union political powers were a danger to the unions themselves, and pointed as evidence to England where he said that the unions are having more difficulty with their current labor government than they ever had with any capitalistic party in power. He also contended that labor should look after its own economics to prevent such happenings as occurred in Ontario recently when 50,000 workers were thrown out of work.

Advocates More Power

B. Z. Shek, answering for the noes, said that "trade union movements . . . are real and practical democracy," using as example the many political splits in trade unions. He said also that since "trade unions in this country have contributed to the rise of the standard of living" they should be given more power for better living conditions.

Dr. Forsey, speaking against the limitation of union powers, said he felt unions had expanded in the last decade but not to an unwarranted degree, and their power is not necessarily increasing as it is being subjected to increasing state regulation. He went on to say that unions are opposed to strikes anyway, and the theory that strikes should be outlawed indicates a dangerous tendency.

He said that this could result in the unions being swallowed by the state, and warned that unions often grow with repression. He told the debaters that he was familiar only with conditions in Canada, and that he knew that whatever John L. Lewis did in the U.S.A. Canadian miners in his district 26 would not necessarily copy. He noted also that in the U.S. the miners have shifted from union to union but that here they stayed with the CCL; thus union leaders had only limited power and are not dictators as charged by a speaker for the ayes.

He contended that union political action also is merely a defensive movement, and summarized by saying that union power has increased but that the increase was justified and should not be diminished.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

TSO Benefit

On Tuesday the Toronto Symphony orchestra gave a concert in aid of the United Nations International Children's Fund — it is too bad for us that we cannot care enough for the children of the world to turn out in huge multitudes for an event of this nature; even if we hate music, the opportunity to help provide for those future personalities who are now in need should be nothing but satisfying. Last evening's concert was poorly attended, a very regretable condition.

Speaking for children, this writer cannot restrain various feelings of heartache at the spectacle of a child on a pedestal, particularly when the pedestal is as glittering as that of centre-stage in Massey Hall. Elizabeth Auld is thirteen years old, wears pigtails, and displays that sweet, sublime beauty of mannerism which characterizes the good child. One would say that the little girl plays extremely well for her age and that her many successes in music and living will doubtless inspire her to great heights of achievement in a cloistered pinnacle of virtuosity, and there is the heartache, for we cannot honestly believe, in this day of rapidly expanding freedom of social intercourse, that it is possible to cloister completely any individual, even when the seclusion is governed by a law as broadly comprehending as musical art.

If it is healthy for a child to be intensively trained in music, then it is equally healthy for all children to be so trained; we are disregarding the health of our children when we place one on a pedestal to serve as an example of achievement worthy of the competitive activity of its fellows — there are as many worlds of art as there are individuals; each can be king in his own world, and his only competitor (demanding a fulltime competition, too) is himself. Let us not confuse the issue by giving a child any object of competition other than himself.

If on the other hand it is unhealthy for a child to be intensively trained in music, then with what disgusting cruelty we applaud the delightful sounds produced by the tiny wee thing seated at the big black piano surrounded by a sea of black-coated big-men whose every noise is submissive to the whim of the beautiful little soloist.

The remainder of Tuesday evening's program was very enjoyable, on a slightly lighter plane than the regular Symphony concerts; the Images of Childhood by Eldon Rathburn, though seemingly rather inane at the beginning, develops into some warming music that was pleasing to hear, and it was really a great pleasure to hear the Toronto Symphony cut loose on the Italian Caprice of Tchaikovsky — this entertaining piece of music filled me with quite unforgivable delight.

Trinity Recital

The Borscht in Budapest would have turned to cream cheese had it heard what Kenneth Mills did to the sixth Hungarian Dance, Sunday night.

Kenneth Mills, promising young pianist, presented a concert on Sunday evening in Strachan Hall, of light classics. The highlight of the program for me was Brahms' Hungarian Dance No. 6. Not content with the restrained bounce with which Mr. Brahms (probably thinking himself very daring), endowed his eighteenth century dance, Mr. Mills, liberally interpreting the tempo of the biddle dee dum at the end of the recurring theme, added a little bounce of his own. Subtly, almost imperceptibly, in the respectable, conventional cadences of the classical czardas here appeared overtones of schmaltz.

In the second movement of Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata the deliberately incongruous chord was sharply enunciated and then carefully woven back into the theme. The effect was to leave the listener stilled and breathless; one actually felt moonlight flooding the room.

Mr. Mills' treatment of Debussy showed understanding; his sophisticated rendition of Jardin Sous La Pluie was particularly good.

The most musically impressive part of the program was Nocturne — Op. 48, No. 1 by Chopin. Here Kenneth Mills excelled. He seemed to strike that indefinable spark that is the essence of music. Here he received a musician's ultimate ovation; complete silence.

He put himself through his paces in the last number on the program. Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2 is regarded as a mechanically difficult piece of music. Mr. Mills displayed technical competence of the first order, a competence that was not always evident during the first part of the program.

Swiss Soiree

Do you find that the conversation in the J. C. R. lacks the fine touch, that English as it is spoken in the Common Room fails to delight your sensitive ear, that hot dogs do not gladden your gourmet's palate? Perhaps your jaded heart yearns for the cultural stimulation and atmosphere of the salons in the France of another century.

If so, then Monday night's meeting of the Vic French Club in Wymilwood might have been the answer. The meeting took the form of a Swiss soiree, with Swiss music, a talk on the Swiss Alps and Swiss refreshments. The economic difference between a soiree and a salon was duly noted, a salon being an intellectual party and a soiree, a concert for money; however, the slight fee solicited in such charming French phrases, that it was a pleasure to dispose of two bits. Even the usual prosaicness of business was dispelled by a reading of

For Disciplined Minds

Annesley Hall,
Victoria College,
Toronto

The Editor, The Varsity.

In reply to the article "For disciplined minds" in the editorial of today's 'Globe and Mail', I sent the enclosed letter. I would like to submit it to The Varsity also. It is as follows: "It is certainly time that some one spoke up on behalf of that much maligned person, the Pass course student.

Your article of Tuesday, while undoubtedly giving an undeniable criticism of the obvious flaws in the Canadian educational system, does not take into account the fact that an Honour course student is not necessarily better educated than his 'semi-literate' Pass course contemporary. In either course, it is equally possible for students to obtain good marks by 'cramming' and by the next year to have retained very little of the valuable ideas and insights which university training is supposed to have imparted to them.

The well known Englishman, Professor C. E. M. Joad, once said that for the sake of mental discipline, high school students should be required to take as many subjects as possible, whether or not they feel any inclination toward them. This may well be a good thing for young adolescents and is a view taken seriously by various educational authorities. However, those who have proved themselves fit to enter a university should be adult enough to be able to choose their own subjects as far as the lecture time-tables allow. If they have some particular vocation in mind, then the more specialized Honour course is their better choice. If, on the other hand, they prefer to take some post grad course, they are not being untrue to the real purpose of the university by taking the broader Pass course.. In it, they can, as in any other course, attain high academic standing, and it is a fact well known to the university staff that it is as hard, or harder to get an 'A' standing in Pass examinations than in any other Arts course.

The original purpose of the university was to give students an insight into as many subjects as possible, and the specialization of Honour courses belies this. Moreover, the way in which Honour subjects tie up tends to make studying time less than when subjects are relatively unrelated.

To the conscientious Pass student who is valiantly struggling with five or more subjects, the widespread belief that he is in a 'cinch' course is intensely galling. Only he, who is experiencing such a course, knows the colossal amount of work needed to be done in each subject if a good mark is to be obtained.

I wish I could proceed further with this letter, for the sake of my fellow students, but I have too much studying to do—I'm in the Pass course.

Accept

The Editor, The Varsity.

The last time I had the satisfying pleasure of refuting your extinguished feature writer (size EEEE width) Master Rockbottom Martini, I thought I had stooped low enough to call him a worm. Then some dollard forced me to read an article concerning this "thing's" myopic adventures in a haunted Hart House. The story was a rather childish literary effort and the author slipped back into his normal realm of utter obscurity.

Having failed so miserably in his literary endeavours, Rockhead has now tried to project himself into the campus limelight with his gallant (ptui) challenge to me for a duel. He feels that he will be able to regain his lost face (ugh).

Now under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't delay a moment in accepting the challenge. But under these conditions, I think I might possibly be liable for prosecution by the S.P.C.A. For this lowest form of Artsman has exhibited his complete incompetence for such an exacting task as a duel. In fact, he really ought to be removed from the campus, in an euthanasiastic manner. When a poor blind type like this is allowed to roam about, unshackled, things have come to a poor state. He can't see well enough to spell my name correctly, he confuses a sing-song with a spiritual convocation, and requires two freshmen Artsmen to lead him from lecture to lecture.

That's the situation, Mr. Editor. You be the judge: if you can guarantee me immunity from prosecution for eliminating this clod from the campus, I shall gladly accept the challenge; if not, I feel that I must decline with a pitying sneer, for I have my future to consider.

Respectfully,
'Benny' Benstein.

Long Joke

The Editor, The Varsity.

In your article on the speech of Dr. Long you made the statement: "The only reason men walk on the outside of the street is that people throw their garbage on the inside," illustrating the contempt of men for women. The statement is presumably Dr. Long's and meant as a joke but it is in fact wrong. The custom started in the days of chivarly when the living quarters of proprietors were cantelevered over the street on the second floor of their shops. The garbage was thrown from the second floor to the street and the desirable place to walk was on the inside.

An English wit whose name escapes me once met a ruffian on a side street of London who refused to allow him to pass on the inside. Said the ruffian, "I never take the outside for a scoundrel." "I always do," said the gentleman, stepping into the gutter.

Movie Review

Double Feature

There can be no doubt," writes Professor A. F. R. Johnson in his definitive work: "Certain Aspects of Moral Perversion" (page 252), "that the hectic tenor of modern American life and, in particular, the depraving influence of inferior cinematographic performances are having disastrous results upon the American mind. Indeed in the state of Utah the per capita rate of masochists and sadists has soared from 42.8% to 66.2% since 1945.

On Monday afternoon we visited the Astor Theatre and enjoyed a king-sized double feature consisting of Bing Crosby's "The Road To Hollywood" and the world famous "Li'l Abner," sympathetically portrayed by Granville Owen.

"The Road to Hollywood," produced and directed by Sam Pollard, is an interesting example of the power of gratitude over intelligence with its eulogistic heaping of compliment upon compliment to bolster the cult of Crosby. "The old groaner" was displayed battling with a tame lion, an enraged French aristocrat, not to mention innumerable maddened mothers of moonstruck maidens. In short, then, it was a thing of beauty and a joy for ever. Oh, Mr. Pollard, why did not you send him a picture postcard; or even a box of salt water taffy from Atlantic City?

Then there was "Li'l Abner," a very moral affair expounding the maxim that "it is safer to be a hounddawg than a rabbit." Now to those whose apperception of "Abnermal" psychology is greater than mine, whose acquaintance is of longer standing with the trials and tribulations of this Ozark Utopia, they may be at once more real and more familiar, but we were not so fortunate and had to rely on our impressions of the film. Nevertheless from the slight knowledge which we have (just) gleaned we would surmise that the sharpness of delineation and the element of satire were mislaid in the studio.

Perhaps our greatest disappointment was the failure of "Li'l Abner" to realize its unique opportunity to demonstrate the essential interrelatedness of the arts.

However, if you are feeling dispirited and can get no satisfaction out of the "Relaxation Theory" just drop into the Astor Theatre and help increase the number of practising sadists and masochists in the province of Ontario.

Science & Religion

"What is needed today is a resurgence of spiritual growth to keep pace with man's terrific acceleration in his intellectual growth. We must approach religion in the same spirit of open-mindedness in which we approach science," he said.

"Religion to-day is in a state of arrested development, bogged down by ritual, dogma and superstition And this condition is due, not to the Founders of the world's religions, but to human prejudice," he said.

"The Baha'i Faith," he concluded, "states that religion is progressives, not final, relative, not absolute. In the teachings of Baha'u'llah are to be found the spiritual truths that are capable of lifting man spiritually into the new era which, in the realm of science, has already made its appearance."

minutes in French.

Mary Elizabeth Morrison, a soprano with a light though finely textured voice, sang four Swiss songs. A folk song was followed by three songs in the folk idiom but composed by Jacques-Dalcroze, originator of the eurythmic method of teaching music. Harold MacKay provided an able and flexible accompaniment.

After Miss Morrison's singing, we were treated to some native yodelling records provided by the Swiss consul who obligingly read the titles in Suisse Allemande. The records included "O Susanna" with a marked, rather ponderous accordion accompaniment, and some harmonies in the choruses which I had previously associated with Hawaiian music. The range of the falsetto male voices in the yodelling makes an operatic tenor sound like a bass with a cold since. A above high C was a common occurrence by the time the records were concluded.

Mr. Boris Roubakine, a well-known musician in Lausanne, Switzerland, gave a talk on the Swiss Alps illustrated by a remarkable set of Kodachrome slides obtained on his excursions into the mountains. Especially interesting was the natural grotto in a glacier.

The evening concluded happily over some Swiss cakes which have been described as "a sort of cookie and something like a donut." And to top it off, Wymilwood brewed coffee.

Lillian Becker.

David Johnston

The climax of David Johnston's recital at Hart House was the "Variations Serieuses" of Mendelssohn, which showed a fine technique and some subtle and pleasing nuances of tone, along with an architectural grasp of the composition. The greatest weakness, perhaps, was a sadness of mood in the different variations as opposed to the total nuances mentioned above.

This same characteristic made the first Partita of Bach a little monotonous, though the Gigue at the end was rousing. It was good to hear another than the second Partita, though it is deservedly popular. Mr. Johnston handled the long sequential figures of the Prelude well, and the beginning of the Sarabande was effective, but might have been even more reposeful. Much depends on the change of mood in the Partitas, since all the movements are in the same key, an acid test of artistry.

The second work chosen by Mr. Johnston was the Papillons, Opus 2, of Schumann. It calls for a big technique and an abrupt style, and they were in evidence, though the composer's epigrammatic or abrupt quality might have been yet further emphasized. Again it was not greater contrasts within the movements that were needed, so much as greater contrasts between the movements themselves.

The Mendelssohn Variations were forceful and brilliant, and provided a strong close to the recital. The one thing that was not in evidence was any true "cantabile" playing. This may have been due in part to the program selected and in part to the piano itself, which gives the best account of itself in brilliant passages. It is common talk about Hart House that the East Common Room piano is superior to that in the Music Room, where the Wednesday recitals are held, superior at least, in respect to the same "cantabile."

In any case we will be pleased to hear Mr. Johnston again playing a different instrument, and without the distracting noises of cars, motorcycles and crockery which are in evidence toward six o'clock at Hart House.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

The year 1901 will be remembered by The Varsity, and many alumni as the year of The Great Fire. The conflagration started at the extreme westerly section of the campus and before its fury was spent had razed more than half the buildings of the university to the ground.

The fire was attributed to spontaneous combustion occurring in an old raccoon coat forsaken in a littered closet of a nearby fraternity house.

The flames, fanned by a twenty-miles-per-hour breeze and an outsize pair of bloomers on a line behind Whitney Hall, soon spread to the buildings in the vicinity. The smoke arising from the holocaust was so great that a T.T.C. inspector, one Weak-Eyes O'Toole, whose vision was rendered even more inefficient by generous swigs of Dr. Mulrooney's Croup Tonic and Wart Remover, routed two Carleton cars up St. George before he realized that there were no rails on that street. This error added to the confusion as the firemen, believing reinforcements had arrived, laid down their axes and commenced to toast marshmallows.

As always, The Varsity staff was on its toes, and later received considerable comment for its efforts. Of the fifty available male staff members mustered for action, forty-eight assisted in the evacuation of co-eds from the various residences, one rode with the fire reels and rang the bell and one was sent home when he attempted to assist the firemen in extinguishing the blaze in a rather unorthodox manner.

The ferocity of the flames can be imagined when it is learned that a flock of errant geese, led astray by a queer duck, received third-degree burns and were permanently grounded while flying over Hart House. The Great Hall featured pheasant under glass and breast of Guinea hen for two weeks following, and to this day the patrons have no idea that they had been given a goose.

Prof. J. Oswald Orfendorf, stepping out of the Chemistry Building into a sheet of flames, had his mutton chops reduced to Rudolph Valentino side-burns, and his luxuriant beard transformed into a goatee. He was forced to take up residence in a Salvation Army Hostel until nature had restored his foliage and his wife unlocked the door.

The smoldering ruins befouled the air with a smog reminiscent of an engineer's soirée. As a matter of fact, a certain Rose "Happy Hips" Mahoney blundered into the area by mistake and executed a series of bumps and grinds before realizing she was at the corner of College and University.

Forty-nine casualties were reported as admitted by the Lynda Punkman Emergency Wing of the Gossard Foundation; of these, ten were males, eighteen females and one arts student.

Four CCUF Seats Copped By Queen's

Kingston — (CUP) — Jan. 19 — Queen's University students copped four seats on the National Executive of the Co-operative Commonwealth University Federation during the three-day fourth national conference staged at Kingston during the Christmas holidays. Harry Walker was elected president while the secretaryship, treasurership and vice-presidency also went to Gael men. The remainder of the electoral slate was filled by U.N.B., McGill and Saskatchewan.

The agenda of the meeting included a strong resolution against the Liberal Government for failure to table the report on the flour mills combine; a deploring of the existing scale of national defence expenditures, which the meeting felt could be better employed in educational fields.

views will be upheld in IUS. If some European Student Unions who are closer to IUS, and who should know more about it than we do, stay out of IUS, then our long-range viewpoint is perhaps visionary." Maclennan stated the question of dissipation of NFCUS resources is "a matter of expediency."

Points Out Dangers

Public Relations Commissioner Doug Thomas stated that "NFCUS could be discredited in the eyes of outside organizations if it joins an organization as obviously Communistic as IUS." There is also a danger, he said, that some Eastern Canadian universities might drop out of NFCUS if it should affiliate with IUS.

Maclennan admitted as the two disadvantages of affiliation, (1) the fact that NFCUS might lose some Canadian universities if it did affiliate, and (2) the type of politically-oriented student with which we would have to deal. But, he said, the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages.

The vote on affiliation will be teken at the next meeting of the council, to be held on Feb. 8.

a position of honor in Soviet society and received many valuable prizes.

Communists Busy

Tracing the history of Soviet state control over literature, Prof. Simmons said the Communists were too busy from 1917 to 1925 trying to maintain their own position and the position of Russia to expend energies in the control of literature. The result had been the appearance of two schools of writing: Communist-line "proletarian" writers, and another group (dubbed "fellow travellers" by Leon Trotsky) who believed in freedom of expression.

Aroused by conflict between the two groups, the Communist Party had found it necessary in 1925 to decide whether the situation should be allowed to continue. In line with the "New Economic Policy" period tactics of friendship with progressive "Bourgeois" groups, the unorthodox school had been allowed to remain.

But during the period of the first Five Year Plan it was decided all effort would have to be exerted in support of the [illegible] Prof. Simmons continued. [illegible] literature allowed [illegible] supporting the Plan and the class struggle, he said. "By the end of the Plan even Stalin was reported to be disgusted with the Five Year Plan plays, which were about as variegated as a line of telephone poles," he commented.

Since then control had been organized through the Union of Soviet Writers, to which every Russian writer belonged.

Communist Theory

last years Marx had changed his point of view, and believed that the revolution would come not from England, but from the East. This was in direct opposition to general opinion that Czarist Russia was the stronghold of conservatism.

The reason for the change had been that while Marx had looked to the oldest capitalistic country, England, as the first to have a revolution, the fact had been that internal contradictions had first appeared in Russia.

To prove the superiority of Communist prediction, one speaker quoted an article from a 1945 magazine which prophesied the complete defeat of the Chinese Communists and the expulsion of their leader. In opposition one of Tim Buck's speeches was pointed out, in which the Communist leader foretold the present situation.

And in regards the band banishment, that's just plain rot. We will be there with bells on, and you know how much noise those jingly little bells can make."

"I hope they do not try to bar us. We'll just run with the RECORDER."

"And by the way, what the H--- do they mean by running the race at one o'clock in the morning?" (Ed. Note: This was due to a typographical error in the original rules released to The Varsity, in which the time of the race appeared as one a.m. instead of one p.m.)

Vox Varsity

By JOHN LIVINGSTON

Last week's presentation of "The Chimes", adapted for us by Trudy Konwalina and Ronnie Bryde, hit the air waves as planned and the reception was more than gratifying. We believe that of the twelve hundred F.M. sets in Toronto and district a good percentage are tuned every Thursday evening to our Varsity Scrapbook over C.J.R.T. It is with this audience in mind that we are attempting to give half hour performances of as near professional calibre as possible. This policy is paying off (not in dollars) but in experience; experience which in future years will pay (in dollars) if these radio careers are carried on.

To get back to this week's show we are going south of the border, for—our author is none other than Mark Twain the American American. His work the Mysterious Stranger adapted by Deirdrie Haines is a bit of satire on life. Could it be that life is a dream and that there is no good or evil? As Ma Perkins' announcer would say, "Tune in next day and find out."

The line up for this show is again different and good (by different I mean that the same voices will not be heard, such a change from the Lone Ranger). The cast is made up of Hugh Hood, Martin Greenwood, Judy Godfrey, Joyce Kamins, Don Michel, Blandford Kay, Dave Thurston, Mike Davis, George Bettson and Chris Kirkoff. Direction is by Ron Grant, who terms himself as a refugee from professional radio, technical operations by Jack MacQuarrie, and announcer Dan McCarthy.

So for something different, something good, beg, borrow or steal a F.M. set to hear your Varsity Scrapbook tonight.

See you next week in VOX VARSITY.

Juniors, Ints. Win As Blues Beaten 54-50

Varsity Juniors Win Over St. Kitts Cagers

St. Catharines Collegiate senior hoop aggregation went down to a decisive 45-29 loss in the leadoff game of last night's Hart House Sports Nite. The collegians trailed the full distance as the Juniors sparked by Lloyd Elmer and Bill Watson displayed a high-scoring exhibition from the opening minutes.

The St. Kitts' hoopsters found themselves on the wrong end of a 24-8 total at the end of the first half, a fact which might have inspired their 21 point drive in the second. Varsity matched their performance point for point in the second half as the play shifted from side to side.

The collegians were led by Steve Oneschuk who bore the great brunt of their scoring as he popped in fourteen points in the St. Kitts' cause. Tom Quinlan with nine was the follow-up and Sig Taube drove in four.

Elmer with eight, Wilson with seven and Gary Glover, Al Dancey and Bud Binningston were the big guns in the Varsity offence. Dave Bernstein netted five while Dalgleish, Coppersmith and Jackson added deuces.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The popular conception of a columnist is a guy in a trench coat and top-hat with pencil and paper perpetually poised, ready to take down all the red-hot stories he gets from his "official sources." Actually, a columnist (even one on Toronto's fourth largest daily) is a harassed, pitiful-looking introvert like ourselves, and it is as an illustration of this that we set forth here the timetable of one of our average days.

Wednesday, January 25, 1950

5:30 a.m. We awake in a cold sweat after a nightmare in which the W.C.T.U. were drowning us in a tub of beer. Try to get back to sleep; no dice, so we take four sleeping pills. Still no dice. We take dice.

8:45: Found we had dozed off overslept; too late to get to an important nine o'clock lecture, so we get up slowly and empty our hot-water bottles. (They were cold anyhow.)

9:40: Get off College St. car minus our notebook, which was lost in the shuffle at Spadina Ave. We arrive at U.C., where we pick up our copy of The Varsity. Turn to our column and find three typographical errors in the first paragraph; also find that the column is too nauseating for our delicate ulcered stomach, so we spare ourselves the trouble of reading it and throw the paper away. Take three aspirins for good measure.

9:50: Finally get into Hart House after losing both rubbers in the front campus mud. New shoes (City of Toronto Welfare Dept. label) are ruined. Pay visit to the SAC office where Audrey Dickie gives us our mail. We open it and find the following letter: Dear Sir: I think you are a competent columnist, and a literary genius. I read your stuff every day. Please excuse the crayon as they won't let us have anything sharp up here. Yours Truly, Gerald.

9:55: Get kicked out of SAC office.

10:00 Visit UTAA office, managing to smile and say "Good Morning" but gaiety not appreciated at this hour. Miss Lea lights into us for not putting swimming results into the paper. Barry Lowes bawls us out for omiting basketball results. Mac MacCutcheon gives us heck for cutting short the advance on A-Night. We escape to the locker room, but three boxers whose names were spelt wrong in The Varsity snag us. One of them pops us.

12:05: We wake up.

12:10-3:00: Sneak out of Athletic wing and try to get lunch. First we try Great Hall, but get pushed to the back of the line six times by the attendant, who had heard of us. Lunch room closes, so we go down to the Tuck Shop. George and the rest of the staff refuse to serve us, growling "Huh, we ain't got enough work yet! We got to serve beer next!" Finally we eat fourteen pages from the Make-up editor's Economics text. Find it kind of tasty, but a little dry.

3:05: Decide to go to a lecture, but are wavlaid by Bob Masterson, who wants to know what the heck do we mean that his team is going to lose to Oswego State. The coach twists our arm, but we are saved by the arrival of W. Stevens, Esq., who wants to know what do we mean wanting athletic scholarships. Proceeds to twist our neck. The inevitable happens . . . . our neck snaps. We should have been satisfied with Masterson. Masterson and Stevens stalk off, crushing our chest as they step over us.

4:30: Leave Health Service rather quickly after Doctor Stiver remembers we once said we were not opposed to socialized medicine. We make our way on hands and knees towards Big Gym for a game, but as we pass wrestling room, the wrestling team (whose meet results did not appear Monday) grabs us and plays tug-of-war, with your correspondent as the rope. Senior Hockey team sees us and defencemen make a grab for our left leg. Intermediate swimmers snatch at left leg. Joe Kane swings his nose at us, but we duck. Everybody claims they have first crack at us, and in the ensuing battle, we escape to The Varsity office.

4:50-4:58: Write next day's column. Get thrown out

Varsity To Open Against McGill At A-Night

The University of Toronto senior basketball blues start their official intercollegiate season this Saturday in Hart House as they face the McGill seniors in the feature attraction of another Athletic Nite sports-fest. Three games in all are carded for the night which boasts as hosts the faculties of Meds and Dents.

Another set of intercollegiate features will see the representatives of the University of Buffalo in the swiming, fencing and wrestling fields face their Varsity counterparts.

There will be the usual 600 tickets on sale at the door but past experience has shown that these rush ducats are almost sure to have disappeared by 8:15 p.m. Your faculty reps also have tickets for sale. There will be a high school hoop tilt to start the proceedings which will pit East York against Jarvis Collegiate.

SWIMMING

Last Thursday night an all-Varsity splash party was held at the LM pool. There could have been a better turnout but those who did come spent a very enjoyable hour. Miss Slack donated the prizes for the friendly competitions carried off.

Tonight from 7 to 8:30 at UTS pool a coach period will be held under the direction of Miss Baxter, intercollegiate swim team coach. Here is your chance to improve your ornamental tricks, your diving (if you need it) and to learn.

The success of tonight will be the deciding factor as to whether there will be more of these evenings. The affair is being held at night to enable those who cannot attend the afternoon swim periods at LM to get in the swim.

More Swimming

Miss Baxter has announced that the following classes will be held in swimming:

The Bronze and Silver Award Lifesaving — Thursday at 3:00 p.m. — for which credit will be given to First Year students and is primarily for those interested in being counsellors at summer camps.

Synchronized Swimming — Thursday at 4:30 (this week only at 5:00) — a voluntary class for anyone interested in this type of swimming.

The scoring honors were one apiece to Therese Bauer, Fran O'Brien, B. J. Fraser and Joan Garvey.

Blues Lose Tilt To Oswego State In Close Battle

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Oswego State might not be the most sensational hoop squad that ever visited Hart House, but they certainly had the fundamentals well enough learned to take a close 54-50 decision from the Blues without overexerting themselves in the main feature of the Sports Night last night.

The game was highlighted by the passing and shooting precision of the visitors that grabbed an early lead for them and kept them just out of Varsity's reach for the rest of the game. The Blues had ample scoring chances during the game but could not capitalize on enough to take the lead and hold it.

The phenomenal set shot ability of Chuck St. Johns, who hooped 13 points before he left the game on the last half with 5 fouls, and the deadly hook shot which tall Joe Feinstein used from his post position to lead all scorers with 14 points were the most effective weapons which Oswego had to offer.

For the Blues, it was McManus and Johnny Braithwaite who put the fire in the attack. They hooped 9 and 10 points respectively and helped Ted Luck to come out as top scorer for Varsity with 13 points. Huycke also turned in a good effort for the Blues in the defense department.

The game opened up at a rather slow pace, with both teams passing the ball a great deal and relying on plays and breaks for scoring chances. Oswego proved superior at this type of ball, making good practically all their scoring attempts to lead 28-22 at half time. The pace quickened in the second stanza and the Blues pressed the attack with McManus and Braithwaite tipping in some exciting rebound shots. However, the visiting sharpshooters were far from asleep, and when Ted Luck potted a final basket for the Blues a few seconds before the final whistle, Varsity still needed 4 points to tie up the game.

This coming Saturday night, the Blues will meet the visiting McGill Redmen in their first home league game of the season as the main feature at the Athletic Night.

Varsity—Gray, 5; McManus, 9; Braithwaite, 10; Luck, 13; Huycke, 4; Wigle, 2; Henderson, 2; Carruthers; Bell, Gibbs, 4.

Oswego State—St. John, 13; Ewanisyck, 3; Brawcyk, 6; Macek, Feinstein, 14; DeRosa, Magnerelli, 12; Carl, Bahner, 6; Loucks, 6.

Ints Put Blast On YMHA Cagers In 59-19 Victory

By JOHN DUGAN

A snappy, well-drilled Intermediate basketball team notched a 59 to 19 victory over a definitely outclassed team from Y.M.H.A. last night at the first Sport Nite of the season.

The classy Blue boys outclassed the Y-men in all departments, most noticeably in the shooting. Varsity got at least four times as many shots as their opponents and made most of them good. The Blue defense was also infinitely superior, forcing the Y team to shoot on the run or from impossible angles. In fact, the Y.M.H.A. cagers were unable to put the ball through the hoop until the last minutes of the first half. The half ended with the Blue team holding a comfortable lead of 29 to 9.

The Varsity eased up a little in the second half, scoring only 27 points to their 29 of the first canto. The Blue defense also loosened a bit, allowing 10 points by the Y-hoopsters. As the last quarter wore on, however, the little Blues really began to show their stuff with Mackenzie and Don Barber pouring the sets through the hoop. Everybody on the team netted at least four points and Don Barber, Bruce Rogers, and Al Brown got eight apiece to pace the Blue team.

Varsity's fighting spirit and smooth floor play, combined with their deadly shooting were just too much for the Y team who tried hard but lacked the finesse of their opponents. Coach Resnick led his men with five points while Mandalker scored three. Richtiger was a pillar of strength on the floor and played a nice defensive game. . . .

Lineups

Varsity Intermediates—Rogers, 3; Al Brown, 8; Barber, 3; Cole, 7; Denton, 6; Steveson, K. Brown, 5; Kettle, 5; Mackenzie, 4.

Y.M.H.A. Intermediates—Resnick, 5; Mandelker, Stekel, 4; Richtiger, 3; Bass, 2; Ostofichuk, 1; Shidelsky, Takefman, Shoom, Flick.

Interfaculty Sport

By BILL ROSS

At the local puck palladium yesterday Sr. Vic took the decision from their U.C. counterparts by a 2-1 margin in the only scheduled fixture of the way. Cummings netted the only U.C. tally in a close game with Linton and Howard clicking for the winners. Cummings' goal was an unassisted effort while Crawford and Rhame took assists on the Vic counters.

Forestry A's and the U.C. III were neck and neck at the end of the first stanza of their interfaculty major hoop contest yesterday but the woodchoppers were unable to keep pace with the red and white quintet as they poured on the points to win 26-18.

Simpson with five to his credit was the top man for U.C. aided by Davie and Freedman with fours and Cohen and Cullen who added three each. For the foresters it was Fred Collict with five points, Howe with four and McPhail and Keen collecting trios.

In the four o'clock meeting the Vic fourths took the nod over the quintet from Institutional Management as they shot out a 25-20 victory. The managers put on a strong thirteen point drive in the last frame but were unable to overtake the winners.

Kingpins in the Vic scoring list were Chambers and Lowry with six each followed by Williams with five, Philpott who had four and Ridout with three. A fine ten point effort was turned in by Sheppard of the purple and white with teammate Salter hooping five.

The School of Social Work, new entry this year in the interfaculty sports field, walked away with their third straight minor league triumph as they trounced Forestry II A's by a 31-16 total.

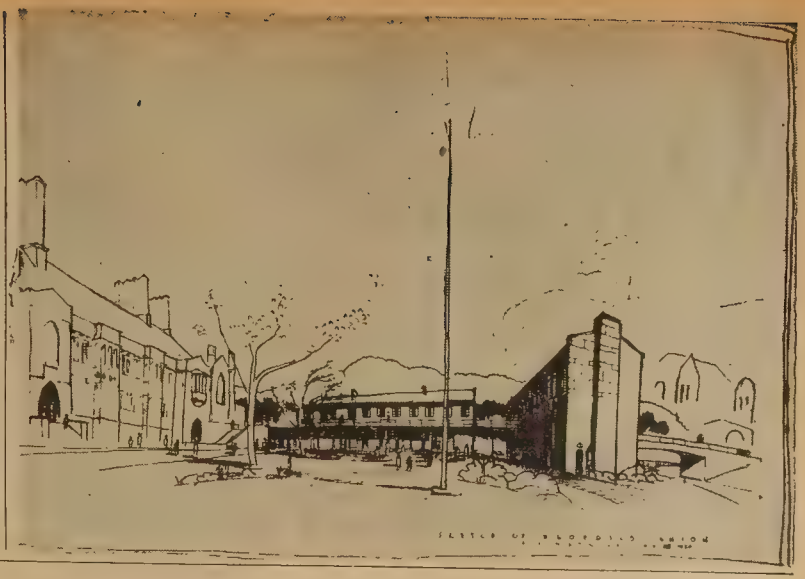
Smith and Wipper shared top honors for the workers with eight each and Salter contributed five. For the greenshirts Horton stood out with an even dozen to do most of the work while Davis and Scott added deuces.

'Union' Changes Campus Layout



Here's one idea of what the new plans for the Student Union-to-come may pan out like. The new proposal has the Union attached to Hart House in the triangular strip southward to the new Queen's Park bridge.

The new plans depend on acceptance by the Board of Governors and the Massey Foundation before they can be put into effect.

The new area is smaller than the previously-suggested plot between Trinity College and Holwood House. Because of this, re-arrangement of space in the building will be necessary to handle all Union facilities.

The circular roadway leading from the front of Hart House will have to be moved westward if the Union is to be a rectangular addition fitting the triangular strip.

Because of financial limitations, neither a broadcasting station nor a threatre is planned in the initial union. If a theater is eventually built, it may possibly shoot out in a general westward direction from the south end of the rectangular Union.

Largest Field Yet To Include Entry From Russ College

Par JAMES SIMPSON

With the clarion call of the silver-throated bugle the entrants will draw up to the post, and in moments the roar of the trusty Skule Cannon will announce the hour of one, and the beginning of the Third Annual Chariot Race.

See Page Seven For Details

There remains but one question — who will win the race? With entries from almost every college and faculty on the campus (with the notable exception of Addison House, whose occupants dropped out when they heard that the engineers will not be running this year's race alone), and applications from around the world, the field will be one of the toughest in the history of the epic event. Just moments ago at the time of this writing we received a wire from the Steppes of Siberia, announcing the intention of the Northern Siberian Agricultural College to send a representative.

Suspecting the political affiliations of this emissary from the frozen north, the Skulemen have offered the newcomers invitations to the Skule-At-Home, where they will form the intellectual entertainment for the evening. In the interest of those wishing to gather further understanding of these dark horses, the text of their message appears elsewhere on this page.

The claims of this group that they can lick the best the U of T students can put up will complicate the answer to the query running uppermost in the minds of the participants. Within the day the answer will be flashed throughout the land, and for another year the Jerry P. The SAC Story

From Oratory To Oratory

Par JOAN EDDIS

(This is the first of a series of articles dealing with the history of the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.)

Hetherington

Since the turn of the century, Varsity has needed some strong central organization to unify the aims and interests of the undergraduate and, as students then put it, "to counteract strong local and decentralizing influences."

Efforts to do this began way back in 1905 when a Students' Parliament was founded to handle the "intellectual life" of the students. However, one could say that the Students' Administrative Council of today was first germinated in 1901, when an Undergraduates' Union was formed to handle the campus social life and took over the publication of The Varsity.

Would Effect Results

In 1907 the Students' Parliament which was more like our Mock Parliament, became the Undergraduates' Parliament intended "to discuss practical questions, and if possible, effect results rather than remain contented with the theoretical life of an ordinary debating society. Their first meeting dealt with student control of discipline and later in the year took steps to revise the university song book, a task being undertaken again this year by the SAC.

Miss Comfort

The social activities carried on by the Student Union (which occupied "nine bright rooms in the west wing of UC"), were taken over by the Parliament in 1911 and the following year The Varsity came under their supervision. A statement from Torontonensis of '08, the year before the Parliament became responsible for its publication, voices sentiments felt on the campus to-day—"We hope that before long the University of Toronto will possess a Union of which it will have reason to be proud and which will be a nucleus

Bienvenu a Toronto, Les Carabins!

Soyez Les Bienvenus, Carabins

On appelle cette fin de semaine un échange inter-culturel—voilà un titre bien prétentieux pour une manifestation d'amitié! On dit que cette fin de semaine unira plus étroitement les deux sections de notre pays—encore une façon prétentieuse de dire que nous sommes amis. Mais de quelque façon qu'on l'exprime, voici très simplement, ce que nous voulons vous dire—L'Université de Toronto et tous les étudiants de Toronto sont enchantés d'etre vos hôtes.

Pourtant nous sommes plus que des hôtes—souvent un hôte se croit obligé de témoigner une sympathie polie envers quelqu'on pour qui il ne ressent pas une amitié bien profonde. Nous sommes fiers d'avoir chez nous les descendants de Champlain, de La Salle, de Montcalm, de La Fontaine, et de Laurier. Nous sommes heureux de connaitre ceux qui ont suivi à la trace Chapdelaine, Kroeghoff, Suzor-Côté et de la Roche.

On causera beaucoup cette fin de semaine—car des étudiants de deux sections de notre immense pays auront bien des problèmes è discuter, bien des idées à mettre en avant et d'histoires à raconter. Mais personne ne saura exprimer ce sentiment—ce je ne sais quoi—dont la présence se fait toujours sentir quand les Carabins et les Torontoniens se réunissent.

Carabins—vous trouverez chez nous les esprits, les portes et les coeurs grands ouverts—Entrez donc.

Hail The Day

Today is Chariot Race Day. The successful reorganization of the judging procedure may even make this a "real" race. The Chariot Race, originally started as a bald-faced publicity stunt, is well on its way to becoming an institution, which is a Good Thing.

But.

Before the race begins, and to contestants, spectators, hangers on, touts, organized gangs, professors, administration and the pigeons we say:

Let's make it a race and not a brawl. The World's Championship Chariot Race can be a lot of fun for all, as long as no group, organized or disorganized loses its collective or individual head. In the past only miracles have kept someone from being seriously injured.

To the contestants: keep it clean and resist the urge to kick your opponents in the face.

To the spectators: Keep out of the way of the horses—they are naturally a spirited group, and they are in a race with a myriad number of rabid supporters like yourselves on the sidelines.

And now, having said all that: "To horse, to chariot" and may the team which publishes the results win.

Presumptuous Plans

Editor, The Varsity:

I was very glad to see that the Student Union has not been completely forgotten. After all the publicity the Union received at one time, it is rather startling to read that "the Council . . . had expected the Student Union to be shelved indefinitely." Such a statement seems to me a bit presumptuous.

Presumptuous, too, is the idea that the Union ought to be built in front of Hart House. It is no male pride that makes me say this. I might be mistaken but I thought that there was an agreement when Hart House was built that nothing was to be put in front of that building; in spite of this, the book store leers vulgarly in front. It is sacrilege to think of obscuring it entirely by another streamlined soda fountain like the new Engineering Building. Visitors to this university find little enough to admire about our buildings. Hart House alone is universally admired. Surely the SAC, if it is really interested in student opinion, will be willing to pay more in order to prevent such an insult to the intelligence of the university governors, the students.

Looking Closely

Editor, The Varsity:

In your feature column, Mid-Century Highlights in yesterday's The Varsity, your columnist perpetrated a number of serious errors.

First, he misspells the name of one of the Tardy Tram Company's cars. Inspector "Weak-Eyes" O'Toole must have strained himself to read "Carleton" for present-day "Carlton," especially at a time when the route was called "Carlton and College." There is a picture of this car-line on Page 11, "Wheels of Progress, TTC," U of T Library, EcT lt6868 W. Moreover, the TTC was incorporated in 1920.

Secondly, re Hart House. The roast geese, duck, pheasant, and guinea hens in the Great Hall. I quote from the book, "Hart House," published by the Board of Governors in 1921. On the formal opening of Hart House on Nov. 11, 1919, Mr. Vincent Massey stated, "The project of Hart House was conceived in 1910." Nine years after the fire!

To continue, how would Prof. J. Oswald Orfendorf sport Rudolph Valentino Sideburns in 1901? Rudolph Alphonso Guglielmi di Valentino d'Antonguella was born May 6, 1895. He was six years old at the time of the fire. In 1913, he came to America, and made his screen debut in 1922, 21 years after the fire.

Lastly, "Forty-nine casualties were reported . . . of these, ten were males, eighteen females, and one Arts student." What were the other 20, neuter?

I St. Mike's.

Some Concrete Examples

Today marks the end of National Students Week, which has been celebrated across the country at various Canadian universities in varying degrees. At Toronto the NFCUS Committee, for reasons which it feels are valid, has not organized any special celebration.

The visit of Les Carabins to Toronto this weekend is perhaps the surest indication of the growing strength of NFCUS, and of the growth of a national student consciousness. This visit is a concrete indication of the spirit of that awareness.

As part of National Students Week it is perhaps well to look at NFCUS and note some of the work it has done.

There are the old reliable things, the reduced rail fares for students which we took advantage of over the Christmas holiday; the formation of the Canadian University Press, which has become an increasingly important organization in its own right; the plans for regional and Canadian-American exchange which are forging ahead in an increasingly encouraging manner.

One item of NFCUS achievement which never makes headlines is the role it has played in debating. This activity has reached ahead this year with the appointment of a permanent secretary treasurer, a trophy, a national debating final, all under the auspices of the Canadian University Debating Union, which is a group organized by NFCUS.

These are things that have been done. On the books at the moment are at least three projects of interest to all Canadian students. The brief on federal aid to higher education, a mature and intelligent document which has recently been presented to the Massey Commission on the Arts Letters and Sciences, has added dignity and prestige to NFCUS. The NFCUS Summer Seminar, to be held near Montreal on the general topic, "A Survey of Canada," represents the culmination of many hopes and a lot of planning.

The continuing investigation of the high cost of text books will produce a report this spring, which will stand as the basis for further action.

The Toronto NFCUS Committee has been very busy in the national work. Always in front in NFCUS work, this year's Toronto committee has taken a large amount of work on itself. Text books take a large part in the Toronto NFCUS program. Last year the NFCUS investigation was the basis for an SAC brief which produced the ten percent reduction at the University Press Bookstore last fall. The Toronto committee is still working on text costs and co-operative bookstores; has sent an interim report off to the National NFCUS executive and will forward the complete report by the end of February.

The exchange plans are going well: there have already been ten applications for Regional exchange and over thirty for Canadian-American exchange. The Committee is studying the financing, management and facilities of student unions in Canada. In co-operation with the International Student Service the Committee organized the Carabin visit which is taking place this weekend.

These are only the highlights of NFCUS work, and ignore the large number of routine details which are a necessary part of any effective national organization.

Not always understood by students nor adequately supported by Canadian universities, NFCUS has steadily advanced in stature and in the quality of its work. On the occasion of the first National Students Week the Federation is to be congratulated. We should look carefully at our national body, and build it firmly and strongly into a mature and effective students' organization which will be constantly able to represent us, at home and abroad.

THE VARSITY

Friday, January 27, 1950 — THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

See Chance For Summer Travel Now

It is fairly certain that all students who have applied at the Hart House SAC office during the last few weeks for ship passage abroad this summer will receive their hard-to-get tickets, Warren Wilkings, III Trinity, said at yesterday's NFCUS Committee meeting in Trinity Board Room.

About 40 students have signified they want tickets since it was announced in The Varsity early this month that tickets might possibly be bought through W. P. Nells, CNR City Passenger Agent for Toronto.

Not Completely Sure

"We can't say definitely that the students who have applied will get tickets," Wilkings said. "There is no such word as definitely in the shipping business until you have your ticket in your hand."

He said Mr. Neils has received word from Montreal that shipping men expect they can accommodate all 40 students on the S.S. Samaria (Cunard), sailing from Quebec to Le Havre and London on June 20. It will return from London and Le Havre Aug. 31, sailing for Quebec.

One-way fare will be $180, a $30 increase over last year's regular fare. "Fares vary with the ships," Wilkings said. "So if we can get passage on other boats, the fare may be lower. So far we can only get the Samaria."

To Get Letters

Each student who has left his name at the SAC office for a ticket will receive a letter soon, telling him the exact procedure of getting a ticket.

"We are sorry the rates are up," Wilkings stated yesterday. "Unfortunately we can get no discounts. It is hard enough to even get passages.

"We are doing our best to get more tickets. So if more students are interested, it would be wise to put their names, and addresses in at the SAC office.

"We hope in future years to make this service permanent, with cheaper fares, certainly the cheapest we can get."

Ruddigore, one of the lesser known Gilbert and Sullivan operettas is this year's annual production of the Vic. Music Club. Performances will take place at Hart House Theatre next week from Tuesday to Saturday evening as well as Saturday afternoon. In this scene Mad Margaret (Marg. Carmichael) describes to Rose Maybud (Kathie McBain) the proper procedure for catching flies (the winger variety). She probably has a pet lizard. A few tickets are still available at the Hart House Theatre box office.

The meeting was carried on in a cultured and dignified manner which included the odd scuffle, and occasional outbreak of the Skule yell.

Richelieu Fortress Scene For Seminar "View Of Canada"

A three week, subsidized summer seminar at a historic Quebec fort on the Richelieu River has been organized by the National Federation of Canadian University Students. NFCUS will award 100 Canadian students scholarships that will pay all except transportation expenses for the seminar, which will be on the theme "A general view of Canada."

In Proportion

The scholarships will be awarded to the various universities in proportion to the size of their student bodies. Local NFCUS Committee Chairman Tom Symons says this may mean the University of Toronto will send 15 students.

Symons said yesterday: "I think this represents a tremendous advance for NFCUS, a really down-to-earth achievement. I think such things are very worth while, and I hope it will become an annual affair."

To Study Canada

The seminar will study Canada under three specific topics: economics, history and geography and Canadian humanities. Discussions will be guided by 12 professors from across Canada, specialists in these topics. Dr. Leon Lortie of the University of Montreal has been selected as dean of the seminar.

Certain details are not yet clear, Symons said yesterday. It is not certain whether the seminar will be open to girls, since installations are not suitable at present for boarding both girls and boys. The exact number of students to be selected from each university has not yet been calculated. Precise qualifications for students have not been announced.

When these facts are cleared up, notice will be given in The Varsity, a selection committee will be set up, and applications will be accepted.

Good Transport

The seminar, slated for Aug. 14 to Sept. 4, will be held at Fort Lennox, on an Island in the Richelieu River, 42 miles from Montreal. There will be facilities for swimming and canoeing, and Montreal is within easy travelling distance by bus and train. Special transportation for the duration of the seminar has been arranged, as have sightseeing trips.

"There will be social as well as cultural activities," Symons emphasized yesterday.

The Quebec Government is expected to bear a large portion of the expense of the seminar. Arrangements for this help, along with all the work this year to organize for this seminar, have been done by the University of Montreal NFCUS Committee, under the direction of

What's Up Doc?

Can Choline Cure Cirrhosis?

. . . Par RICHARD DU PRAAGH

"Dr. Best will see you now," said a white-coated technician with an RAF handlebar moustache and clipped accent.

"May I see him before this young man?" asked an eminent specialist, in the subversive tone of a drill sergeant addressing a particularly stupid private. Before I could prod my larnyx into acquiescing—'certainly Your Honour,"—the doctor was galloping down the hall at a quiet canter.

"You may wait across the hall," beamed a motherly librarian. I beamed back, striving manfully to conceal my black bile. Several minutes later, the fleet-footed scientist who had previously out-run Best's inner sanctum, whereupon I deduced that the time had come. Stopping across the hallowed threshold, I felt vagely like Yousuf Karsh about to photograph the Pope.

We Meet Our Man

While explaining my mission to Best, I noticed that the man who had played such a prominent role in the discovery of insulin, is a well-built six-footer, pervaded by cool, relaxed yet powerful personality. In the words of an associate . . . "He's a gentleman. What would you expect?" He seemed to exemplify the old maxim: "You can't grow grass on a busy street," for his honoured cranium reflects light back to the level of his ears.

We were seated at opposite sides of a large desk, the desk over which Dr. Best and his fellow scientists often play mental ping pong. It is in this crowded, book-lined room that the researchers of the Banting discuss their problems with the Chief. And so it was with due humility that I served the conversational ball to this Columbus of modern medicine.

From Darkest Africa

"I hear that you have just returned from darkest Africa, sir."

"South Africa," he amended. "My trip was made possible by the Nuffield Foundation of London which supply funds so that scientists may travel throughout the British Empire, lecturing on their specialties."

"Interesting," I returned. "Last night I was told by a representative of a soft drink company that you were conducting investigations on cirrhosis of the liver, with special emphasis on the roles of alcohol and excess sugar as possible causes." A hearty laugh crashed my scientific sally. Apparently the agitation of soft drink manufacturers about the possibility of excess sugar being a cause of cirrhosis is a local joke at the Banting, right now. Attempting to pursue the subject of Dr. Best's dietary work in South Africa, I ventured humbly:

"Did choline have anything to do with it?"

Said Dr. Best in an admirable display of scientific perspicacity.

"It seems probable the choline might play a part in the remedy of the situation in South Africa."

"What situation?" I asked.

Malnutrition Widespread

"Malnutrition is widespread among the eight million blacks in South Africa," he disclosed with quiet seriousness. "There is much we can do to help, but it is amazing how much good the whites in South Africa have done already."

Dr. Best met both General Smuts and Dr. Malan in the course of his visit.

"They are both wonderful men," he confided, "and good friends outside their politics."

"Was there any key factor in the discovery of insulin without which the discovery might not have been made?", I groped.

"There were several factors in our favor," he reflected. "Good surgery, modern chemistry, lots of enthusiasm, and the fact that we were uninhibited by what others had failed to do."

"We hear a great deal about the differences in outlook between English and Canadian students. How does this apply to medical students, sir?"

"The greatest difference in outlook right now between Canadian and English medical students is that our people are looking forward to private practice, wheras the English students must plan for life under socialized medicine."

Stassen and Socialized Medicine

"What do you think of socialized medicine in general?" At that point he wrestled with common sense and medical ethics, (as I expected) saying that this topic was outside his field. "It's outside any doctor's field," I urged. "But you have such a good vantage point, sir."

"Too good!" he bellowed with a smile.

When I asked him whether he had read an article by Harold Stassen entitled "Never! Never! Never" which condemned socialized medicine, he suavely sidestepped by saying that he knew Stassen personally.

"Do you consider the two pre-medical years as time wisely or poorly spent, Dr. Best?"

"Six years of medicine—or four years medicine and two pre-medical years—it's the same thing under different names." This was the unexpected answer to a very controversial question. He also informed me that this continent has very largely taken the place of Europe for post graduate work, although the English and Scottish medical schools are still very fine."

Secret of Success

"Being an eminently successful individual yourself, you must have evolved a kind a formula for success. That's the sort of thing Varsity would like to hear."

"I have no fixed recipe for success, but judging from the many clever people I've known, I would

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

Each Tuesday night at 7:30 there is a broadcast from the Ottawa studios of the CBC called "Science Reporter". This week's broadcast was the first one I'd heard and then only the last few minutes of it. The topic was "Science in Nature" and the speaker discussed some of the amazing and inexplicable faculties possessed by various forms of wild life. Thinking about this after the broadcast was over, I was struck by the number of analogies I could bring to mind; analogies between these natural instincts possessed by birds, animals and fish, and some of the most spectacular advances of science.

Fish and Pressure

The sciences of aerodynamics and hydrodynamics involve a painstaking study of the pressure surrounding various bodies immersed in fluid flow. The measurement of laminar and turbulent flow necessitates the use of extremely accurate manometers to record infinitesmal pressure differences which exist around airfoils and in pipes and ducts. By the use of these delicate instruments a degree of accuracy comparable to that which a fish enjoys as his natural birthright may be reached. Fish, as a rule, are notoriously blind and yet they can detect the presence of a stone merely by the difference in the pressure gradient as they approach the object.

In chemistry a great deal of time is spent in identifying and isolating the various components of compounds and it is possible to break down the elements of the solution in a highly accurate manner. But how does this degree of accuracy compare with the ability of the salmon to detect the mouth of a river from miles out at sea by the minute difference in the salt content of the water? If you have ever done a long and laborious titration you would probably welcome this natural sense that salmon possesses.

In the field of communication and navigation the use of radar and wireless has made travel by air safe and rapid. Aircraft and ships can come in "on the beam" unerringly through the foulest weather.

Pigeons Like Radar

Homing pigeons and migratory birds have exactly the same ability without the blessings of mechanical devices. Tests conducted by ornithologists indicate that birds are sensitive to the rotation of the earth and to the magnetic lines of force surrounding it. A homing pigeon released at some distant point will find the particular magnetic line passing through its home and follow it back to the loft. Migratory birds leaving their nests in the autumn fly back thousands of miles often through severe storms and similar flying hazards, unerringly to the very same tree from which they made their departure.

It is a well known fact that bats use an effective form of radar as a means of finding their way about. Emitting high frequency sound waves, they detect the presence of an obstacle by the reflection of the sound wave from it.

The list is long and the examples range from common well known habits to the more fantastic and unfamiliar, but in nearly every case one can find an analogy in something that man has been able to do or is trying to accomplish. Man is at home on the land, sea and in the air by means of his scientific achievements but he has gone further than that and has acquired other powers which are inherent characteristics of the forms of life which inhabit these elements. And this fact, I think, has all the makings of a novel philosophical interpretation. With all the various philosophies which exist in the world today I know of none approaching the subject from this standpoint.

Assuming the pattern of evolution and natural selection, these inherent characteristics of the lower forms of life exist as a means of survival and are justified as such. What justification is there for man's acquisition of these same powers? Is there any connection between a theory of evolution and the motivating power which drives men to duplicate mechanically some of the very instincts which may have possibly been his in an early stage of development?

I can hear the comments forming in your mind. "He's going too far," you say, and "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing". Well, let's bring the subject down to earth again and in a less serious vein. Here is an excerpt from an article which appeared in December 24's issue of Science News Letter:

What makes jumping spiders jump? The answer in two carefully chosen words is, "That depends."

It depends for one thing on which way the wind is blowing, and for another thing, on how far along the evolutionary scale the particular species has come.

Show-off For A Mate

Jumping spiders, like certain other insects, birds, and other animals, go through characteristic gyrations, dances, and sundry other forms of showing off, presumably to attract a mate. Dr. Jocelyn Crane of the Tropical Research Department, New York Zoological Society, has come up with some new conclusions after studying the near tropical jumping spiders of Venezuela.

Although the sight of another spider usually sets off the courtship dance, Dr. Crane finds that chemicals born by the air will also precipitate a spider jig. The more primitive the species, the more important the chemical stimulus.

Frequently a male spider will start showing off as soon as he spies another spider, male or female. When two males discover that they have been wasting their fanciest footwork on a rival, they promptly cut out the nonsense and rush at each other in mortal combat. This is true of relatively backward types; the more advanced species of jumping spiders have worked out a code of etiquette for this situation involving a ceremonial iner-male display.

Next time you meet a spider jumping treat him with respect and sympathy for he may be having the same sort of difficulties as you or I.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

A newspaper is only as good as its staff makes it. The Varsity is a newspaper. Varsity files reveal that many staff members have stepped through this journalistic portal into fame and fortune. Ancient Varsity rosters read like modern Who's Who. Ancient mastheads boast of now famous Prime Ministers, publishers, Supreme Court Judges, University Presidents, bookmakers, taffy-pullers, Curmudgeons, pin machine tilters, jockeys and shnooks.

Trusting that there are a few Varsity readers who are not familiar with the success achieved by some of the former staff members today's article will serve as an introduction.

The Varsity points with pride to Agatha Pewter, Fashion Editor of 1904 and last year's selection as "Most Successful Career Woman". Agatha spends her working days planning sales strategy of the Girl Guides Cookie Committee. This year she hopes to sell even more of these double yummy manhole covers. With this aim in mind Agatha has imported a group of ten-year-old lepers to help her pull at the purse-strings of prospective buyers.

Anatole McSludge who served as Make-up Editor of the 1923 Varsity has earned himself a niche in the Science Hall of Fame as the inventor of the stomach pump. Anatole realized the need of such an apparatus by eating regularly at Great Hall.

Eric Snuffbucket will be remembered by 1920 Omni as the crackerjack newsreporter who scooped the downtown papers on the "Termites Attack Forestry Building" story. Mr. Snuffbucket is now a respected song monger of Tin Pan Alley with such tunes as "I'm Dreaming of a White Yom Kippur" and "I Heard You Tried Last Night" to his credit.

Ambrose Finnegan, of OT7 and former literary Editor of The Varsity is now the president of The Seven Day Bud Set Co.; Mauve for Monday, Turquoise for Tuesday, Chartreuse for Wednesday, Red for Thursday, Amber for Friday, Green for Saturday and white for Sunday.

Camels O'Gurd is another Varsity staff member who has achieved fame in art circles. His fresco "Nocturne After Spaghetti and Meatballs" may be seen splattered on the west wall of Nancy Jones Village Tea Shoppe. It was done during his green period.

Another object of Varsity pride is Velma Kandelwick. She was Women's Sports Editor of 1931 and is now a successful novelist with such plumbs as "He Could Not Leave Her Behind", "Alone", etc., to her credit.

The present staff of The Varsity fondly remember last year's star reporter, Mort Sugu for yet another brand of notoriety. At the annual Varsity banquet last May, Mort poured a bowl of soup over his head. When questioned as to the reason for his action, he replied, "Soup? I thought it was potato salad."

Egbert says "Now I know where 'Fine Arts I' go for lectures"

Egbert can't see why anyone prefers Bebop to Bartok or juke joints to music appreciation lectures. But the one thing he does understand has bothered everyone from Palestrina to Prokofieff — money management.

For the past four years he's been learning "Practical Economics" at "MY BANK". Now he shoves away those sheckels in his B of M savings account with metronome monotony — he's got the problem of smooth running finances down to a fine art.

Ajax Commemoration Week

THE JAXMEN CANNOT FORGET IT

(The following column is reprinted from "Ajax Rumblings" in The 1946 Varsity, to enhance this day of the Chariot and of the commemoration of Ajax.)

And it did come to pass that one day a stranger did wander even unto Ajax, an Artsman of little gen and much spare time. And lo, he stayed in this place for fully a day, observing with great bewilderment all that did take place. And when he did return unto the Great Metropolis spake he unto his brethren these words:

"Behold, that place is inhabited by a strange race of madmen who are called Engineers. And verily am I fortunate, for did I not mingle with them as their own, and did escape to bear thee this talk.

"Lo, did I stand amidst an unshaven multitude of these uncultured ones. And came there that way a great iron chariot of bilious green and lo, they did throw themselves upon it with wild cries of abandon even before it did stop. Yea, and many were there that were trodden underfoot, yet did rise again and pummeled those before them until all had entered. And then did I draw nigh and lo, there was yet much space within. And as it did pull away I did observe that it had two square wheels, and though it had waited long, yet there were three who loped behind with great cries of anguish. And so they passed from sight, I wot not where.

"And verily, this is not all. Ere I could leave approached there another iron chariot with a volume sufficient to carry even 109.72 bodies and from it descended a howling multitude as a plague of locusts, and verily did I count their numbers unto 197 ere I was borne to the earth by the rush of bare feet. And from their ranks rose the cry, 'To the Hall of Eating, for today we have meatballs!' And though I was loath to go and did cry aloud in fear, for well I know the reputation of this place, yet was I swept along in their midst.

"And when I did enter the hall was I astounded to perceive that the multitude of the dogs equalled that of the men. And verily, my brethren, wouldst that thou could have stood with me beside one that had not seen brush nor water in many days. Scoff not so, my brethren, I swear that this is so! I saw all, yea and much more. And there were men than gulped their soup from the bowl, holding it with both grimy paws. And the noise was as a thousand tent flaps in the wind. And there was one that smiled upon a kitchen wench while his comrades put the arm on even seven desserts, and curious to what they ate, did I pass through the line showing my liquor book, for I had no Cafeteria card. And the damsel did take the number thereof without question and so passed I on into the bedlam of the hall.

"And I found myself seated amongst men who did eat wearing their hats, removing them reverently only when speaking of the Spruce or wenches. And I did attempt to eat that which was before me, but alas, I am but human and did gag upon the first mouthful. And those about did cast upon me the suspicious eye, for they ate as hunger-maddened peasants. And verily should I have been found out but for a happy miracle. At that moment the great slavering jaws of that Cafeteria canine, Red, snatched from beneath my twitching fingers all that was upon my tray, whereat there was much raucous laughter and rough jesting. Then I staggered forth into the storm, taking the first dog team back to civilization, for I could stand no more.

"And now, my brethren, I sit before thee in this snug sanctuary, the K.C.R., and do bear witness that I speak naught but the truth." And turned he unto one who did stand aside, crying, "Mine Host, flagons of mead, for I would fain forget this horror!"

say that good hard work never hurt. They have made the most of their opportunities by working very hard. It pays to play hard too," he said. This preamble to his success theory is something which everyone knows. Then his voice and eyes sharpened as he disclosed something which few people know.

"Give concern to the things which are sure to last and don't fuss about those which are of transient importance. That's a real art," he appended.

"Of transient importance," I repeated, writing furiously.

"Yes, like writing articles for The Varsity which nobody will read," he admonished satirically. "I used to do a bit of running," he continued quietly, "and there's nothing more disquieting than to find at the other end of the race that you've not won out. Life's the same."

"What do you want from the campus this year, Dr. Best?"

"I want men who won't be happy unless they are doing research."

"What was that again?" said I, still scribbling frantically.

"Men who are determined to do research," he reiterated, "and no one else." Shifting his 190 pounds, he said for the third time:

"You've got enough there for five article." So I turned off my mental tape recorder, capped my pen, and retreated towards the door saying:

"Thank you sir, I'll do my best to hang your halo straight." And the great man beamed broadly.

Many Traditions At US Exchange Schools

By RICHARD GAGE

Over fifty American universities have already joined in a student exchange plan with Canadian universities, and many more would probably get on the bandwagon if approached by sincere individual Canadian students. The NFCUS Canadian-American exchange program is in its first year, and already over 30 Varsity students are looking into the possibilities of spending a year in one of the many schools to the south. American schools represent a varied cultural background from many old world lands. The very basis of American education is more German in origin than British.

U. of Michigan Founded 1817

The University of Michigan, for example, was founded in 1817—20 years before Michigan became a state. Situated an hour's drive from Detroit at Ann Arbor, the university has conferred some 90,000 degrees since it was pioneering state supported higher education back in the days when Napoleon was still alive. Today, almost a hundred thousand Americans are living alumni. In Michigan's massive library are over a million volumes and one of the largest collections of Arabic papyri in the world.

Protruding from the sage-studded desert at Laramie, Wyoming, is the more modest University of Wyoming library of 110,000 volumes. Pipe smokers up in Laramie have trouble keeping a steady flow of oxygen in the old boiler because the city is 8,150 feet above sea level; even in the bitter winters there is no excuse for not having a healthy suntan at that altitude. But perhaps even more amazing is the way Wyoming taxpayers hand out an average of four dollars per person per year — one million dollars — to support the school. The last great buffalo herds still roam in Wyoming's Yellowstone Park while students personify progress in one of the areas meagerly gifted by nature.

A "Female Seminary"

The Age of Reason of the 18th century cried "All men are created equal" and "Equal opportunity for all," but even the left-wingers of the time seldom advocated the inclusion of women in such reform movements. When Mary Lyon preached higher education of women in the 1830s, she was regarded a lunatic. Those were the days when Andrew Jackson went to Washington with radical democracy and an elaborate spoils system. Mary Lyon was successful in founding Mount Holyoke in South Hadley, Mass., in 1836, but feeling of the time forced it to be termed a "Female Seminary." In 1888 the name was changed to Mount Holyoke College and it stands today as a monument to one of the world's great pioneers in education. Mount Holyoke is one of the finest women's schools in the world.

For a typical rapid rise, few cities can better the record of the tiny Indian trading post in Eastern Florida which grew in half a century to the present spacious Miami. In 1896 the Florida East Coast railroad extended a branch to the Miami trading post, which then boasted 260 citizens. With a mean annual temperature of 76 degrees, the village was destined to thrive. During the Roaring Twenties population sometimes increased at the rate of 4,000 a month. Its inhabitants have always considered themselves Northerners, and the culture does represent the surging North more than the quietude which has marked the progress of such cities as Charleston and New Orleans.

Modern Miami

So when Miami designed its university buildings, it was natural that striking differences should be noted all along the line. Spacious white modernity is the keynote and the altitude of Wyoming is not necessary to maintain a 365 day tan. (Of course, it rains in Florida, but nobody but a Californian ever mentions that.)

The Morrill Act of 1862 gave the states huge grants for education, to be obtained from the sale of public lands in the West. Illinois got profits from over 200,000 acres at the time and the University of Illinois was founded at Urbana in 1867. Boasting another library of over a million volumes, this school has a teaching staff in excess of 2,000. Although some of the departments are in Chicago, the greater part of the university is 200 miles to the south in the flat green cornfields. It is governed by trustees popularly elected by the people of Illinois.

The Grange Legend

There's an old story around Urbana that even the visitor of today must sto pto hear. Back in 1923 the university built malmmoth Memorial Stadium as a memento to the Illinois soldiers of World War I. The University of Michigan football squad invaded this new stadium for its grand opening and 83,000 turned out to see what should have been a great contest between the two gridiron juggernauts of the day. Red Grange, the galloping ghost of the prairie, opened the game with an explosion that was heard away off in Ann Arbor. By the time the game was three minutes old, Grange had toted the pigskin into the paydirt area no less than five times, and with the conversions that followed, Illinois had a 34-!0 lead over Michigan.

Besides being philosopher, revolutionary, diplomat, and president, Thomas Jefferson was also an educator. If alive today, he would probably point to the University of Virginia legislature in 1803, while The University was founded by the Virginia legislature in 1803, while Jefferson was in the White House. In 1809 he became a trustee and designed its campus and the theory under which it has come down to the present day. At the time, the established schools (such as Harvard, Yale, and William and Mary) were theological schools and were far from enthusiastic about anything approaching an open system of education. Jefferson was not able to liberalize the system to his own liking, but his immense prestige in Virginia allowed him large scope.

The University of Virginia is also the monument of other great early Americans. Connected with the university is the Andrew Carnegie School of Engineering, the James Madison School of Law, the James Monroe School of International Law, and the Edgar Allan Poe School of English.

Chariot Race

Origin, Aims And History

Par JACQUES CHEVALIER

In order to acquaint any students on the University of Toronto Campus who are at a loss to explain the flurry of excitement which has greeted the recent announcement that Chariot Race will be held on the Campus today, The Varsity has seen that a series of articles, of which this is the first, to explain the history, aims and mechanics of the Race, would not be amiss. So-o-o-

Obscure Origin

The origin of the Chariot Race, which will be three years old today in spite of what anybody says, has become almost lost in clouds of claims, counterclaims, charges and overcharges. Actually, the story is this, and these facts can be found in volume 69, issue number 73 of The Varsity. —

One cloudy day in February, 1948, a representative of the Department of Street Cleaning of the City of Toronto of the County of York of the Province of . . . well, you get the idea. Anyway, this representative of the DSC had received an urgent call from the authorities of the U of T to get one of those vehicles, even then called "chariots", and come post haste to the University with at least six stalwart colleagues. The reasons for this urgent call have never been adequately or clearly explained. Suffice it to say, the men arrived.

Then This Happened

At this point, fate stepped in. The unfortunate men arrived at one o'clock on the nose. They were just rounding the curve onto the front campus road when the students from the Engineering building were beginning their mad rush up the road to Hart House for lunch. Perhaps you can guess what happened.

No, not that. Not that either. Can't guess? Well, don't fret, we'll tell you.

But In Our Own Way!

These six men with their chariot were swept into the howling mob and swept along with it. The press at the back forced them to the front. The men at the back saw the six men running madly along the road in front and immediately came to the conclusion that they had stolen the vehicle they were dragging from the Dental School of Culture, and they gave chase. They chased the wretched fugitives all around the front campus, and only caught up with them in front of Simcoe Hall. But, of course, by this time, practically everyone else in the University had joined the chase, and in the melee at its end, the chariot was completely demolished. Those six men were never found. Anyway, that's how it started.

See Vol. 69 No. 73

The History of the Race is even less savory. The following year, the Faculty of Applied Science instituted, as a trophy, the Gerry P. Potts Memorial. On the day of the race, every Faculty and College on the campus had an entry. Every Faculty and College likewise demanded the trophy, on the flimsiest grounds. They all said they had won. But they hadn't. The Varsity won it. If you don't think so, see the Feb. 4, 1949 issue of The Varsity.

Well, that takes care of the origin and history. Now for the aims. There are no easily descernible nor immediately apparent aims. Diligent research has incontrovertably shown that there is an easily discernible and immediately apparent reason for this. There are no aims.

None That I Could Find

The question of the mechanics is an entirely different matter. Entirely different. The writer of this article has been informed that the geography of the race can be explained. Its sociology, psychology and mechanical and thermal measurements can be explained. But the mechanics is an entirely different matter. There are no mechanics, only dynamics. The writer is not prepared to explain the dynamics of anything, let alone a function as complex as the Chariot Race.

This is the last of a series written by a member of the staff of The Varsity to explain the history, aims and mechanics of the Chariot Race, with a side excursion into its origin to keep the question from becoming too unintelligible. Do not watch this space for further articles.

Sixteen Entries

mam in its old home after the new winners have been declared by the judge or judges, as the case may be.

There is a question of plurality because of the busy schedule of one of the members of the University staff. To save him embarrassment in case he may not be able to get to the races in time to place his bets, and to ensure his bets by administering his unbiased judgment, the name of said staffer will not be released unless it becomes evident that he will assume the post.

Impartial Board

If "he" should not appear, then the board of arbitration, which was set up after Skule lost possession of the Potts cup, the Newly Formed Charioteering Undergraduate Society of Impartial University Students, will name three justices, with one from Arts, one from Medicine, and one Plumber.

This settlement was reached after the meeting held in UC yesterday afternoon, where the rules and the course of the race were laid out. Most of the rules remained as first proposed in the "Rules For Chariot Race" published by the Chariot Race Committee of Three, representing Skule and their Potts Trophy board.

With Some Changes

The most significant change occurred in rule number nine, which originally read:

"The course laid out is inviolable, and all deviating from the route to travel Philosopher's and other lanes will be automatically disqualified."

This was changed to read:

"The course laid out is inviolable, and all deviating from the route to travel Philosopher's and other lanes will be automatically liquified."

i.e., Turned To Liquid

The change was made at the instigation of the representative from Skule, who maintained that engineers invariably turn out toward Philosopher's Lane whenever they were going past Hart House. After all, it does lead to a local oasis.

And That's A Fact

Perhaps a short list of the various entries and their official colors will help the freshmen to recognize their own compatriots.

Victoria: Men, to be known as the Hannibal's Huskies; their colors—Scarlet and Gold. Women, to be known as the Persian Kittens; their colors—Scarlet and Gold. (The similarity of colors is pure coincidence.)

Well, Coincidence

Trinity: The Blackguards; colors, Black and Black. (This team is unofficial, hence will trust to inconspicuous colors for very good reasons.)

UC: The Artsball Airedales; colors, Red and White. (For no good reason.)

Siberian Oilers: Read the translation of their entry.

Dents: Known as the Dents; colors—don't know.

Pharmacy: The Pill-pushers; in Red, White and Blue.

St. Hilda's: The Sharpies. (Short for Saint Hilda's Annihilation and Routers of the Perennially Impartial Engineers Society.) Colors—Silver and Blue.

Meds: Black and Red. A special name.

Pre-Meds: Grey and Pink. No special name.

Psychology Club: The Nut-Crackers; White and White.

Sr. Skule: Sr. Skule; Blue and Gold.

Jr. Skule: Jr. Skule; Blue and Gold.

The Ancient and Mystical Conclave of Sorcerers and Alchemists—colors—must be seen to be believed.

Even Then It's Difficult

The Varsity: The Winners; colors—Black and White and Red all over, of course.

There still remains one question—Who will win the Race?

Translation Of Russian, Yet

Ed. Note: The following is a translation of the letter appearing on page one of today's Varsity, the application for entry in the Chariot Race from the Northern Siberian Agricultural College.

Fellow Students:

We have heard of your forthcoming chariot race, and would like to enter one of our own teams. Our entry will be known as the "Siberian Oilers" and will consist of a driver, and six Afghanistan Wolves from the Republic of Afghanistan.

We can, of ocurse, easily beat your Engineering team, as well as every other one.

The "Siberian Oilers" will be sponsored by the People's Republic of Rusisa. We do, however, request one thing; there shall be a red flag and a picture of Stalin at the end of the course, to spur on our valiant Wolves to victory.

Blues Invade Montreal For Crucial Series

High Flying Blues Need A Victory For First Place

By MAL CRAWFORD

Today, the Blues are in Montreal for their most important test so far this season. Tonight they face the markedly-improved McGill Redmen at the Forum, and tomorrow, the league-leading Carabins of the University of Montreal. This will be the second of two Friday-Saturday double bills that the Blues are scheduled for in Montreal. The other was at the first of the season, when they defeated McGill but lost to Montreal.

Slow Starters

McGill started poorly due to a lack of ice for practices, and lost three games straight to each other team. However, in the last two weeks they have beaten Queen's twice and lost a close 5-3 decision to Carabins. Always a rough bunch — even when they weren't winning games — they can at least rough the Blues up so as to make it tougher for them Saturday.

This series will even the Blues with Carabins in games played. Montreal has a one-game lead over the Blues by virtue of an extra game played. If Varsity wins both games, they will be sole occupants of first place. If they lose to McGill, but beat Montreal, they will be tied for first, and if they lose to Montreal (no matter what they do to McGill) they will still be in second stall.

Even Steven

The Blues own a 50-50 average in their two games with Carabins, losing the first 5-0 and winning the second 12-7.

Varsity has scored 31 goals in their five league games for an average of 6.2 goals a game. Norm Fox has the most goals scored in the league — 6 — though Flynn leads in points thanks to the armfuls of assists the Montreal players seem to gather in their home games.

Junior B's Start Climb From Cellar

By DAVE BUTTERS

Spectators for the Junior B OHA tilts every Tuesday and Friday evenings are sadly lacking. In these games we see promising players for the Senior Blues performing for the Junior Bees squad—which sextet is the youngest child of the University of Toronto Athletic Association. These players are under the capable charge of Bill Wade, ex-Senior Blue Hockeyist and currently playing for Stoney's in the Toronto Hockey League.

The Junior B OHA group is formed of three other clubs plus the Varsity Junior Bees. They are the Weston Dukes (not to be confused with the Marlboros who are known as the Dukes), the Corner Boys—a group of youngsters from

Sportswoman

Volleyball

Vic II took the first game of the evening the easy way last night in the LM gym when UC II defaulted.

In the next game between PHE II and OT, Helen Tsandilles, Bev Lowry, and Eleanor Rogers were the main threats to the Therapy girls, baking the final score 63-19 for PHE.

Hockey

The fast-skating UC Firsts put up a good fight in the Arena yesterday, but ended up on the wrong side of a 2-1 decision against Meds.

Irene Hain was the best player on the ice, scoring both Meds' counters, and keeping the UC defence on the watch at all times. Teammate Sally Saries also played an excellent game.

UC's goal was scored by Jean Holmes, and although UC seemed to have the best teamplay, with well worked out line-ups, the individual playing ability of Meds pulled them through.

Peg Coughan, UC, and Eleanor Setterington both had a good workout in the nets, while fans and players alike agreed that it was one of the best games so far this year.

Speaking Of Sport

Par DWEEDUNNAY de NEEPER

The University of Toronto, as we have often said before, leads the field in athletic endeavor amongst Canadian Universities; leads, that is, in almost everything except track records. Over the years McGill (half the size of Toronto) has outclassed Varsity by a large margin, and it may be that they will continue to do so. Why? Because a track team cannot be trained properly and built up properly if that team's coach can only devote a small percentage of his time to the team.

Varsity's present coach, Harold Brown, teaches at a Toronto high school, and coaches the team after his classes. No matter how good the coach is, and we are sure Harold Brown is a good coach, he can't produce a winning team in an hour a night. Varsity needs a full time track coach, or at least a man who can devote six half days a week to his job. With the material we have here now, the university should have a red-hot aggregation. Why not give the job to the fencing coach? Or else get a tie-up with Percival's Sports College? Most of the track men train with Lloyd Percival anyhow in their spare time. At least they get more training than a schedule pasted onto the Hart House Track bulletin board.

Now that we have said our piece, on to lighter things: As the Scotsman said after a visit to London, "A wicked place! A' had na' been there but twa hours, when BANG, went sixpence!" Yak! Yak! Yak!

Just for the sake of curiosity, why wasn't the Carabin Week-end so arranged that the visiting firemen could watch their hockey team in action against the Blues at Varsity Arena? Oh, well, who knows the workings of the SAC?

We feel bound by obligation to pass on to our readers a bit of information from the circular handed out by Western extolling their basketball team: "Under Johnny Metras, Western has earned the title of Canada's Notre Dame in football." Har Har! Har! The guy that wrote that is going to look pretty silly on the wrong end of a libel subpeona sworn out by Notre Dame!

An extremely interesting and significant set of facts has recently come to our attention, and it is our opinion that publicizing them will help this university. These facts constitute the reasons for, and the circumstances surrounding the University of Chicago's decision several years ago to drop football as an intercollegiate sport. The situation regarding football at Varsity, and moreso basketball, has a dangerously similar appearance to that existing at Chicago a few years back. Unfortunately, it is a long story, albeit interesting, so we'll have to wait till next week to print it.

The total attendance at Wednesday's Sport Night was 125 souls, which means that the AA took in $62.50. Just about enough to cover the cost of sweeping out the gym. Not only did the UTAA take a beating on that deal, but so did Oswego State, the visitors. They got ready to take the train from Buffalo to Toronto, and found out the train had been cancelled in Donald Gordon's coal economy drive. They had to take a plane, and you know how much plane travel costs.

The engineers must be softening up these days. We walked into the Engineering Society office yesterday undisguised, and got out alive. In fact, we met only cordiality and politeness. Quite a feat for an Artsman. Maybe it's even safe for us to attend the chariot race.

A-Night Saturday

DEAR DIARY

Dear Diary:

Grasp this, dear diary, to-morrow night I am going to the gigantic super-colossal athletic attraction that is called Athletic Night. Isn't that just keen and peachy? My number one B.F., you know, the one I met on the Montreal week end in the fall, has kindly consented to invite little old me. (His chiropractor tells him that his arm should be completely untwisted by next week.)

Herbert, that's my B.F., is a real athletic supporter and enjoys these events so much that he has infused in me a burning desire to also partake of them. My best G.F., who used to go with Herbert, told me that he was wont to take her every week.

I understand that these A nights, as they are colloquially called by the scribes, are very popular with the undergrade body and that good old Hart House is usually jammed to the rafter as the Poet says. But I should worry how crowded it is. Maybe I can slyly slip one of my special little playful embraces on him under the pretence of being jostled. Oh my! "I just tingle when I think of the possibilities. Some of my snooty friends stoutly maintain that the sporting fraternity, as they are sometimes deemed, are nothing but a bunch of low grade, semi-literate bums. This is not the case!" Take Herbert f'rinstance, he is the couthest gentleman I know and that's saying something, because some of my best B.F.'s are real couth.

This week basketball will be the main event and I only hope, dear Diary, that the Blue boys don't put all their balls in one basket, as I understand that the teams change ends at half time and therefore must put the balls in both baskets. The team that we are to play is known as the Redmen and they come from that college where they all the time sing, "What's the matter with old Mac Gill?" Do you suppose this Mac is a relative of our Robert? From all reports however, not a great deal is the matter with old J.M. It seems that some of his students are cowboys and are athletically inclined. Well there's a switch—cowboys playing with Indians. (Redmen—Indians—get it—yak.)

If Herbert will take me to the pool room I will be able to watch the locals beat the stuffing out of some invading American swimmers. U. of Buffalo I think. Water Buffalos no doubt!

Besides this the jim team will put on a dandy show. After all these keen preliminaries we get to the meat or crux, you might say, of the evening. The real elegant dance in the big jim. The slightly humid and delicate odoriferous scent of the joint really borrows itself to a romantical atmosfear. Look at me, dear Diary, I'm just quivering all over!

Of course Herbert, who is the most procrastinating dolt I know, hasn't got tickets yet, but he says that there will be 600 on sail at the door. I must get my beauy sleep now, so g'night.

Last night Junior Vic came from behind to whip Junior Skule 2-1 in a hockey game that had everything. Zajecek scored first for Skule on a solo rush. Thomas fired a screen shot from the blue line to tie the score late in the first period. The winning tally came on a smooth 3-way passing play with Doner and Rumball setting up Walton for the clincher. Both Leuty and Yalden played well in goal.

In the nightcap, Trinity B completely outclassed a hard fighting Pharmacy crew, winning 12-3. Andison was the high scorer with 4 to his credit, followed closely by Fleming who notched 3. Gray and Creole got 2 each and Perry completed the score for the Buttery Boys. Murphy fired two and Allan one for Pharmacy in the highest scoring tilt of the season.

In a rousing minor league b-ball tilt Vic south house whaled the poo out of Trinity, 56-13. Ken Stevens paced the red and gold machine with 20 (twenty) points. Webster was next high with 13. Nobody on the crumpet team got more than two.

SPS fourths hurled 8 goals behind the stunned St. Mike's goalie in the noon hour hockey game to down the Mikemen 3-1. Sterling with 3 paced the Skulemen while Mustard and Jenner also played well.

Senior SPS had a field day at the expense of the inept Vic seniors crushing 38-11. Pierce, Willies and Smith paced the engineers.

Emmanuel downed their Victoria thirds brethren 32-29 in the thrilling 4 p.m. game. Bev Johnston hooped 10 to lead all scorers.

SPORTING EXTRAS

By BETZ

Six of the fighters on display last Saturday night will make the trip to Guelph this afternoon, to try out O.A.C., in the first of a double dual meet. It seems that O.A.C. has a full team except for the two extremities, the heavyweight, and the 125 pounder, or maybe they're just afraid of Tim Turner, and Hank Henshall.

The boxers making the trip will be: 133 lbs., Glen Williams; 140 lbs., Frank Corner; 147 lbs., Dick Priestman; 155 lbs., Norm Green; 165 lbs., Wally Armstrong; 175 lbs., Jim Follinsbee.

At 4.30 this afternoon the Varsity intermediates will face the Balmy Beach Indians Puma Wolves hockey team in an exhibition hockey game designed to end all exhibitions.

FENCING

Mark Kellow emerged as the winner of the combined senior fencing tourney held last week at Hart House. He took firsts in the epee, saber and foil. Tied for second place were Ken Soga and J. Roberts. The fencers take on U. of Buffalo to-morrow night at A-night.

Jr. Bees

the east end sponsored by the Corner Boys Grill—and the St Mike's juniors—sponsored and composed of students of St. Michael's College School. These four teams play twice a week—Tuesday evening there are two games at the Varsity Arena and Friday evening two games at the Weston Arena.

Weston Leads

Leading the group by 11 points is the strong sextet from Weston. These boys sprang into a strong lead during the early part of the season and have steadily increased their lead as the season has advanced. Following them are the red-shirted boys from the East End. These boys have begun to show their hockey prowess after demonstrating their fistic ability in free-for-alls which dominated the early games of the team. In the third position are the double-blue boys from Bay St. who are grimly holding a slim one-point lead over the Varsity Bees.

Rolling Now

The Bees, after a poor start, have begun to roll. They have decisively won their last two games and are playing their best hockey right now. Although Art. Holmes, the clever pivot-man for the Baby Blues, has been sidelined due to damaged ligaments in his knee, the Bees have brought Phil Arrowsmith from the Senior Blues down to assist them. It was the return of Arrowsmith which began the Juniors' win streak last Friday.

The leading point-getter of the Junior B League is George Jamieson of the Weston Dukes with 19 points composed of 11 goals and 8 assists. Second in the race is Norm Gray, pivot-man of the Corner Boys' first line, with 10 goals and 7 assist. Varsity Bees lone member in the top dozen scorers is Don Fullerton, centre, who is tied for third with Eric Nesterenko, Weston with 14 points.

Top goal-getter in the league is George Jamieson of the Dukes with 11 goals. Top play-maker in the loop is also Jamieson with 8 assists.

Reed Rat Race

Latest figures released from the Intramural Office reveal that the faculty of engineering no longer have a firm grip on the top rung of the Reed Trophy ladder. In fact they have been supplanted by University College who now lead by about 700 points. Trinity and Victoria have exchanged places, the Vics climbing from fifth place to third and the Buttery Boys slumping into the fifth spot. Forestry are still holding down the fourth place that they have held all year.

A few of the lesser known faculties such as music and Silesian studies are so far behind the rest that to all intents and purposes they have been dropped from competition. Law holds down the last position with a paltry couple of thousand points.

U.C., it's this way...

January 26 already and what a term for U.C. activities. U.C.'ers have been busy with the Robinette and Portia Debate preliminaries held every noon. Literary Directors Bob Sutherland and Joan Irwin have set the date for the finals early in March so if you haven't signed up to debate yet you'd better get in touch with these two people right away.

Zi Murray and Jack Novitsky held a terrific Red and White night last Wednesday. Over three hundred dropped their books and joined in an evening of fun, food and dancing in the Women's Union.

Wednesday the W.U.A. held their Open Meeting and heard the directors' reports on the year's work. President Jane Ratz announced that the Honour Awards for outstanding service to the College during undergraduate years would be presented at the Graduation Banquet. The Fourth Year president, Barb Smith, reported that Robert St. Davies would be guest speaker at the banquet. On February 7 the Lit will hold their Open Meeting but before that comes U.C.'s biggest affair of the year—THE ARTS BALL.

As you have no doubt gathered from the posters and The Varsity notices the ARTS BAL will be in the College this year. In deciding to return to the tradition of holding our College dance in the College the Lit and W.U.A. Executives are working furiously to unify the U.C. Spirit you heard about in the Follies of '49. It wasn't until the heavy registration of the year right after the war filled the Lit coffers that the ARTS BALL was held at the Royal York and now Mr. Johnson tells us that practically every dance held down there this year has been a financial failure. Anyway it was just one hundred years ago early in 1850 that King's College became the University of Toronto in the present University College and in honour of this occasion a wonderful dance has been planned. An interesting bit of past history: Did you know that it was two servants carrying lighted lamps for the annual dance in 1890 that started the great fire in the east wing?

The theme for this hundredth birthday party will be something old and something new. Something old will be the Jousting Court in West Hall. Lining the walls will be the shields, swords and Armour of days gone by with heraldic crests of ..... well, we'll leave West Hall here. You'll see crests that you've never seen before.

And East Hall is going to have a surrealist atmosphere. Artist John Ruch and the hard-working decorating committee won't divulge any of their secrets except that you won't recognize the library or at least you wouldn't if all your friends weren't there. Incidentally have you ever sat and gazed at the far wall and wondered what war was fought in 1866. (That's all the Latin I can understand.) Well, those three college students were killed during a Fenian Raid near Limeridge and the stained glass window was dedicated in their honour.

Downstairs in the J.C.R. the theme is going to be "Thou Shalt Not" and what that means I leave to your own imagination .....

But a College dance would not be complete without College entertainment and this part of the evening is in the very capable hands of Jack Hulme, famous for his part in the Navy Show, the Follies and the All-Varsity Revue; Pat Watson, also of Follies fame, and Jack Robson from the Follies and All-Varsity.

Those of you who were at the Follies will remember the popular skit of S.A.C. on C.B.C. This skit will be presented upstairs during intermission and Hulme, Watson and Robson are also planning a snappy parody on the Lit. members.

You couldn't enjoy an active evening if you were hungry so food will be served. I almost forgot there will be dancing to the music of Bert Niosi and Boyd Valleau.

Tickets are on sale every day in the rotunda. This is the biggest U.C. function of the year. There'll never be another CENTENNIAL ARTS BALL.

"On with the dance, let joy be unconfined"

P.S.—Watch for U.C.'s entry in the chariot race today.

The Heart Of Midlothian

To adroitly avoid any resemblance to the original, dead or alive, in committing a novel to film is the cardinal rule of practitioners in Hollywood. The original emerges either purged and pure as in John Steinbeck's Tobacco Road or in James Thurber's The Secret Life of Walter Mitty, stripped and robbed of its essential theme.

Distortion and adaptation have become synonymous, and fidelity to the author, his purpose and his work is a principle of the past. Whether the current book-to-film abortions are deliberate products cribbed by the pseudo-morality of the Johnston Office and the heroic patterns of American idealism, or are circumstantial results of emphasis, selection, interpretation and presentation inevitable to the translator's task, the fact remains that few novels escape a twisted fate at the adapter's hand. One of the few was aired on this week's CBC Wednesday Night, in Weldon Hanbury's radio adaptation of The Heart of Midlothian, by Sir Walter Scott.

Not only did the radio drama remain faithful to the original in action, dialogue, in atmosphere and mood, but retold the Scottish tale with an impact that Sir Walter's novel studiously avoids. From The Heart of Midlothian, adapter Hanbury chose only the episodes essential to the novel's plot, interwove them with a minimum of narrative, an original background score, and aimed constantly to present an authentic vivid dramatization of the book.

The Heart of Midlothian is not a flawless novel by any means. Steeped in a wealth of Scottish lore, Scott attempted a simple tale to likewise steep his reader and does so remarkably well. Interminable descriptions, vivid, wordy settings and countless tangents from the plot, all contribute to losing the reader in the narrative, and it is not difficult to get lost. The CBC drama excelled in extracting the heroic tale of Jeanie Deans, the poor Scottish lass engaged to the local preacher, Reuben Butler, who journeyed alone to London to the Duke of Argyle in search of pardon for her un-wedded sister Effie, who stood convicted of child-murder in a Scottish court. Pungent with the eeriness of the wilderness was the opening scene when Jeanie is confronted by the stranger (father to her sister's child), hears of Effie's predicament, and resolves to appear as witness for the defense at the trial. Catherine Graham's life-like portrayal overflowed with staunch honesty and child-like innocence. The fault with most of Scott's heroines is their faultlessness; they have no redeeming qualities to make them live. Miss Graham substituted honesty for naivety in her characterization, and redeemed the role.

The trial-scene, its crossfire of prosecution and defense, presented Jeanie and Effie in stark contrast to the majesty and austerity of the Scottish Court. In the later heath scene with the hag and Madge Wildfire, character portrayal rises high, as does the sub-theme of revenge.

In adapting Sir Walter Scott's The Heart of Midlothian, Weldon Hanbury divided the wheat from the novel's chaff, preserved the essence of the plot in its most significant episodes, and instilled the novel with a pace and life that a plurality of its pages do not possess.

Margaret Kerr

In tribute to poet Robert Burns, the CBC preceded the drama with a half-hour of Scottish folk songs, sung by mezzo-soprano Margaret Kerr, the Four Gentlemen and string orchestra under Geoffrey Waddington's baton. Possessed of deep resonance and vibrant tone quality, Margaret Kerr's throbbing contralto instilled the rustic songs with a warmth of quiet beauty one rarely hears. Her Far Away and Over the Moon was filled with the lilt of the Scottish dance, her "Comin' through the Rye" was an essay in the kneading of notes, in lyric tempo, in ebb and tide of tone. A subtle continuity was achieved from song to song by (1) announcements and (2) a delicate string interlude as comma to one rendition and introduction to the next. Only flaw was Four Gentlemen whose harmony in Turn Ye to Me and Loch Lomond suggested only the barbershop, never the lyric or intensity of what they sang.

Arthur Lismer Exhibition

On a happy chance I was at the Art Gallery the day that Arthur Lismer was hanging his current exhibition. Mr. Lismer, a tall white-haired distinguished-looking gentleman, is unmistakeable; so when he carefully assumed the detached attitude of a curator at our entrance, I was not fooled. In a loud voice I began to proclaim the merits of a certain picture. Mr. Lismer turned around shyly, "I painted it," he said "But I wasn't going to tell you if you didn't like it."

Back to the business of reviewing: Mr Lismer's paintings, drawings and sketches fill three galleries and cover a span of 30 years as a leader of Canadian art movements. First, there is the "Group of Seven" period of painting the rugged beauty of northern Ontario and Quebec. More recently the stage has narrowed from such scenes as "Isle of Spruce, Algoma" where lofty castles of spruce trees rise majestically from a rocky island. Now there is a focusing of the objects of the foreground. Tangled underbrush, fallen trees darmatically struggle against the strength of younger forests that are pushing them down upon the moss covered rocks. In these later paintings the colour is sharper than ever before, the lines freer and more spontaeous.

Although his earlier paintings have the blocked-out, strongly defined, rhythmical character of the "Group of Seven" painters, Mr. Lismer has a more sensuous feeling for colour than the others. He shows a predilection through all periods for clear tones of purple, green, and blue, all balanced in complex harmony.

In South Africa, where Mr. Lismer spent a summer in 1934, water-colours were used extensively for the first time. Moreover, studies of natives are prominent. These scenes are well-done and mood-evoking, but they are not as imaginative, do not show the same depth of response as his Canadian landscapes.

Mr. Lismer's drawings have the quality of his recent paintings; they are spontaneous and free, alive with sensitive and varied lines. I was particularly impressed by his Maritime paintings . . . they seem to be more personal and original than his earlier work . . . the output, almost, of a new artist. A jumbled net, an old anchor, some freshly caught fish, a twisted rope, a decaying dock, the rocky coast . . . they are portrayed freshly and gayly, almost as they have arranged themselves, with the design of the artist intervening only enough to give the picture a necessary formal unity.

Accent on Youth

The International Players is a group of very talented young actors, many of whom served their apprenticeship on campus shows. They produce a different play every week, which runs for three nights, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The system under which they work is unique in Canada. No tickets to the performance are sold, but during the intermission plates are passed around and the patrons contribute what they think the play is worth. It reminded me very much of church, except that the leading lady was much too beautiful to be good.

The pay as you like idea originated in the States; it was used there as a device to employ actors in the off-season and to give agents a chance to see them before casting broadway shows. The International players have the distinction of being the first professional stock company to use this novel system. During their recent season in Kingston, they played five evening shows and a matinee every week to well-filled houses. This may be a significant step forward in the growth of Canadian Theatre. Selling tickets is always the stumbling block to stock companies, however people seem more inclined to go to a play if it is just a matter of casually deciding to go on the night of the play and paying what they think the play is worth.

The play this week, Accent On Youth, was directed by Henry Kaplan, late of the UC Follies. At no time during the evening did one get the sinking feeling in the pit of the stomach that too often is the result of a small stock company trying to put over a fairly sophisticated "situation" play. The acting was smooth and professional and the play proceeded at an even tempo, yet without dragging.

Jean Cruchet played Linda, the heroine, with technical competence, yet failed to endow the part with any great degree of character. Miss Cruchet was obviously miscast, the fault was not in her acting. William Needles was excellent as Steven Gaye and Bea Lennard (another UC grad) made a fine Genevieve.

The SAC Story

from whic hthe affairs of students, socially and otherwise, will of necessity radiate."

This year's Student Union Committee of the SAC has just announced plans for a Memorial Union to the south of Hart House which bring into sight the goal of years of waiting.

Lose Oratory

Torontonensis of 1913 tells us, "The function of the Parliament has become so purely executive that there is no room for oratorical practices". However, anyone dropping into the Wednesday night meetings of the SAC would wonder if "oratorical practices" were not still on the agenda.

By this time the "Athletic and Discipline Committee" was providing parades and entertainment at Rugby games, and incidentally checking up on such students as those who went berserk when the Blues won the Dominion Rugby championship in 1912. In the past few year's the entertainment angle has been ably managed by the Blue and White Society, one of the few council activities which is not a financial burden.

Change Name

C. GUILD

Then the Undergraduate Parliament was christened the Students' Administrative Council in 1913 and representatives were elected to it by the men of the various colleges and faculties. That same year a compulsory fee was levied to cover the services rendered and with this source of income, a graduate was appointed permanent Secretary-Treasurer to handle their ever-increasing number of activities.

During the War years the women formed their own council, among whose jobs was providing chaperonage to the large groups of women who took the "Varsity Special" to the Queen's games. A joint executive of the SAC's was soon organized which not only acted as a link but handled finances and the publications. This executive body gradually absorbed all the powers of the separate councils to such an extent that in 1930-31 a new constitution joined the three groups into one, which was composed of the heads of the student government societies of each faculty, college or department and certain ex-officio members such as the editors of The Varsity and Torontonensis. The cumbersome name of the new body, The Joint Executive, Students' Administrative Councils was modified to Students' Administrative Council four years later.

Get Loan Fund

During the 'thirties an employment service was offered students by the SAC and a loan fund set up which has tided over a greater number of students each year.

Amendments made in the '45-46 session of the SAC bring it up to date. At that time the title of the graduate who returned to chair SAC meetings was changed from President to Chairman, and the undergraduate who was actually the head of the student body assumed the office of President. This year's chairman is Carmen Guild, 4T9, and president is Bob Hetherington, who is also president of the Medical Society and a Rhodes Scholar. The Vice-President is Ruth Comfort, III O.T.

The aim of the Undergraduate Parliament formed in 1907 "that eventually all matters of common interest to the student body will come under the jurisdiction or supervision of this organization" has indeed been realized.

Notice of Motion to amend the Constitution of the STUDENTS' ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL

Art. IV, Sec. 6: Delete the words "and the Women's Editor" and after the words "The Varsity" insert the words "and another member of the masthead to be either the managing Editor or the Associate Editor."

Appendix B. Par. 3, sub section (c): Delete the words "and the Women's Editor" and insert after the words "The Varsity" the words "and another member of the masthead to be either the managing Editor or the Associate Editor."

Commends Work

"The Montrealers' work cannot be too highly commended," Symons said yesterday. His opinion was backed up last night by the University of Toronto NFCUS Committee he leads, when the Committee unanimously passed a motion congratulating the Montreal Committee's work.

The seminar has been suggested for several years as a NFCUS project. This year the national organization was determined to get the work done. So organization of the seminar was given to the Montrealers as their specific task for the year.

Suggest Pool

Since transportation expenses were not to be subsidized, the University of Toronto Committee this winter suggeste.. that a "travel pool" might be arranged to aid students from distant universities.

But it was decided too much other work had to be done this year to take on such a task.

If the plan is adopted for future seminars it might resemble plans already used by such organizations as the Cooperative Commonwealth University Federation. A fund sufficient to pay the total expenses of all delegates to the seminar would be raised, each university contributing in proportion to its ability to pay.

Thus a student from a university far from the site of the seminar would have to pay no more than one from a university closer to the site.

Hart House Welcome For Carabins Tour Starts Gala Gallic Weekend

At 6 p.m. today, a bus will arrive at Hart House bearing forty-five French-Canadian students from the University of Montreal. The event is the return trip of the Carabins in the second annual week-end sponsored by the ISS and NFCUS. An example of co-operation between the two organizations on the campus, the week-end has been planned to promote lasting friendship and understanding between the two major language groups of Canada.

The group that went to Montreal on the weekend of Dec. 9, are acting as hosts and hostesses to the visitors, with many of whom they have become fast friends. The feeling of these students on their return to Toronto was one of deep appreciation to the Montreal students and to the organizations and the SAC which had made the trip possible. There was also a determination to return the hospitality and friendship so evident in Montreal.

Booklet Prepared as Memento

A booklet containing the pictures taken on the trip with the letters from the presidents of the two universities has been prepared by the students. It will be presented to the guests to provide a material memento to the two groups.

A reception in the Provost's Office in Trinity College will officially welcome the guests. A hot supper will follow the reception.

A party on Friday evening will continue the process initiated by the Carabins of breaking the ice with an informal get-together. General opinion among the Toronto students who went to Montreal is that the intimate contact with their hosts was the best thing on the trip. The hospitality of the French-Canadian families will be duplicated when the Toronto group plays host to the visitors in their homes.

Tour Includes Demonstrations, Play

A tour of the University Saturday morning should prove interesting to the Toronto students as well as to those from Montreal. Demonstrations in the New Mechanical Building are scheduled to time in with the tour, and the procession has been well organized. A reception by President Smith in the Senate Chambers will be followed by a tour of Hart House, when, once again girls will be allowed in the hallowed institute.

The evening's entertainment will include a presentation of Molnar's "The Guardsman", now playing at Hart House Theatre. Comments are still being made about the excellent production of Musset's "Fantasio" which the Bleu et Or presented at their university. The pride the University of Toronto takes in its own drama should be duplicated by the Robert Gill production.

Mass at the Newman Chapel on Sunday morning will be held for the visitors and others. A dessert tea at 2 p.m. at Wymilwood is being sponsored by the French Club. This affair is open to the entire campus, and all interested in meeting the visitors are vigorously urged to come.

This is the boy that made all the noise at the Chariot Race on Friday noon. It is the new Skule Cannon which had the honor of opening the Jerry P. Potts' Memorial Chariot Race, which was won by the entry from The Varsity. On this its first appearance in public, it made known that it had a healthy voice, surpassing the Cannons which have preceded it in the long line of Skule Cannons.

Louisburg To School Fun, Campus Cannons Find Fame

By HERB WOOD

The cannons guarding the Union Jack in front of Hart House are silent, but it was not always so.

If they could talk, they would tell a tale full of romance and thrilling battles. They would talk of the struggle between France and England for mastery of Canada and of a watery grave following the sinking of the once proud French ship "La Prudente."

Raised From Harbor

And they could tell of an unexpected resurrection followed by transportation from Cape Breton's harbor of Louisbourg to the University of Toronto.

They were present at the battle of Louisburg. Besieged by the English under Wolfe, the citadel was defended by a strong force of French ships including the "La Prudente" with her 74 guns.

Two Survive

In several days of furious fighting the British commander captured the island battery making it possible for his ships to enter the harbor. Recognizing the danger, Drucour, the French commander, ordered six of his largest ships sunk at the narrowest part of the harbour entrance and their masts fastened together by strong chains forming a sunken barrier. Three other ships of the navy escaped, leaving only five of the original fleet. Of these, three were destroyed by fire, leaving only two vessels "La Prudente" and the "Bien Faisant."

On July 25, 1758, under cover of darkness, a detachment of British tars captured these two survivors, removed the crews and proceeded to tow the huge craft away. But "La Prudente" caught on a sandbar. Finding it impossible to free her, the British put the torch to her. Soon the ship was a mass of flames settling slowly to the bottom of the harbour.

For over a century and a half the cannons lay rusting at the bottom of the harbour.

Taken to Toronto

Forty-eight years ago they were raised from the harbour and brought to Toronto. No longer shiny and ready for immediate action, they squat on either side of the flag pole facing out on Queen's Park. Plugs have been driven into their muzzles to silence them forever.

But even these precautions could not silence them Approximately 10 years ago, they spoke to the consternation of University officials and half the population of Toronto.

Who Fired Cannon

For several weeks preceding the Skule dinner students unknown worked to loosen the plugs. The night before, a charge, reputedly the work of Chemical engineers, was placed in the cannons and a wire run from a battery to a resistance wire in the charge. Controlling the firing of the guns was an alarm clock which gave the conspirators five minutes in which to make their escape.

On the night of the dinner the conspirators (it is rumored they were Skulemen) slipped away from the dinner early and setting the timing mechanism in motion, fled the scene.

Five minutes later the evening stillness was shattered by a thunderous roar that could be heard for over a mile. Bottles which had been left in the barrels of the cannon in the days before the plugs were inserted, were blown 50 feet and splattered over the grassy slopes.

This cannon was silent on Friday, but its modern counterpart in the hands of the Engineers wasn't. The ladies admiring, Anne Galligan standing, and Mary Fran Burke examining the inscription, are wishing that it was so voluble. They have a story to tell.

UWO Students Banned From USC Meetings, Gazette Asks Change

London, Jan. 29 — (CUP) — Students at the University of Western Ontario have never had any constitutional right to attend meetings of their student council, it was revealed at the last meeting of that body. The news came as the result of a proposal editorial in the Gazette requesting the right be given to students of attending meetings and having access to the minutes of such meetings.

Most U.S.C. members agreed that the principals of democratic government involved should be assured, but some thought the present constitution was adequate to allow for these rights.

Ottawa Student Council Vote Power of Veto On Paper Publication

Ottawa, Jan. 30 — (CUP) — The Carleton, undergrad newspaper of Carleton College, may be withheld from publication for twenty-four hours on the say-so of any member of the Student Council, it was voted at a recent meeting of the Student Council. The member may so ban the paper if it contains, in his opinion, indecent material or other items prejudicial to the good name of the college. "This was in no way to be considered as a form of censorship", according to the council meeting.

Predictions Proven As Skule Is Victor In Chariot Classic

Ben Hur bane bin her'. In a fleeting visit Friday noon-hour he left behind a scene of mixed dismay, triumph and disorder. Everyone was sure that his team had won the Chariot Race, and at the same time in his heart of hearts he knew that his favorite had lost.

Varsity Wins

Naturally not everyone can win, not even in a chariot race in which many faculties contend, and when The Varsity enters that race, who else could win? (Ed. Note: Well, who?)

The new Skule Cannon announced for all to hear that the contest had started, and in less than half an hour the first chariot left the starting line. In a bustle of confusion the entrants drew up to the mark, and with loud cheerings were wished on their way.

Souvenir Hunters

Not many got very far. The crowds liked some entries so well that they refused to let them get out of their sight. Some even demanded souvenirs, and took them, such as wheels from the chariots, articles of clothing from the hapless horses (mostly such things as pants, shoes, etc.) and a set of giant-sized dentures from the Dense entry.

In spite of this, within the hour, one of the Chariots came steaming up the slope to the finish line. This imaginary line runs around the world, and by some odd coincidence ends, or rather crosses, just in front of the Engineering building, where by further coincidence many engineers were gathered.

The Winners?

This body of students, chagrined at the very thought of losing the race, rushed forth to challenge the oncomers. Fortunately, these weary horses and men first approaching the finish line were dressed in the garb of engineers, and so received safe passage.

In a burst of enthusiasm, these men of science welcomed the "victors" with loud huzzahs, and even fired the Skule Cannon in their honor. By some mischance, also in their direction. Then there was more waiting, until another crew of Skulemen could win the race.

Then the entry from The Varsity left the post, and with great difficulty managed to reach the first turn. After some deliberation it was decided that they should start over again. Returning to the judges' stand, they obtained a new chariot.

Weather Willing

In the meantime, chariots bearing representatives from UC, Vic, Dents, Meds, Skule and The Ancient and Mystical Conclave of Sorcerers and Alchemists were struggling on the course. The weather which had promised to be "fair and impartial" kept its promise, and although some precipitation was noticed from windows of the Medical Building, the Bureau maintains that it had nothing to do with this phenomenon.

It is pointed out with some feeling that there was some interference in the running of the race. By technicalities it is felt that the entries from the Engineering faculty should have been disallowed by the judges. It was felt by two of the judges. But the bulk of the engineers felt differently, and so it was considered discreet to declare the official winners to be the entry from Sr. SPS.

Varsity Wins

However, there is no way to silence the press. It is with some temerity but with equal determination that The Varsity reports the only true and official winners to be their own entry. After all, they did complete the entire course that was depicted in Friday's issue, and although they did arrive at the finishing line some time after the judges had left, it is

This is the trophy which led to so much furor around the campus last week. First it was offered as the prize for the Annual Skule Chariot Race, and then it was snatched by some person or persons unknown and held as hostage to enable the Medsmen to force the Engineers to allow the Medsmen equal footing on the committee which lays down the rules for the epic event.

Anyone knowing the exact whereabouts, or having information which might lead to its recovery is requested to contact the Engineering Society. Reward: Permission to buy a ticket to the Skule-at-Home.

This Little Chariot Stayed Home

This is the normal use of the Chariots used in the race on Friday around the front campus. Daphne Wyle and Ed Curtin watch as University groundsmen George Humphrey and Ken Duff load dirt into can after the race had passed them by. Their non-partisan spirit makes them eligible for the trophy.

No More Pass

No more Pass course.

President Smith's recent announcement that the Pass Arts course and its big brother, the General course, are to be scrapped in favor of a new, slick, streamlined general course has met with almost unanimous approval from those concerned with the state of education in Canada.

There can be no denying that the Pass course has been abused by those people who have seen in it an easy, quick way to a B.A. degree and a job. But much of this abuse could have been eliminated short of the annihilation of a revered tradition by making some distinction in the degree awarded a Pass and an Honors graduate.

If the sheepskin granted at graduation was labelled "Bachelor of Arts, Pass Degree" many of those who would give a good thing a bad name would think twice before deciding an extra year towards an Honor B.A. would be wasted time.

But some students do not think of the Pass course only in terms of money-making chances.

It is foolish to pretend that more than a very small percentage of students entering university have more than vague interests to direct them in their choice of an occupation. The first years of an undergraduate's life at university should be spent in consolidating or re-directing his interests. Then, specialization in the field chosen.

As it is now laid out, the Pass course provides the surest means to the end of a comprehensive education. A high degree of specialization is necessary in the present business world, but without the ability to correlate his knowledge to many other fields the specialist is analogous to an automobile running on half its complement of cylinders; he is running at something less than top efficiency.

The ideal arts education would then seem to be three years spent in a pass course with an additional two years of specialization towards a Master's degree. It is recognized that the B.A. degree is fast becoming only an apprentice's certificate of work done towards a higher goal. (That students themselves realize this was demonstrated by the inclusion of this fact in the recent NFCUS brief to the Massey Commission on the Arts Letter and Sciences.) But ideals often give way to practicality.

Realizing that specialization is necessary for success in the post-graduation business competition and that a broad basis for the application of such specialized knowledge is also necessary, the President's suggestion for the new general course seems the most practical solution.

But it must be with a feeling of sadness that some people have heard the news, "No more Pass course."

Competition has forced the true aristocrats of the campus to knuckle down. No more leisurely savoring of the information ladled out in the lecture room. No more place for the man who likes his facts in small measure with large chasers of thought.

No more Pass course.

A Sad Case Of Misogyny

Editor, The Varsity:
Having been highly amused by those poetic little slams that have appeared in The Varsity during the past chapter of the conflict between good and evil (male and female, that is) I thought of putting to rhyme, though very poorly a few sentiments which have been expressed by various people at various times:

"I saw her walking down the street,
A graceful, vacillating treat,
A princess from a fairy book,
A maiden worth a second look,
Beauty enough to satisfy
Petty, Varga, Powers and I.
(Though I'll admit and you'll agree,
I'm not in the class of the other three.)

Well, naturally, I speeded up
To drown myself in Beauty's cup,
But as I quickly drew abeam
I saw things change—perhaps the steam
Upon my glasses marred the view,
I took them off—and dropped them, too—
For still 'twas there, and undenied,
My faithful glasses had not lied.

Alas! What did I see? What horrid thing?
'Twas not a pin or diamond ring!
But lipstick, rouge, mascara, cream,
Enough to make a nightmare scream,
Two blobs of red, a smear of pink,
And blondish hair (her own I think,
Though coloured to peroxide hue,)
And naked eyebrows, colored too,

Tummy tucked beneath a girdle
Still resembling back of turtle,
(A common shape I will admit,
In fact, the shape we've given it!)
And those twin bluffs—my shattered nerves!
—An artificial set of curves,
Packed with gulles and more deceit
Than 5A shoes on 6E feet.

I speeded up—and right on by,

Arriving by bus on Friday evening, forty students of the University of Montreal sang, talked, danced and mugged their way into the affections of all those Varsity students who met them. Godless Q'men Object To Ruling Barring Club Meet

Kingston, Jan. 26 — (CUP) — Queen's students are unanimously opposed to Queen's University Principal R. C. Wallace's recent banning from the university campus of an agnostic and atheist group, letters, reports and editorials printed in the Queen's Journal indicate.

In an official statement about the student atheists and agnostics, who held their first meeting last week, Principal Wallace stated, "There is no room for any club or organization which is anti-religious, nor will any such organizaton have a place in Queen's."

One member who attended the meeting last week denied vigorously that there was any intention of forming a club in the usual sense of the word.

Want Discussion

"We merely want discussion and on an intelligent level. We exclude no one and invite everyone who is serious about the matter of agnosticism and religion," he said. The student preferred to remain anonymous.

What effect the Principal's ban will have is not known. A notice on the university Student Union's bulletin board stated that the agnostics and friends would meet anyway, same time and same place as per schedule.

The Jan. 24 issue of the Journal appeared with one editorial, one article and seven letters to the editor about the principal's ruling. All expressed disapproval.

The Journal editorialized: "We ourselves are neither agnostics nor atheists. But this does not, and indeed should not, mitigate our belief in the rights of others to profess these beliefs, or disbeliefs, on an equal plane with all other groups. We see no reason for such discrimination.

"It may be retorted that the University, by its actions, is not barring freedom of expression to atheists and agnostics—they may still discuss such subjects in private or off the campus. This is not the point.

"The fact is that the University is placing atheists and agnostics on a different plane from other groups; it is forbidding to these groups some of the rights it grants to others."

Wants Religious Atmosphere

Principal Wallace's statement also said, "Queen's University admits students of many religious faiths, Roman Catholic, Protestant of various church affiliations, Jews and no doubt some of no religious affiliation at all. And Queen's welcomes facilities and organizations for any students to follow their own religious faith. . . . The traditions and history of Queen's are, in the best sense in the religious atmosphere. They will continue in that atmosphere."

In the same article that contained the Principal's statement, the Journal reported a resolution passed by the local unit of the Co-operative Commonwealth University Federation "Respectfully requesting that the Principal reconsider his decision to ban" the agnostic and atheist group.

The resolution called the Principal's ruling "a violation of the fundamental freedoms of speech and assembly."

Would Discuss Doubts

Among the seven letters, filling six columns of the Journal, was one from a self-styled agnostics, R. J. Reid, Arts '52. After describing the "doubt in himself" an agnostic must have once he has rejected the "blind faith" of those who believe in God, Reid wrote: "I believe that the rights of freedom of speech and thought should guarantee me the right to discuss my doubts with fellow agnostics and to arrange opportunities to discuss them in groups at which one way or the other many stop them and help me to resolve doubts; to accept or deny."

Criticizing the Principal's statement, letter-writer William E. Bauer, Arts '50, commented, "I . . . believe that there should be room at Queen's for any organization which is interested in pursuing truth. The multiplicity of religious organizations at Queen's would seem to indicate that the ultimate truth in the religious spheres has not yet been attained. Those organizations, all of whose creeds are based on tolerance, should be glad to accept the presence of another group, whose end is the same as theirs, although its means are slightly different."

Two letter-writers expressed belief that Principal Wallace's ruling was partly caused by fear that financial supporters of the University would be offended. Al Croo-

Manitoba Has Them Too But Exec Reconsiders

Winnipeg, Jan. 30—(CUP)—A letter to the editor in The Manitoban has proposed the formation of an Atheists Club on the University of Manitoba campus, and has appended a proposed executive.

The proposal was followed by another letter from one of the proposed executive, who stated, "I believe such a letter should not have been printed. It was the purpose of degrading innocent people . . . As for myself, I attend church at least twice a month, and unless I were to renounce any association with the Atheist Society I might have a very hard time entering any local church."

France Chosen As Seminar Site ISS Announces

The Third Canadian International ISS Summer Seminar will be held in France this summer according to an announcement made by the National Office of the ISS Thursday. Six students from Toronto will be chosen from among fifty across Canada to participate with selected European students in a five weeks seminar on the general topic of the "Crisis in Western Civilization".

Students interested in taking part in the seminar may come to the ISS open meeting to-morrow at 4 p.m. in the Women's Union.

Financed Outside Regular Funds

Tentative plans call for sailing on a student ship, July 26, a five week seminar at one of the alternate sites to be decided with the aid of the French government, free travel time and return on Sept. 8.

The seminar is financed completely outside regular ISS funds. The actual cost of the five weeks is borne by grants made to ISS. The provincial governments have been approached again for a grant toward travel expenses. The aim is to make participation in the seminar independent of students' financial position. Personal expenses, however, are borne by the students.

The qualifications for the seminar are generally the same as last year. Superior academic standing

Carabin, Varsity Leaders Want Exchange Expansion

By ROCKY MARTINO

"At our next meeting we're going to appoint a Commissioner who will look after the 'exchanges' between the University of Montreal and ourselves," said Bob Hetherington, Varsity SAC president. Balancing a teacup in one hand and a camera in the other I came up to Bob Hetherington, SAC President, and Gilles Bergeron, President of AGEUM (Montreal equivalent of the SAC) engaged in an exchange of ideas on future inter- university visits.

Exchanges Important

"We feel," continued Bob, "that these week-ends should become as much a part of our school-year as the other inter-university activities The exchanges of the past two years have been preliminaries to something that will grow in importance and size as the years go by."

Two Week-ends

"These exchanges are very important," said Gilles. But there is one thing I would like to see changed. Instead of having forty students come down once a year for a week-end, I would like to see two groups of fifteen to twenty come down at different times in the year and stay for about six days. They could spend the first couple of days making friends and getting to know their way around. Then for the next four days they could attend

Carabins Tired But Happy After Weekend Festivities

"I would like to move," said one of Les Carabins from the University of Montreal yesterday afternoon, "that the Carabin Weekend become a Carabin Week. I don't want to go home!" That seems to have been the general opinion of the forty University of Montreal students who spent the weekend here as guests of the students of the University of Toronto.

Repaying a visit Toronto students made to Montreal last fall, Les Carabins decended on the Campus late Friday afternoon, for a hectic weekend of entertainment, and talk. While they were here they had a chance to meet a wide variety of students from Toronto, walked about the campus, were shown through the New Mechanical Building, heard some remarks on religion and education from President Smith, saw the closing performance of "The Guardsman" at Hart House Theatre, talked French and English (and Spanish and German), discussed religion, the theatre, the arts student problems, NFCUS, the IUS and sex.

Trinity Reception

Provost Seely of Trinity College, who greeted Les Carabins on Friday afternoon at a reception, said that he hoped they would go home "thoroughly tired and thoroughly happy." Toronto did its best, and there is no doubt that they went home tired.

The exchange visit of the University of Montreal students marks the second year that the scheme has been run. The Toronto Committee of The National Federation of Canadian University Students, and The International Student Service, who organized the weekend, hope that next year it will be taken over and made a permanent activity of the Students' Administrative Council. A proven success, there is little doubt that next year the

Statement From Skule

We, the Engineers do tender an apology for the manner in which the so-called Chariot Race was run off this year. While we daresay the majority of us enjoyed ourselves at this festive occasion with spittin' contests, cigar smokin' and the like, the race itself was a sad disappointment to those of us who spent many hours in organizing this grandiose event.

Although the NFCUS-IUS made a gallant attempt to organize this affair in a fashion which would provide a source of amusement and possibly some speculation regarding a legitimate winner, the group was not organized in time for the Engineers to redirect the great enthusiasm which had been growing for several weeks.

To correct this condition, we suggest a general council be organized from representatives of Meds, Skule, and the combined Arts colleges. We also suggest that the Engineers relinquish direct control of the race and be relieved of the financial responsibility, in favour of this all-Campus council. However, since the Engineers were the original instigators of this novel form of expressing long pent-up spirit, it might not be out of order for them to donate a suitable trophy in all seriousness.

Before this race will be run again, drastic changes will have to be made, a few of which might state that:

1. The race be held in Varsity Stadium (assuming that subsequent winters will not be as mild as this one) on the ice loop.
2. Due to the fact that Skule lost one chariot in this year's schemozzle, no D.S.C. wagons shall be used.
3. Spectator participation be cordially restricted to violent cheering and strictly "stand support". Otherwise this leads to conditions of mob frenzy.

In short, we propose to aid in setting up a body which can create a true sporting event, indicative of faculty proficiency rather than strength of numbers.

Jewish Folk Choir—Jennie Tourel

Metropolitan mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel floated on-stage like the Queen of Sheba into Solomon's court, in a jet-black velvet Elizabethan creation Saturday night at Massey Hall. She was guest artist at the Toronto Jewish Folk Choir's second 25th Anniversary Concert, Emil Gartner conducting.

Characteristic of the choir's lengthy (three-hour) programme was its startling diversity of Jewish, Russian and French folk songs to Schubert lieder and a Negro spiritual. Certainly the emphasis (didactic or otherwise) fell upon the theme of the unity of mankind, represented in the art of song. Evidence to this was the nature of the choir, the programme and the notes.

Polish and subtlety of performance were not the conductor's primary aim Saturday night. Emil Gartner leads with a demanding arm, but his demands were fervor and vitality, and his choir met them both. With skilful accompanist Fagel Gartner, her buoyant manner and Schmitz-like, articulate technique, the Jewish Folk Choir was at its best in Hecher, Besser, Der Rebbe Elimech, Every Time I Feels De Spirit, Kalinka and La Merle. Conductor Gartner drew an effusive charm and rhythm from his followers in these, but that same effusion saw individual voices poke out above the harmony of the numbers as a chorale whole.

Jennie Tourel on the opera stage is a mistress of eurhythmic charm. She first creates a mood by a stance, a tossed head or a raised brow, from which emanates a rounded fluid mezzo-soprano that filled the hall. The singer excelled in Bizet's Adieux De L'Hotesse Arabe and Saint Saen's Mon Coeur S'Ouvre a Ta Voix. The actress excelled in the Letter Scene and Drinking Song from Offenbach's La Perichole. Choir and Soloist combined in Schubert's cantata Miriam's Song of Triumph to bring the program to a climactic close.

All in all, the concert was a nice, sweet, lovely enjoyable experience, which except for the Yiddish lyrics and aesthetic beauty, was well within the comprehension of the common ordinary unintelligent man-in-the-street.

Anna Russell

Saturday night was probably the most exhausting evening I have spent at a concert. Anna Russell, comedienne, leaves no musical conceit or artifice untouched. She harangues them all and even attacks herself. In her opening recitative or lamentation, she explains her position in the musical world. Coloraturas and female baritones, musical freaks, have circus appeal and circus sized audiences, but the sweet little voice is not concert fare as she indicates in the aria, Here I Sing so prettily.

In her Helpful Hints of How to Pep Up The Recital Of the Average Singer, Miss Russell demonstrates her unique ability to capture the quality of the various types of voices; sopranos, dramatic and coloratura, contraltos, tenors, all come under attack. In this group, we alternated between satirized concert versions and Russell-designed versions intended for various types of audiences, a Boilermakers convention for instance. Handel's pain-stricken O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me was turned into a masochistic torch song. One of the funniest transformations was the Carmen Hebenera, termed Habenera Hoe Down and rendered as a dead pan square dance. No small part of Miss Russell's are is her own amazing musical arrangements and lyrics in unbelievably polished combination. A parodist often exhibits an unconscious sympathy with the matter under fire and Miss Russell's success may owe something to that factor, especially since the lady really can sing. If she sometimes descends to more obvious burlesque, she has established such a close bond with her audience by virtue of her art and personality, that it is applauded as exuberant vitality and not resented.

For the instructive part of the evening, Miss Russell obliged with a formula for How To Write Your Own Gilbert and Sullivan. She stressed the need for a homogeneous chorus, all streetcar conductors for example, all one something, and for her purposes, all New York upper crust. The chorus of the Four Hundred accompanied the patter song about a gangster who becomes a "respectable, miserable tycoon." Especially amusing was the sad song of the nurse who has or has not done some thing and on whom the plot hinges. In this case it was Dandelion, who was a nurse in a maternity ward. And of course, there was the inevitable trio with Miss Russell madly changing hats and voices.

Miss Russell finally disposed of her clamorous audience by saying, "I'm so glad you all like good music." And we do too.

Hello, Julie . . . Fine, thanks. . Imagine me going to a real symphony concert! . . . Al took me . . . Sure, I liked it fine but I don't know about Al, he's a critic you know—writes for The Varsity. He's awfully intellectual. When they played Ravel's Bolero, he said it was the longest crescendo in music—Al was always so original! But you should have seen the singer—what shoulders! His name was Leonard Winters and he had a lovely free voice after he got started. At first he was a little rough, it sounded like a plugged-up T-zone. He sang easier after his long-hair pieces . . . Just a moment till I get my programme . . . let's see: Ombra Mai Fu from Xerxes sounded like Handel's Largo. Al said something about a lack of resonance in the lower tessitura but I wouldn't know. I couldn't hear his low notes and his foreign words seemed laboured. Di Provenza Il Mar and The Toreador Song followed. Al thought the first was over-dramatized, but I liked it anyway—there was so much feeling in it. After intermission he sang How do I Love Thee?, Water Boy, Swing Low, and Every Time I Feel the Spirit. What a thrill when he sang Old Man River as an encore! He sang these best of all. Al turned up his nose and threatened to leave, but everyone else seemed to like it, judging from the applause. Al doesn't clap much for anything, he's so discreet that way. . .The orchestra? I thought it was fine and Al said it was up to the usual Friday standards. I don't think the programme was good for Al though —you know how sensitive he is to artistic stimulus. They played two Bacchanales, one from Samson and Delilah and the other from Tannhauser, and Al wanted to slip out for a few drinks during intermission followed by. . .Well, I managed to get him back to Massey Hall and the Three Dances from Henry VIII were able to cool him down. Artist's Life waltz closed a wonderful concert but Al was glowering by now.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

Hazing has always been a traditional feature of Varsity life. Faithfully this campus newspaper records this delightful aspect of campus activities and from its file on this subject we select today's review.

A Varsity Memo dated Nov. 18, 1920, reveals the visit of an irate parent to this office. He claimed that his son had been subjected to inhuman treatment at the hands of sadistic sophomores. The protesting parent arrived early one afternoon with two bundles under his arm; in one was his son and in the other splinters removed from the same. In addition to this evidence he presented a certified report from a professor of tenderology claiming that the splinters were formerly an integral part of telephone posts which had previously bordered Philosopher's Walk.

In 1932, cub reporter Pinky Fairbaum was initiated in rather a novel manner. He was forced to carry two sophomores piggy-back to Port Credit. On arrival, his two tormentors proceeded to tar and feather him and then stranded him on the highway. Pink arrived at his Huron Street lodgings two weeks after this bizzare evening but was unable to resume his education until three months later. His room was equipped only with cold water faucets.

A late January edition of the 1912 Varsity includes a news story of an inspired Household Science Senior who marched her charges down to Sunnyside Beach and had them re-enact "September Morn."

The University Book Shop, as usual, spared no effort to accommodate the students with respect to books and equipment pertaining to this phase of student life. An initiation kit was prepared and offered for sale to sophomores on presentation of their A.T.L. cards. The deluxe kit included one tin shoe polish, 2 thumbscrews, green pills for three, one small meat cleaver, one can tar, assorted feathers, a chastity belt, one fingernail extractor, and a copy of Wild Humans I Have Eaten.

Throckmorten Ogelthorpe, heir to a munition fortune and the only Skule man with a diamond encrusted Peter Meter, taxed his imagination almost to the point of nervous collapse in order to contrive a practical guillotine for use during freshman week. For this precedent-smashing invention he was accorded great honor and presented with a lifetime pass to all Bella Lugosi pictures to be screened in Toronto. Spurred on by his success he rapidly offered an improved thumbscrew, a mechanized rack and a double iron maiden to be used exclusively on Siamese Twins.

Ogelthorpe's little dream was set up on the back campus and in the evenings small groups of freshmen would be led to the scene. Gargantuan seniors would force the boys into their blue and white straight jackets and crowd them around the platform. An assistant executioner would perform the rites on a small dog or rabbit and the freshmen were allowed to dip their fingers in the warm blood. Then the Chief Executioner would take over and over his piece de resistance. He would blindfold the freshmen and lead them to the block, one at a time. Having secured the victim's neck in the rest he would then raise the blade to the top amidst thunderous applause and allow it to scream home. The crowd was beside itself with mirth; oh, what fun this was. Everyone but the freshmen knew that a rubber blade had been substituted at the last minute.

This unique form of initiation was terminated by the Caput on the pleas of a committee of first year lecturers who claimed that the identification of individual students had become impossible due to the predominance of dull starry eyes and white hair.

Student Freedom Not Endangered

(Canadian University Press)

In my experience with students, I have found that they are, on the whole, very sensible, and that as far as politics are concerned, they fall into three groups. The first are those who possess such a superb mixture of lethargy and skepticism that they are insulated from all contact with political thought.

Second come those who study politics and social philosophy as a preparation for graduate school and usually wind up with no very modern ideas, Communist or otherwise. Last we have those with a radical germ in their minds, who enjoy the adventure of taking an extreme point of view, and work very hard at it in political action groups.

In the third set are those who become most politically literate, and who create the environment of controversy from which good political education of the young can come. They raise questions which have to be answered. There is nothing as tiresome, listless, and harmless as an academic community in which everyone quickly agrees with the government. Unfortunately, this is the standard situation. We have more to fear from the harmlessness of the American academic mind than we have from the vigor of occasional radicals.

I believe that anyone who has the sense to listen while students talk about these things will quickly discover that the American student does not accept the ideas of his teachers as true, nor does he show any susceptibility to indoctrination. What the American student has is an attitude toward life, knowledge, and politics. He is usually gifted with democratic feelings. His posture is one of frank, outspoken criticism of those with whom he disagrees.

The student who is searching for an authority and an idea that can solve all his personal problems will accept any idea that comes along. He is rare. He is usually a person who lacks the emotional stability that can only come from a full life as a youngster. I believe that our first concern in education must be to develop the tough-mindedness and open-mindedness of the practicing democrat. I do not believe we can do this in an educational system that teaches that the way to defeat ideas is to get rid of the people who have them. The students themselves can be counted on to isolate the men of no integrity from those whose beliefs are honest. The colleagues of any politically directed teacher can be counted upon to judge his character and the quality of his teaching and to take faculty action if it is indicated.

In the end the question of academic freedom comes down to whether or not the individual is a man of honor. We need to know his evidence for saying them. We need to know whether or not he cares about his students, and is trying to help them to think liberally and independently. When we can answer these questions and we can answer them if we ask them of our students and our teachers—we will know how to act in matters of academic freedom. We will also attain a power for educating our youth in intellectual democracy that can conquer all efforts to subvert the American mind.

Movie Review

The Man On The Eiffel Tower

Down at Shea's they have a very unusual movie called "The Man On The Eiffel Tower", with an interesting story behind it. It seems actors Franchot Tone and Burgess Meredith were in Paris, had a camera and decided to make a movie, based on George Simenon's detective thriller, "A Battle of Nerves." Co-producer Tone and director Meredith got Harry Brown to write a script. Then they heard Chas. Laugton was in town, asked him to join them, and told Brown to enlarge the part of Inspector Maigret. One by one Pat Roc, Bob Hutton, and Belita were collected and after many script revisions the movie was shot in Ansco color.

What came out is a combination of travelogue and dime-thriller plot, the popular formula with mystery fans. Before the picture is over you will alternately have visited the Rue St. Germain and Place Pigalle, dined at Moneigneur's and on the terrace of the Eiffel Tower, dived off a "PONT" into the Seine, been chased over rooftops by the police, and careened through the streets in the traditional auto-chase.

Some gaps in the plot are pretty wide but the actors seem to be having a good time, especially Laughton as the quietly tenacious inspector and Tone as the demented intellectual who knows Laughton knows he did it but can't prove anything, and keeps taunting him and drawing red herrings across the trail. Burgess Meredith works beaver-like in the role of an ignorant, myopic, red-headed scissors-grinder framed by Tone and out for revenge. Tone's ex-wife Jean Wallace is a luscious gold-digger.

In the exciting climax Tone and Meredith used no doubles while clambering about on the girders atop the Tower. Both now admit they were scared skinny.

Atmosphere throughout is spring-like and public smoochers are found in the background of nearly every outdoor csene. It's a lot of fun if you don't take it too seriously.

LPP Corrects

Editor, The Varsity:

The LPP wish to correct a statement made by your reporter in the news item on the last Mock Parliament. The LPP did not abstain. We voted against the CCF motion—in fact, if we had voted for it, it would have passed.

There were some good domestic features in the CCF program, and would be commendable if carried into practice. But the foreign policy of the CCF—exactly the same as the Conservatives and Liberals—we can never support, for it will only lead to international disunity and war, all in defence of "the American century" with unemployment and racial discrimination. We regret we were unable to support the small good in the program, but we felt it essential to defeat the reactionary foreign policy which would submerge the home reforms.

Norman Endicott, IV VIC.

P.S. In Thursday's The Varsity you delightfully misquote Communist views on history. The Communist theory is correct on its own merits, NOT because we work for it. Communist theory is true because based on science and social historic practice. It is not a dead dogma, and it is in the process of growth as men struggle for socialism. We are not simply afraid to participate in the building of socialism ourselves.

Challenge Issued

Editor, The Varsity:

There is an old saying that "Sticks and stones may break my bones but names will never hurt me." Mr. Benstein should save his strength for the duel and shouldn't use typical Engineering tactics of confusing the issue so much that nobody knows what in h--- is going on.

During one of his hysterical spells—they usually occur after some lab or other—he sat down at a typewriter (someone told him what it was) and he proceeded to punch things. After five or six hours he decided to quit and left a torn and battered sheet of paper for an overworked Varsity editor. This man, with hours of work ahead of him, had to take time out to unscramble the mad palaverings of some Skuleman who couldn't fight a duel under fair conditions on a previous occasion. That is the issue at stake.

To ensure a fair duel I would like to lay down certain specifications. Now no duel is anything unless each opponent has a few seconds. Being an Artsman, I cannot ask fellow Artsmen to be my seconds since no Artsman is second to anyone else. Therefore, I say, let twenty or thirty Skulemen be my seconds. I'm quite willing to undergo the possible risk of contamination but I feel that the honour of the men who go to the U.C. Arts Ball should be upheld.

I suggest that the duel be held next Wednesday at 1 p.m. on the Front Campus. If Mr. Benstein can crawl that far, I hope he'll be there. If he's not, I'll assume that like all his confreres he preferred to stay away and play with a slide-rule.

Rocky Martino, M&P III

P.S. I'd also like you, Mr. Editor, to be the referee since I feel this is the only way that I will get a fair and impartial judgment in my victory.

Arnold's Libel

Editor, The Varsity.

We the staff of Toike Oike, wish to state that the vile slander, the foul libel handed out by Mr. H. Arnold cannot be permitted to pass unavenged; that a public apology cannot now be accepted, and that nothing short of blood will satisfy our honour. As the aggrieved party we hereby chose our weapons. We stipulate that all parties concerned shall gather in a suitable room, say the gent's washroom in the Meds Building, and shall listen in silence while a disinterested party reads aloud from back issues of The Varsity. These shall be read in its entirety, including the AM & D, the advertising, and Dnieper's column. The reading shall be done with fervour and fitting gestures, and the last person to run screaming from the room shall be declared the victor. As to the time, we profess abysmal indifference. Co-Sexual Groups Decline Symbol

By BORIS GARDAVSKY

Boris Gardavsky is the vice-president of the McGill Student Union. He attended a conference of student union executives held at the University of Toronto early this month.

In his address to the delegates at the conference of Student Unions, Dr. Sidney Smith, principal of the University of Toronto, said that in his experience the closer the relationships between men and women in Student Unions, the poorer such relationships, becae. At the same time, he said, he was fully opposed to a complete separation of the sexes as is the case in many Unions.

The general feeling of those attending the conference was that the advent of "co-sexual" activities, the interests of the majority of the students, had turned to more frivolous activities, to more dances, to more drinking, and to general more wasting of time. With this has come a corresponding decline of interest in what is ironically called the more "serious" amusements, the concert, the college debate, the discussion group.

Another serious concern of the educators has been the high percentage of failures in the freshman class of the last two years. Thirty percent of the freshmen of the Ontario Agricultural College failed completely. McGill fared little better last year.

Dr. H. Wasteneys, professor of bio-chemistry at Toronto, who phrased the term "co-sexual" to replace the euphemistic "co-educational," stated that one of the greatest problems is the loss of professor-student relationships as they existed before the last war. A return of these conditions might solve many of the problems just considered, he said.

But "before the war" is long ago. In the turmoil of the last great war has not a continuing change been lost sight of?

With the increasing technology of our civilization, the period of education has been steadily growing longer. At one time, universities were only for poets, lawyers and doctors. High school was enough for most. The picture has been steadily changing since the turn of the century. Today even a bachelor's degree is not enough. One must have a master's or even a Ph.D.

But with this has come a more serious change, the decreasing maturity of the college freshmen. Perhaps this has not been recognized in the last five years when the influx of the older, veteran students raised the general level of maturity of the college undergraduate. But the contrast between these students and the present freshmen coming from high schools has been striking! Here, perhaps, lies the fundamental problem.

Today the case is different. The tabloid newspaper and the superficial movie have begun to have their way. Don't think, thinking is work, they shout. Have fun!

And with the fun has come a general disregard of those activities which were based on a high calibre of intellectual activity. Student-professor relationships have practically disappeared. There is no common meeting ground. Serious discussions are virtually unknown. Serious thought is absent.

Yes, "before the war" is long ago. Can the university and the senior student meet this challenge? Can they recognize the problem and honestly attack it or will they continue on their narrow paths muttering "I'm too busy"?—McGill Daily.

is the foundation. However, other considerations are very important. Ability to meet people and adjust quickly to new situations are taken into account, as well as a position in campus life where the experience of the seminar can be passed on next year. This means that students must be returning for at least one year. Application forms will be available by mid-February. Applicants will be interviewed by a board approved by President Smith. Final selection will be completed by the middle of March.

lectures, hold mock parliaments, go to meetings of various socities—"

"Something like a seminar, Gilles?

"Yes. In that way the students could really get to know something about the workings of the University they are visiting."

"Gilles," I said, "why aren't these week-ends planned so that there is a hockey game between the two universities during the time of the visit? When we were in Montreal, Les Carabins played Varsity here and last night Varsity played in Montreal."

"Well, Rocky, we have considered it but that way we'd just have another athletic meet. This way we have a meeting in which an exchange of ideas is the main event."

Aim to Exchange Ideas

"And that exchange of ideas is very important," said Bob. "These exchanges bring together cross-sectional groups who take the ideas from these meetings back to their classes and their socities. In that way we get a spreading of common aims and ideas that no printed texts or lectures could ever hope to accomplish. That's the entire aim of these exchanges—to have two groups come together to find a common meeting ground of thought and then to spread that as much as possible."

"I'm sure that the idea of having students come together for this purpose will spread to the other universities of this continent," Bob continued. "Perhaps, after this inter-visit has become firmly entrenched we might go farther afield and plan such events with other universities."

World University Exchange

"I sincerely hope that this idea will spread" answered Gilles. "I'm looking forward to seeing a whole system of exchanges between the universities of the world."

Something always breaks up a good conversation. This time it was a train to Hamilton for a NFCUS meeting which Gilles had to attend.

SAC will be running the weekend.

Official Welcome

Les Carabins were "officially" welcomed by University President Sidney Smith in the Senate Chamber at Simcoe Hall on Saturday morning. "I hope," the president said "that while you are here you will have some fun and games. I know that you will have an opportunity to discuss serious matters.

"It is well for us to remember that all university education is not to be found in the class room, the laboratory or in the library. . . . The 'bull session' is one of the fundamental educational processes."

The president sent a salute to the University of Montreal. "We have a lesson to learn," he said, "from the universities of French Canada. There we find religion and education complimenting one another, and when this happens you can expect men and women being trained with a deep appreciation of the ultimate values.

Open Mind Dangerous

"I find," said Dr. Smith, "a danger in the sentiment that we should have an open mind . . . To open a mind may allow ideas to blow in one side and out the other . . . We are suffering in our (English) universities from the element of relativity which has come to us through the natural sciences. We forget that the relativety of physics cannot be applied to the field of values, opinions, ideas and ideals. There must also be a deep and abiding religious conviction, such as you have at the University of Montreal."

Les Carabins were shown through the New Mechanical Building by Professor Allcut head of Mechanical Engineering, and later toured Hart House with Warden Ignatieff. On Saturday the men ate in Great Hall, and the women at The Women's Union. Burwash Hall, and several fraternities also fed the visitors on Friday and Saturday. On Sunday afternoon the French Clubs from the Arts colleges gave a tea to Les Carabins before they boarded the bus to go home.

foot, Arts '51, declared, "This decision was probably motivated by the fear of the removal of certain alumnus and other support."

Would Not Boast

Morgan Bebee, Arts '51, wrote, "I cannot see how this university can boast any longer of the merits of being privately-endowed if it is bought at such high cost."

Another comment (by Thomas Shreve, Arts '33): "Perhaps the members of the club were not practical in supporting publicly views contrary to the generally-accepted opinion of society. But, was Jesus Christ practical in this respect?"

Interfaculty Sport

Phizz Ed basketeers, playing fine ball and showing great condition and speed romped to a 32-22 victory over senior Meds "B" in their noon hour meeting, Friday, in one of two scheduled major league game. Ed Fisher threw in 7 points to lead the muscle men and was followed by Washer and Elliott with six apiece. Brisby of the medical squad led all scorers with 11 and was helped out by Watt with 5.

The Trinity "A" entry, colloquially called the Buttery Boys, won an astronomically high scoring game over Architecture "A" 25-15. The Tie-men won chiefly due to the fact that their shortest man had to look down to see the basket. Tiny Tim Turner turned in his usual stellar performance in getting rebounds while Buck Rogers led the scorers with 8. Overs with 6 was tops for the Architects.

Line-ups

Trinity "A"—Turner 4, Corbett 4, Rogers 8, Keen 6, Brewer, Montizambert 2, Scrivener 1, Grey, Hill. Total, 25.

Architecture "A"—Overs 6, Delean 4, Koyanagi, Patterson 2, Dashkin 3, Tilbe, Yamoto, Fraser, Shimoba, Heimonen. Total, 15.

The UC Hurricanes were glorious in defeat in their minor league struggle with Vic Elevenths, Friday, which the scarlet and gold won 42-22. McFadden and Hamilton both showed that 13 meant nothing to them as they proceeded to hoop that number of points. Brudner was the star for the Hurricanes with 11.

The powerful SPS sevenths entry overwhelmed Vic fourths 2-0 in an action packed hockey game at the arena Friday. It was one of the few shut-outs hung up this year. Robertson and Mowatt were the lamp lighters for the Skulemen.

HOCKEY BLUES WIN AND LOSE

Carabins Win 6-2 To Hold Top Spot Turcott, Digby Tally

Montreal, Jan. 28 — (Special) — Varsity Blues stepped back to second place again after a 24-hour tie for first when they were snowed under by the classy flying Frenchmen from the University of Montreal by a 6-2 count. The game was played before 4,000 highly enthusiastic onlookers at the Verdun Auditorium who had lots of opportunities to shout "Vive les Carabins" for their colorful team.

Pierre Perrault speedy winger turned in a top notch effort sparking his team time and time again with his rapid rushes and dogged checking ability. He was richly rewarded for his tenacity by blazing two goals behind Varsity goaler Doug Orr in the second and completing the hat trick in the third on a clever break from centre. Two of Perrault's goals were unassisted.

The Carabins jumped into an early lead in the first period and showed right from the opening whistle that they were out to avenge the 12-7 licking they absorbed at the hands of the Blues the last time the teams met in Toronto in late December. The Carabins have now won two out of three games with the Blues and the one remaining game between the two clubs will be played next month in Toronto. Cec Turcott and Wilf Digby were the Toronto lamplighters.

HOCKEY

Physio stepped out on the ice Friday noon to win and they did just that, blanking O.T. 12-0. Obviously the game was very one-sided although O.T. showed some improvement as the game progressed.

High-scorer and star of the game was Lil Betanoff who stacked up six of her team's total points. Shirley Norwich and Elizabeth Little with two apiece, and Mary O'Reilly and Betty Coo with one each completed the scoring for the day.

Glenna Wylie, O.T., played a good defensive game for the losing squad.

Defeat McGill 4-0 In Hard, Fast Tilt; Goalie Orr Shines

Montreal, Jan. 27—(Special)—Doug Orr marked up his second shut-out in a row Friday night at Montreal, when the Blues trounced the McGill Redmen 4-0. The game was very tight until the end of the second period, when two goals a minute and half apart by Wes Moore and Wilf Digby gave Varsity a safe three goal lead.

Rich Howson popped the first one in at 13:14 of the same period. Bucky Walters got the last one, a goal he has been looking for ever since the last visit to McGill.

The win put the Blues in a short-lived first place tie with University of Montreal, only to have it broken the following night. The game featured close hard checking, keeping the score the lowest in any game this season. No game had previously been played in which less than seven goals had been scored.

An estimated 3,000 spectators supported the Redmen, barely filling the bottom part of the Forum.

Line-ups:

Toronto: Goal, Orr; defence, Hayes, McDougall; centre, Howson; wings, Vernon, Digby. Alternates: Turcott, Fox, Moore, Bell, Walters, Bazos, Kane, Addison.

McGill: Goal, Dobell; defence, Zeel, Reynolds; centre, R. Robillard; wings, Tilly, Irvine. Alternates: Murphey, G. Robillard. Kent, Sanderson, O'Neil, Blauer, Andrew, Taylor.

First Period

Penalties—Reynolds, Digby.

Second Period

2—Varsity, Moore (Addison) ..17:15
3—Varsity, Digby (Howson, Vernon) 18:44

Third Period

Foiled Again!

Although Mark Kellow, one of Varsity's top fencers won first place in the Foil and Sabre classes at the fencing exhibition with University of Buffalo at Athletic Night, the Buffalo swordsmen took first in the epee division and gained enough runner-up positions to edge the Toronto steel wielders 14-13.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

A BIBLE STORY

The midwife placed her hand on its bald skull,
Pronouncing, "Skuleman, be thou dull;
Drink, swear, forbear no lewd delight,
But never do what's decent or right."
J. Dryden, stolen from B. Dnieper

There lived in the Province of Ignorance, a barren corner of the Land of the Varsityites (a tribe most wise) a certain Enoch, the Surveyor. He labored all his life for his lord and master, and all his life Enoch cheated his lord, stealing his goods, drinking the produce of his hop-yards, under the cloak of his position—chief sanitary engineer. But his lord, Artmaneth the Wise, forgave him all things.

Now Enoch was war-like, worshipping heathen gods, and above all one certain great idol in the shape of a cannon. He worshipped it in a lewd temple, called by the people the Little Red Skulehouse, which did stand near the Physician's Temple. And Enoch's church was the Engineering Society, and his High Priests were the Cannoneers.

And it came to pass, that Enoch died; the physicians saying he died from cirrhosis of the liver. And Enoch, when he died, came to the Gates of Hell, and knocked upon them, and they were opened. So he stood before Satan's Board of Admission, asking for entry.

The lords of the court probed him, saying "What certificates of recommendation carryeth thou?" And he answereth, "An engineering degree!" But the lords consulted, and spake thus: "'Tis most times enough, but at the moment, engineers are as multitudinous in here as wheat grains in a granary; we must screen thee closer. What hast thou done, indecent or evil throughout thy miserable life?" Enoch, replying, saith "It was I who took part in the Chariot Race!" And the judges all uttered "Good!"

I fought with the courage of three lions, being with that multitude of engineers who so bravely tried to make another man and his pants part company." And the lords of the court were filled with wonder, saying, "What manner of man is this, that hath such courage, the like of which we have not seen?" Saith Enoch, continuing, "And when my high priests had made a solemn covenant governing that sporting event, I broke the covenant midst the cheers of my fellow engineers."

"But I have only begun, for with four thousand fellows we pushed our champions to the fore, and hindered the other gladiators, almost preventing them from finishing the appointed round. That was a hard task, there being seven of them and only four thousand of us. Then we carried a stink-pot into the physicians' temple, crushing their burly guard, a 5' 3" hundred and thirty pound janitor who was hardly past his sixtieth year." Then did the court laud him: "What school spirit!"

"And then we attacked University College (knowing, through our cunning, that Artsmen have no Friday afternoon lectures) and swept aside their defending force of two co-eds to make shambles of that structure. Of course, we retreated when two policemen came on the scene, but the damage was done!"

Then again did the court applaud Enoch: "The bravest of the brave, the wisest of the wise." And the lords counselled together, and spake, saying, "Through thy dishonesty, indecency, stupidity, cowardice, perverted school spirit, all worthy of an engineer, thou hast shown thy fitness to enter this land of dullness and ignorance. ENTER, CITIZEN!"

Redmen Win Hoop Battle As Blues Routed 36-26

By BRUCE MACDONALD

It was more than 30 minutes after the starting whistle in their game against the McGill Redmen at the Athletic Night last Saturday night before the Blues finally found a way to put the ball in the basket. By then it was too late to be much good, and the visitors walked aday with a 36-26 decision in their favor.

The Blues handled the ball as well as the Redmen and checked just as effectively, but simply could not seem to score. Even foul shots were missed one after another as veteran sharp-shooters like Johnny McManus and Ted Luck seemed completely ineffective. Time after time, the Blues took three or four successive shots at the McGill hoop and still did not succeed in blinking the light for two sorely needed points.

Low Scoring

The McGill squad had no such trouble, and paced by Bud Fraser, tall centre man, they soon pulled into the lead. However, the whole contest was marked by low scoring, with a total only 17-8 at half time. That must be some sort of a record low, even codnting the days when Doc. Naismith was teaching the boys to make baskets in a peach crate.

With only 8 minutes to go, the Blues were behind 32-17 and suddently decided to do something about it. With Bill Huycke and the aggressive Jack Gray leading the way for the Blues, the spectators were treated to at least a few minutes of good basketball. However, the Redmen had enough control of the rebound situation to dull the Varsity attack and retain a 10-point lead until the final whistle.

Stars Out

The Redmen, minus Harry Irving and Bill Mitchener who were playing hockey in Montreal, lost their tilt to the Western Mustangs last Friday by 27 points and were expected to lose to the Blues who were defeated by only 9 points to the Mustangs. The Redmen had apparently not read the predictions.

Lineups

McGill—Caldwell (8), Endman (3), Fraser (13), Skinner (4), Finlayson (4), Merling, Garbus (2), Cunningham (2), Bloom.

Varsity—Wigle (4), Carruthers, Gray (5), McManus (5), Bell, Braithwaite (2), Huycke (4), Henderson (4), Luck, Gibbs (2).

Jr. Blues Tie Blue 'Mediates

The Junior Basketball Blues have been claiming all winter that they were a better ball club than their big brothers the Intermediates, and Saturday night they came close to proving their point.

Their game, the second feature of the A-Nite loop entertainment, ended in a 31-31 tie, but it was up to Al Stevenson to save the Intermediates from defeat with a basket in the last four seconds of play. The Intermediates had led through most of the game, but a drive by the Juniors put them in the lead in the last few minutes of the fame and had the crowd more enthused than it was at any time during the senior game that followed.

Barry Bowes had been doing a good job of basketball coaching at Varsity for a couple of years now, and both these teams are his business. He certainly had a successful night last Saturday when neither of his teams lost.

Lloyd Elmer, freshman player with the Juniors was top scorer in the game with 8 points, and has shown to good advantage in all games this winter. Bill Wilson also hooped 6 for the Juniors. Few of the Intermediate squad were playing the game they are capable of, and deserve all the ribbing they are in for at the hands of the Juniors. Al Stevenson was top scorer for the Intermediates with 7 points.

In reality, the basketball game of the evening was the high school tilt played at 5.45 p.m. between East York and Jarvis Collegiate. East York battled to a 59-56 win over their opponents in a game that displayed a great deal of smart basketball.

Buffalo Take 26-5 Victory At Mat Meet

The University of Toronto lost almost everything last Saturday night in the wrestling department as the University of Buffalo beat them more than decisively. The score ended up at 26-5, and it was Buffalo all the way.

In the 125 class, Bud Upper of Buffalo took a three point decision over Varsity's Harry Lubbock in a fast action bout. Buffalo's Don Adams snagged five points for his team when he beat Walter Pitman by a fall in the 135 division. In the next class (145) Don Bero edged out Varsity's Al Hebert on time advantage for another three points.

Only Victory

Varsity's only victory came when George Wright at 155 decisioned Jim Boyle of Buffalo. Toronto's other two points came off a draw between Al Zwolinski of Buffalo and Kirk Wipper, Toronto's intercollegiate champion. In the 175 class Bob Ursetti of Buffalo managed to decision Gerry Sutherland in a close bout. Martin Doland at 190 added five points to the Buffalo total when he beat Varsity's Ed Fisher of football fame by a fall. The final bout, the heavyweight, saw Don Beitleman of Buffalo take a fall on Pete Samuel after Pete had put up a good fight for almost three rounds.

Health Plans Gain 4-1 Win In Gael Poll

Kingston, Jan. 30 — (CUP) — Queen's students have voted "yes" to the London Life Health Plan. All students will be covered for the school year against sickness bills to the amount of $410. The premium of $10.75 wil be taken from school fees.

Over eighty-one per cent of the Queensmen voted on this issue, which has been in preparation for over three years. During that time seventeen different companies were asked to submit plans for protection of sick students. A committee was formed by the students council of Queen's and eventually two plans were offered to the students.

The Associated Medical Service Plan, which was turned down by a 4 to 1 vote, offered all-year protection at $15.75. This premium would have caused a raise of $5.00 in student fees.

"The gain with the London Life Plan is that the student is usually the victim of minor disease and injury and this is amply covered at a cheaper rate than that offered by the Associated Medical Plan", said the investigating committee.

The eighty-one per cent vote came as a slight surprise to the backers of the health insurance plan. It was felt that a sixty per cent vote was all that could be hoped for. The Medical Faculty voted 98 per cent for the London Plan.

A minor touch of humour entered into an otherwise serious election — the ballots were edged in black. Many students took it as an omen of something or other.

Fees-Free Study At Other Campi Via NFCUS Plan

Undergraduates interested in attending another Canadian university, fees-free, next year may attend the NFCUS Regional Exchange meeting being held tomorrow at 4 p.m. in St. Mike's.

NFCUS arranges student exchanges on campi across the country and supplies scholarships to pay the fees of each student selected.

Under the student exchange plan University of Toronto students are eligible to attend any Canadian university outside Ontario and Quebec. Complete conditions of the plan are outlined in posters on display in various university buildings.

Deadline for application is Feb. 15.

Medical Treatment Of Sports Injuries Now Expense-Free

Cost-free medical care is now available for University of Toronto students injured in almost any university-sponsored athletic activity. Last Thursday the Board of Governors okayed a comprehensive plan to be administered by the University of Toronto Health Service.

Cost-Free Care

It will give Varsity students cost-free medical care for injuries resulting from participation in campus competitive sports or in physical education classes. The plan will also supply the same treatment for injuries suffered in all University-sponsored physical recreational activities except skiing.

When announcing the plan yesterday, University Health Service Director Dr. C. D. Gossage explained that the plan will not protect members of the campus ski club skiing only for recreation, because treatment of the many injuries suffered in that "wild" sport would probably involve too great an expense. However, members of the University and Interfaculty Ski Squads are covered while skiing as members of these squads.

Might Save $1,000

Dr. Gossage pointed out that the plan could theoretically save a student $1,000 in expenses arising out of one accident.

Announcement of the plan came at a time when the SAC is investigating the possibilities of entering a health insurance plan to give Varsity students full medical care. Queen's University students yesterday voted in favor of a London Life Health Plan that will cover each of them for the school year against sickness bills to the amount of $410.

The new "Athletic Injury Service" passed by the Board of Governors last Thursday provides the following benefits:

"The actual cost of confinement to a licensed hospital or a University Infirmary, but not exceeding $7.00 per day in the case of hospital and $5.00 per day in the case of Infirmary; and for a total period not exceeding 90 days in respect of any one accident to any one student.

"The proper fees of legally qualified and certified specialists in any branch of medicine or surgery, but not exceeding the fees provided for such services in the Ontario Medical Association Schedule of Fees; and in no event exceeding $200 if such injured student is hospitalized for 24 or more hours, of $100 for all other cases.

QUEEN'S ATHEISTS ALTER CLUB NAME ASK RECOGNITION

Kingston, Jan. 30 —(CUP)— The highly contentious Atheist Club of Queen's University, which was banned from the campus by Principal Wallace, has emerged from undercover with the name of "Agnostic Club". The newly formed club has applied for official recognition.

Debaters Charge Gifts Act Basis Plain Communist

London, Jan. 30 — (CUP) — The Communist doctrine is behind the Charitable Gifts Act, charged the Liberal Party at the U.W.O. Mock Parliament in a recent debate. In proof of this charge the Liberals claimed the Charitable Gifts Act is the first step towards "eventual abolition of all rights of inheritance," and then quoted a similar plan from the Communist Manifesto.

The Liberal Party was sustained in its stand by a 95 to 41 vote.

Back-Stabbing

"The Bill," stated Liberal Speaker Stanbury, "is nothing more than a stab in the back of a paper which is the arch-rival of the Tory party." Conservative Leader Stevens pointed out that the present law prevents rich men from avoiding succession duties and perpetuating their estates.

Another speaker for the Liberals condemned the act as non-ethical since it allows the courts to change a man's will after his death. "It's like hitting a man after he's down."

Dr. W. R. Franks

Hero In A Lab Coat

——By RICHARD VAN PRAAGH——

"Could you give a minute or five to a struggling reporter?" I said in my best insurance-salesman style.

The handsome doctor looked up sharply from consultation with several members of his staff.

"A minute, yes."

"You're Dr. Franks, inventor of the G-suit which prevents blacking out in jets?" I opened eagerly.

"Right," came the quiet, clipped reply.

As he ushered me suavely into his office, I acquainted him with my purpose in life, which seemed to make him shrivel visibly.

"Publicity runs against our nature," he said.

"Now about your G-suit," I pussyfooted.

"Don't write about that now; it's all been written before."

Picking up his subtle suggestion, I changed track. "Being in charge of cancer research at the Banting Institute, you are in an excellent position to tell me whether any real progress has been made. People are desperately interested in your field, sir."

Research Progress

Without a moment's hesitation, the handsome specialist with the steel-grey hair responded, "Yes, great strides have been made in the past ten years." His voice was quick and vocal. "Much genuine progress has been achieved," he assured me.

Being naturally suspicious, I dropped a skeptical, "Such as?"

Tumor Immunities

"We can now create an immunity to some tumors by various means. We can cause some kinds of cancer by radiation, chemicals, and other technical procedures. Hence we now know some of the factors which are part of the cause of several cancers."

"Oh," said I profoundly.

"But what causes your cancer may not cause mine," he explained vividly. "Circumstances differ. It's like dropping a seed on the ground. If the seed falls on thorny ground, it will be choked by the weeds. But if it falls on good ground, it thrives."

"Do you suspect one fundamental cause for cancer, or several?" I asked. He looked at the table top in silent cogitation. In effect, I had asked him to shine his crystal ball, and do a little professional predicting. "I don't want to put you on the spot, sir," I added rather lamely.

Co-operative Progress

"Time may tell," he pronounced elusively, "but if a fundamental factor ever is determined, it will be a co-operative thing, not the product of one man's brain. The exchange of information in cancer research, for example, is a model for society. If politicians did the same, we'd be living in a different world. When we find something we publish it. We don't patent it, and then sit on it."

"Has ACTH been effective in the treatment of leukemia?" I queried.

"We have had an astounding response in certain cases. It appears doubtful whether ACTH is a cure. Moreover, it has potentially dangerous side-effects."

"I suppose money is your greatest need at the present moment, sir."

Money, Personnel Needed

"Money is needed definitely; the more money at our disposal, the faster our progress. But we also have a great need for trained personnel with imagination."

"What would you advise students interested in research to do?" I inquired.

"The best thing a student can do about cancer is to be a good student. He's got to know the fundamentals first. Before becoming a good psychologist, he must know the fundamental physics, the fundamental chemistry. He should go back, and take John Satterley's course, so he can bring to the problem a rich background of fundamental training."

He then told me an astounding fact. "The G-suit was only an application of Pascal's Principle." He grabbed me with his eyes as he fired bluntly, "What's Pascal's Principle?"

I stuttered something about a tank of water, and equal pressure, whereupon he smiled sardonically. "Go on back and take John Satterly's course."

Duly cowed, I attempted, "Do you really enjoy your work, sir?"

Enthusiasm Unlimited

"I wouldn't trade my job for anybody's in the world." Investigating this ecstacy, I heard, "You have an interesting job, and a chance to apply your ideas, pleasant surround-

"Restricted Clientele" Becomes "No Clientele" For Montreal College

Montreal, Jan. 27—(CUP)—"Restricted clientele" appearing on a hotel's advertisements has resulted in there being "no clientele" from the Sir George Williams College. The college which had arranged to hold its annual winter carnival at a Quebec winter resort has cancelled all plans due to the student body's objection to restrictive clauses.

It was pointed out that there would not be any students who would come specifically under the restrictions but the students who had intended to take part in the festivities felt their moral obligations would not permit them to encourage any hotel that normally operates on a restricted clientele basis.

Co-Sexual: A New Word

(From "The Sheaf", University of Saskatchewan)

A new word has been coined to replace the euphemistic term "co-educational." Dr. H. Wasteneys, a bio-chemistry professor, introduced the word "co-sexual" at a recent conference of university student union executives at the University of Toronto. And what is more, the advent of "co-sexual" activities was blamed for the turning of student interest towards frivolous activities such as dancing, drinking and wasting time—and away from "serious" pastimes such as concerts, debates, and discussion groups.

The general theme of the conference seems to have been that the college student of 1936-1937 was considerably more mature than the freshman of 1950. This may be so, but we have always been suspicious of vague and sweeping generalisations. The "maturity" of such a large and widespread group as the Canadian university student body is a difficult thing to gauge. It is almost as hard to assess as student "apathy" and college "spirit"—two more favorite topics for nostalgic speculation.

It is significant to note that the conclusions of the conference delegates are based on nothing more solid than subjective impressions. No concrete evidence seems to have been brought forth to support their allegations.

It seems to us that even students have been "co-sexual" for quite a long time—and that dancing and drinking are not exactly modern innovations—and that even in these decadent days there are still a few stragglers willing to attend a concert or a debate. Have things changed so much since '36-'37?——(CUP.)

Queen's Engineers On The Ball

(Reprinted from The Queen's Journal)

The Engineering Society has come through with an excellent suggestion, one which if carried out with the same degree of enthusiasm as we have come to expect from the Engineering Society, should make a very worth-while contribution to Queen's public relations.

The project is one of an open day, when many of the university buildings would be opened to the public. A committee of the AMS Executive, headed by Don Smellie of Science '50, is presently working on plans for the Open House.

We are pleased to note that the project originated from the Engineering Society, whose members are usually too overburdened with work to allow them to participate in such campus activities. Much of the work of organizing the project is also handled by Engineers, and to them must go a large share of the credit if the project is as successful as we think it will be.

We hope that success will greet their efforts, and that this will become an annual event at Queen's.—(CUP.)

The Future For Engineering

Scene 1: In September, 1955, a young lady is packing to leave for college the next day. Her father comes into her room to give parental advice.

Father: Now, Nellie, I want you to enjoy yourself, but be a good girl.

Nellie: Make up your mind, father.

Father: Well, anyway, I hope you will work hard.

Nellie: Oh, I will, Dad, and with the new General Course I will get a well-rounded liberal education, not like your antiquated B.A.

Father: Oh?

Nellie: Yes, I'm going to major in ancient languages in my last two years. My subjects will all be related and I'll receive real intellectual discipline . . . not like what you got with your old fashioned B.A.

Scene 2: Nellie has arrived at the boarding school for bigger boys and girls, and is seeing the registrar about her subjects.

Nellie: I want to major in ancient languages, Mr. Shmoe, so what should I take in first year?

Registrar: Now, with these new regulations, you'll have to take a natural science, a foreign language, a humanity, and a social science.

Nellie: I had thought of taking Chinese, Russian, Czechoslovakian, Spanish (they say it's easiest), and Psychology (everybody takes that).

Registrar: Impossible, young lady; time-table conflicts.

Nellie: Well, then, I'll take . . .

Registrar: You'll take Astronomy, mating habits in the Virgin Islands (that is a social science), Greek, and a course in the religion of the Greeks. Then you can major in Greek in your last two years.

Nellie: But what if I don't like Greek?

Registrar: That's your problem.

Scene 3: Nellie writes to her father that evening:

My subjects are all settled, Dad, by the grace of God and the registrar. They're not quite what I expected, or what I wanted, but the registrar says they are well-integrated and interesting, and I suppose he knows.

At any rate, Dad, I won't graduate with a semi-literate B.A., will I?

Oh, well, I could transfer to Engineering, if nothing else.

Barb Harris.

The terms of the service also provide that students entitled to similar benefits under any outside prepaid plan, like Blue Cross, will only be aided by the University service to the extent that the costs are in excess to the amount paid by the outside plan.

In order to receive the aid of the University plan, a student must receive his treatment under the direction and care of staff selected by the University Health Service.

Schools Lack British Depth —Gael Forum

"Canadian education is as good as any but is lacking in intensity as compared to that in Britain."

These words by Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University summed up the conclusions drawn from the forum on "Canadian Education, Bad or Indifferent?" conducted recently by the debating society of Queen's.

Opening the discussion, Mr. Hutton of Queen's Extension Department commented on improvements in the educational system in recent years, notably the centralization into larger units which permits expanded facilities. As for the contention that this discouraged local initiative, in his experience "there was little local initiative to discourage." He noted an improvement in inspectors who no longer "terrorized students and paralyzed teachers." The latter, however, were still too poorly paid and the turnover of them too high.

He urged the responsibility of high schools and universities to interest their students in a teaching career. The failure of our schools to engender a legitimate nationalism was deplorable. They were turning out "geographical morons and historical illiterates."

As a dynamic internationalism, "the vision of a united world is the veriest pipe dream to the person with no vision of a united country." Concluding with a reference to the Porter Plan for education, he hoped that it would not become a religious issue.

New Attack on Glaucoma By University Scientists Aided By Federal Grant

A new attack on glaucoma, commonest form of blindness in Canada, is being launched by University scientists, President Sidney Smith announced this week. Dr. Smith said an initial grant of $8,200 had been made for this purpose from federal funds by the Ontario Department of Health. This grant will finance only the first stage of a research project which may extend from three to five years.

Research will be carried on in the Banting Institute, the Toronto General, and possibly other university - connected hospitals, the president said.

One of the men tentatively suggested for the research group has arranged to go to Britain's Institute of Opthalmology where he will do preliminary work under the direction of Sir Stewart Duke-Elder, Surgeon - Oculist to the King. A second member of the team will do preliminary work at Johns Hopkins University.

Glaucoma causes gradual hardening of the eyeball, and sufferers from this disease are said to make up ten per cent of those receiving pensions for the blind in Canada.

Aussies, Brazil To Accept DP's; ISS Concerned

A new problem has arisen in assisting displaced students to come to Canada, the Toronto ISS Committee announced today. Plans to bring a limited number of students to Canada on scholarship and programs have been complicated by the plan of the International refugee organization to send the displaced people to Australia or Brazil in a mass immigration.

It is hoped that students who can help will co-operate with the ISS in aiding superior students to come to Canada. The problem has been caused by the supposed intention of IRO to finish its work this year. They will pay the way of any displaced person who has a contract to come to Canada. Many students of high promise want to come here but will have to go to Australia or Brazil instead unless some contracts can be found for them. Recent developments have made work in basic industries almost impossible. There may be openings in domestic service, laboratories, and other more specialized work. Many of these students are trained.

Those who know of any available or potential contracts are asked to get in touch with Bill McDougal, HY 5548. Proper selection methods are available to be sure that Canada would get future outstanding citizens as well as participate in a work of mercy for those uprooted by war.

Sisters' Bequests Give $9,000 Sum For Polio Work

The University of Toronto has received two bequests from sisters Jessie and Christina Niven, totalling about $9,000, President Smith announced this week. The bequests are for poliomyelitis research.

The two spinster sisters both taught at Jessie Ketchum School and lived together. They died a year apart.

The two bequests were among many other gifts to the University announced by Dr. Smith.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chudleigh has given $300 for research in heart disease. $1,700 has been received from H. S. Robertson to set up an annual scholarship of $50 for the third year Maths and Physics student who attains the highest mark in astronomy.

Other gifts were: $500 from Mrs. G. Roy Sprout and Katherine Sprout nursery fund in the Faculty of Medicine; $500 from Prof. E. G. R. Ardagh to increase the fund for the Ardagh Prize in chemical engineering.

TABLE TENNIS CLUB

The Hart House basement lunchroom has at least one little-known function — every Monday and Wednesday night it serves as the game room for the Hart House Table Tennis Club.

The club now has about sixty-five members. Since the play-offs last term, the top two dozen members have the exclusive use of the room each Wednesday night, while the less accomplished members play Monday evenings.

The club secretary, Russ Waines (IV Geol.), hopes to be able to arrange matches with other universities in the near future.

University Of Toronto Receives Law Library From Legal Authority

A 1500-volume Law library has been added to the University of Toronto School of Law. A. R. Clute, K.C., who lectured at Osgoode Hall from 1923 to 1945, has donated his extensive law library to the University of Toronto School of Law.

"This donation will be of great value to Dean Cecil Wright and his school," said Dr. Smith. A large part of the library was assembled by Mr. Clute's father, the late Hon. Justice Roger Conger Clute.

Now retired from active practice, Mr. Clute is regarded as a leading authority on constitutional law. He has been president of the Royal Canadian Institute and has played an active part in the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

Elect SCMer In UNICEF Funds Drive

University of Toronto student George MacDonell, a member of the campus Student Christian Movement, is leading Toronto youth organizations in support of a drive for funds for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, (UNICEF.)

MacDonell has been president of a committee representing all kinds of Toronto Youth groups. The committee is setting in motion a campaign among Toronto Young people to raise their share of a $500,000 fund to be raised in Toronto for UNICEF.

The youth committee will be one group among various labor, business and other organizations that hope to raise the $500,000 by their combined efforts.

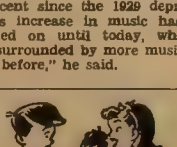
The $500,000 quota for Toronto is the city's share of the $3,000,000 the whole of Canada is expected to raise for UNICEF.

The youth committee, called the United Nations Youth Committee, was formed last week at a meeting at Central YMCA attended by 34 representatives of Toronto youth groups representing some 20,000 young people. The meeting was initiated by the Varsity Student Christian Movement.

The committee decided to divide Toronto into four sections, North, East, West and Central, for the purpose of canvassing.

Dr. Sidney Smith is on the executive of the Toronto committee which integrates the efforts of the various groups in the campaign, including the youth committee led by MacDonell.

Saskatchewan Farmers Finance Memorial Union



Saskatoon, Jan. 30—(CUP)—The U. of Saskatchewan Memorial Union will be built with the aid of 120,000 Saskatchewan farmers! The plan is to ask all farmers to give to the building fund the product of one acre of wheat in 1950. And, according to the "Sheaf," the farmers will give.

The 700 Saskatchewan farmers and their wives who last week attended the annual University Farm Week, indicated the keen interest of farmers in the university and their appreciation of the outstanding work it has done in promoting agriculture. They also ate in the crowded cafeteria and recognized the need for greatly enlarged student facilities.

Current Music Canada's Voice Of The Future

"Music being written by young Canadians now will be the voice of Canada during the next fifty years," said Dr. Ettore Mazzoleni, principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, yesterday to the Medical Arts and Letters Club monthly meeting. "It is a lamentable fact that there is no place in the curriculum of our Canadian schools today which will allow a student to study music as he would any other subject."

Dr. Mazzoleni traced the development of music in the first half of the century in his address. He pointed out that the number of symphony orchestras increased 80 per cent since the 1929 depression. "This increase in music has been carried on until today, when we are surrounded by more music than ever before," he said.

Russian Music

Folk Songs To Tschaikowsky

By OLGA BRUCHOVSKY

"My talk tonight is not going to be on Russian modern music as previously announced," began Boris Berlin at the Russian Circle on Wednesday. "I am going to approach Russian music from a different viewpoint and try to relate Russian folk music with Russian composers. The beginning of any music is folk music. The Russian slavs are no different in this respect."

As Mr. Berlin talked, he showed slides depicting the advance of Russian music from the village bard who sang folk tales, to the later national composers.

"Because of the Tartar invasion of Russia in the 14th century, one hears in Russian music the influence of the Orient."

In early Russia, the merchants stimulated the advance of folk music by staging 'spectacles' which were about their travels and the news they picked up along the way. They were full of folk songs and dancing. The main characteristic of these folk songs is their tempo which, though very slow at first, increases until it is very, very fast.

"Russian folk songs are divided into three classes," Mr. Berlin went on, "Songs of ceremony (for births, weddings, funerals, etc.), songs for dances and songs for singing."

By the 16th century Russian music had become more elaborate because of the Counterpoint. "That the Russians would always harmonize, is most remarkable, even today."

In Russian vocal music, there is no accompaniment. Jaroff's, world famous Don Cossack choir shows the beautiful effects that may be achieved solely with the human voice."

Mr. Berlin stressed the fact that Russian composers were not separate from Russian folk-music. "The first composers collected folk-songs and their music was an arrangement of these. Contemporary with Beethoven was the first great composer, Bortyansky, best known for his Church music today. Verlamev and his contemporaries wrote songs which became so popular in Russia that, like Stephen Foster, they were taken for folk songs. The 'Father' of Russian music was Glinka, the first composer to bring musical recognition to Russia. He was a first class genius, and influenced all future composers. His two famous operas, 'Life of the Czar' and 'Russian and Ludmilla,' were both strongly influenced by Russian folk music."

"Tschaikowsky's music is a combination of melancholy with folk gaiety; so much of his music is sad, sentimental and expressive, the typical result of Russian folk music. Of the living Russian composers today, Prokowieff is very versatile, and writes a tune that is not a folk song, but reminds you of one. Shoshtakovich, in Berlin's opinion, has written some very beautiful modern music. He is remarkably gifted, but not a genius. Khatchachurian, an Armenian, has also distinguished himself."

Mr. Berlin played records typifying the different folk music and the works of the composers. At the end, Russian tea, from a samovar and with a slice of lemon in a glass, was served.

Hart House Concert — G. Haddad

Guest artist at the "Two Hundred and Twenty-Second" Hart House Concert last Sunday night was George Haddad, pianist. The quality of the performance was high and sufficiently consistent to make it impossible to single out any particular selection as better presented than the others.

The program began with Bach's Toccata and Fugue, made popular by its inclusion in The Disney film, Fantasia, and best known as a work for the organ. However, little of its wonderfully ocean-like power was lost in being brought to the piano by a skilled artist. The Schubert, Sonata in A major, which followed was no doubt equally well-rendered, but as already observed, preference in a consistent performance must be in terms of composers . . . I prefer Bach.

After a short intermission Mr. Haddad returned to play Debussy's Suite pour le piano and The Maiden and the Nightingale by Granados, both pieces evocative of the same dreamy not-here, not-anywhere-else mood as Claire de Lune . . . both quite successfully done. The final selection on the printed program was Alborada del Gracioso by Ravel, bright, quick music with a difficult and fascinating tempo. For encores Mr. Haddad played two familiar Chopin pieces, Nocturne in C sharp minor and the Revolutionary Etude.

The most attractive portions of the program were, I think, those devoted to works in quicker tempo . . . the Bach, the toccata in the suite pour le piano and the Ravel. What little remains to be desired of Mr. Haddad is a slightly higher degree of precision and somewhat more feeling than "comes through" in slower-paced works. In the pieces mentioned above, the tempo "obviated" both these shortcomings. The program as a whole demonstrated Mr. Haddad's ability as a self-assured artist, eloquent and clear, well deserving the warm reception he received.

Radio: Stage 50

Stage 50 put on a swell show Sunday night, The Trojan War Will Not Take Place. Even though I did not really understand the plays, my friends told me it was significant and therefore I am sure it was very good.

The play tried to prove that war can be averted and this idea is one which should be discussed more in our time. Whether it is true or not we should discuss it and try to reach some decision; thus we reach happiness.

Diane Foster was very deep in Helen of Troy, and gave a very lovely sort-of-mystical performance. Tommy Tweed was wonderful as the drunken Ajax, while Bud Knapp gave a serious and interesting rendition of Hector.

I really think that everybody should turn their radios to Stage 50 on Sunday night because it is such a good way to absorb culture.

Jack Ferguson

Jan Rubes

For one man at least Canada has proved to be all that the immigration advertisements claim. Jan Rubes, besides winning many musical honours in Prague, managing during the war to sing his way out of forced labour in a concentration camp into relative freedom, received the victor's laurels at the International Music Festival in Geneva in 1948. Though invited to join the La Scala Opera Company in Milan in 1948, he rejected this opportunity in favour of coming to Canada. Since his arrival a year ago as an unknown Czechoslovakian, he has since made his name familiar in Toronto and to the general CBC radio audiences. With the release of the Canadian Motion Picture film, Forbidden Journey, in which he stars, his name will be known across Canada.

The Eaton Auditorium concert last night presented Jan Rubes in his debut in North America, and judging from his enthusiastic reception there will be more to come. Certainly he is a brilliant artist, if not quite so polished as he could be. His deep notes are rich and fully developed; the upper register is slightly uneven in tone and texture. His dramatic ability was displayed in his dexterous handling of the rather exhaustive aria "Nun sceint in collem glanze" from The Creation (Haydn), the diabolical "Ah! che voglio trionfare" from The Abduction from the Seraglio (Mozart), and the poignant Water Sprite's aria from Rusalka (Dvorak). In all the arias he proved himself a restrained but sincere and skilful operatic artist. The emotional sensitivity evident in the group of Schubert lieder made this group a highlight of the evening. An die musik and Memnon were particularly beautifully interpreted.

Although an interesting composition, A Farewell, dedicated to Mr. Rubes by his composer, Oscar Morawetz, failed rather uncomfortably as it was not suited to the bass voice. It seemed to require a medium with less resonance and fulness and more concentration of sound.

The Czechoslovakian bass found home ground in the Suite of Czechoslovakian Folk Songs, compiled by George Schick. Here all the rhythm and emotion of the Bohemian spirit had full expression. Besides the obvious artistry of Mr. Rubes, we were particularly struck by his sincerity. We hope that the pride of Prague will eventually become one of Canada's leading singers. He is well on his way now.

ROBERT BURNS, POET, DIVISION

January 25 was Bobbie Burns Day, and we have noted with surprise and horror that in college circles this fact has come and gone unnoticed. We are amazed that women so far have failed to unite around Bobbie's memory. Do they not realize that when his memory is gone, Romance is doomed?

The Society to Encourage and Propagate Romantic Romance is a movement to which every thinking, far-sighted college woman should belong. If you want to know why, just look at the average Joe College. After such a dampening sight, you can see why the Society to Encourage and Propagate Romantic Romance is sponsoring Bobbie Burns as an example to the men of today. Bobbie had a grand and unmistakable way with the lassies. Not only did he have a good line, but he could say it in poetry!

Hollywood Helps

The twentieth century, however, has fallen into evil times. Nowadays the only active supporter of Romantic Romance (apart from the Society) is Hollywood. Granted that they are doing a marvellous job in their propaganda campaign, but now the time has come for an all-out effort!

Joe College, romantically speaking, is a boor. His idea of a good time is having a little "get together" with the boys. We are of the opinion that his only reason for dating girls is habit. This is a Bad Sign.

Fundamentally, Joe is a good guy. Everybody loves him, he is the life of the Party, he can go along with a gag, and he is even faintly good-looking. But when it comes to Romance . . . Joe is a boor — and a bore! There is a moon in the sky, the stars are out, and the night is fraught with Romance. You and Joe are walking hand in hand. Joe sighs. You sigh.

"Gee . . .", says Joe, slowly.

"Yes," you answer breathlessly (he walks as fast as the average horse gallops).

"Gee, would ya lookit that? Isn't it beautiful?"

"Oh, yes . . .", you sigh, gazing at the moon.

"It must be a twelve cylinder! What power. And lookit this . . ."

Coming back down to earth, you realize that Joe has more than feet of clay. He also has a twelve cylinder, mechanical, super de luxe chrome-plated brain!

A Man's A Man

To counteract such crass lack of lunar appreciation, the Society to Encourage and Propagate Romantic Romance has made an appeal to women to lend a helping hand. The S. to E. and P.R.R. is willing to give men a second chance. We believe, with Bobbie Burns, that a man's a man for a' that. After all, maybe it was easier for men in Bobbie's day. The car (twelve cylinder) hadn't been invented then, they say.

When this column was initiated it was hoped that from time to time enough interest would be aroused to inspire contributions from individuals particularly qualified to interpret specific scientific or engineering subjects. This column is the first contribution of this type. Mr. Aaron is particularly qualied to deal with today's topic. He is a McGill graduate in physics and has spent some time at the U of Pennsylvania where he first saw the calculators in use. At present he is doing post-graduate work in astronomy at this university and in his spare time is an active member of the Varsity staff. J.H.

By IVAN AARON

Recently readers of newspapers and magazines have been deluged with a good deal of monumentally uninteresting (to me at least) information about the new developments in calculating and "thinking" machines. It seems to be the custom to write such an article by cutting out and piecing together a few square yards of statistics as to how many mathematicians the device will replace, and some comforting or otherwise, remarks on what the future holds for the human brain. To get away from this I'd like to try an explanation of some interesting points in the working of the machine and the new science of Cybernetics.

Cybernetics

Cybernetics, a name coined by Professor Norbert Weiner, a leading authority in the field, is the study of governing mechanisms . . . literally mechanisms which accept information, digest it, compare it with known facts and act thereon. This definition applies to the M9 Anti-aircraft Fire Director which took the position instant by instant of an aircraft, as fed to it by its radar "eyes", determined its velocity, used its "experience", i.e. built-in mathematical tables, to determine the direction in which a gun should be pointed to intercept the aircraft in just the amount of time needed for the shell to get there. The director acts by feeding a current to the gun motors and pointing the gun in the right directions, and keeps tracking the plane until it is out of range. The definition applies just as well to the human brain which accepts a picture of a watch dial via the eye, compares it with "experience" i.e. time of the next lecture and distance to classroom, and acts by making the legs move at a run.

7 Come III

How does the brain, human or mechanical deal with information? It is a matter of using a code which depends on the Binary number system. The Binary system is based on using 2, just as the decimal system uses 10. The decimal uses the unit cymbals 0, 1, 2, up to 9. The Binary system uses just 0 and 1. We can start out writing numbers. 0 is 0. 1 is 1. Now there is no 2 in the system. We write it by putting 1 in the next column to the left—i.e. 10, three is written 11. We can't go any further without going to another column—four is thus 100, five 101, 6 is 110, 7 is 111, 3 is 1000. Get it? To see if you do try writing down 18. The right answer is 10010.

Just where does this get us? I don't blame you for asking, but it is really a useful system. Because we can now represent a number by using a row of electric switches. Say we represent 0 by a switch which is "off", and 1 by a switch which is "on". All we need is a row of switches to set down a number by, turning some on and others off. In a mechanical brain the switches are usually relays or radio tubes. In an animal brain the little brain cells carry small electric currents and any cell may be on or off. Anything you know, from the contents of your toughest course to the words of the latest popular tune are recorded in your brain in the form of long chains of neuronic cells, some on, some off, in the intricate patterns the brain has devised for quoting facts. In case you wonder how you stack up against a machine, the best mechanical brains today run at around 10,000 vacuum tubes. Your brain has about 10,000,000,000 cells, each doing the work of a vacuum tube. The development of the RCA selectron makes it possible to have one large tube handle 4096 digits. When the cost of this device is brought down to a reasonable level we may expect to see machines which do something more than the present low grade thinking.

Calculators are "brains" in another sense. In a later article, I'll tell you how to drive a mechanical brain stark, raving mad—and what the theories developed in the study of machine madness can mean to human psychology.

For the first time since the season's opening, the teams in the Intercollegiate Hockey League are on equal terms in games played. University of Montreal has come out of the scuffle with a clear lead of one game, after leading or being tied for the lead all season. Raymond Flynn pushed his individual scoring lead to 17 points, while Andre Claret moved up to second place with 15 points in a four-assist spree in Carabins' 5-3 win over McGill a week ago Friday, passing the Varsity scoring leader Cece Turcott, who has one goal to his credit in the last three games.

Varsity sharpshooters didn't fare so well over the weekend; only six goals in two games is the lowest they've sunk since the first of the season.

Whatever happened to Joe Kane over the weekend we'll never know. He didn't get a penalty in either game. His league lead in this department went to Reynolds of McGill.

VIC'S CORNER

"Vic's Corner" has become an institution over the years, so it seems. Now more than two years old, it has set the pace for the other "college columns". What we want to know is this: do you think the "Corner" is doing its job of helping keep Vic students informed? Drop a note to VCU if you have the time.

The stimulus for this informal survey comes from a "letter to The Varsity" of Wed., Jan. 25. The letter criticizes the advertising policy of The Varsity in general and then takes a big dig at such "publicity blurbs . . . as 'UC It's This Way'", 'Skulespots', etc."

Whether the writer meant to include the "Corner" under the "etc." is immaterial. His claim is that the little "bit of news" contained in the columns should be in the "news columns" and the "tripe pandering to the journalistic urges of college and faculty publicity agents" should be cut.

The writer has a very good point to make. The Varsity is overloaded with advertising. The fees should be raised to cut the amount of advertising needed to run the paper.

The second excellent point he makes is this: that news in these columns should be in the "news columns". By cutting advertising there would be more space for news from colleges. But he overlooks one significant fact. The editors of the paper say what is to go in the columns, and they often have a great bias due to their own college affiliation.

The remedy? At present the outlook is grim. The colleges apparently feel the need of a "Corner" to keep students up on their college's functions.

If these are to be cut out entirely it would save the colleges a great deal of money, but The Varsity would then have to make a definite effort to fulfill the functions of these "advertisements" which, incidentally is what it should be doing.

What do you say, Mr. Fillmore and Mr. Macdonald? How about giving each college a column a week for its news instead of making us pay for it twice! And if they need editing to eliminate the "tripe" to please such people as the author of the letter, then let's edit them! What we want is good news coverage, from front to back.

The Vic At-Home was undoubtedly a success. The VCU Ex had not been too optimistic since the Informal had sold but 675, and the At-Home in the past years has been usually about 200 lower. A conservative budget was drawn up for 400.

But to the delight of everyone, the Vic At-Home proved itself the "Dance of Distinction" this year by being host to over 600 couples!

Decorations deserve mention. The gym, debates room and music room were very attractive. Thanks are due to George Slater, assist. soc. dir., and his able artists, Ann Lambert, "Larry" and Law Hammond, Lois Sutherland, Ann Ward, gals of 85 Charles, men of Middle House.

The Vic Charioteers, those gallant, dauntless, do-or-die daddies of recent fame, are still in the running! No team has officially crossed the finish line as yet, but the Vic wagon is expected to complete the journey and be the first in history to really win the JPF Trophy.

Latest word of the wagon draggers comes from north of Temiskaming. It reads as follows: "Seven scarlet and gold bodies passed through here in search of convocation hall stop obviously forced off their route stop now on highway 603".

Welcome mat will be out for Ed File, Bob Rumball, Jack Whitely, Bill McMahon, Doug Mowatt and the "Egg Smasher" Wee Willy Farlinger, when they get to the city's outskirts later in the day.

Muthletics: Believe it or not, Vic is now third in the Reed Trophy Race! The Athletic Director says Vic hasn't been this close to the top, so late in the season, in centuries. We are only a 1100 points behind league leaders, UC. The surprising comeback is due to increased participation generally, and particularly in minor league basketball. If we can keep up the good work in boxing, wrestling and indoor track as well, we might just squeeze into the winning slot!

Sr. Vic Hockey team went out with a 2-1 decision over UC last week while the juniors gave their all in a terrific game to do same score to Jr. Skule.

Our Jr. B-Ball team is in a tight loop this year. It seems every team in the league has lost 2, won 1; it's so tight! We still think you fellows can win it!

Squash, the unknown sport, comes into season around Feb. 14. They even have an allotment from VCAU funds for it, but no one ever heard if it till this year in the assembly! If you're interested call Bob Reid at OX. 3185 and get your name in.

Snoopography: She's 5'5, a happy, good-humored lass who has been working like a beaver this past few weeks. Marg Mills, social directress, is but 20 years of age, in final pass arts and rather in a quandary about the future. At any rate she was born in Chicago and hence is one of those fascinating things known as a "dual citizen". Seems it runs in the faily! If you need advice on class parties give her a call!

Ever since the SAC has provided the Varsity staff with a well-appointed, comfortable Newsman's Lounge, the hard-working journalists take delight in gathering there after the paper has been put to bed. Newsmen, being an imaginative bunch, have whiled away many hours discussing the implications of such ads as the following which have appeared in former Varsitys.

Please allow me to express my extreme disgust and my utmost admiration for the Engineering faculty. My disgust extends to the action of a small minority of Engineering students who behaved so badly at the Chariot Race. My admiration is extended to Warren and Benstein for their attempt to remodel what has become a young U. of T. institution.

There is every good reason for the student to have a chance to officially let off steam at the end of January. A Chariot Race could be a good blow for All-Varsity spirit. It's time some faculty took a lead in fostering All-Varsity spirit. It is fitting that the Engineers should start the chariot rolling.

Socialist Russia Has Sex Equality, Speaker Declares

"There is full equality for women in Russia, both in obtaining jobs and in rates of pay, as compared with men," said Mrs. Dorise Nielson, ex-M.P., speaking on "Women in Socialist Russia" at Wymilwood(Thursday, Jan. 26. Mrs. Nielson has just returned from a council meeting of the Women's Democratic Federation in Moscow.

Freed from Household Duties

Married women are left free of household duties to participate in the labor and professional fields, the speaker claimed. If they live in communal apartments, they can leave their children at the creche for the day, have their laundry done for them, and eat in the cafeteria.

Women can accomplish astounding things, Mrs. Nielson asserted, and achieve their fullest existence, as mother, worker and citizen. An example of this, she said, was a 22-year-old woman, an ex-soldier, who is a member of the Moscow Soviet, which is comparable to our Toronto City Council.

This equality starts with the children. When very young, the children learn to play collectively. There are clubs for them where they can learn skills and sports. Up to the age of 14, the children go to co-educational schools, but after that age, there are separate schools. All education is free, said Mrs. Nielson.

When asked if the family unit has suffered, Mrs. Nielson replied that she thought it is even stronger in Russia than it is in Canada.

Ice Castles And Skiing For McGill Carnival

Four hundred McGill students are already preparing for their annual Winter Carnival.

The carnival, scheduled for Feb. 16, 17 and 18, will include a night of festivities on Mount Royal, a day of skiing events in the Laurentians, a gala ice festival at the Montreal Forum, ski-jumping on the mountain, and a grand Carnival Ball. A mammoth ice castle constructed on the campus will be the feature attraction in the Snow Sculpture contest.

British Council Books In Bookstore Display Carry Lot Of Weight

An exhibition of 515 books covering all fields of learning will open in the University Press Bookstore today. The books, three complete sets of which have been chosen by the British Council in London, England, have been sent to Canada to tour 20 universities and public libraries.

The tour started on Jan. 16, when three simultaneous exhibitions opened at the University of Western Ontario, Laval University and the University of British Columbia.

The 515 volumes in each display range from first-year undergraduate textbooks to postgraduate specialist studies. Most are new, but reprints of works difficult to obtain in Canada during the war years have been included.

A Message from ZELLER'S to the People of Toronto

Our new home at 24 Bloor Street West in the Bloor-Yonge-Bay shopping area will shortly be ready for occupation. Announcement of the opening date will be made soon. In the meantime, we believe that the people of Toronto may be interested in knowing something more than the mere name of a business which is preparing to serve them.

WHO ARE ZELLER'S? Zeller's Limited is an independent Company incorporated in 1931 under a Dominion Charter, and 98% of its capital stock is owned by Canadians from Coast to Coast. This Company with its wholly-owned subsidiaries operates 32 stores in 30 Canadian cities from Halifax to Vancouver. Its slogan, "Retailers to Thrifty Canadians" has become well known in thousands of homes. Canadians last year made over 27 million individual purchases in these stores.

WHO STARTED ZELLER'S? The Founder and President, Walter P. Zeller, is a Canadian, born in 1890 on the same farm in Waterloo County, Ontario, on which his pioneer grandfather settled in 1831. In community affairs he is a member of the Board of the Montreal Y.M.C.A., Shawbridge Boys' Farm and Training School, Julius Richardson Convalescent Hospital for Children, and Dominion-Douglas United Church. He is a Past Governor of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime District of Kiwanis International.

WHAT KIND OF STORE IS ZELLER'S? The kind of Store which the Company operates is distinctive. In addition to some lines carried by variety stores, the assortment includes a "moderately-priced" range of both fashionable and staple lines usually sold only in Departmental and Specialty Stores. This permits the Company to offer a wide assortment of merchandise in constant demand by the general public. Featured are Wearing Apparel and Accessories for Ladies, Junior Girls and Children; Infants' Wear; Toilet Goods and Cosmetics; Men's and Boys' Furnishings; Dry Goods; Piece Goods; Housewares. The assortment and the price-range account for the slogan: "Retailers to Thrifty Canadians."

ZELLER'S POLICIES are based on the firm belief that success depends entirely upon the ability of the Company to become an asset to the community. Briefly, these policies are:—

- Dependable Merchandise priced for the Thrifty
- Efficient Service by Trained Associates
- Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Refunded
- Progressive Management-Employee Relations

Meds' Admission Test Issued From Princeton For All U.S. Colleges

Trenton, N.J., Jan. 22—(Special)—The Medical College Admission Test required by a number of leading schools throughout the U.S. will soon be routinely administered biennally at Princeton University. The Association of American Medical Colleges, through its committee on Student Personnel Practices, recommended that candidates for admission to classes starting in the fall of 1951 be given the test.

The MCAT consists of test of general scholastic ability, a test on the understanding of modern society, and an achievement test in science. According to the Educational Testing Service of the United States, no special preparation other than a review of science subjects is necessary. All questions are of the objective type.

No Canadian university has, as yet, a medical admission test.

Intermediate Teams Win Two In Guelph

Intermeds Beat OAC In B-Ball

Guelph, Jan. 30—(Staff)—Varsity Intermediates put on a scintillating display of basketball here tonight to drub the OAC intermeds 57-26. The first half baskets were fairly scarce with the score reading 18-6 at the end of the second quarter. The two Brown boys, Ken and Al (no relation), paced the rapid Lowes-Men with 9 and 8 respectively.

Hikichi for the farmers was the trickiest man on the floor as he continually faked the Blue boys practically right out of the Bauer and Black's on several occasions. He wound up as top scorer for the OAC with 7.

The intermeds poured on the coal in the third session and led by Al Stevenson and Ken Brown racked up enough points to leave no doubts as to the final outcome of the contest. The boys put on a far better show than at the Athletic Night.

Line-ups

Varsity—K. Brown 9, A. Brown 8, Stevenson 7, Denton 7, Mackenzie 7, Barber 6, Rogers 6, Cole 4, Kettle 3. Total—57.

OAC—Hikichi 7, O'Donnell 7, Switzer 4, Gray 4, Corman 2, Slinger 2, Linblad, Myers. Total—26.

SPORTS NITE

"Any real basketball fan who neglects to take in the Sports Night this Wednesday evening has rocks in his cranium." So stated jolly John MacCutcheon schedule drawer upper and general organization man de luxe, of the Athletic Office. The Athletic Association has gone to great lengths to put on a really top notch b-ball show every Wednesday night and to-morrow will be no exception. A triple header will be presented the first game starting at 6 p.m. when the Varsity Juniors will take on the YMHA entry in one of their scheduled league games. The game is rather crucial as both teams have been running neck and neck all season.

The second game at around 7:30 will feature the senior SPS team, current group one loop leaders and the Varsity intermediates. But the feature game of the evening is saved till the last. Buffalo State teachers will be here to display their expert cage tactics to the Masterson men. Win lose or draw that game is bound to be interesting. All for the price of 50c, tickets at the door. Come early and get a seat.

Speaking Of Sport

Ed. Note: This is the first in a series of three columns written by Mr. Dnieper on the subject of athletic scholarships and their relation to, and advisability for, the University of Toronto. The second will follow on Thursday.

By BOB DNIEPER

Note to Engineers: In yesterday's column, the engineers were placed in a somewhat unfavourable light because of their antics during and after the chariot race. May we make one point clear: we were not referring to engineers as a whole, but only to that small wildcat faction who do not allow reason to govern impluse. Most Skulemen disported themselves decently, and it is unfortunate that a small fraction can cast a bad reputation on the whole.

CHICAGO: A TRAGEDY . . . VARSITY: ?

The University of Chicago, one of the leading American universities, dropped intercollegiate football in 1939, culminating a series of events that we here at Varsity might do well to study. President Hutchins was put in the role of a cruel, hypocritical, totalitarian despot who subjugated the will of the student body and alumni to his own perverted desires. Chicago was written about in phrases like these: "We consider the (Chicago's) withdrawal as a violation of the code of sportsmanship." Some people were ashamed, some were angered, some were gratified, but everyone was astounded at this decision. Chicago was one of the Big Ten, top football league in the States, with a gigantic college stadium, and a marvelous athletic program. The cutting of football was attributed to scape-goat Hutchins; but what was behind it?

Starting around 1930, the University of Chicago football team lost games with increasing regularity and by increasingly humiliating scores. This culminated in 1939 in a season where Chicago scored exactly no points in four league games, while their opposition (Harvard, Michigan, Virginia, Ohio State) racked up 254 points. Michigan led the parade with an 85-0 shellacking. And what did all these nice scores do? We have a picture in front of us of a bit of football action from the Harvard-Chicago game in which Lee of Harvard is making a touchdown run. In the background we see a big stadium with 57,000 seats in it——all empty! A cluster of twenty or so students huddling on the fifty-yard line is all that breaks the monotony of bare tiers.

And why did the Chicago team have such a poor team? They are a big college with a great academic reputation, surely they could have found good material in their student body. The catch is that they did have a good amateur team, but their opposition had good professional teams! These schools outrightly paid their boys in tuition, board, cold cash and even in unearned degrees. They lowered standards of admission and created courses like Honour Egg Judging and Applied Tire-Vulcanizing so as not to stretch the mental powers of their athletes. They allowed these men to carry their honour into the field of battle.

Chicago would have none of this; their players were bona fide students in bona fide courses with no inducements to attend Chicago. Their professors marked strictly on a basis of academic rather than athletic ability, and each player had to keep up his course.

The net result of this was that Chicago neither drew supporters, nor gate-receipts; and we would sure hate to be in the position of having to pay off a heavy stadium mortgage on gate receipts of five hundred bucks a season. So Chicago dropped football and concentrated on intramural rugby and intercollegiate competition in the minor sports like wrestling and fencing.

Hockey

PHE I took a hard-fought game from Vic yesterday by one goal, the final score being 3-2.

Alison Jefferies started off the count with a spectacular goal in the first period. Taking the puck at the red line, she stickhandled around the defence, and drove a hard shot past goalie Mary Macpherson.

Irma Bullock tied it up a few seconds later, and PHE took the lead in the second period when Jane Thompson scored. In the third period Irma Bullock got her second tally making the score 3-1 for PHE. Vic's strongest line, Jeffries, Rogers and Weatherhead went on the ice in an attempt to even it up, but after one goal by Di Rogers, the bell rang to end the game.

Interfaculty Sports

Jr. SPS edged Pre Meds 3-2 in a loosely played hockey tilt yesterday. The win clinched the last play-off in group 2 for the blue and gold boys. Sellars, Stepkowski and Prendergast scored for the winners while MacDougall and Ehrlick dinted the twine for the Meds. To clear up the hockey playoff picture the following info was obtained from the intramural office. Three teams from groups 1 and 2, 2 from three and 1 from the remaining five groups, will enter the playoffs.

Intermeds Defeat Guelph By 7-3 On Aggie Home Ice

Guelph, Jan. 30—(Staff)—Varsity intermediate hockey team made it three straight league games here to-night when they licked the pants off the OAC entry by a 7-3 count. Varsity scored in every period but concentrated on the middle frame where they racked up five.

Lickley Tops

Flashy John Lickley, clever scorer with two goals and an assist. Paterson, Pete Gawinski and McLoughlin all picked up two points with a goal and an assist to their credit. Raftis and Fingland were the other Toronto scorers. For the OAC'ers Hamill, Starak and Sherven turned lamplighters.

The game was the best of the season as far as the playing ability of the Blues went as they played like the champions they are and indeed have been for the last four years. The play-making ability of such stars as Al Conboy, Bill Paterson and Pat McLoughlin was really something to see.

As is their custom, the intermeds opened slowly in the first period and were tied 1-1 going into the second. We don't know what their coach tells them in between the periods but all we know is that in the second they usually come out like tigers. Last night's game was no exception, as they came out and took over a 6-2 lead in the second. Both teams tallied once more in the last frame to complete the scoring.

Blue Clout Kids Clean Up On OAC

Varsity claimed four out of six bouts, in a dual boxing meet, at Guelph, last Friday night, to carry off top honors. Glen Williams, 133-lbs., and Frank Corner, 140-lbs., both of Toronto, won handily over Hutcheson, and Leach, respectively, of OAC. At 147-lbs., Bowers, of OAC., won a close decision from Dick Priestman, of Toronto. Norm Green, Toronto, lost a decision to Roger, OAC., in the 155-lb. class. In the 165-lb. affair, Evans, OAC., failed to see the end of the first round, being ko'd by Don Armstrong. Jim Follinsbee, another of Toronto's solid clouters won a good bout from Beaton, of OAC., at 175-lbs.

Intercollegiate volleyball is on its way. 1950 marks the beginning of intercollegiate competition in this sport, with the first tournament being held on February 11 of McMaster. Besides McMaster and Varsity, Western and Mac Hall are also entering teams, and since it is the first time such a meet has been held, the prevailing spirit will be one of fun rather than competition.

If this year's tournament is a success, 1951 will be a bigger and better year for intercollegiate volleyball, and perhaps Queen's and McGill, who were asked to send a team this year, will be able to do so. Intercollegiate volleyball will soon be on an equal footing with intercollegiate basketball at this rate, and 1950 will go down in history as the first year of annual competition.

Alice Entwhistle, a graduate of PHE, is this year's coach, and she intends to hold four practices so that she can choose the team from those who turn out. The first one is today in the LM gym from 5.30 to 7.00, and the second on Thursday at the same time.

Thus if you want to go down in history, and you long for fun and fame, be sure to turn out to-night for the try-out.

The tournament at McMaster starts at 1.00 p.m. in the form of a round robin, each team playing four games. After that, supper will be served on the campus to all the girls of the teams, giving them a chance a get to know each other and form ideas for next year's meet.

According to all reports, intramural volleyball is gliding along smoothly under the able direction of Thelma Henderson, club president. PHE I took the championship last year, but there are a lot of good teams vieing for the top notch in this year's competition.

Sports fans and others will be happy to hear that Connie Sparrow, Women's Sports Editor, is back on the road of health, and is recovering quickly enough now to start lectures again by next week.

Students Week Hit At Other Colleges But Ignored Here

National Student Week, organized by the National Federation of Canadian University Students for the week of January 23 to 29, passed unnoticed at the University of Toronto, although it was observed at almost every other campus across Canada.

All Yugoslavia Is Rebuilding – SCM Head

Reconstruction in Yugoslavia is proceeding at a rapid pace, David Busby, representative of the Student Christian Movement in Europe last summer, reported in a talk last Friday. Mr. Busby attended the Peace Festival in Budapest and the Conference of the International Union of Students at Sofia.

Busby in his two day visit to Yugoslavia, at the invitation of the Yugoslav government noted that a section of Belgrade which had formerly been a large swamp had been drained and new apartments, factories and government buildings were being built. The students in the city had a daily programme of work for seven hours, lectures for two and homework for two.

He said that an idealistic enthusiasm pervaded the people. They feel that they must and will work for today. The workers, although their meals are slim, were happy and were working hard for the reconstruction of the country. He learned from trips to the countryside that all the land was apportioned into co-op farms which however seemed to be lacking in mechanical equipment.

Busby arrived in Belgrade on the 23rd of September. At the station, he found a man holding up a sign reading "BUSBY" and when he presented himself, he was driven to a first class hotel in a limousine, and provided with an excellent room. Later he was taken to a luncheon with government and youth leaders. During the meal, Marshal Tito entered, shook hands with several people including Busby, chatted with a few officials and left. This was the only meeting, the SCM leader had with the Marshal. "They were making every effort to impress me, of course," Busby explained in reference to his whole visit to the country.

He also found that the country was in a perpetual state of alert. Mock air raids were a customary occurrence in the capital. In addition soldiers were being trained in guerilla tactics and soldiers with machine guns were often to be seen on the streets.

Religious freedom was observed in Belgrade and several churches had

Manitoba

The special week, planned as an annual affair, was featured by a week-long celebration at the University of Manitoba, with large displays, a monster rally, student forums and a week-end dance, all designed to promote student interest in NFCUS and in its activities on all campi of the Dominion. In addition there were displays and booths with pennants, calendars, handbooks and newspapers from all universities concerned.

McMaster followed a similar plan, with the main event being a skit dramatizing the work of NFCUS at all affiliated universities, with the accent on the mutual interests of students. For further publicity a Mock Parliament was held in which the value of the organization was debated.

McGill Are Hosts

McGill put the emphasis on sports, with a special Athletic Night after a day-long conference addressed by President F. Cyril James and several other speakers. The activities were attended by students from Laval and various McGill affiliates.

At Queen's the controversy over the Atheist and Agnostic Club tended to overshadow the Kingston observation of Student Week. However posters and general displays gave the students information on other Canadian universities.

Dalhousie in Nova Scotia, the University of Alberta and the University of British Columbia limited their observances to posters and some displays. Western, however, was limited to articles in "The Gazette" and a few posters.

At Toronto there was no official observance of National Students Week. The Toronto NFCUS Committee felt that such an organized week would not be well received by students here, and did not want to jeopardize their extensive activities on other local and national NFCUS projects to put on a big display here, NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons said last night.

"Our investigation of text book prices, co-operative book schemes, and the enthusiastic response we have been getting to the exchange plans for Canadian regional and Canadian-American exchange are keeping us very busy," he said. The Toronto Committee is also studying the financing, management and facilities offered in Canadian student unions.

United Nations Affiliation Object Of Peace Council

Negotations are proceeding toward prospective affiliation of the Peace Council with the United Nations, it was reported at a meeting of the Peace Council Monday afternoon.

Several members of the executive discussed the prospective amalgamation with the United Nations Association and were referred to a group at the University of British Columbia which is already affiliated with the United Nations. If the University of Toronto Council finds the program of the U.B.C. group in accordance with its policies, affiliation with the U.N. may proceed in conjunction with the U.B.C. group.

The program for the spring term includes a speech and discussion of the uses of atomic energy for peaceful purposes and an address by James Endicott on the Far Eastern situation. Study groups of P.M.S. Blackett's Book will take place weekly.

In addition, it was decided to circulate a petition on the campus to ban the atom bomb through the United Nations.

Syllabus to be Printed

A syllabus stating the platform of the Peace Council will also be printed to make the student body acquainted with its policies. These include: reaffirmation of the United Nations, universal disarmament, banning of the atom and bacteriological bombs, the recognition of China, and the extension of trade with China and the Russian Satellite countries to improve employment and relations with these countries.

It was also roported that emphasis would be put on the positive achievements and problems of the United Nations and Canada's role in the International body.

Bookstore Houses Fortnight Display Of British Books

The first part of a display of British books, chosen and distributed by the British Coouncil, is presently on display in the University of Toronto Press Bookstore. The present section, comprising books on the pure sciences, biology, botany, geography, engineering, agriculture, forestry and veterinary science, will be in the bookstore for the remainder of the week.

Next week the second part of the display, comprising books in the humanities—English history politics, philosophy, economics, religion, theology, modern languages and law, will be put on display.

None of the books displayed are for sale, nor are orders being taken for them. Some are already carried by the bookstore, but the

Central Principle Of Co-operation Is Baha'i Basis

"Cooperation on a global basis is the central principle underlying the Baha'i teaching on economics," Mr. Charles Cleather told a student group at an open meeting of the Baha'i World Faith yesterday in University College. "The body politic can be compared to a single living organism; a sickness in one part of it affects all the parts."

In rural areas there will be in each town or village a central reserve or innd which will be financed by a tax on land, on cattle, on mineral resources and income. If a farmer's income from his annual harvest is over a stipulated amount, he will pay a graduated tax to this fund. If, on the other hand, his income falls below a stipulated sum he will be assisted by this central reserve.

"In industrial areas the owners of corporations will share the profits of their company with their employees on the basis of a profit-sharing scheme in which the workers will actually own shares in the company," he pointed out.

"Any surplus from a local reserve," the speaker continued, "will be forwarded to the national reserve. Surpluses from the national reserve will, in turn, be sent to the international reserve.

"The exchange of goods and resources among the different countries of the world will be worked out on the basis of international agreements," he stated.

Medical Care Plan Starts Next Year

A report in The Varsity yesterday said the new athletic injuries medical care plan is new in effect. Actually, the plan will not start operation until the 1950-'51 school year. The plan will be paid for out of the Health Service fee included in the general university fee. Like general health insuranc plans, it does not give limitless financial aid.

Makeup Lecture

First in a series of informal and intensive lectures on Copy-reading and Newswriting will be held by the Makeup Editor Thursday, Feb. 2, in Room 66, University College basement, at 1 p.m. All night editors and makeup staffers should attend. Any masthead member wishing to attend will be welcomed. All others sincerely interested in studying news style and makeup technique are invited.

The following personnel are asked to attend:

Barbara Browne, Olga Bruchovsky, Dave Butters, Ron Bonar, Eileen Fine, Rich Clee, Ian Montagnes, Ralph Wintrob, Jane Cameron, Don Wilson, Bob Rooks, Audrey Parrett, Robert Rae.

The SAC Story

Should The Tympani Have Wheels?

This is the second of a series dealing with the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.

By JOAN EDDIS

Now that we have seen how the Students' Administrative Council came into being, the obvious question is who sits on the council.

The voting members of the council are either the presidents or elected representatives of the various student governments of the faculties, colleges or departments. Because of their larger enrolment, Engineering, Meds, St. Mike's, Trinity, UC and Vic have two reps on the council and the other student bodies have only one rep.

Red-haired Chairman

With this year's addition of a representative from the newly formed School of Law, there are 26 voting members but the council also includes eight others acting in an advisory capacity, who can neither vote nor propose motions. The chairman falls into this category. He (or she) must be a graduate of the University of not more than five years standing. The present chairman is red-haired Carmen Guild, 4T7, who was president of the UC Lit as an undergrad, and hence UC's rep on the SAC. Since then, however, UC, along with Vic, Skule, Trinity and several others, have sent a representative to the council other than their president, who, they feel, already has a big job in his own backyard. Guild has always been a stickler for the correct parliamentary procedure (he rewrote the part of the SAC constitution dealing with the proceedure) and thus makes an efficient and confident chairman.

$50,000 To Safety Pins

Secretary-Treasurer E. A. MacDonald 2T8 and associate Secretary Miss A. E. M. Parkes, 1T6, are the permanent, but non-voting, executive members of the council who supervise the practical administration from their respective offices in Hart House and University College basement. They do everything from handling sums over $50,000 to providing babysitters or safety pins.

Their services include phoning Montreal to see if there is any snow for the SAC sponsored ski trips, selling crests, blazers and tickets, finding jobs or housing for over 15,000 students a year, and locating "lost" students for anxious relatives. We were going to say that they have yet to provide the best man for a wedding but inquiry revealed that "Alex" MacDonald has been best man at more than one student wedding.

Scottish and Russian

This year's faculty members appointed to the council by President Smith are Professors R. S. Knox, English, and B. E. Shore, Slavic Studies, who sit in on all SAC meetings ready to offer advice when asked. In his broad tongue, Prof. Knox, (M.A., Aberdeen) will rise to sustain the skirl of the bagpipes and the swirl of the kilt if need be, and Prof. Shore will go all out to foster such inter-cultural exchanges as the Carabin weekend.

But most of the time these two are forgotten. At the SAC meetings held every other Wednesday night in the Medical Board room, they sit for the most part silently in the corner often while energetic students are threshing out routine matters or discussing inconsequential details such as whether the new tympani for the University orchestra should have wheels.

The non-voting membership is completed by the Editor and Women's Editor of The Varsity, Stan Fillmore and Joan Eddis, and the Editor of Torontonensis, Bill Raymond.

In the following articles we will go one to deal with the committees of the SAC and the part the individual representatives play on them.

College Bias

In its many years of publication, The Varsity has, naturally, been subject to various forms of criticism. Hardly ever has it been faced with a criticism that is as wrong as the latest one. We allude to a short comment made by writer "PIK" in his "Vic's Corner" yesterday.

Talking about a letter to The Varsity which harshly assailed paid college and faculty columns of which "Vic's Corner" is an example, "PIK" suggests one reason why college news does not get the space it deserves is because:

"The editors of the paper say what is to go in the columns, and they often have a great bias due to their own college affiliations."

The first part of this statement is correct; the editors do say what is to go in the columns. That is what editors are for. But the charge of bias because of "college affiliations" is an absurd misconception. It seems impossible to find any logical grounds for this assertion, unless an excess of college spirit on the part of the writer leads him to believe that "college affiliations" prejudice the judgment of all students.

The Varsity is an all-Varsity organ. Its staff is drawn from most faculties, schools and colleges. Running down the members of the masthead, (16 in number) University College, Victoria College, St. Michael's, Emmanuel College and the faculties of Engineering and Medicine are represented. When the body of staff writers and workers are taken into account, every faculty or school on the campus except the particularly small groups is represented.

So far as their work on The Varsity is concerned, the editors are University of Toronto men first, college men second. This is not only natural; for a university paper, published for all students, it is essential.

Any college or faculty which has a beef about "biased" treatment will find, if the editors are consulted, that personal "bias" of the editors it not the reason for seemingly preferential treatment. The reasons are more likely to be: a college or faculty publicity department which is not as much alive as it should be; the fact that some news, regardless of college connection or source, is more important than other; or the small (in number) staff of The Varsity.

The Vic columnist, "PIK," goes on to suggest that advertisements in The Varsity, of which his column is a good example, should be cut out to make way for regular columns of college news, subject to editing and revision by the editors. This is an excellent idea.

But, if we are to judge by the items in this same "Vic's Corner" that they are what "PIK" regards as "news," his idea falls flat on its face.

It would be cruel to quote much of the items that "PIK" produces, but in the main they seem to follow the formula of liberal mention of prominent college types in the high school-ish "personals" manner.

The Varsity has a circulation of 13,350. It ranks eighth in size of a total of 35 Ontario dailies. In a paper with a reading audience which forms a large proportion of our better-educated people, should valuable space be expended for the "PIK" type of "news"?

Mid-Century Highlights A La Carte

The most important campus event covered by The Varsity of 1921 was the opening of the Great Hall of Hart House as an undergraduates dining room. This conspicuous occasion was heralded by a two-week-long fast compulsory for all students. Although this abstinance had an unhealthy effect on some of the growing lads, the inconvenience was fully recompensed by the appetizing array of food listed in the first menu. Excerpts from this gourmet's delight appear below.

Alphabet Soup sans Consonants
Braised Hip of Moose
Dreaded Veal Cutlet

DOWN TO EARTH REVIEWS

The Editor, The Varsity:

A propos of your A M & D editor's comment re your familiar down-to-earth reviews. I haven't yet learned that down-to-earth is a synonym for snooty. Such is the only term applicable to J. Ferguson and his Stage 50 review.

It seems there should be an art to reviewing and criticism. Part of that art would consist of striking a happy medium between your usual poesy, arty, flights of self-indulgence and that which appeared in today's The Varsity.

Now please don't get me wrong. I stopped reading your column three months ago. As I am a musician I'm afraid my stomach is a little weak. This latest perpetration was called to my attention by some one who is a good deal stronger.

If you can't review in a rational fashion, please do the arts a favor and give it up.

Second Sports Night Brings Buffalo State

Basketball fans who turn out to the second Sports Nite of the season in Hart House tonight will be treated to 4 hours of hoop doings that should keep them talking for a few days at least.

At 6 o'clock sharp, the Varsity Juniors tee off against the YMHA Juniors in a crucial league game. The two squads have been rivals for top spot ever since the beginning of the T&D schedule. The winner will be one step further towards clinching a playoff berth.

Lloyd Elmer and Dave Bernstein, two standouts for the Juniors in games so far this winter are expected to turn in good efforts for the Juniors tonight. Coach Barry Lowes has his team well primed for the important game.

Fresh from a victory over the OAC Aggies Monday in Guelph, the Intermediate Blues will take on the SPS Seniors of the Intramural major league to show the crowd just how their kind of ball compares with the Intercollegiate standards.

This game is scheduled for 7.45 p.m.

The Featchah

The major attraction for the evening will begin at 8.45 p.m. when the Varsity Senior Blues meet Buffalo State in an exhibition tilt. The Athletic Association has planned a lot of these games with well known American colleges in the hope that stiff competition will raise the Blue's standard of play.

The Buffalo quintet should give spectators an eyeful of good basketball, and if the Blues follow their habit of playing their best when the game is only an exhibition one, it should prove well worth watching.

There are no changes in the Blue lineup for the game, and veterans Johnny McManus and Jack Gray, along with newcomers Bill Wigle, Bill Huycke and Johnny Braithwaite will be out to chalk up a win for the Blues.

Tickets, 600 in all, will go on sale at the door at 6 p.m. Come and enjoy an evening of real basketball.

Senior Vic Take Over First Place

Senior Vic edged St. Mike's "A" 2-1 in a fast skating hockey contest yesterday afternoon in the Arena. The win sewed up first place in group one for the scarlet and gold ice men. Stu Howard scored first for Vic at the four minute mark of the first period from a scramble in front of the St. Mike's net. The Mikemen fought back with McNamara making a spectacular rush through the whole Vic team, only to be robbed of a goal by Prince who made a fine save on the point blank shot. The double blue were finally rewarded at the 17 minute point when Vince Keeley fired the equalizer.

The second period proceeded at a hot pace and after 15 minutes of play had elapsed Bill Farlinger took a short pass from Linton at his own blue line and drove in round the net and slapped in the winning counter. Both goal tenders made many sensational saves but Prince deserves special mention as his team was out-shot 21-10.

Juniors Win Also

Junior Vic also came through with a 2-1 victory as they clipped the winless UC'ers in the only other game skedded. The set-to, which was entirely free of penalties, lifted the winners into second place in group two. Ed. Doner scored early in the first canto and that's the way the score stood until halfway through the second when Barry Thomas made it 2-0 for Vic on a long shot.

Half Mile Record Set By Hryshko

An interfaculty indoor record was set by John Hryshko in the 880 in yesterday's track meet at Hart House. Hryshko ran the distance in 2:01.4. Barely a step behind him was the holder of the previous record, Paul Forestell, SMC, who held the record last year.

The 100 yard dash finished in a tie between Mike Zuberes, Architecture, and Gary Garossino, SMC. Saint Mike's did very well for themselves on the whole, getting a first and a second in one event, and a tie for first in the other.

When the 100 was first run off, the best time was 11:9. After it was all over, someone discovered that the course had been five yards over distance. A re-running got the time down to 11.8. John Hryshko did the first running of the 100 in 12 flat, but after winning the 880, felt in no shape to run the 100 again. Interfaculty record for the 100 was set by Kelly, SMC, two years ago, with a time of 10.7. These indoor marks do not compare with outdoor records, mainly because they are run around a turn.

A TRIBUTE TO THE BAHA'I WORLD FAITH

"The central drive of the Baha'i Movement is for human unity. It would secure this through unprejudiced search for truth, making religion conform to scientific discovery and insisting that fundamentally all religions are alike. Among other things there should be a universal language; so the Baha'i is taking a great interest in Esperanto though they do not insist on it as the ultimate language. No other religious movement has put so much emphasis on the emancipation and education of women. Everyone should work whether rich or poor and poverty should be abolished. . . . What will be the course of the Baha'i Movement no one can prophesy, but I think it is no exaggeration to claim that the program is the finest fruit of the religious contribution of Asia."

Law Needs Change In Social Evolution – Dr. W. Friedman

A greater intelligence to adjust our legal thinking to the rapid social evolution of our present age was urged by Dr. Wolfgang Friedmann, addressing the Faculty of Law yesterday afternoon in the Hart House Theatre on the "Rule of Law in a planned State." Dr Friedmann is Professor of Law at the University of Melbourne, Australia. In spite of the variance of opinion concerning the amount of state interference that is desirable, no government in the world today would entirely disown it, Dr. Friedmann emphasized. The main problem is, just how much state control can we have without nullifying the rule of law and hence endangering democracy?

Welfare State Inevitable

Dr. Friedmann said he particularly deplored the minority who still insisted that the state should not go beyond its traditional sphere of police, taxation, and like fields, into the realms of administration and social service. He said he felt this inevitable owing to the rise of collectivism in business and labour, a direct result of laissez-faire itself.

Much of the legal thinking is based on out-dated precepts, the speaker asserted. The inviolability of contracts has been an important part of our law code under the assumption that a contract is the product of two agreeing parties, he said. Actually, he declared, it is usually presented by one party, leaving the other with no alternative but to take it or leave it. On this basis, the speaker asked, are governments not justified in ruling some contracts invalid?

Prosecution of State

In an even more striking aspect of this new concept of the functions of a government is whether the state can be made liable for prosecution. If the state runs factories, for example, why should it not be subjected to prosecution if it breaks regulations the same as a private factory owner would do? This would seem shocking to some, Dr. Friedmann said, but such would seem to be its obligation under the rule of law.

State interference Professor Friedmann claimed to be only in the interest of fairness and equity to all, without which the rule of law would be meaningless regardless of whatever principles of government the state adhered to. He said it was a misrepresentation to say, as some laissez-faire economists have, that a government must be bound by fixed rules and limits and has no right to expand them.

Political Merger U.C. Parliament Debate Resolution

The U.C. Parliament will convene at four o'clock this afternoon in the Ontario Legislature to debate the resolution, "Resolved: that the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties, being of the same spirit, should combine." Speaker of the House will be Fred Giles, who is serving his first term in this position, while the government will be led by Chuck Cohen III, Elmer Sopha IV, and Crerer (IV Honor). The Opposition will be led by J. Geller (II Pass) and Harold Carter (II Pass). All the government and Opposition leaders have been active in the U.C. Parliament since it was convened this year.

This will be the last debate in the Legislative Chambers this year, since the building was available only three times and has already been used twice.

The above section of the campus is in for a face-lifting if present plans for the Student Memorial Union materialize. The more or less rectangular area in the center foreground is the proposed site for the building, which is visualized by planners as a large wing adjoining the southeast corner of Hart House. It will occupy the plot between Queen's Park and the road along which the cars are parked in the picture.

Last Hour Rush For Exam Forms Gone This Year

With the deadline for application to write exams in the various Arts faculties now past, Simcoe Hall estimated yesterday that at least 98% were probably in on time, if those brought in to deadline yesterday are considered.

St. Michael's College, which used a special "follow-up" system to remind the students of the deadline, reported at three o'clock yesterday that all but ten or a dozen of the forms were in, and that the majority had been filled out more than a week early, with the result that there was no last-minute rush at all.

Trinity Is Two Days Early

Trinity, with a similar method, had nearly all in two days early, and estimated those not in at about five for each year. Here, too, there was no last-minute scramble, and counting, listing and checking were quite orderly.

Vic reported that larger numbers of applications were put in at

Socialism, Democracy Compatible—H. N. Frye Tells Vic CCFers

Liberalism was the topic of yesterday's Victoria College CCF Club meeting in Wymilwood, and the fireworks that were expected were in full display. Speaker was Professor Northrop Frye of the Vic English department and editor of The Canadian Forum. The topic: Liberalism and Laissez-faire.

Not About Party

Introducting the subject, Professor Frye made clear that his talk would not be about the Liberal Party, or their aims, or their policy.

This "address is concerned with 'Liberalism' yes, but only in reference to personal liberty," he said. "Socialism must meet the argument that it is out to destroy personal liberty, and it is this liberty with which we are concerned."

Economic Politics

Democracy has been defined as a political theory in an economic context, and it is this context which has been called, by the Tories, "Laissez-Faire."

"The natural tendency of 'laissez-faire' is towards oligarchy — rule by 'few' — and it is the democratic force which has kept the Western world from becoming subjugated by the 'captains of industry'," said Mr. Frye.

"The only private individual in private enterprise is the leader at the head of the business. And even his position is precarious in light of cartels and monopolies.

Not Free Enterprise

"The small business man has not really free enterprise; he has no real chance to compete against the chain stores," said Mr. Frye.

At this point the discussion was thrown open to the meeting. The first question asked was the result of hiring the heads of nationalized industries to run these industries after the government had taken them over. "Is this not liable to lead to oligarchy faster than any other means?" asked one of the members.

"Yes, if the democratic government is not strong enough to rule the business. This happens when you have strong 'lobbies', who can influence the representatives," said Mr. Frye. "Ultimately the basis of democracy will be socialism."

Apathy vs. Democracy

When asked the basic problem of democracy, Mr. Frye quickly replied "Apathy. People become cynical when they don't know what is happening in the government, when economic policy is kept from them. They assume that because they don't know that no one will tell them."

Paper Gagged By Officials As Offensive

Ottawa—Feb. 2—(CUP)—The last issue of La Rotonde, weekly student newspaper of Ottawa was seized and burned soon after it appeared last week.

The decision to destroy the paper was made by Rector J. C. Laframboise of the University, according to a student official. University officials objected to the announcement in the paper of an invitation extended to Gerard Filion, editor of Le Devoir, Montreal, to address Ottawa students. The invitation was made by the local committee of Canadian Federation of Catholic University Students. La Rotonde had no part in the invitation, except to announce the news of the invitation in the paper. The article which announced the news of the invitation was a routine announcement.

This announcement, a spokesman for the Ottawa students declared, was considered by the university to be "offensive" since Filion had criticized the University of Ottawa editorially for establishing courses which were to be given in English only.

Not Quite Dodo Bird Yet, Release 100 AVR Tickets

There is still a chance to get some of those nearly extinct All-Varsity Revue tickets. One hundred tickets for the Saturday matinee are now on sale.

Originally these 100 ducats were being saved for high school students. Feeling that the great demand for AVR tickets indicated undergraduates should have first chance at the remaining tickets — all other performances are completely sold out — AVR officials have decided to withhold the offer to high school students until next week. At that time any remaining tickets will be offered to secondary schools.

The ticket exchange system used this week was pronounced "success" by AVR Publicity Director Murray Sussman. The way tickets were distributed, the co-operation of the students, and the system of exchange have all contributed to a full coverage of the student demand and have made easier the work of the Hart House box office. "The queues that did form this past week to exchange day tickets for reserved

Baby Elephants And Fireworks

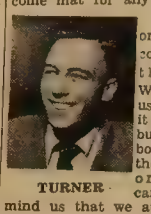
Meet the rah-rah boys, specialists in exhuming Greeks, transporting lions in taxicabs or baby elephants in moving vans, or blowing up the back campus. It's the — rattatta daa ta daaa—Blue and white Society, our local mixmaster for whipping up blue and white creampuffs oozing with froth and spirit.

THOMAS

Pep rallies, promotion gags, and cheering at Varsity football games all fall into its department. This SAC committee whose enthusiastic proponents hails from every corner of the campus, has the job of promoting social functions that embrace more than one faculty. The fall football extravaganzas, complete with cheerleaders, bands, balloons, fireworks, jiving "horses", and half-time skits, are only a part of the Blue and White's job. The Home-Coming weekend inaugurated last session is a Blue and White achievement. To add to its razzle-dazzle, the society sponsored a large float parade complete with flowing beer and flying greenbacks. This year for the first time, it organized a Blue and White show for returning grads with representative skits from the multifarious campus shows.

800 In The Drill Hall



Now hockey games are getting dressed up in blue and white. The band, under Bob Cringan, comes out for most of the games and the first after-game square dance held last week was attended by over 800 enthusiasts.

Last year's brains behind the splurges was the coon-coated, hoarse extrovert known as Joe Potts (now at Cambridge on a scholarship).

This year's mastermind Bill Turner, Eng. Bus., is quite a contrast to Potts but just as efficient—even more so judging by the fact that there have been no blue and white pepped-up mobs doing damage to either the university property or reputation. Bill is an easy going-type—a rather philosophical Skuleman, but he hasn't lost his rational, down-to-earth approach. This can be an asset when you're dealing in terms of $10,000 as he was during the Home-Coming weekend in November.

Big Ideas and Guffaws

However Public Relations Commissioner Doug Thomas, IV Vic, is decidely a "blue and white type". He's got energy, big ideas and plenty of deep guffaws to spare, even 'though, fight boots and all, he barely reaches Bill's shoulder. Besides turning on the blue and white blurbs, Doug handles general SAC publicity and puts out the welcome mat for any SAC guests.

TURNER

Although everyone plays up the colorful side of the Blue and White Society, let us not forget that it is more than a bunch of rah-rah boys. It is one of the few elements on our swollen campus that remind us that we attend the University of Toronto rather than an individual faculty or college. The Society's activities enable us to blow off excess steam in the right direction and the post-rally street dances is one date that doesn't hit us below the belt i.e. in the pocketbook.

The Great Books Idea

Of what does a university education consist? Is it nothing more than the assimilation of data, given by lecturers, to uninterested students, for the purpose of getting a degree? Or must it include intelligent discussion by the student toward the end of a co-ordinated viewpoint?

These questions have troubled educators for many years and undoubtedly figured large in the mind of the committee which studied the revision of the Pass and General courses here at the University of Toronto.

The new general course is an attempt by the University administration to produce a student who will graduate with a specialized field of knowledge correlated with a broad general education. The new course will eliminate the wide choice of electives which characterizes the present Pass course.

According to President Smith, the course will provide "those elements that are most conspicuously lacking in the Pass course: a coherent pattern and a genuine intellectual discipline."

This trend to a "coherent pattern" is evident in the "revolution in education now gathering momentum in US colleges." A recent Life editorial states:

"Even 'English' is no longer a literary record of the parochial experience of the English and American peoples. New English courses cut across language barriers with gay abandon."

The present educational system is being adjusted to allow for such "cutting of barriers" thereby giving the student a more intimate acquaintance with the full sweep of Western culture from its origins to the present.

With the trend evident and the conditions right for change, is it not the proper time for the University of Toronto to set up discussion groups (such as the Great Books Club) for the intelligent discussion of the relation between the ideas of early thinkers and the problems of modern society?

Promoted by Robert Maynard Hutchins, the Great Books Club of the University of Chicago appointed a group to study the '100 Great Books'. After completing the course this original group became the leaders which led and sponsored small separate clubs throughout the country. The idea has spread to Canada and now McGill University has one of the Great Books Clubs.

The course of study consists of the "great books" of the western world including the world's great writers philosophers and historians from Plato and Aristotle to Marx and Engels. The students read and discuss these books in relation to modern problems of economics, politics and social welfare. In such discussions the students learn the subject as well as its application to present problems.

With the re-organization of the only courses on the campus that lead to a "rounded" education, the University officials might do well to consider a plan for the institution of some such plan as the Great Books Club and its discussion groups to provide a means to generalize some of the more specialized courses now in the calendar.

Egoistic Subjectivism

The Editor; The Varsity.

For some time now I have been dissatisfied with your AM & D department. I am not a musician or a critic, but I am a Varsity reader and there are certain things I think would be desirable in that column.

First "review" means to tell what goes on . . . could we have a little more simple informative reviews, with an account of who does what and when?

Second. A review also entails some form of judgment. But all judgment should have some standard from which an opinion may be drawn. Granted there may be an argument as to which standard your reviewers should use, but surely we could have a little less of the egoistic subjectivism.

As I stated above I am not a musician, but I do enjoy concerts . . . . and also reading about musical events. Please try to do something about this little matter.

Literary Leukemia

The Editor; The Varsity.

What is this puerile smudge that has been blotting the Art, Music and Drama page of your usually fine journal for the last couple of days? I don't consider myself as any paragon of aesthetic taste, but I do appreciate the intelligent and provocative reviews of such high calibre that have appeared in the past term. It is true that there may be a ludicrous source of amusement in your new series of "chatty, familiar down-to-earth" reviews, and no one enjoys humor more than I do, but I can, and usually do, turn the page and read Champus Cat.

If pondering to the lowest common denominator in the reading public is your conception of a critic's function, then heaven help the reading public. Is it any wonder that Mr. Robertson Davies speaks of Canadians as a "culturally constipated people"? As I see it, a critic's function is to prescribe a high standard of good taste, and therefore elevate the public to that level, not just feel the popular pulse and slip useless sugar pills down the public throat.

In the past term I have been accustomed to reading The Varsity's reviews before going to a play. By comparing the reviewer's intelligent opinion with my own layman's impression of the unfolding drama I have been stimulated and enriched in my level of appreciation for that play. The reviews of "All My Sons" and "Fortune My Foe" are two of the foremost.

From now on I will probably have to be satisfied to know that "Ruddigore," for instance, is "just peachy," and that the tenor lead displays a "super" voice in his "simply unconcious" performance. The sooner this present trend in literary leukemia is abolished the better, and then we cultural laymen can be guided by the same discerning critiques your reviewers have set before us in the past term. If the last few days are any indication of what is to come, I only wish I had a subscription to your paper so I could cancel it in protest.

Ed. Note: Reader Underhill may take heart from the fact that his cancellation of any subscription could cut us no more deeply than did his "blast" above.

Mental Health Program Under Prof. Williams Receives Gov't Grant

Training of workers for the Canadian mental health program will be undertaken by D. C. Williams, recently appointed professor of psychology, President Sidney Smith announced this week.

The University has been granted $214,000 by the Ontario government from federal funds for teaching and research in the mental health field this year. Professor Williams has an M.A. and a Ph.D. from the University of Toronto, and was in charge of personnel selection for the RCAF for three years and later qualified as pilot.

After the war, Professor Williams lectured here for a year after which he joined the University of Manitoba where he was head of the Department of Psychology.

Scot Teacher Only Genius —D. Thomson

"George Buchanan was the only man of genius Scotland ever produced," declared D. S. F. Thomson, speaking on Buchanan last Thursday in the second of the University College lecture series.

Mr. Thomson described Buchanan's education in Renaissance Europe. Buchanan, born in Scotland in 1506, had attained mastery of Latin because he could not graduate from school until he spoke and wrote it perfectly. Buchanan's most vivid memory, said the speaker, was that of the terrible "Domini" stalking into the classroom in flowing robes, rod in one hand and Virgil in the other. Nevertheless, Buchanan was also to become a teacher.

Taught At Parish

After two years of study abroad he became a pedagogue at the college of Cardinal Le Moine in Paris and it was here that he wrote some of his earlier odes and psalms. Buchanan returned to his native Scotland because of a minor illness and went to Bordeaux the following year to teach at the Seminary of Liberal Arts. Here he was compelled to write a dramatic tragedy. Buchanan translated, and dramatized Euripides' "Medea". "Vita" his autobiography was begun at this time.

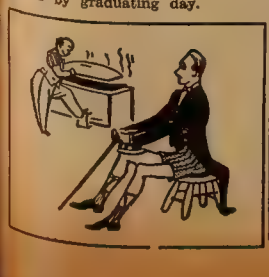
Returning to Paris he became a contemporary to the Humanists, and resumed his teaching at the Academy de Saint Dominique. He fell out with the Portuguese government for his satire, "Fransisconus" and spent seven months in monastic confinement.

Tutored Scottish Queen

While winning court acclaim in France he met Du Brissac and eventually tutored his son. He completed many of his psalm and odes and as Mr. Thomson, intimated, "Buchanan imitated the ancients only as much as the ancients imitated one another."

He returned to Scotland and became tutor to Mary, Queen of Scotland. He was appointed director of the Chancellery and keeper of the Privy Seal. In 1577 he completed his History of Scotland. Until the day he died he was primarily a teacher. He died in 1582 requesting his followers not to mourn: "A full life need not be mourned."

Yearbook Sales Are Two Thirds Of Grad Class



Torontonensis sales have definitely dropped off, but it is difficult to determine the exact effect of the yearbooks being sold by individual faculties stated Editor Bil Raymond yesterday. Now that orders are no longer being taken, it appears that about 2200 copies have been sold. This is 600 less than last year.

Part of this is due to a decrease in graduates; there are 400 less this year. But sales have dropped from 70% to just over two thirds of the graduating class.

This is not entirely due to the other faculties' yearbooks, since best results in sales come from those faculties which publish their own magazine.

Raymond said that the majority of sales were to members of the graduating year; a few were sold to undergraduates and to libraries, but these did not make up much of the total sales.

The editors of Torontonensis expect to be able to deliver ordered copies by graduating day.

Four Years' Wait Repaid; Hillel Finds A New Home

By LENORE KERT

We've heard tell that it is hard to find a needle in a haystack. Goodness, that becomes child's play after you have tried looking for a house to buy on the campus. Anyone who owns a house in the area between Bloor and College and George and Avenue Rd. has either pledged it to the University way back in 1884 or plans on making his million when he sells that house.

Nothing, however, could daunt the Hillel Foundation of Toronto and a house-hunting they did go. B'nai B'rith, the senior organization of Hillel, were in charge of finances and the actual choosing of the house. All the students had to do was to cross their fingers and wait.

Waited Three Years

That was easy enough so we waited one year. In fact, it was so easy that we waited another year. By the third year, we were anxiously hoping that somebody—anybody—would sell us a house—for less than $50,000, that is. Patience was its own reward for during this year, our fourth year on campus, we got a house!

A house! All our own! After spending over three years in just a small office, the roomy new house on St. George St., just a block above

There Are Ghosts —Immaterial Ones Claims Welsh Prof

A story of ghosts that are real and yet are not was what Prof. J. M. Thorburn of the University of Wales told members of the University of Toronto Philosophical Society at their meeting in University College Croft Chapter House last night.

Subconscious Responsible

Dealing with the topic, "An Approach to Psychical Research," Prof. Thorburn outlined theories about ghosts by the 60-year-old British Society of Physical Research.

The general theory he advanced for why people see ghosts was that there must be a common subconscious or "unconscious" from which different people can perceive extra-sensory perceptions. Thus people saw a particular ghost because a popular tradition had developed so that ghost could be psychically transmitted from one individual to another.

Since several people could receive the same physical image, they could all see the same ghost.

In this sense a ghost was real and not just a hallucination.

Real But Not Material

Prof. Thorburn added, however, "A ghost is real but not material." For example, a ghost could leave no trace of its presence. Several people, all receiving the same psychical impression, might all see a walking ghost leave footsteps in the snow. But after the ghost had disappeared it was always found that there was no trace of the footsteps.

He described another example. Several people in a locked room might see a ghost walk through a locked door opening the door to do so. But it would always be found afterward that the door was still locked. Prof. Thorburn said the probable explanation is that the popular tradition of the ghost, transmitted through the subconscious, is that the ghost does open the door.

This tradition was strong enough to blank out the normal, sensory perception, which would otherwise show that the door had not been opened.

In answer to questions, the speaker said the ability to see ghosts is not universal. He said experiments in Germany show that children have such extra-sensory perceptive powers to a much greater degree than do adults. This ability was usually lost during adolescence.

He said the German researchers have noticed that artists tend to retain their power much more often than do children.

Telepathy Experiments

Prof. Thorburn described experiments in psychical research which he carried out for the Society for Psychical Research. By some "elaborate ritual" he would choose some subject to draw at his desk in his office. At the same time, in another city, another experimenter would draw whatever came to his mind.

He said the other experimenter drew the same subject significantly often. The only conclusion was that there had been some subconscious connection between the two experimenters.

CCF, Tories Will Not Last Says Liberal

The Liberal party's time-tested experience, and its modern approach personified in "that quiet old genius" W. L. M. King offer the people of Ontario a much needed remedy, Mr. Campbell Calder, member of the Ontario legislature for London, stated before the U of T Liberal Association Tuesday. "The same-old-arrangement theory of the the Tories can never survive more than a few years at a time, while the C.C.F.'s 'patent-medicine formula' looks grand on paper but as more experienced theorists will attest, paper platforms are not enough," he continued.

Mr. Calder, the first person to declare himself a candidate for the provincial leadership, spoke in the first of a series of lectures which will bring to the campus most of the Liberal party's political leaders.

Mr. Calder expressed his faith in the Canadian future. He also took

Mr. Rutherford emphasized the procedure for the most satisfactory interview, stating that the prime purpose was to determine what the employer wanted from the prospective employee. Next it should be determined what the employee wants from the employer, and finally it should convince the employer that the prospect has the qualifications required, he stated.

He also pointed out that the prospect should look not only the financial return but also for whatever security, advantage, and chances for advancement that the job offered. He closed by stating that the prospective employee should sell himself without being overly aggressive or overbearing.

Trails In The Snow

Saga Of A Campus Beaver

By HERB WOOD

It was all on account of my flight boots.

Last June, I bought a pair, congratulating myself on my forethought and, incidentally, at an out-of-season sale. After all, it has been the normal thing for years back to prepare for the coming of winter. Some people lay up preserves, but I laid up my gum-rubber, sheeplined, (as advertised) flight boots.

Up until December of last year, I took a distinct delight in their shining and bulky presence in my room. Sometimes for a break, when studying, I would reach down and bring up a boot to admire. It was usually the right one since I could more conveniently simulate my right foot in its vastness. Besides, I'm awfully awkward with my left hand . . . on account of I'm right handed.

When the first deep snow came, the first thing I was going to do was put them on and hurry down to the front campus. You know, I have always wondered who broke the trail first. Whether it was a girl in snow boots, a man in flight boots, or a janitor taking a short cut.

But as time went on and no snow fell I grew discontented — frustrated, if you like. I became a changed man. I lost my temper with the landlord and kicked the cat around.

Then it happened. It snowed. The landlord was the first to rap on my door and make the announcement. The cat slipped in and rubbed her back against my shin. They were all pulling for me. It made me feel good, down deep. I selected a plaid shirt and Varsity Tam-o-Shanter as suited to the occasion. Then on with my boots and out of the door and into the street. I turned once to wave a good-bye. The landlord was smiling and wishing me luck. The cat was purring and making a fuss. (Hum, this is beginning to sound like John Gilpin.)

Oh well, let it be said that I was the first man to arrive on the front campus and see a vast white unsullied blanket, rolling right up to the front door of UC. But now, I had a problem.

In which direction should I break trail first? Naturally my interests all lay at UC. On the other hand, the University Library is important. People go there to return books. I could compromise and break trail to Hart House. But I must put first things first.

I felt this was a duty to the community; to the student body. I couldn't be selfish about this thing. I'll go to UC first, the library second, and Hart House last for breakfast. Just then a pretty young girl came rushing up to me.

"Are you going to Hart House?" she asked.

"No. That is, I hadn't planned to."

"I'm in a dreadful hurry. I have to be at work in a couple of minutes and I just must be on time. This is my first day. Besides a cup of coffee will do you good. It's so cold," she said.

"OK Eve . . . I'll go to Hart House. Just follow me."

. . . Say, who did break the trail to UC?

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

The stellar event of the University social season of 1903 as reported by The Varsity was the garden party held on the lawns of Trinity to dedicate the new bird bath presented by the Ladies Alumnae Association. The committee in charge of the fete spared no effort to make it truly a memorial occasion.

The lawns had been transformed into a veritable fairyland. Palms and pale pink snapdragons provided the background while garlands of spring flowers added to the festive occasion. Maypoles were discriminately strewn on the green. The motif of the decoration might best be described as international. Shillelaghs, hamhocks and haggis hung gally from the trees and added greatly to the decor.

Mrs. Ratcliffe poured and Mrs. Harrison said when. The Clutter-sac Memorial Urn was in use and marked the first time it had been on public view since the Hod Carriers Picnic.

Refreshments were provided by The Senior Ladies league and consisted of petite sandwiches of Vigoro with 900 Islands Dressing, water cress and pistachio spread, Pomegranate and peanut butter, and swiss cheese with muskox. The punch was according to an old Borgia family recipe. There were tarts to suit everyone's taste.

Preceeding the unveiling ceremonies a brief program of entertainment was presented by some of the talented ladies and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mrs. Oswald Peterkin favored the audience with her inimitable rendition of "The Rosary." "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" was recited by Mrs: Upjohn, who, as an encore, offered twenty three verses of "The Cremation of Sam McGee.", and the Program was concluded by Mrs. Dovencho's terpsichorean interpretation of a wounded jaguar with hiccups. Musical accompaniment was provided by Ernie McMullin and his Tub-thumping Jugblowers.

The unveiling of the Memorial Bird Bath was the highlight of the afternoon. Mrs. Sapho Pettigrew, Honorary President, pulled the cord to the strains of "Claire de Loon." Never had there been such a bird bath. Hot and cold running water, pull down towels, automatic warm air dryers and a rotary bill sharpener were some of the outstanding features to be enjoyed by the feathered friends.

The sole mishap of the afternoon occurred when Mrs. Hortense Avoirdupois sprang a stay and catapulted three junior members over Soldiers' Tower.

College Inertia Blocks Song Book Completion

Colleges and faculties who have been late in forwarding their official songs to the SAC office, are proving an obstacle to the completion of the Varsity Songbook, the committee in charge of the book reported last night.

The School of Music, however, is conducting a contest to choose a new official faculty song as the School of Nursing did last fall while other organizations have sent in complete books of their songs.

Over 200 songs will be contained in the Varsity Songbook, ranging from old standbys to songs from other universities and a few relatively unknown Canadian folksongs. The book will be printed next fall in a pocket-sized edition and will sell for one dollar.

Movie Review

Give Us This Day

"Give Us This Day" is the title of an excellent movie (at the Odeon Toronto) based on Di Donato's famous novel of the '30s, "Christ In Concrete." Those who saw the recent UC performance of a one-act play called "The Love of Annunciata" will have an idea of the different plot and meaning with which, in only sixty lines, I shan't deal here.

Although the picture was made in England, the Brooklyn setting, the Italian-American characters, and the mood of the Depression and preceding years are most realistic, only one child actor betraying a British accent. Canadian director Edward Dmytryk, best known for Crossfire" and "The Hidden Room," has learned many things from Rossellini and Br. David Lean and administered many American touches of which Hollywood can be proud. There are echoes here of "The Informer," "Spectre of A Rose" and another fine film dealing with the Depression, "From This Day Forward."

"This Day" was shot in that deep-field, soft-focus photography which lends an earthy texture to sunlight and shadow. In tune with the vitality of the bricklayers whose simple, honest life and work the movie follows, Benjamin Frankel's score is quivering and tense. The tinges of melodrama in the opening sequence may cause some to raise their backs, but they can relax as this picture does not slip into the rut of various predecessors. If there is another point of contention it is probably the plot, which may prove too simple and "old-fashioned" for ultra-sophisticates and literary analysts. What these people fail to realize is that "everyday" people really are corny. Technically, however, there is little more one could ask — perhaps a stronger flow of cement during the stirring anti-climax. One dramatic double-exposure montage sequence sent thrills up my spine

Sam Wanamaker as Geremio heads a superb cast of relatively unknowns, including Lea Padvani who brings a Steinbeck beauty and simplicity to the charater of Annunciata. If you're browned off with the world and people and want to be splashed with the warmth of humanity, this is what you need.

All Quiet On The Western Front

The picture opens in a small German town in the year 1914. A rabid, patriotic professor, against a background of marching men, is exhorting his students . . .

"It was a wonderful thing," he is saying, "just such a class as this — the boys no older than yourselves — they all went down and joined up. For the Fatherland — the Gray Wall! Ah, the Men of Iron!

Enthused, carried away by the adventure, and pride, and glory — they enlist.

Disillusionment begins when their sergeant — formerly their genial postman — painfully makes clear to them the difference between dreams of glory, and reality — through drill, route marches, and rigid discipline.

Trench warfare; they are introduced to shrapnel, H.E., mud, scrounging for food, and death.

Suspense, cold, mud, hunger, explosions, and death.

Death as a something that disorganizes, maddens, coming closer, closer — who next? — as they lay in dugouts under bombardment. Then death is something. They — those over there — were sending in whistling steel, or bringing as they lunged bayonet first into your crowded trenches. . . . Death came to the best ones too soon.

War became personal. "Me or him?" Self preservation. You thrust. Him. He's dying. He lies there moaning or grunting like a pig, and then you have time to think.

"It was him. It could have been me. But I don't hate him — not personally . . . and I don't think he hated me. . . . I had to kill him though. . . . But why . . . why, Why have they come here to kill us, and we come from our homes, here, to kill them? He wanted to live — he had a home, a family, too. . . .

What is at stake? What will the "victor" get . . . a few rods of land . . . a handful more of crippled tax-payers . . . a larger market?

This picture, presented by the U of T Film Society, was filmed by Lewis Mileston in '29. He used Remarque's novel — a best seller — retaining all the pathos and realism of the book, and by holding true to the story (something rare in directors) succeeded in producing a film more starkly illustrative of the novel's theme — the criminal futility of war — than could be obtained from the book.

Ruddigore

It was a treat as always to hear the Vic Music Club's annual presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan. The choice for this year was the unfamiliar Ruddigore, and the audience was privileged to hear part of the original finale to Act II for the first time since 1887—so say the program notes.

The characteristic which makes these Music Club shows such a success is the enthusiasm which goes into their making and presentation; it gets across to the audience. Certainly the shows are not perfect, and this one was no exception, but they don't have to be perfect.

Ruddigore has a lot of patter song in the typical Gilbert and Sullivan idiom in which the singer vies with the typist in trying to get in as many words as possible per minute. Perhaps this is one reason that it is so seldom performed. It really is hard to understand the words, though, as one of the songs clearly says, "it really doesn't matter."

Katherine McBain was a remarkable Rose Maybud, both in voice and action. Mad Margaret was effectively played by Margaret Carmichael, and her "Cheerily Carols the Lark" sent chills through more than one spectator, though some of the pathos of "The Garden of Roses" was lost because, in kneeling, she was hidden from part of the audience by the conductor. Warren Hughes as Sir Despard, one of the accursed House of Murgatroyd, was the most convincing of the male leads. He, with Francis De Carrol as Richard Dauntless, tripped it most lightly in the patter song, and were thus best understood. The greatest weakness was the age of the "aged couple," Dame Hannah and Old Adam, which was in doubt throughout; their voices were, so to speak, not as gray as their hair.

The orchestra seemed reasonably confident last night and they had a colorful score. There were irregularities of tempo and obscuring of words, but much credit is due the musical director, Godfrey Ridout, for the convincing performance. A few orchids would hardly be out of place for Geoffrey Hatton, the stage director, for the show was really easy on the eye.

Gilbert and Sullivan always bites near to "ham" and, at times last night, it was biting a little too nigh, but it was a good show and a rare treat.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Hart House Gallery

The present exhibit, the work of A. J. Casson and L. A. C. Panton is a mixture of symbolism, impressionism and nature that comes off very well.

A. J. Casson works in both water colour and oil. Although one could never call his work gentle, there is clarity and serenity in the water-colours. Sharp contrasts, bold washes and cool colour are used to call up wild and waste regions of great beauty. His rocks and trees are well done, and we were struck by the remarkable variety and veracity of his clouds.

But Mr. Casson's oils turn away from the natural. A group of small oils, farm scenes, stump territory, seem crude and raw, lacking both composition and vigour. The larger canvases turn to buildings and floods with sharply differentiated planes and formalized nature. The peak of this exhibit is High Water, a study in form, design and light, both modern and strong.

L.A.C. Panton gives us something far different. He seems to be particularly fond of boulders, which he treats frequently as living and unpredictable forces. Sometimes this passes into the unintelligible, but one group of studies proves his gift of composition by holding our interest in spite of our inclinations. It is urgent and sometimes savage work.

Turning to organic nature, as in Design for Autumn No. I, he does some amazing things with colour and the rhythm of sweeping, exaggerated forms. Grandeur Nigh to Dust is less violent, but there is still urgent strain of emotion. We found here the subtlest use of colour and outline, as light, shade and a twisted futile vigour control the whole.

Combining such opposed moods has not been a simple task, but it has been done well. From every point of view this is both an interesting and instructive exhibition.

Concentrated Authority Needed In Germany

The absence of constructive and intelligent government planning in Western Germany is due to a lack of concentrated authority, said Dr. F. E. Dessauer in an address to the Political Science Tuesday on the government in Western Germany. This, he stated, is proof the Allied policies of 1945-46 have not been adhered to in such matters.

The Germans were not ready for democracy, said Dr. Dessauer, and an elected "democratic" government supervised by three High Commissioners seemed to them just a sham—"they'd seen enough of that under Hitler." Because of this, he declared, it would have been better for the Allies to set up a benevolent dictatorship capable of affording just and efficient administration, as was done in Japan.

The three problems of the day for the Allies were (a) the adjustment of war damage, (b) the formation of capital, (c) relief for Displaced Persons. The lack of capital, in particular, both in the sense of machinery and manufacturing equipment as well as savings, is a powerful brake on Germany's recovery.

Germany lacks capable leaders, said Dr. Dessauer. Theoretical values have little interest for the people of Germany. The Nazi spirit exists not at all and Communists are few and far between because of the actions of the Russians in Eastern Germany, the speaker stated.

Earth Abides

Man is almost wiped out. Only a few people remain. A new virus-borne disease brings global plague before quarantines can be set up. Modern transportation dooms men by overcoming the barrier of distance before the mutant virus strain can be recognized or antibodies found.

George R. Stewart presents a thought-out panorama of the fall of a civilization. He has the same type of science-based imagination as Jules Verne or H. G. Wells.

Earth Abides (Random House) is a logical series of social and technical events based on known factors. It dramatically portrays the psychological effects of the disaster on different individuals — specialized cogs — useless as bars of gold — unable to adapt — scavenging for existence. Those close to the land carry on much as usual. The story of the central character, Isherwood — "Ish" for short — is the story of man's descent.

Ish is the student representative of Old World knowledge. He finds a mate — they acquire a group of friends — the group grows into a tribe. The star of civilization seems to be rising again, but indolence and superstition defeat Ish's efforts at teaching the Old Knowledge. The later generations instead of listening to him — revere him as the last of the great "Old Ones", and a god.

Stewart believes that the destruction of our old, creaky, unhappy world is on the whole, worth-while.

He imagines it going down gallantly, its marvellous automatic gadgets functioning long after there are men to use or tend them.

Men's pampered, selected plant and animal strains, highly specialized, but not oriented towards survival are quickly overwhelmed by the Wild, as if they had never been.

The Old Knowledge, that made man great above beasts, held by only a few, such as Ish, lingers for a while, but since none of the young are interested, it too dies out.

Stewart sees Ish's tribe in a Utopian light. Purged of the old rituals, and unhampered by the old "competition and profit" social mores of western culture — they will, by co-operation and common sense, soon regain the lost technical knowledge, and found a society on a higher plane than the old — lacking, as it would, useless killing, competition, and ancient prejudices.

Four Years' Wait

Bloor, was a dream come true. This house used to be the Mosher Dancing Studio and when they moved out, we moved in.

Students Pitch In

The pleasure of having so many rooms that one could not decide which one should be used for what made up for all the years of homelessness. The spacious main hall which leads off to the chapel, the office and the recreation room, will nicely solve the problem of an incoming rush of students.

Rome was not built in a day and so we feel perfectly justified in taking longer than a day to furnish the Hillel house. The B'nai B'rith Commission are the stalwart financial support in this matter too and plan to equip the rooms fully. At present the furniture is somewhat limited—there are 150 straight-backed chairs and two tables, to be exact. Students, however, have contributed their talents in the decorating line and their bright murals on the walls add certain artistic interior decorating touches that are unrivalled—mainly because no one would want to!

Happy At Home

There have been a few Friday night services, musicales and meetings held in the house since it opened January 4. A semi-official welcome, however, took place Sunday in the form of an open house. A brigade of student decorators and sandwich makers have been in action with the result that the gracious-sounding phrase "entertaining at home" rang true.

Minor details, such as falling plaster in the recreation room and a few blown fuses gave the house a certain informal touch. Little upsets such as these could not dampen the spirits of the students though for they—or could I just possibly have hinted at this before—they were much too happy being in their own home at last!

Security First Students Told

"The search for security keynotes all history" said Professor W. S. McCullough in an address to the Junior Philosophy Club last Thursday. He was speaking on "Historical and Traditional Views of God."

The continual striving for security has been evident in the modern welfare state, such as Russia, he said, but it is too early to judge its success.

"The first question a child asks is 'who made the world?' and when he grows up he wants an explanation of the evolution in which he is involved." Thus it is that the most important aspect of God is 'God and the cosmos', said Mr. McCullough.

The idea of law and order in the universe is typical of this search for security, he contended. "Man has made God in his image so forming a universe that has, quote, orderly harmony, unquote. As a result human personality is akin to the eternal, and a meaningful relation to the supreme good can be established."

Vox Varsity

Last week I said, for something different, something good, beg borrow or steal a F.M. set to hear your Varsity Radio Ssrapbook tonight. Well we have that something different and something good in the script we are presenting tonight at 7:30 p.m. over C.J.R.T. F.M. This script is a documentary written by Fraser Fairlie with the impressive title "Man and the Moon."

Man and the Moon traces the posibilities of rocket travel to the Moon, within a short time, and the advantage of being the first nation there, for reasons of defence. The entire playlet is presented in light vein using authentic information supplied by members of the Canadian Rocket Society, and takes the listeners on an Actual Flight To The Moon.

Fraser Fairlie wrote this script while studying at the Academy of Radio Arts, last year, ffom where he subsequently graduated in all phases of radio production and in the first Canadian course in television. He hopes his eventual destiny lies in the film aspects of the Canadian television industry, now peering over the horizon. Mr. Fairlie has had a good deal of experience in motion pictures and still photography as Director of Production of Monarch Productions of Toronto.

The direction of this documentary is by Jack MacQuarrie and the cast includes Audrey Lowrey, Hugh Hart, Jim McLaughlin, George Bettson, Dave Thurston, Don Michel, Mike Davis and announcing by Dan McCarthy.

Radio Raves: Why the reduction by the powers that be in the estimate for the new Students Union? That little part in the plans which left out necessary space for radio rooms is just a little too hard to take. The facilities we have now are slightly better than four walls. When we had the Observatory the beef there was the wrong kind of current for our recording machines. Oh well life can be beautiful . . . oh yea . . .

Tonight's show has nothing to do with Orsen Welles and the "Man from Mars."

See you next week in VOX VARSITY.

Jazz Review

Jazz Unlimited

Monday night another of CJBC's "Jazz Unlimited" concerts was presented in the CBC Concert Studio on McGill Street.

Station CJBC has long sponsored local jazz talent. In this bi-weekly series a variety of performers and styles are being aired; this one was strictly modern albeit not too successful.

Standing head and shoulders above his fellow musicians, literally and figuratively, was trumpeter Jack Long. On "We the People Bop" and a pre-programme "How High the Moon" he created a constant flow of interesting ideas, displaying good technique and good taste. Jack is in first year Music; you might have seen him in Bob Crinian's orchestra on the night of the Scarlet and Gold.

Next best was altoist Jerry Toth who took the ballad "That Old Black Magic" at a sprightly tempo and made pleasant music. Here and there were traces of a Lee Konitz influence. Trombonist Don Humble seemed to lack his usual virility but his smooth tone at least was evident in "Happiness Is Just a Thing Called Joe." Hart Wheeler, playing baritone instead of tenor, was occasionally forceful and effective, especially in ensemble work.

Rhythm for the session was supplied by the Johnny Powers Trio: Powers, bass, Johnny Wayne, guitar, and Bob Fenton, piano. In their specialty, "Temptation", the three achieved a good group sound but the arrangement was too cutely contrived. Except for the humorous touches, Fenton played rather uninteresting piano. Drummer Doug Bennett made his first appearance in the series; unfortunately he held his best contributions in reserve.

Chief complaint: too many selections were crammed into the brief time allotted, with the result that no one was really warmed up and at ease in his solo.

SWIMMING

Miss Baxter reminds you that the following swimming classes will be held today.

Bronze and Silver Lifesaving Awards at 3:00 p.m. — for which credit will be given to first year students and which is primarily for those interested in being counsellors at summer camps.

Synchronized Swimming at 4:30 — a voluntary class for anyone interested in this type of swimming.

Let's take advantage of these two classes which Miss Baxter has been kind enough to organize.

HOCKEY

St. Hilda's II took a shellacking to the tune of 6-0 in the arena yesterday. St. Mike's held the play from beginning to end, and not once in the second period did the play cross the St. Mike's blue-line.

Although the puck got by her six times, Joan Beattie, St. Hilda's goalie, was the best player on her team, but backed by little or no defence strategy, Fran O'Brien, B. J. Fraser, and Liz Boyle each tallied one to make the final score 6-0.

Points in the league standings to date are as follows:

League I—PHE I, 4; Vic I, 3; St. Hilda's I, 1.

League II—Meds, 4; UC I, 2; PHE II, 0.

League III—St. Mike's, 6; St. Hilda's, 1; Vic II, 1.

League IV—UC II, 2; Physio, 2; OT, 0.

VOLLEYBALL

PHE I—38; UC—17
PHE II—47; St. Hilda's—34
PHE II defaulted to UC II.
